OPERATORS GO TO WALL

Big New York Brokers Forced to Suspend All Trades.

New York, Oct. 22.—The failure of J. W. Henning, a large operator on the New York stock exchange, and a well known horseman, was announced on the floor today. It is said he suffered severely in Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul stock last April. Nearly all of his business was confined to New York city interests and it is not believed that the failure will affect any large out of town accounts.

The failure is believed to have resulted from over-trading in the heavy slump in the market late last week. His brother, S. C. Henning, said he was confident that his brother would be able to resume very soon. He had a number of wealthy clients and often handled heavy blocks of stocks, and it is believed the failure will involve a large amount.

The suspension of P. T. White, a heavy trader, was announced on the Consolidated stock exchange today. Under the rules he will have twenty-four hours to fulfill his contracts.

LARGE MEETING AT PARK RAPIDS

Park Rapids, Minn., Oct. 22.—(Special to the Herald.)—A large and enthusiastic meeting was held in the courthouse here Friday night, in the interest of the Democratic state ticket. J. A. McDermott, of St. Paul, delivered an able and convincing address. Mr. McDermott took up the timber trespass cases, and showed that upward of $400,000 had been saved to the state of Minnesota by the prompt, persistent and fearless work of Governor Johnson and the attorney general.

The speaker referred to the efficiency of the public examiner's office, and the great service rendered the cause of life insurance by Commissioner of Insurance O'Brien and the saving to this state of more than $20,000 by placing the office of commissioner of insurance on a salary basis, as recommended by Governor Johnson. The splendid records made by the dairy and food department and commissioner of labor were reviewed at some length. He showed that the governor first declared for a 2-cent passenger rate, and was one of the first to favor a system of state drainage of public lands. The speaker exploded the false charges published by the Park Rapids papers, copied from the Princeton Union, that, "Governor Johnson had been a Greenbacker, Populist, Republican, and Democrat, and was now a Mugwump."

The gentleman appealed to his audience, to recognize the character and ability and support John A. Johnson fer re-election. Mr. McDermott's speech received the closest attention throughout, and made many votes for Governor Johnson and the state ticket.

REED'S WIDOW IS WEALTHY

Relict of Former Speaker Now Worth Over Half Million.

New York, Oct. 22.—The estate of Thomas Brackett Reed, tx-speaker of tae house of representatives, has nearly trebled in value since the death of Mr. Reed, in December, 1902. At that time the approximate value of the estate was about $200,000. Last week Augustus G. Paine who was an intimate friend of the ex-speaker, sent to Mrs. Susan P. Reed, the widow, over $500,000, which represented the original investment holdings of the estate, and the profits from these and other investments in the last four years.

The greater part of the estate was in railroad stocks, and Mr. Paine as executor had entire charge of turning these securities into cash. It is said that Mr. Paine could have wound up the affairs of the estate many months ago, but reinvested a large part of the estate funds at the solicitation of Mrs. Reed.

The widow is living in the old Reed homestead in Portland, Me.

It will be remembered that Mr. Reed when he retired from public life did so a comparatively poor man. He said at the time, that he retired to go into the business world to make a little money.

DEATH FOR A FAILURE

British Stock Market is Stronger With Americans on Up-Grade.

London, Oct. 22.—P. MacFadyen, head of MacFadyen & Co., bankers, whose suspension was announced Saturday, committed suicide within an hour after posting the notice of the failure on the door of the bank, by throwing himself before a train in a tunnel, about half a mile from his place of business.

MacFadyen appears to have gone direct from his bank to a station of the City & South London railway, to have entered the tunnel unobserved, and deliberately lain down in front of an approaching train. The engineer reported having run over a obstruction in the tunnel, and a search revealed a shockingly mutilated body, which was identified today.

It is rumored that by the failure of P. MacFadyen & Co., the London house of Arbuthnot & Co., bankers, of Madras, was connected with the cotton market, but as MacFadyen was the sole partner in Europe, it is difficult to obtain information on the subject.

The tone of the stock exchange generally this morning was much more hopeful, operators having concluded that the 6 per cent discount rate of the Bank of England would prove effective in the stemming the outflow of gold. American securities had an exciting morning. Saturday's break in Wall street caused a heavy liquidation here, and there were many sales from the continent. At the opening, values were over a point below parity, but good support was soon forthcoming and there was quite a boom before noon, prices being rushed up two points from the lowest quotations, and the whole list practically recovering the early loss. The recovery also was aided by the report that the Bank of France was prepared to assist the Bank of England to the extent of $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 in gold.

BLIZZARDS OVER WEST

Heavy Snows and High Winds in Rocky Mountain Region.

Two Men Dead and Worst Feared for Range Live Stock.

Denver, Oct. 22.—All Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Western Kansas and Western Nebraska are covered by from four inches to five feet of snow as the result of the severest blizzard for October on record. Trains in Western Kansas, Wyoming and Colorado are snowbound or badly delayed, while great losses of sheep and cattle are almost certain.

In the valley around Buena Vista, the snow lies two feet deep on the level and in the mountains it varies on the level from two to five feet in depth. Twenty-two inches has fallen at Florence and apple orchards in that section will suffer considerably. The roof of one of the buildings at the cement works gave way under the weight of snow. In Northern Colorado the snow is twenty inches deep and should a freeze follow, heavy loss will result to the potato crop.

In Wyoming the storm was accompanied by heavy snow and in some sections by high winds. The Union Pacific railway has snow plows out on the entire line between Cheyenne and Ogden. West of Green River, Wyo., the line is blockaded and all communication is cut off. A despatch from Green River last night said the highest wind known in 25 years was blowing with the temperature ten degrees above zero and a heavy snow falling.

One flagman was found dead near Granger, Wyo., and another man was found on the track unconscious and badly frozen. One building at Green River was demolished by the wind and snow.

In Southwest Nebraska snow is reported as far east as Oxford. A heavy sleet fell in that section before

BURTON TO GO TO JAIL

Former Kansas Senator Ready To Begin Six Months' Term.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Former United States Senator J. R. Burton of Kansas, accompanied by his wife and niece, arrived this morning from his home at Abilene, and surrendered, preparatory to beginning his sentence of six months in the Ironton, Mo., jail. Apparently he has changed little since he was tried and convicted a year ago in the federal court, here, of having accepted $2,500 for services rendered the Rialto Grain & Security company of St. Louis, before the postoffice department at Washington, in a fraud order proceeding.

As he stepped from the train this morning, he said: "I am feeling very well, exceedingly well, under the circumstances. I had a good night's sleep and am greatly refreshed this morning. Perhops the trees, the bluffs and nature generally look sweetr to me this morning than they shall for some time, but I don't let myself think about that. I expect to go to Ironton today and begin the life that is laid out for me."

After taking breakfast at the Union station, the former senator went to the offices of his attorney, F. W. Lehmann, and preparations were begun for the official surrender to the United States marshal.

Mrs. Burton maintained her composure remarkably well. "I never was more proud of my husband than at this moment when he is on his way to jail," she declared. "I know who our friends are, and I intend to be friendly with them, but I shall reserve the right to say who shall be my friends."

Last evening, at Abilene, numerous townsmen called on Burton at his home there to bid him adieu. He seemed thoroughly cheerful, and laughingly said: "I've paid my laundry bill and looked after some other small matters, but I don't think that would interest the public."

AMERICAN BIG GUNS GOOD AS THOSE OF THE BRITISH

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 22.—After having been missing for eleven days, E. W. James, a member of clubs of Norfolk, Richmond and Baltimore, and worth $500,000, was found dead in a room of the old James mansion here yesterday. Death was due to asphyxiation. No one had slept in the mansion for about ten years, but a room on the main floor had been used by James as an office. It is believed he was murdered for his money.

OUTWITTED THE DETECTIVES EASILY FOR SEVEN YEARS:

Madeira, Cal., Oct. 22.—William Rice, the defaulting Union Pacific railroad clerk for whom the railroad detectives have been searching for seven years, was arrested here last night. He had been living in this city, where he was known as Thomas Ryan, since May, 1903. He denies that he ever left the state, and makes much fun of the detectives.

Angry Waters Completely Wipe Out Places In Republic.

Mobile, Oct. 22.—At least 500 lives were lost and a dozen towns in the republic of San Salvador destroyed by the terrific tornado and downpour of rain that raged throughout Central America last week.

Over 100 persons were drowned in Coatepeque. A vast quantity of sulphur water was thrown out of the Chulo volcano and inundated the town of Ranchinalco, killing most of the inhabitants. Rimiento and nine other towns are reported to have been swept away by the floods. PLAN BOOST FOR WHEAT

Kansas City, Oct. 22.—The Farmers' Co-operative Business congress, with a large attendance of delegates from the Western and Southern states, met at Topeka today. C. W. Peckham of Haven, Kas., president of the Farmers' Elevator association of Kansas, said of the plans:

"Our purpose in calling this kind of a meeting is to more closely unite the agriculture interests of the West and South. It is not our intention to organize a trust of the farmers. It has been said that we propose to increase the price of wheat a stated amount. This we intend to do, but not by organizing and demanding that the consumers pay that for our product. If we can sell our products to the Southern associations at a higher price than we receive from the middlemen, and can enable the Southern producers to hold their product, we will work out a plan whereby the price of farm products will naturally work higher."

The interstate commerce commission here today began an investigation of the relations of railroads to grain dealers and elevator companies. "We can't tell how many Kansas City dealers will be witnesses," said John H. Marble, attorney for the commission. "Fifteen grain men have been subpoenaed to appear this morning. Whether more will be asked to testify depends on the character of the testimony given."

CLEMENCEAU'S CABINET WORK

French Statesman Expects to Have New Ministry Shortly.

Paris, Oct. 22.—M. Clemenceau has begun the formation of a cabinet. He offered the foreign office portfolio to M. Poincare, minister of finance in the Sarrien administration, who declined. M. Caillaux, who was finance minister in the Waldeck-Rousseau cabinet, has accepted the portfolio of finance. It is regarded as certain that M. Briand, minister of public worship; M. Barthou, minister of public works; M. Ruau, minister of agriculture; M. Thomson, minister of marine, and M. Doumerge, minister of commerce, will remain, and that Gen. Picquart will get the war portfolio. A new minister of labor may be created, with M. Viviani, the well-known Socialist deputy, at its head.

DIPHTHERIA EPIDEMIC IN A BAY STATE CITY

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 22.—The most serious epidemic of diphtheria in this city since 1900 was reported by the board of health last week. The total number of cases for the week was forty-two, while since August, 300 persons have been afflicted. The disease is virulent.

GERMANS LIKE PLAN OF ROOT

American Tariff Experts Will Be Welcomed In Kaiser's Realm.

Berlin, Oct. 22.—The announcement that Secretary Root has decided to appoint two tariff experts to visit Germany and consult with the German customs officials and boards of trade to obtain material for possible modifications of administrative features of the American tariff laws, that have been the subject of much complaint from German exporting interests, was received favorably in the foreign office here, especially because the officials did not know precisely what step to take next in re-opening the question which, in its normal course, must be settled by June 30 next. It is believed here that Secretary Root's decision is likely to contribute greatly to an ultimate understanding.

It is said he suffered severely in Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul stock last April. Nearly all of his business was confined to New York city interests and it is not believed that the failure will affect any large cut of town accounts.

DEATH FOR A FAILURE

London, Oct. 22.—P. MacFadyen, head of MacFadyen & Co., bankers, whose suspension was announced Saturday, committed suicide within an hour after posting the notice of the failure on the door of the bank, by throwing himself before a train in a tunnel, about half a mile from his place of business.

MacFadyen appears to have gone direct from his bank to a station of the City & South London railway, to have entered the tunnel unobserved, and deliberately lain down in front of an approaching train. The engineer reported having run over a obstruction in the tunnel, and a search revealed a shockingly mutilated body, which was identified today.

BURTON TO GO TO JAIL

Former Kansas Senator Ready To Begin Six Months' Term.

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—Former United States Senator J. R. Burton of Kansas, accompanied by his wife and niece, arrived this morning from his home at Abilene, and surrendered, preparatory to beginning his sentence of six months in the Ironton, Mo., jail. Apparently he has changed little since he was tried and convicted a year ago in the federal court, here, of having accepted $2,500 for services rendered the Rialto Grain & Security company of St. Louis, before the postoffice department at Washington, in a fraud order proceeding.

Mobile, Oct. 22.—At least 500 lives were lost and a dozen towns in the republic of San Salvador destroyed by the terrific tornado and downpour of rain that raged throughout Central America last week.

Over 100 persons were drowned in Coatepeque. A vast quantity of sulphur water was thrown out of the Chulo volcano and inundated the town of Ranchinalco, killing most of the inhabitants. Rimiento and nine other towns are reported to have been swept away by the floods. The schooner Azelen, with a number of passengers, has been lost, with all on board, between Corinto, Nicaragua, and Anapala, Honduras.

The towns of Ruatan, Tela, Utilla, Colorado and El Provence, Honduras, were swept by the storm and a number of vessels were wrecked, several destroyed and buildings in each of the towns damaged. The loss to the owners of the fruit plantations will, it is stated, reach almost a million dollars. The British

PLAN BOOST FOR WHEAT

Kansas City, Oct. 22.—The Farmers' Co-operative Business congress, with a large attendance of delegates from the Western and Southern states, met at Topeka today. C. W. Peckham of Haven, Kas., president of the Farmers' Elevator association of Kansas, said of the plans:

"Our purpose in calling this kind of a meeting is to more closely unite the agriculture interests of the West and South. It is not our intention to organize a trust of the farmers. It has been said that we propose to increase the price of wheat a stated amount. This we intend to do, but not by organizing and demanding that the consumers pay that for our product. If we can sell our products to the Southern associations at a higher price than we receive from the middlemen, and can enable the Southern producers to hold their product, we will work out a plan whereby the price of farm products will naturally work higher."

The interstate commerce commission here today began an investigation of the relations of railroads to grain dealers and elevator companies. "We can't tell how many Kansas City dealers will be witnesses," said John H. Marble, attorney for the commission. "Fifteen grain men have been subpoenaed to appear this morning. Whether more will be asked to testify depends on the character of the testimony given."

CLEMENCEAU'S CABINET WORK

French Statesman Expects to Have New Ministry Shortly.

Paris, Oct. 22.—M. Clemenceau has begun the formation of a cabinet. He offered the foreign office portfolio to M. Poincare, minister of finance in the Sarrien administration, who declined. M. Caillaux, who was finance minister in the Waldeck-Rousseau cabinet, has accepted the portfolio of finance. It is regarded as certain that M. Briand, minister of public worship; M. Barthou, minister of public works; M. Ruau, minister of agriculture; M. Thomson, minister of marine, and M. Doumerge, minister of commerce will remain, and that Gen. Picquart will get the war portfolio. A new minister of labor may be created, with M. Viviani, the well-known Socialist deputy, at its head.

DIPHTHERIA EPIDEMIC IN A BAY STATE CITY

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 22.—The most serious epidemic of diphtheria in this city since 1900 was reported by the board of health last week. In one day, eight cases came to the notice of the officials and fifty-two families are now in quarantine, affecting the attendance of fifteen schools. The total number of cases for the week was forty-two, while since August, 300 persons have been afflicted. The disease is virulent.

GERMANS LIKE PLAN OF ROOT

American Tariff Experts Will Be Welcomed In Kaiser's Realm.

Berlin, Oct. 22.—The announcement that Secretary Root has decided to appoint two tariff experts to visit Germany and consult with the German customs officials and boards of trade to obtain material for possible modifications of administrative features of the American tariff laws, that have been the subject of much complaint from German exporting interests, was received favorably in the foreign office here, especially because the officials did not know precisely what step to take next in re-opening the question which, in its normal course, must be settled by June 30 next. It is believed here that Secretary Root's decision is likely to contribute greatly to an ultimate understanding.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 22.—Robert Clarke, alias Dan Dove, a negro from Kansas City with a criminal record, was hanged from a telegraph pole by 300 masked men early yesterday after being mysteriously spirited from the jail of Jackson county, Mississippi. The negro was arrested late Friday night by a posse, for attempted assaults on two white women, and stealing a horse and shotgun. Deputy Sheriff Hinton placed the negro in the Lucedale jail, and with another deputy guarded him until early yesterday morning, when both fell asleep. When they awakened, the negro was missing and was subsequently found hanged.

BROTHERS ACCUSED OF MURDER AND ROBBERY.

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—The chain of evidence the police are fast welding around the three Myers brothers, arrested Saturday, on suspicion of being connected with the murder and robbery at the Japanese bank in this city, was tightened yesterday, to whom the brothers sold their horse tow hom the bothers sold their horse and buggy for $60 a few days after the crime. This is the horse and buggy, it is said, that was left standing in front of the Japanese bank during the commission of the crime, with which the murderers escaped.

PUSHING ON CAMPAIGN

Challenges to Joint Debates by Democrats of Winona.

St. Paul, Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—With election day growing closer, the two state headquarters are taking on feverish activity, and every employe is being pushed to his utmost.

At Republican headquarters every available speaker has been called on, and not a county in the state will be missed in this respect. With the Democrats the lack of speakers is the worst handicap, and the managers are trying to make up the deficit by working Governor Johnson overtime.

Next week the Twin Cities will be tackled and not a voting precinct will be overlooked. Both A. L. Cole and Governor Johnson have arranged to cover the two cities thoroughly. From ten to fifteen speeches will be delivered by each in each city.

Some life has been injected into the local campaign at Winona by a letter sent by Judge H. L. Buck, chairman of the Democratic county committee to Judge D. E. Vance, chairman of the Republican committee, inviting the Republicans to assist in arranging joint debates between Patrick Fitzpatrick, Democratic nominee for state senator, and E. K. Tarbell, Republican nominee for the same office, between R. A. Randall, Democrat, and Earl Simpson, Republican, respectively, nominated for county attorney, and W. T. Valentine, Democrat, and Judge De Vance, Republican, nominees for probate judge. It is proposed to confine the matter discussed to the duties of the several offices, the expenses to be borne jointly by the two committees. The Republican committee has not replied.

BUSINESS IS NOT WANTED

Letters received by Duluth grain men from country shippers say that the Great Northern railroad has served notice upon the Soo that it will accept no more Soo cars at Thief River Falls, Minn., for Head of the Lakes delivery, giving as a reason for such action that it cannot take care of its own heavy traffic, let alone helping out another line.

This matter is of the utmost importance to Duluth board of trade men, who have been receiving large shipments of grain via the Soo and Great Northern. As the former road has no line running into Duluth, it has been transferring its cars of grain consigned here to the Great Northern at Thief River Falls, and the latter has brought them on to Duluth. Large quantities of grain, particularly wheat and flax, and this fall more especially Durum wheat, have been brought to Duluth by this route.

The Duluth men are anxious concerning the question of how to handle it. The solution of the problem will be that the haul will be undertaken by the Northern Pacific, the transfer being made at Detroit, Minn., instead of Thief River Falls. At Thief River Falls the Soo line from the west joins the Minneapolis-Winnipeg line of the same road. This line passes through Detroit, Minn., crossing the Northern Pacific at that point, thus making it a simple matter to switch the Soo cars on to the Northern Pacific tracks.

While the action of the Great Northern is regarded by many as an indication of the ill feeling and rivalry existing between the Great Northern and the Soo, as much as of a threatened congestion of traffic, and while Hill is known to dominate the Northern Pacific, the Northern Pacific is understood to be under traffic obligations to the Soo, which will certainly result in its consenting to handle the Soo's Duluth business, even though its doing so will be against the personal wishes of Mr. Hill.

The Great Northern is hard after the business of the Soo, and is building new lines into the Soo's territory, as the Soo is building new lines into the Great Northern's territory. The rivalry between the two roads is very keen, and each stands ready to do what it can to injure the traffic of the other to the profit of itself.

It is thought likely the action of the Great Northern will have a tendency to hasten the construction of the Soo's extension to Duluth.

THEY MEET WITH AN ADVENTURE

D. W. Cole and D. Brown Shot at While Hunting Ducks.

D. W. Cole, who is in Duluth, a guest at the Lenox, to superintend dock construction work, and D. Brown, also a guest at the Lenox, looking after the installation of power plants, were shot at three times while hunting ducks on the St. Louis river yesterday, according to their own story. A man on shore with a rifle in his hands did the shooting. Neither Mr. Cole nor Mr. Brown were hit, but they say the bullets cut the air in unpleasant proximity to their heads.

The two men were hunting from a launch, and this fact is thought to have occasioned the shooting, for the common hunter holds a strong grudge against the person who hunts from a launch, and bags all the game while the other fellow is patiently rowing along in a smaller boat. One of the pair had just shot a duck, which fell in the weeds. The launch was run into the weeds after it, and as the men were about to pick up the bird a man stepped from behind some bushes on shore and opened fire on them.

Messrs. Cole and Brown naturally were frightened, and began to yell at the shooter. After emptying three cartridges, contained in a rifle of large caliber, the man disappeared in the brush again, leaving the scene as fast as his legs could carry him. All the bullets sung close to the ears of Mr. Brown and Mr. Cole. Whether the man shot merely to frighten, or to kill, remains a question, but if it was merely to frighten, he adopted rather a dangerous method, or else had such confidence in his marksmanship that it seemed safe to him.

A MEETING THIS WEEK

Organization of the Johnson Club Will be Perfected.

G. T. Kozlowski Delivers Political Address at Polish Meeting.

The organization of the Young Men's Johnson club will be perfected at a meeting to be held the latter part of this week, probably next Friday night. It will start out with a membership of more than 200.

The club will assist in the entertainment of Governor Johnson when he makes his last Duluth speech of the campaign at the Armory on Thursday night, Nov. 1. It will escort him from the St. Louis hotel to the Armory, and otherwise assist in the evening's program.

George T. Kozlowski of Minneapolis, known as the most eloquent Polish speaker in the state, addressed a meeting of Poles at Polish hall, corner of Fourth avenue east and Fourth street, last evening. He was well received and listened to with close attention.

"Patriotism and Politics," was the subject of Mr. Kozlowski's speech. He spoke at length on the sterling qualities of Governor Johnson's character, and of his attitude in raising the valuation of public service and other corporations, together with the effect such action had upon the ordinary citizen by lightening his taxpaying burden.

The speaker reviewed at length the history of the Poles in America, and sopke of the opportunities that the foreigner meets in the United States, and of the chances the poor man has here for getting ahead in the world. He cited the case of Governor Johnson as an instance of what a poor young man might accomplish in the land of the free.

Mr. Kozlowski spoke of the questionable influence that was brought to bear to bring about the nomination of A. L. Cole for governor on the Republican ticket, and said that no matter how honest a man Cole might be, he would be handicapped in his work for the interests of the state and people because of his unquestioned obligations to certain persons who are known to have taken part in the theft of timber and lands from the state, and otherwise worked against the interests of the common people. Governor Johnson, he said, was, on the other hand, absolutely free to follow the dictates of his own conscience in carrying out his official duties, and was under obligations to no one except the great mass of voters themselves.

The meeting was purely a Polish one, and all the remarks were made in the Polish language. The Poles are accustomed to holding such meetings on Sunday evenings, which explains the fact of its being held on this particular night of the week.

There has been considerable talk lately of forming a Democratic club in West Duluth, and it is thought likely that some action in this direction will be taken very soon.

* * *

Roland D. Haven, who managed Congressman Bede's campaign before the primaries, has returned from a visit to the Twin Cities. He says he is confident Cole will be elected, judging from what he saw and heard down below.

Details of the accidental shooting of a girl at the Kinney mine location near Buhl, a week ago, indicate that the circumstances surrounding the killing will practically insure the discharge of Scott Hawes, the 17-year-old boy, who has been held to the juvenile court, as soon as his case comes before that tribunal.

Hawes, it seems, was employed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Gundy and had borrowed Mr. Gundy's rifle for a hunting trip. Mr. Gundy had forgotten to remove the loads and Hawes, not knowing this, accidentally discharged the weapon while in the act of cleaning it. The bullet passed through a wooden partition and struck Annie, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. Gunday, in the right breast, severing the artery leading to the heart and killing her instantly. The girl was attending to her duties about the house when the accident happened. The funeral of the girl was held last week.

A great deal of sympathy is expressed for young Hawes, who is said to be almost heartbroken over the affair. He had lived with the Gundy family for some time.

LAST WORK OF SEASON

Very Few Improvement Jobs Will be Left Unfinished.

Hugh Steele was this morning awarded the contract for the paving of Commerce street, on his bid of $9,307.50.

This will be the last street improvement contract to be let this year, and it calls for the paving of about two blocks of Commerce street with sandstone blocks.

The contract formerly was let to P. McDonnell on a bid of a little over $8,000, but the contractor stated that a grave error had been made in the figuring, and he was released from his bid. Mr. Steele was the lowest of three bidders, the others being P. McDonnell and George R. King, who were $100 and $300 respectively above Mr. Steele.

The work will be rushed and will probably be completed this fall.

Mr. Steele has just about completed the work on Third avenue west, and will be done well within the time limit, which is about No. 1. He stated this morning that if the weather was favorable, the job would be completed by tomorrow night.

Meanwhile Robinson street in Lakeside is going along nicely, and the prospects are now good for it being finished this fall. The gutters are finished and the sewer about two thirds done, while a good start has been secured on the laying of macadam. If the weather holds fine for a few weeks longer, the pavement will be completed this fall.

The grading on Minneapolis avenue is completed, and the guttering is making good progress.

These are the only jobs of importance now under way. The other improvement work, with the exception of the West Duluth reservoir, consists entirely of small sewer contracts of from $200 up to $2,000.

Mr. Albenberg Goes East.

Mr. M. C. Albenberg left Saturday on a special purchasing trip to the Eastern markets, rendered necessary by the unprecedented business of the past few weeks. Many of the new Fall lines were completely disposed of. Mr. Albenberg will be gone about two weeks.

MANY PETITIONS ARE RECEIVED

Requests for Administrators Are Filed in Probate Court.

Mrs. Marie Pierce has been appointed by the probate court to act as special administratrix of the estate of her husband, Royal H. Pierce, who was recently drowned in Rice lake in Aitkin county. The probable value of the estate is estimated, comprising a life insurance policy for $1,000 and office furniture and fixtures to the value of about $500.

Andrew Santii, of Iron Junction, Minn., has petitioned tht probate court to be appointed administrator of the estate of his son Sylvester who was accidentally killed Feb. 14, 1906. In his petition the father says the boy left no estate, only a right of action or claim for wrongful death.

A similar petition has been filed by Nikola Begic, of Virginia, who would have Mike Danculovick appointed administrator of the estate of Louis Begic, a brother, who was accidentally killed about April 25, 1906, at Virginia, leaving no property.

Eugene J. Bunker has asked for letters of administration of the estate of his wife Anna Louise Bunker, who died over a year ago, leaving as her heirs, two small children. The estate consists of real estate valued at about $1,500.

MILLIONS IN CONTEST

Washington, Oct. 22.—The United States supreme court today set for hearing Dec. 3, the case of the United States vs Falk &, Bro., of New York. The question to be determined is whether imported tobacco is duitable on the basis of its weight when it enters, or when it is withdrawn from warehouses. The decision of the circuit court of appeals was that the duty should be paid on the weight at withdrawal and it is estimated that under this ruling the treasury would suffer a loss of a million dollars a year on tobacco.

Archie McDougall was arraigned on the charge of stealing $25 from a companion, while they were both intoxicated. He entered a plea of guilty, saying he was so drunk he did not know what he was doing, and Judge Cutting fined him $25 and costs with the alternative of a thirty day jail sentence.

BOTH CLAIM THE REWARD

Who will get the $300 reward offered by the Great Northern Railway company for the capture of the person who stole a freight train from the Hibbing yards and caused a train wreck by running it head-on into the passenger train from Duluth, several days ago.

Chester Armstrong, the cause of the company's trouble and the object of its reward, is now an inmate of the county jail, awaiting action of the next grand jury, on the charge of obstructing the railway tracks and endangering the lives of passengers, while Harry Little, a Hibbing policeman, and J. A. McCarthy, on whose claim Armstrong was arrested, each claims credit for the capture and the $300.

The general opinion of the people at Hibbing seems to be that Little is entitled to and will probably get the reward.

After he stole the freight train and ran it into the passenger train from Duluth, Armstrong, who remained on the engine was recognized by the engineer and train crew of the Duluth train. They attempted to capture him but he eluded them and returned to Hibbing, where he concealed himself secured his effects and disappeared into the country.

Chief Wring of the Hibbing police department suspected that Armstrong was headed toward Sturgeon lake, and spent a day in trying to locate him. The next day Policeman Little drove out to Sturgeon lake and captured Armstrong as he landed from a boat on J. A. McCarthy's claim. McCarthy was with Armstrong at the time of the capture.

At his examination Armstrong entered a plea of not guilty. He was defended by V. L. Power, of Hibbing.

Armstrong is about 30 years old, of quiet disposition and a rather open and frank countenance. He claims that he does not remember a thing about the wreck, and refuses to talk about his alleged escapade. He would not talk about his relatives, but the authorities found from his letters that he has a mother and other relatives at Middle Point, Van Wert county, Ohio. He has been a resident of this county for two or three years, and previous to the trouble had been firing an engine at the Hull mine.

It is claimed that Amrstrong had the habit of going on a spree at times, and that when under the influence of liquor he would do some very foolhardy things. His defense will probably be that he does not remember anything that happened. It is intimated, however, that the fact that he knew enough to make his escape and conceal himself for two days would tend to indicate that he was aware he had done something that would bring him under the law.

The two women who were injured in the train wreck are recovering, so that the principal loss following the wreck falls on the railway company. It is claimed that had the trains been running at a higher rate of speed the passenger train would likely have gone down a steep twenty-foot embankment, and many would have been injured, if not killed. As it is, engine No. 151 of the passenger train is so badly smashed as to be practically a total loss. The baggage car is badly splintered.

One result of the wreck is likely to be an investigation by the Great Northern company to find out why the engine of the freight train was left alone with its steam up.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

NORTH DAKOTA.

Denbigh—Ernest Mabbit has been despoiled of his wife, his savings and his two pretty children, all in the same hour. The family came to Denbigh from Indiana at the beginning of the harvest and planned to buy a restaurant business. They took employment with Jake Wager; Ernest working in the threshing crew and his wife preparing meals in the cook car. And here is where she met Lew Smith.

Ernest left for Williston to file on a claim and the next morning Mrs. Mabbit and her children drove to Towner with Smith and boarded the noon train for the East, abandoning the team they had taken foin the Denbigh livery. Mrs. Mabbit had with her $200, all their savings.

Smith is well known in McHenry county and does not bear an enviable reputation. He has done time for blindpigging.

Minot—But for four hours of the hardest kind of labor and the willing assistance of every man, woman and child in the village, the little town of Carpio, twenty miles north of this city, would be but a mass of ruins, or at least badly damaged with an immense loss of property and perhaps life. A prairie fire swept across the plains and rapidly approached the village. An alarm ws instantly given and men, women and children cheerfully responded. The fire was stopped within fifty feet of the houses.

Jamestown—Ernest Travis, the Northern Pacific watchman who caused the death of Gottlieb Anhorn, has been charged with murder in the second degree. This case has stirred many citizens to a high state of indignation. Travis undertook to arrest the boy on the supposition that he was a thief, and when he ran, shot him down like a dog, chasing him into the river and firing five shots at him, one of which passed through his neck.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Groton.—The alleged burning to death of Gilbert Strother in the Spratt Bros.' barn at James early on the morning of Oct. 8, was suddenly turned into a mystery when State's Attorney Campbell received from the boy's father of Lexington, Ill., a telegram stating that the young man was alive and well at Britton, S. D. His father obtained his information from a letter written by the supposed victim of the 10th, two days after the burning of the barn.

Huron.—Two carloads of cattle, eastbound, were destroyed by fire north of Hitchcock Wednesday morning. The cars were in a long train of the Northwestern freight, and the fire is supposed to have originated from sparks from the engine igniting hay in the cattle car.

Lead City.—Miss Blanche Gilroy, daughter of a former mayor of this city, has mysteriously disappeared from her home in Seattle, where the family is now located. For over a week nothing has been seen of the girl, and though the police are working assiduously on the case, yet, thus far, there have been no results. Blanche left her home in the morning for the high school, which she was attending. When she failed to return home at the customary time, inquiry showed she had not been at schoool. She is a pretty and attractive girl, well-bred and modest, and not the kind of girl who would voluntarily leave home. There is a possibility of her having been kilnaped.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Charles Symonds Killed by Pole Piercing His Abdomen.

Menominee.—While at work in the boiler room of the Chapin mine near Iron Mountain Saturday, Charles Symonds was struck in the abdomen by the pole of a cart, pinned to a beam and killed. The victim was passing in front of a team drawing a loaded cart, when something gave way and the iron-tipped timber was driven into his vitals. Symonds sustained a ghastly wound seven inches long, but retained consciousness twenty-four hours until death mercifully ended his agonies.

While skidding logs in Hotamakis' camp near Paynesville, John Perra, a woodsman, was struck in the back by a swinging log and instantly killed. The log wedged in between two trees, was suddenly released. Perra has a wife and mother in Europe.

Houghton.—Albert Lavigne of Lake Linden was accidentally shot while hunting in the woods near that place Wednesday morning. He was with a companion and shortly after entering the woods they became separated. His companion heard a shot and went back to investigate. Lavigne's gun had caught a twig of root and was accidentally discharged. The bullet lodged in his left lung. Lavigne is 36 years of age and is a married man. It is not believed the wound will have serious results.

An Austrian trammer employed in the Hecla branch of the Calumet & Hecla suffered the amputation of two toes Thursday. A car ran over his foot.

Escanaba.—Crushed to an unrecognizable mass the body of Frank Farrnell of Chicago, employed on the St. Paul road ore dock here, was taken from the hold of the steamer Robert H. Rhodes Saturday morning. Farrnell fell into a pocket of the dock and was carried through the chute to the hold of the vessel. Nearly 200 tons of ore covered the body before the flow from the pocket could be stopped. Farrnell was 21 years of age, and came to Escanaba from Chicago in July.

Ironwood—Steve Koki's boarding house at the Tilden mine at Bessemer was the scene of a fatal shooting affair. Two Hungarians, Joseph Holis and Paul Beraro, had some trouble which resulted in a fight. Holis attempted to strike Beraro with a chair, when a bystander interfered and got between the two men. As he did so, Beraro pulled a revolver and, reaching around the man who was between him and his antagonist, shot Holis in the side, killing him almost instantly. Beraro immediately sought Marshal Rowett, told him what had occurred and was placed in jail.

Marquette—The mystery of the disappearance of the 3-year-old son of John Karvela, living at the Allouez location, in Houghton county, is still unsolved. The child has vanished as if in thin air. Not a trace of the remains of the little one, if dead, has been found, nor, if perchance the youngster is living, is there a clue to his whereabouts. The parents weeks ago practically abandoned hope of ever seeing the child again. It was on July 31 that the boy disappeared. With others he had started along a road leading through a thick woods, happy in the thought of soon meeting his father, returning from work. Becoming tired, he sat down beside the road, while the others went on, admonishing the boy to remain where he was. It was not a great while later that the father was met, but on the arrival of the party at the spot where the child had stopped he was not seen. The fate of the child, doubtless, will never be satisfactorily explained. The kidnaping theory has the greatest number of believers as being the most plausible. It is not thought he wandered off and died in the woods, for the territory for miles around was scoured time and again by hundreds of men without the slightest success.

Calumet—Thomas P. Getz is expected to arrive in Calumet in a few days now and make the preliminary arrangements for the presentation of the annual Elks' theatrical opening, which will be given at the Calumet theater next month, the dates selected being Nov. 19 and 20.

Mrs. Johanna Grierson is dead at her home in Larium. With her demise one of the pioneer residents of the Copper country passed away. Mrs. Grierson lived in Calumet for almost forty years. She was born in Scotland seventy-two years ago. In 1854 she came to this country, settling first in Ontonagon county. After residing there thirteen years she came to Calumet with her husband, James Grierson, and made her home here ever since. Ten grown-up children survive Mrs. Grierson. They are Edward S. of Calumet, Alexander of Globe, and who is coming here for the funeral; Thomas, Paul W., James, Robert and John, all of Calumet, and Mrs. W. H. Thielman, Mrs. A. E. Petermann and Miss Mary Grierson, also residing here.

HEAVY ORE BUSINESS

Great Northern Will Double Track Its Range Line.

Improvement is Contemplated Between Brookston and Swan River.

Engineering parties are now in the field to estimate the cost of double tracking the Great Northern line from Brookston, Minn., to Swan River, Minn. This move on the part of the Great Northern is a direct result of the recent lease of the Hill ore lands in Minnesota by the United States Steel corporation.

Superintendent Philbin of the Great Northern admitted that the double tracking was under consideration, but said nothing had been decided as yet concerning it. There is understood to be little question, however, that the second track will be constructed. The distance between Swan River and Brookston is thirty-four miles. At present the ore trains come toward the Head of the Lakes as far as Brookston over one track, and returning go from Brookston to the mines over another. Almost the entire remaining distance from the mines to the docks is double tracked.

While this arrangement in a measure answers the purposes of a double track, the business over the main line between Swan River and Brookston, particularly at this season of the year, when the grain movement is on, interferes greatly with the operation of the ore trains, and occasions delays which would be avoided by a double track along the main line of the Fosston branch between Swan River and Brookston. This would practically give a double track all the way from the mines to the docks, and as the movement of ore in the future will be heavier than in the past, on account of the deal with the steel corporation, there is understood to be no doubt that the double tracking will be done.

The engineers now in the field will also estimate the cost of reducing the grades and shortening the curves between Swan River and Kelly Lake, Minn., about twenty-six miles. Final surveys are being made for a branch from the line about one mile east of Emmert, Minn., to Saxe, Minn., twelve miles, which will save the road a haul of about fifteen miles on ore from the Western Mesaba range. The company has large forces at work at Allouez, tearing down dock No. 1 and replacing it with what is claimed to be the largest ore dock in the world.

IRON RANGE BUYS CARS.

New Combination Observation-Buffet Car Has Been Ordered.

The Duluth & Iron Range road has placed an order with the Barney & Smith Car Company of Dayton, Ohio, for a handsome new combination observation-buffet car, which will be put in service on the afternoon train out of Duluth, when it is delivered.

The road operates a similar car on the morning train at present. Inasmuch as the evening train does not reach some range points until after the supper hour, it is expected that the new car will be well patronized.

The Duluth, Missabe & Northern road has found the operation of cafe cars on both its trains a profitable move.

The new car will be a triumph of the car-builder's art, and will contain all the comforts and furnishings that the up-to-date parlor of today boasts of.

The Barney & Smith company is also building two new passenger coaches for the Duluth & Iron Range. All of the new rolling stock is expected to go into commission by spring.

Next year will see the Duluth & Iron Range with large additions to its rolling stock. Several new locomotives have been ordered, as well as steel ore cars.

Many a man of humane impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. ARRESTED FOR BIGAMY.

Madison, S. D., Oct. 22.—A sensation has been created here by the return of Sheriff Bliss from Deer River, Minn., having in custody Charles Holland, who is wanted on the charge of bigamy. Holland fled from South Dakota to Minnesota when he learned that a warrant had been issued for his arrest. He will be arraigned at a term of state circuit court which convenes here this week.

The prisoner is about 30 years of age. It is alleged that while he had a wife, from whom he had separated, but from whom he had not procured a divorce, he married a girl named Heath, who was only about 12 years of age. A family row resulted in the undoing of Holland, as he was exposed and a warrant for his arrest issued. The members of the Heath family are said to be living at Mankato.

WEST DULUTH

FARMERS IN BUSINESS

Wrenshall farmers are about to go into the general grocery and produce business, and will make West Duluth their headquarters, having already practically decided to install a general store here. The store will be run on the co-operative plan, and will handle all the produce of the famers who enter in the agreement, at a profit only large enough to pay the expenses of the store.

Wrenshall has an association of farmers, with a membership at present of twelve prominent tillers of the soil in and about that point, and these twelve have been greatly in favor of the new road which is about being completed between West Duluth and Wrenshall, and as a result of the new road making it possible to do heavy hauling to this end of the city, have decided to make West Duluth their trading point. One of the members of the association will be sent here to run the store, and through it the farmers expect to be able to sell their produce at a greater profit to themselves than ever before.

H. R. Patterson, the West Duluth liveryman, was informed of the plan while attending the good roads' convention at Barnum Saturday. While there he talked to F. B. McLeran, president of the Wrenshall Farmers' association, who disclosed the plan of putting in a store here. He stated that all the farmers within the association could sell their produce at the store, and make practically all of the profit themselves, while outsiders would be charged 10 per cent of the vvalue of their goods.

The co-operative store will not be started until next spring, and in the meantime the new road from West Duluth will be completed. A ferry will soon be installed, so that heavy teams can cross the river at Fond du Lac, which will mark the completion of an excellent driveway for all kinds of teaming.

The proposed store will be of great benefit to the farmers themselves, and no less so to the residents of West Duluth and the whole city West Duluth has long been recognized as a great market for garden truck of all kinds, and the farmers have always found plenty of buyers here.

Dr. Haas of St. Paul Will Attend K. O. T. M. Meeting.

PARK RAPIDS THE WINNER

Of an Interesting Game of Football With Cass Lake.

Cass Lake, Minn., Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—An interesting, though one-sided game of football was played at Park Rapids Saturday afternoon between the teams representing the Cass Lake and Park Rapids high schools. The score was 25 to 0 in favor of Park Rapids. The halves were fifteen and twenty minutes, respectively. The teams were evenly matched on the offense, but Cass Lake was weak on defense. It is believed that the Park Rapids team consisted of members of the city team, with one or two exceptions, as their players were much older and heavier than those of the Cass Lake school. The Cass Lake team lined up as follows: Center, Manny Goss; right guard, Charles Tedford; left guard, Albert Marshite; right tackle, G. C. Glibert;; left tackle, L. H. Burns; right end, Robert Jarvis; left end, Samuel Sutor; right halfback, J. T. Gardner; left halfback, George Lydeck; fullback, A. G. Bernard; quarterback and captain, I. D. Converse.

In spite of the large score, the game, at intervals, brought forth some very sensational playing. Park Rapids opened the game by kicking off to Cass Lake. The ball was caught by Capt. Converse on Cass Lake's 15-yard line, and by the aid of excellent interference furnished by Jarvis and Marshite, was returned forty yards. During the remainder of the first half, the Cass Lake rooters were amazed and delighted by the fierce line plunging of Fullback Bernard, who was always good for ten or fifteen yards through guard or tackle. He, however, was unfortunately laid out after ten minutes of play and the hearts of the Cass Lakers sank. Ole Ferguson trotted out upon the field and replaced the veteran fullback. He, however, was unable to smash through the line at will as had his predecessor and, after being thrown back twice for a loss of two or three yards, was not again given the ball during the half.

The feature of the second half was the mad dash around right end by Lydeck on a forward pass by the right halfback, Gardner, the ball advancing thirty-five yards into the enemy's territory before the player was downed. Cass Lake was held for downs and forced to kick on third down. Being near Park Rapids' goal Capt. Converse, he of the educated toe, attempted a drop kick for goal, but unfortunately Ferguson, who misunderstood the signal, dashed against Converse at this point, disabling the doughty captain, so that he was forced to retire and spoiling the kick. Hardning replaced Converse and the struggle continued, Manny Goss distinguished himself by breaking through on punts and in several cases also falling on the ball, thereby making first downs for Cass Lake. Marshite was removed during the last five minutes of play for abusive language to officials.

No mention need be made of the playing of the Park Rapids men, as all was of the highest quality.

CONCERNING WOMEN

"The thing that keeps me from going to more than three services a Sunday after the first of November," said the Young Man to the Girl Whom he Takes to Church, "is, that there is no place to put my overcoat and my hat. It isn't so bad about the hat, but the coat is impossible."

"Why?" said the girl.

"Well, to begin with, I usually choose the church that is filled Sunday evening. If, by chance, I go into one of the others, in order to have plenty of room at my disposal, the usher elaborately, and with care, shows me to a pew already containing four men. I take my coat off. The space allotted to me is just large enough to sit in. What'll I do with the coat?"

"Sit on it," said the girl brilliantly, just as if the idea was thought of for the first time.

"Exactly," said the man, though he had a grievance. "You hit it the first time, and then where are you? Perched up in the air, uncomfortable and conspicuous, vowing eternally not to come to church again. The only thing for it is check rooms. The church must adopt up-to-date methods. They've got to do it, and one of the ways to keep the young men in the church is check rooms."

"Wouldn't just a plain cloak room do?" inquired the young person who had been "took" to church, to show that she was listening sympathetically and with interest.

"Not for muh," interjected the advanced masculine. "And have your brand new lid changed for a last season's block. No, no. A check room that will be held responsible for the return of your own clothes is the only one I'll stand. Anyhow, I think we better stay at home next Sunday night. There are lots more interesting things I can tell you than this."

And then the rain and the darkness and big umbrella swallowed them up.

What Retail Markets Offer

Kale, 15 cents a peck.
Seckle pears, 80 cents a peck.
Ben Davis apples, 50 cents a peck.
Salt cod fish, 15 cents a lb.
Bloater mackerel, 30 cents a lb.
Pickled tripe, 12½ cents a lb.
Pop corn, 4 cents a lb.

The time of year has arrived when a dish pan full of white and snowy, light and flaky, salted and dripping with butter, pop corn appears as the principal setting of an evening scene. Conversation never reaches a thrillingly high level when the conversationists are regaling themselves with pop corn, but then, too, it never reaches such a comfy, tranquil and non irritating placidity as when between opinions a hand bulging with the appetizing stuff pops the separate kernels with rapid succession into the waiting mouth. And the blissful content which comes when you have eaten all you could and you sit back with a wide rim of thirty-cent a pound grease around your mouth and your hands in the same, for the time being, pleasant condition, is reached by no other condition of life.

the snow. High wind and weather conditions have delayed trains ten to eighteen hours in the country west of Alliance.

The worst blizzard since the great storm of 1882 was general throughout New Mexico, a high wind bringing a general fall of snow and sleet through the Grand Valley. Reports indicate that the losses to sheep growers will be very heavy.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 22.—One man was killed and three injured and property worth $600,000 destroyed by a destructive wind that swept over this city and Ogden and other Utah towns, Saturday night and yesterday. Fire, fanned by the wind, destroyed the new $250,000 plant of the Utah Packing company, while churches and hundreds of other buildings were damaged. William Gibbs was killed at Ogden, and Capt. William G. Capoon and Driver Fred Gulbranson of the local fire department were caught under a falling tree while driving to answer a fire alarm. Capoon's leg was broken, and Gulbranson was injured internally. Others sustained less serious injuries from falling trees and short circuited wires.

schooner Southern Queen was thrown on the beach at Ruatan and went to pieces in less than an hour. A tidal wave accompanied the hurricano and swept everything before it. The beaches were strewn with vessels of all kinds, including three large sailing boats. No lives were reported lost. Ten thousand bunches of bananas were swept into the seat at Ruatan.

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 22.—The British steamer Alton, Capt. Bell, brought here, yesterday, twenty-four survivors of Houseboat No. 4, engaged in building the extension of the Florida East Coast railroad to Key West, that was wrecked in the big storm last week. There were 137 men on the houseboat at the time. It is believed that at least 100 lost their lives.

A sail ferry boat plying between Beaufort, S. C., and Ladies' Island, swamped during the storm, with six men and four women, all negroes, on board. Three women were drowned.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The president today received the following telegram from Governor Broward of Florida, in response to a message of sympathy for those who had suffered by the recent storm, and offer of federal aid:

"Leesburg, Fla., Oct. 21.—I express to you the sincere thanks of the people of Florida for your expression of sympathy, and sincerely thank you for your offer of national aid in any practicable way. Will advise you further after investigating matters."

FIFTEEN PERISH ON RAILS

Indiana Traction line at the crossing on Dorr street, three miles west. The locomotives struck the rear end of the car, smashing it badly. The engine was thrown from the track and one of the crew buried beneath it. The engineer and fireman stuck to their posts until the crash came. Their cab was split open and both crawled out, escaping with a few bruises.

The train had the right of way, but Conductor Gilbert of the interurban misjudged the distance and thought he had plenty of time to cross the track ahead of the train. Motorman Whalen disappeared after the collision.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 22.—Conductor Michael Sullivan was killed, Lewis H. Davis hurt so seriously that he died later, and six other persons sustained cuts and bruises in a street car collision last night in Knoxville, a suburb. The motorman lost control of the car and it slid backward down a steep grade, crashing into ono following.

Almost simultaneosuly a repair car upon which the brake refused to work, crashed into a West Park car, seriously injuring the persons. Michael McMahon, the motorman of the passenger car, had his scalp torn off and received other injuries.

Mount Vernon, Ky., Oct. 22.—Bert Smith, engineer; Joe Derrickson, lumberman, and Conductor Lith were instantly killed by a train jumping the track on the Mountain Central railway, near Campton, Ky. Three other men were fatally hurt. Smith lost control of his engine going down a steep grade.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—Yankee Doodle Girls.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Tuesday and Wednesday, Harry Beresford in "The Woman Hater."

"YANKEE DOODLE GIRLS"

Appear at Metropolitan and Are Well Received---Two Burlesques.

The Yankee Doodle Girls, with many beauties among their number, some good songs and some fetching costumes, opened an engagement at the Metropolitan yesterday afternoon, and before an audience which broke all records for the theater.

In addition to the interesting things mentioned as parts of the Yankee Doodle entertainment, the girls have some funny comedians and some vaudeville that is fine and dandy.

There is more horse-play in "Tim Sullivan's Chowder" and "Sullivan on Guard in the Philippines," than in the last several attractions at the "Met." Or, rather, it should be said that the horse-play is not always so good, but there is not enough of the dull kind to spoil a very good show.

James F. Leonard is the principal comedian and he gets away with it. He is also the producer of the burlesques and, that being the case, he should have evolved a better comedy situation for the first part than the turkey scene which is given. The last burlesque is much better. It is a screaming satire on the military.

McDevitt and Kelly are very clever dancers and James and Davis have one of those rapid fire sidewalk conversations in the olio. Instead of smiting the comedy man with a newspaper, the "straight" man uses a glove, however.

Billy Hart, who does good work in both burlesques, has a funny turn in the olio with Anna Yale, the prima donna of the company, and Marie Jansen. The act is called "The Plaything." Lawrence Crane, the Irish magician, does some very good tricks. As the feature of his act, he accomplishes a good illusion called "Cremation," with the aid of Miss Crawford.

HARRY BERESFORD.

Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday afternoon, Harry Beresford will appear at the Lyceum in "The Woman Hater." He is a clever comedian who always creates laughter, and he is said to be supported by an excellent company. Helen Travers will be the leading comedienne. Miss Margaret Lee will be the character comedienne and Miss Mildred Johnson will be the ingenue. It is rather remarkable that every part in this play is a comedy part, for even comedies harbor a villain and other serious roles. Harry Gibbs Hockey will be the principal character comedian in support of Mr. Beresford. Otto F. Andrle will essay the eccentric character comedy role and H. H. Sleight will have a character comedy part. Edwin Belden will be the light comedian and be it said, with due reverence, his good looks will please the ladies. Harry Creighton will portray a character role, and last, but not least, C. Y. O. Pugh will strive to amuse in a similar character.

BIG WAD DAZZLES BOY.

Chicago Youth Tells Strange Story and Judge Paroles Him.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The sight of a pile of $10 and $20 bills so overawed a 13-year-old boy that he was afraid to steal the money. He had never in all his lifetime seen more than a few dollars together at one time, and his heart sank within him when he viewed the great pile of greenbacks, which looked bigger to him than the hoard of Monte Cristo.

The boy is Theodore Harrylowicz. He told his experience in the juvenile court. In another part of the grocery store where he saw the stack of greenbacks, and from which he had fled in awe, the boy found $50, and this time he was able to conquer his agitation long enough to take the lesser sum. It was for stealing this that he was arraigned.

William Barbesky, who owns a grocery near where the young culprit lives, was in such a hurry to go to church last Sunday that he forgot to lock the doors of his store, he told the court. Harrylowicz and a companion passed by the grocery after Barbesky had left, and seeing the door open, he went in to investigate.

"Why didn't you take the $1,100 instead of the $50?" asked Judge Mack.

"Oh, no, I couldn't," said Theodore; "it was too much money. But I put the big bills back and locked the safe because I was afraid burglars might get it."

"I guess you're not really bad," said the judge, "and I'll parole you."

WILLS WIFE FORTUNE IF SHE STAYS SINGLE.

Newport, R. I., Oct. 22.—James A. Garland, a young multi-millionaire, who created a sensation three years ago by remarrying the woman he had divorced, left her the use of virtually all his large estate in his will, provided she remains single.

It was said he remarried her because he was jealous of the attentions of others. Before he died he fixed it so she will not be likely to choose another husband.

Upon her death the income of the estate goes to three sons—Charles, James and Hamilton—and upon the death of their survivors to Harvard college for aid of poor students. Garland left personal property worth $10,000,000, and there is much real estate.

Mrs. Garland receives an income of $10,000 a year, provided she does not remarry; also, on the same condition, the use of the fine country place on Prudence Island, in Narragansett bay.

STYLISH MILLINERY.

The millinery season is at its height and the ladies have studied the fashion notes so that they know what their fall hat should be like to be appropriate. In former years it was almost a necessity to order millinery from a dealer in a large city, because the facilities to buy a hat that was right were very limited in the average smaller towns. This condition has changed and especially so in the Northwest, and is due to the aggressive business methods of some of the large millinery jobbers. One of the great and foremost houses is the firm of Blumenfeld, Locher & Brown Co., known as the "Progressive Millinery House of Milwaukee." Their buyers are constantly in Paris or New York buying and getting posted on desirable millinery and in their great establishment in Milwaukee they are employing a coterie of as skilled artists as can be found in the world. The peculiar advantage of manufacturing in Milwaukee enables this firm to offer their product at lower prices than can ordinarily be obtained by dealers, and the general consumer thereby gets the benefit. When you go shopping for your new hat ask the saleslady to show you a hat with a B. L. & B. monogram label. It will insure you a first-class high grade, stylish and milliner made hat and the price will be within reach.

FOUND DEAD IN A SALOON

John English, Who Drank Heavily, Succumbed to Heart Failure.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Coroner Marcum went to Kelliher and investigated the causes that led to the death of John English, who was found dead in a saloon at that place Thursday night. English had been drinking quite heavily and apparently went to sleep in a chair in a saloon owned by a man named Gibson. He was not disturbed for some time, and when an attempt was made to waken him, it was found that English was dead. Coroner Marcum decided that he came to his death from heart failure.

"Billy" Spears, a noted character, who lived on the Red Lake reservation for several years, was arrested by Frank Tufts, deputy United States marshal, and taken to Walker Saturday, where he was given a hearing on the charge of selling whiskey on the Indian lands. Marshal Tufts had in his possession four warrants, charging Spears with four similar offenses, and he stated that Spears, who is sickly and almost unable to work, had been repeatedly warned to cease his "boot-legging," or he would be severely dealt with.

COPPER METAL IS ADVANCING

George L. Walker of Boston Says Market is Excited.

"The copper metal market is ecited and prices continue to show an advancing tendency," says George L. Walker, the Boston writer on mining topics, in his latest letter.

"Lake and electrolytic may now be quoted at 21¾ cents to 23 cents per pound. Sales of round lots have been made at 22 cents, and, reports say, at 22½ and 23 cents also. The leading selling agencies and the largest producing interests are advising consumers to refrain, as long as possible, from making further purchases. Buyers have been bidding prices up against themselves, and producers, having no copper for nearby delivery, have been unable to stop the advance. One of the largest selling interests says that his concern could not contract to deliver more than 200,000 pounds of electrolytic copper during the remainder of this year.

"While domestic consumers are quite well supplied with copper and have covered their requirements for three or four months by advance delivery contracts, the position of European consumers is quite the reverse of this. The foreigners have been exceedingly skeptical all the way up from 15 cents per pound. They have been buying from hand to mouth and as a rule have contracted for practically nont of their advance requirements. As a result they must now buy copper regardless of prices or close their mills and factories. According to the best information obtainable there is not and will not be enough copper in existence to supply the foreign requirements during the month of December and January, and the spectacle of idle sheet and wire mills probably will be witnessed because of the inability of their owners to buy copper supplies at any price.

"The largest producing interests regret the present condition of things and express fear that prices may go to 25 cents per pound. They realize that a level must eventually be reached where prices will check consumption. There is no fear, however, that there will be any sudden or ungovernable decline in copper prices. In future times when business conditions become unfavorable, however, the decline in copper prices will have none of the panicky characteristics that have been witnessed two or three time in the past. There is now every reason to believe that the price will average fully 20 cents per pound during the coming twelve months at least and there is little prospect that the price will drop materially below 20 cents until a severe reaction in general business conditions is under way."

Of the copper shares, Mr. Walker says:

"The coppers have continued strong, but recently there has been a decreasing volume of trading in the better class of stocks. The big advances in such stocks as Amalgamated, Anaconda, North Butte, Allouez, Butte Coalition, Cananea Central and others have supplied the basis for a boom in the mining stock flotation business, and new wildcat promotions are being brought out in almost endless array. There hasn't been a time in the past six years when the public was being so widely solicited to put its money into new an' undemonstrated mining schemes, backed by men of little or no standing in the financial and mining world. Of the thousands of new companies now being floated, not one in fifty will be successful, and that one will probably have to be reorganized, as promoters as a rule are taking outrageously large blocks of the stocks of their companies to themselves in payment for their services, and absorbing so much of the rest in commissions and expenses, that the promoted companies are starting forth on their careers like beggars with hardly a dollar in their pockets.

"I cannot too strongly warn the public against putting its money into the stocks of wildcat companies. The very securities are none too good for the small investor. We cannot have a great and permanent increase in the values of small obscure enterprises without having a much greater relative advance in the best grade of securities.

"Stocks which look attractive because of their low prices usually represent nothing else than a greater subdivision of the capital of the company. For illustration: Nevada-Utah, with 750,000 shares of stock, quoted on the curb around 4¾, has a market valuation of $3,562,500. I understand that it is not a producer and that it holds at least one, the best of its three properties, o na lease and bond on which it has as yet made no payment. This company is selling for a million dollars more than the Franklin mine, twice as much as the Michigan, for only half a million less than Allouez, and only $1,500,000 less than Shannon, all of which are demonstrated enterprises, with properties paid for, equipment in place and money in their treasuries. The reason the stocks of the latter companies look so much higher than Nevada-Utah is that all four of them together have a smaller number of shares, 150,000 less, than Nevada-Utah.

The dividend action of Amalgamated is in keeping with what other copper mining companies have been doing for a year past and what they will probably continue to do for a year to come. The best copper stocks are still cheap. On every reaction I would buy Amalgamated, Copper Range, Calumet & Arizona, North Butte, Utah Consolidated, Tennessee Copper, Greene, Butte Coalition, Utah Copper, Boston Consolidated, Bingham, Michigan and Balaklala."

Snow on the Ranges.

Ponts on the iron ranges and throughout the Northern part of the state enjoyed a generous snow fall Saturday. The snow did not come more than half way between Duluth and the Mesaba range, but Bemidji and Cass Lake reported snow.

About six inches fell in some places and the lumbermen are looking upon it with dismay, as there is a chance that it will stay. They do not like these early and heavy falls of snow. They would like to see lots of cold weather before any snow falls, to freeze up the swamps and logging roads.

BULLET IN HIS HEART

Joseph Jindra Places Rifle to Breast and Pulls Trigger.

Leaves a Note to Mother Saying He Must Go.

After firing five shots from a revolver, and inflicting only a slight wound in his chest, Joseph Jindra, a Finnish laborer 24 years of age, placed the muzzle of a Winchester rifle to his breast and pulled the trigger.

The bullet severed one of the main arteries next to the heart, and caused death almost instantly.

Next door to the boardinghouse, the men and women in the Star of Hope mission were singing sacred songs, and the music appears to have affected Jindra, for opened before him was a Bible which he had evidently been reading before his death.

None of the revolver shots were heard by the other guests in the house, although the rifle shot attracted their attention. When they entered the room they found Jindra lying on the floor, dead, and holes in the walls and transom showed the course of the bullets he had fired at himself.

The room was bespattered with blood, and on the floor lay a note written partly in English and partly in Finnish. It was addressed to "Mother, New Prague, Minn.," and read as follows: "Good-bye sweet mother, sisters and brothers, and good-bye to the world. I have to go. They will pray for me. Give my money to the poor, unless my folks refuse to bury me."

The coroner was notified of the occurrence, and the body removed to Flood & Horgan's undertaking rooms. The man had $45 and a diamond ring in his possession.

Telegrams were sent to his relatives, and this morning instructions were received to ship the body to Montgomery, Minn., for burial.

Jindra is said to have been employed in one of the lodging camps near Cass Lake. He was unmarried.

TUG AND SAND SUCKER BURN

Fire Starts in Tug in Early Morning—Loss $9,500.

The sand sucker Admiral Togo and the tug Corona were practically destroyed by fire which started at 1 o'clock this morning. The boats were owned by the Osborn estate and had been engaged in building a small dock on the inside of Minnesota Point near the Duluth Boat Club house.

The fire department was on the ground opposite the burning boat property within 20 minutes after receiving the alarm with No. 3 chemical, but the firemen found it impossible to get any of the apparatus to the fire except some hand chemicals and pails. They did excellent work, however, under the circumstances. The time of the arrival of the department is considered to be very speedy, in view of the fact that it was necessary to cross the ship canal on the aerial bridge.

The loss is estimated at about $9,500, the sand sucker being valued at $3,000 and the tug $6,500. The fire started in the tug.

NO NEW CLUE TO WOMAN'S DEATH

Superior Police Think Mrs. Jonkoski's Death Was Accidental.

Although the police officials at Superhave arrived at no definite understanding of the manner in which Mrs. James Jankoski of Mesaba, Minn., came to her death in the basement of the federal building last Thursday evening, they are rather inclined to think it was an accident. The woman's intoxicated condition has been pretty well established and it is thought that she might have sought refuge for the night in the empty building, knowing that none of the hotels would admit her in that condition. This theory is borne out by the fact that the body when found had one shoe partly unlaced while the other was missing. Mrs. Jankoski, it is claimed, might have thought she had found a good place to sleep and in bending over to remove her she fell from the temporary plank platform into the water in the basement.

Mr. Jankoski claims that his wife had about $100 when she left her home last Tuesday to do some trading in Duluth and Superior. The police do not think that she could have spent all the money. Only $3 or $4 were found on the body.

Red Cliff Lumber Company Sells 6,000,000 Feet.

The Red Cliff Lumber company has sold 6,000,000 feet of No. 3 and better lumber to Arnold & Co., of Albany, N. Y. The price is not made public, but it is understood to be at the top notch. Only 2,000,000 feet of the lumber has been sawed, the remaining 4,000,000 feet to be manufactured this winter.

Some of the shippers report lumber tonnage scarce and claim that from now on the lumber movement down the lakes should be very active.

The lumber manufacturers report plenty of orders and most of them are doing a big trade.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY FAILS TO ENTHUSE OVER COLE

His Speeches Fall Flat, Not Once Creating Any Enthusiasm.

The tour through St. Louis county of A. L. Cole, Republican candidate for governor of Minnesota, was concluded Saturday evening at the Armory and West Duluth. He and his party are welcome to any satisfaction they can get out of it. Of course there were in most of the places good audiences, but that is nearly always true of meetings held in the smaller cities and communities. The quiet and monotony of life in a little town is often relieved by the arrival of a candidate for governor on a special train and the people welcome the opportunity to turn out to a public meeting no matter what their affiliations may be. The speakers get more or less applause and a man not well experienced in the political game and too ready to credit the surface showing will be deceived as to the real conditions. Mr. Cole professes to be well satisfied with conditions as he found them on the iron ranges, and if he is honest in that statement and really looks for anything like the vote that Robert C. Dunn got two years ago, he is one of those men who accept too readily the turning out of the people as an evidence of commitment to his cause.

If Mr. Cole and his suporters could have been in the position of covering the ranges with both his own and Governor Johnson's parties, his impression of conditions would be modified. At but one point on the entire tour was any real enthusiasm and interest in the candidate made manifest. That was at the little town of Aurora on the Iron Range branch between Eveleth and Allen Junction. A short stop was made there, and about seventy-five men, women and children were gathered on the platform. Mr. Cole spoke briefly and shook hands and as the train pulled out after a five minute stop, three cheers were given for Cole with genuine enthusiasm, for the first and only time on the trip.

At Proctor, the first stop, the reception was identical with that given Governor Johnson. The men gathered in the paint shop and were briefly addressed and the party passed on. Talks with several of them elicited the information that Governor Johnson is considerably stronger there than two years ago, and that Mr. Cole can not hope for as much there as Bob Dunn got. Proctor gave Dunn 89 to Johnson's 50.

The first evening meetings were at Virginia and Eveleth. At Virginia the Fay opera house when the meeting opened was about three-quarters filled, but later on filled up and a number were standing and it looked pretty good to the Republicans. They had not been to Governor Johnson's meeting held at 1:30 in the afternoon in the busy hours of the day, and seen the same hall with more standing room taken and with no comparison as to applause and enthusiasm. As a matter of fact the first "hand" Senator Clapp got was when he referred to W. J. Bryan, a few started to applaud and the senator remarked, "that's right, applaud him," and they accepted the invitation and made the hall ring. Things warmed up a little for the senator later, for he is a vigorous talker, but Candidate Cole fell like a wet blanket and before he finished the people were stringing out of the hall. When Governor Johnson spoke they remained to the end and crowded forward to shake his hand.

But to get at the sentiment, go along the streets of Virginia and talk to the people. Three-fourths of the business people are for Johnson. Two years ago the city gave Dunn 254 and Johnson 198. It is fairly predicted there that Johnson will have a handsome majority this time.

At Eveleth with Congressman Bede and Mr. Cole speaking, they failed to fill Vail hall, it being about three-fourths filled. It was as at Virginia, Mr. Cole being heard quietly and with only a fair amount of applause. Congressman Bede, of course, got his share, his jokes and witticisms always taking with the crowd.

At Chisholm, the next night, there was a good crowd, but the hall is not a very large one, and the story was practically the same as at Eveleth and Virginia. Johnson pictures were freely displayed in the windows there, and the Johnson sentiment is stronger than two years ago. This is one of the strong Republican towns, having given Dunn 246 and Johnson 97, two years ago.

It was at Hibbing, however, that the party got a real jarring. There was a coldness in the very atmosphere, and they felt it. The Powers Opera house was about two-thirds filled, which would mean about 800, but it was the chilliest proposition met with, the only applause that had the ring of real enthusiasm coming when Senator Clapp said that "so far as Governor Johnson's personal achievement, and the position he has attained, are concerned, he is an inspiration to the youth of Minnesota." It was noticeable, by the way, that Senator Clapp did not give utterance to that sentiment in any of his later speeches.

This meeting was in striking contrast to that held when Governor Johnson was there. At that time the house was packed from pit to dome, all the standing room was taken, and the crowd was most enthusiastic in its demonstrations. Stuntz township, two years ago, gave Dunn 549 and Johnson 33. Hibbing composes two precincts out of the six in the town, and the Johnson men predict that they will carry the city handsomely, and will have at least a stand off in the township.

At Mountain Iron the meeting was satisfactory, but even the Republicans hardly hope to do as well as two years ago, when Dunn got 89 and Johnson 15. The same is true of Morse, where Wintor is located; Dunn got 70 and Johnson 13.

Tower gave Governor Johnson a considerably better reception than Mr. Cole got. Dunn got 118 there two years ago, and Johnson 45, but the story will be different this year.

Ely is another great Republican stronghold, Dunn getting 35¢ to Johnson's 86. Republicans when questioned frankly admitted that there was be no such majority this time and that Johnson would get many Republican votes. No Democrat is so sanguine as to expect to carry the city, but the result will not be so overwhelming as two years ago. The meeting there was a good-sized one, but did not tax the capacity of the hall.

At Two Harbors a considerable number of people met the train, but it was nothing like the outpouring that welcomed Governor Johnson's arrival. The meeting opened with less than a hundred present, but the men at the shops were given a lay off and before the meeting closed the crowd had jumped to about 300. Mr. Cole's speech fell flat so far as could be seen, for it was received in silence and got nothing but the usual perfunctory applause, and small measure at that, at the close.

And then the meetings at Duluth Saturday night. In spite of the fact that the candidate of a great party for governor was visiting a city of 70,000 people and supported by a United States senator and congressman, 700 people was the best turn out that could be secured. True, the weather was not favorable, but—well, wait till Governor Johnson comes.

At West Duluth the hall was perhaps three-quarters filled, while at the Johnson meeting about three weeks ago it was packed to suffocation.

The indifference of the Republicans and the lack of enthusiasm in the campaign could not fail to make themselves apparent to an observer. The visit of the candidate will not have the effect of putting any new life into it, either, for Mr. Cole has nothing about him that creates enthusiasm or inspires the workers to activity. He is utterly lacking in personal magnetism and incapable of making a convincing and effective speech. As a "mixer," he is as complete a failure as on the platform. Whatever may be his ability as a politician in pulling the wires, when he gets out on the hustings and among the people he does not know the first rule of the game. He tries hard enough to get into it, but he simply does not know how; he is not built that way.

Another thing that deserves notice is the vigorous campaigning of Congressman Bede for two years from now. He is at it hard and he has devoted far more time to that everywhere than he did to Candidate Cole.

As far as the arrangements for the trip were concerned, they were all that could be desired. Two private cars were provided and the party lived on them throughout the trip. The train was in charge of Capt. Ray T. Lewis and he filled the position well.

TALK OF PLANS FOR A HARBOR

Lakesiders Would Have Place of Refuge for Their Yachts.

Members of the Lakeside club gathered at Harmony hall in that part of the city Saturday to discuss ways and means of securing a yacht harbor on the lake shore there.

The club is desirous of securing property on the East side of the Lester river. Many members are members of the Duluth Yacht club as well and are enthusiastic over the proposition of securing a harbor for those who would like to keep their boats nearer home.

Walter E. Knapp, representing the Lakeside Land company, was present and he said the concern owned a ten-acre tract in the desired location but that it was unwilling to sell it except as a whole. He said, however, the land could be leased, subject to sale at all times.

It was thought until recently that the land was the property of the park board. It was suggested that that body be interested in the harbor scheme but it did not meet with favor, the sentiment being that the board had no funds with which to carry on such improvements.

In the event of the securing of the land for the harbor, the river would have to be dredged and other improvements made.

Bert Fesler, Commodore Johnson of the yacht club and L. R. Martin were appointed to serve on a committee which is to negotiate with the land company and make a report at the next meeting of the club.

KILLED ON THE TRACK.

Well Known Lumberjack of Deer River District Meets Death.

The Deer River News says: "News was received here Thursday of the sudden death of Charley Devine, an old-time and well-known lumberjack of this vicinity. Devine had been enjoying himself quite freely for some time, and his friends had him sent to the hospital at Grand Rapids last Sunday for care and treatment. Just how he managed to elude the attendants at the hospital is not known here, but he was missed, and search resulted in finding his body lying on the Great Northern tracks, this side of LaPrairie, his head badly crushed and other injuries sustained. Charley was his own worst enemy, and he numbered his friends by the score.

STUCK TO IT

For Years, But Finally Had to Give Up Coffee.

Our habits of eating and drinking stick to us like a hungry pup to a bone. We can't always break lose even when we know we ought to.

Coffee does certainly hurt many persons, and they know it. But it is one thing to know it and another to devise some way to change the habit and still have a warm beverage at meal time. Thousands of persons all over the world have found it easy to quit coffee because they use Postum Food Coffee.

"For years I've felt the harm of drinking coffee," writes an Iowa woman, "but I liked it so well I stuck to it until about two years ago I quit coffee, and tea, too, and began to drink Postum.

"I made it, not like coffee, but boiled it according to directions on the package, and the first time we had it we all liked it. We have it now, morning, noon and night, and all feel healthier and happier for the change.

"I never have heartburn nor indigestion any more, though my husband and I used to suffer that way and with nervous headache a great deal of the time when we drank tea and coffee. We can't say enough in praise for Postum, and for the good it has done us." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BRUTE FIRES WIFE'S DRESS

Drunken Pennsylvanian Ends Abuse by Attempting Murder.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 22.—Screaming with pain and terror, with her clothing ablaze, Mrs. John Doran rushed from her house into the street in Wilkinsburg, near here, yesterday. After a policeman had extinguished the flames, she was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

According to Mrs. Doran, her husband had been drinking and when he went home he began to abuse here. Finally he threw a lighted lamp at her and then knocked her down. Then, she declared, he seized a towel which had ignited from the broken lamp and set her clothing on fire.

The woman's statements are substantiated by her 13-year-old daughter who witnessed the father's cruelty. Mrs. Doran's hair was burned to the scalp and her clothing above the waist was burned off.

LOW FARE FIGHT IN MINNEAPOLIS

Business Men to Join M. O. Leaders in Earnest Campaign.

Minneapolis, Oct. 22.—The Journal says: Minneapolis is to have some street car fare excitement in dead earnest immediately following the coming election, or at least after the first of the year, when the new aldermen take their seats.

This time the activity in behalf of cheaper car fares is not to be confined to a few practically unknown workers in the municipal ownership ranks. The leaders of the new movement will be the well-known leaders of the municipal ownership plan, assisted by several prominent business interests and business men.

Although it was quietly done, an active effort has already been made to bring the question before the council in the form of an ordinance demanding cheaper car fares. It is said that aldermen on both sides who were approached, dodged and manifested extreme nervousness and fear of the cars. The aldermanic candidates, however, are making their active campaigns partly on this platform. In the Sixth ward John Peterson, the Republican candidate, fighting Lars Rand, is pledged to work for a reduction for far cares.

In the Seventh ward, T. O. Dahl, the Democratic candidate, is fighting Vaugan, and has pledged to fight for seven fares for a quarter. In the Twelfth ward another Democrat, Martin McHale, is pledged to a car fare reduction movement. Several leading workers in the car fare reduction campaign to be started, are greatly interested in the present campaign, some on one side and some on the other. With the campaign closed they will take up in earnest the car fare reduction, dropping entirely all political lines. The reduced fare organization will work with the several business organizations that are also interested, and will have the solid backing of the mass of organized labor.

STOPS STREET WORK.

Superior Property Owner Gets an Injunctional Order.

H. M. Stocking of St. Paul, who owns the Wisconsin block on Tower avenue and Winter street in Superior, has secured an injunction against Fielding & Shipley, restraining them from carrying out their contract to pave Winter street.

A hearing on the order, which was issued by Court Commissioner Fridley, will be had in the circuit court of Douglas county as soon as Judge Vinje returns from a trip to another part of the state. Mr. Stocking alleges many irregularities in the proceedings up to and the awarding of the contract.

Work on the street had already begun. The old cedar blocks had been torn up and some of the curbing was reset before the contractors quit work.

Work Will be Pushed.

R. F. Berdie of Hibbing, who is connected with the Northern Traction company, was in Duluth yesterday and stated that the company would push the work of building an electric line on the iron ranges this winter. He said that contracts for the timbers for overhead crossings and for ties were now being made, but said that progress was slow, owing to the big demand for materials from steam roads.

He said there would be only two or three grade crossings on the new line and that these would not be dangerous ones. An overhead crossing will have to be constructed over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern yards at Hibbing.

BLACK SHEEP IN TOILS

Degenerate Son of Rich Man Arrested for Forgeries.

Crimes Committed All Over East and in Other Lands.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—J. P. Langdon, who is in custody here on information furnished by the police of Baltimore, charging him with forgery is said to have operated successfully in nearly every large city in the East, and to have swindled many persons in England, Paris, Berlin and Yokohoma, Japan, by forging the name of Andrew Carnegie, President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania railway and other prominent men to drafts and checks.

Langdon, according to Baltimore reports, is the son of Samuel T. Kingdon, a wealthy business man of Philadelphia, and a college bred man and linguist. Through his accomplishments, he gained the confidence of some of the most prominent American families and was able to pass the alleged worthless paper without arousing suspicion.

While traveling in Europe, Langdon is said to have made the acquaintance of Judson Wesley, son of John F. Wesley, a Baltimore jeweler. While a guest at the Wesley home, he is said to have passed a forged check for $125, Charles A. Wesley, a brother of Judson, being the victim. Later he represented himself to be the son of a railroad president and was entertained by Eugene Tinanus, son of the mayor of Baltimore.

Langdon served a term in the Ohio penitentiary for forgery in 1899. He told the police that he was disowned by his family after his conviction. He claims to be a relative of Andrew Carnegie.

PARLIAMENT'S PLANS LIVELY

London, Oct. 22.—Parliament will reassemble tomorrow with two vexatious controversies before it, and other questions likely to come up. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the premier, has returned after a long rest, following the death of his wife at Marienbad, last summer. Joseph Chamberlain also expects to be in his place. Ex-Premier Balfour will continue in his old place, with Lord Lansdowne directing the opposition forces in the house of lords.

It is not likely that the government will initiate any legislation beyond that foreshadowed in the king's speech, together with what was left over from the spring setting. The session will be marked by two conflicts—one between the house of lords and the house of commons—over the education bill, and another between the government and the labor party over the workingmen's compensation bill. The controversy over the education bill may lead to serious consequences, and possibly cause an appeal to the country, as the two houses are apparently irreconcilable.

The Irish question is a slumbering volcano, which may break out at any moment, but there is believed to be a tacit understanding that it will go over to the next session for full discussion. It is believed, however, that James Brice, chief secretary for Ireland, may, before the adjournment, disclose the government's proposals concerning Ireland. Meantime the Irish leaders, notably John Redmond here, and T. P. O'Connor in the United States, are indicating that the government's concession of anything short of complete home rule will be unacceptable to the Irish party.

Catarrh of the Stomach

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. R. S. Workman, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom passing backward into the throat reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrh of stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

THE TEST.

Election day is two weeks from tomorrow, and the average voter has probably pretty well made up his mind how he is going to vote on the main contest of the campaign, the governorship.

In this section we have had visits from both the candidates for governor. Governor Johnson has spoken in Duluth and upon the ranges, and will speak down town in Duluth the Wednesday before election. He brought no strong array of talent with him to bolster up his cause. He needed none. His own straightforward eloquence, his own fine and convincing manliness, and his own evident sincerity and good faith, were champions enough for him.

Candidate Cole, too, has toured the ranges and spoken in Duluth. He brought with him an attractive galaxy of senatorial and congressional talent to assist him in interesting the voters.

So the people have had a chance to get acquainted with the personalities of both candidates. Before that they had been made acquainted with the official records of both candidates. They knew that Governor Johnson had made such a success as governor that even his opponents dared not attack his record. True, they said he had "done nothing," but such statements weighed little with voters that knew that under his administration timber stealing had been stopped for the first time in the history of the state, that railroad rates had been reduced to the great profit of both producer and consumer, that petty state office grafts had been stopped and the executive departments put upon a firm basis that has made the insurance department and the dairy and food department famous the country over for intelligent administration. They knew these things and more, and they are pretty generally content to let the state's affairs rest two years more with Governor Johnson.

They had been told about Candidate Cole's legislative record, too. He ran for state senator in 1898 upon the Democratic ticket, was defeated, and subsequently went to the house as a Republican. There he did nothing in his first term, but in his second term, during the 1905 session, he made quite a name for himself as a champion of what is known as "state development." He did good work, too, though he produced nothing to prove himself of governorship size. His principal projects he got from Governor Johnson's message at the beginning of the session, when the governor strongly urged attention to state drainage, good roads and immigration.

That is the whole campaign. Men interested in national politics will have told you that the issue of which man would make the best governor has nothing to do with it, and that the real issue is partisanship. You don't believe that, though. You are a citizen who looks to the good of the nation, state and community first, and the good of parties second. You will compare the record and personality of John A. Johnson with the record and personality of A. L. Cole, and you will cast your ballot according to your judgment of which will make the best governor for the next two years.

CUBA MUST PAY.

Some time ago The Herald suggested that the Cubans might find it convenient to stir up trouble and demand American intervention every time there were enough people dissatisfied with the results of an election to form a revolution.

In this way the elections to which objection was made could be easily and quickly set aside, without great trouble or much bloodshed.

But since then a fact has appeared that may operate to prevent the Cubans from falling into this practice. At least it is likely to keep them from resorting to this method of bringing about a chance with undue frequency.

Uncle Sam has intervened, has taken his expert lid-holders over to hold things down, has sent troops to the island to maintain order, and is managing things very satisfactorily.

But it all costs money, and the Cubans will have to pay the bill. Careful account is being kept of the money spent in this way, and when intervention is over, and the island is returned to the native government, there will be a pretty bill of expenses for Cuba to pay.

This experience will be wholesome, and should tend to prevent the Cubans from abusing the peculiar relationship in which they stand to the United States.

DELAYING RADICAL ACTION.

It will be very interesting to watch the attitude of the railroads of the country from now on toward government control of their business. It will also give an inkling of how much real sagacity and farsightedness they actually possess.

If the railroad people are wise, and wish to postpone or defeat government ownership, they will use every energy toward making government control such a thorough success that nobody will think of asking anything more radical.

If government control is a failure, it will be because the railroad people fight it all along the line, and use their ingenuity to make it a failure.

And if it is a failure, nothing on earth can stop government ownership in this country.

It seems to be pretty generally accepted that though government ownership may ultimately prove necessary, we are going to give government control a fair trial first.

The only thing that can postpone government ownership, therefore, aside from the natural slowness of the people to take up a reform so radical, is successful government control.

Wouldn't it be much better, therefore, for the railroad men that want to maintain private ownership, if they all turned in and helped make government control effective?

If federal and state railroad laws eliminated the interference of railroads in politics for their own selfish benefit; eliminated rebates, and made the railroads treat great shippers and small shippers alike; eliminated favoritism between communities and forced the railroads to give equal service and fair rates to all cities; eliminated unfair profits and reduced railroad rates to a point where they would yield a decently fair return on the actual value of the railroad property; if government control did all these things, there would be little talk of government ownership.

But these things we must have, every one of them. They will not come at once. Their attainment will be a matter of growth, and the time they take will depend largely upon the earnestness of the people and the independent use of the ballot privilege. We are going to try to get them through government control. If they do not come that way, they must come some other way, and obviously the only other way is through government ownership.

The railroad officials have it in their power, therefore, to indefinitely postpone the time when the government will take their railroads away from them. It will be better for them to turn in and help make government regulation a success. Otherwise they will hasten a result much more disagreeable to them than federal and state control.

REGISTER TOMORROW.

The primary election was on the first registration day, and if you voted then you are registered, and need not go to the polls again until two weeks from tomorrow, when the election will be held.

But if you did not vote at the primary election, you must register or you cannot vote. Tomorrow is the time to do it. There is one more day, but never mind that now. You will be more sure about it if you register tomorrow, and do it as early in the day as you can in order not to risk neglecting it.

Election results often hinge upon single votes. Single votes make up the majorities, whatever they are. You would feel pretty badly about it if your failure to vote should cause the election to go the way you don't want it to go.

Go to the polls and register before you go to your work in the morning, and then you are safe. If you wait until later in the day something may come up to prevent your getting to the polling place.

The polling places will be open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m., so there will be plenty of time for you to get there.

STANDPATTERS.

Robert S. Taylor of Fort Wayne, a prominent Indiana Republican, said the other night in a speech in Indianapolis:

> We have accepted with apparent acquiescence, as being descriptive of our position, the villainous phrase, "stand pat." I hate it. It sounds like a conspirators' pass word. The watchword of the Republican party should be "go forward," not "stand pat."

The watchword of any party that would continue to be entrusted with the affairs of government by the people, must be "go forward." "Stand pat" will not win elections. Those who are responsible for its use in this campaign may succeed in making it win this time by causing enough people to believe that to go forward is dangerous, but this will be its last success. The American people mean to keep on going forward, and they will never tie to a party that says "hold back."

"Stand pat" is a villainous phrase. It is a conspirators' pass word. It is the pass word of the conspirators who are trying to rivet upon the American people the shackles of a tariff that destroys opportunity, creates and protects monopoly, and that makes the livelihood of the common people come harder and harder while it is increasing the luxury enjoyed by the millionaires that benefit from it.

When Copernicus discovered that the sun was the center of the solar system, and that the earth revolves around it, he withheld his discovery until near his death because he feared the attacks that would be made upon him because of his revolutionary theory. Those whom he feared were standpatters.

Galileo suffered in prison because he said the earth turned on its axis and that the sun did not go around the earth, and the Inquisition made him retract it. The Inquisition and those that imprisoned the scientist were standpatters.

In the fearsome days of densest ignorance, when men first proposed to sail out into the unknown deep, people said they were mad. They could see that the sea sloped down to the horizon, and they said that if the ships once got down that inclined plane of water they could never climb back again. Furthermore, they said that if the ships sailed south they would get into a region of boiling waters and perish miserably, because the farther south you went the hotter it got. These people were standpatters.

When the locomotive was invented, and the first railroad train started out, everybody said the enterprise was doomed to failure. The train would never stay on the track. The engine would blow up and kill everybody for miles around. It was certain death to attempt such a thing, and they talked of getting out an injunction to restrain them—or at least they would have talked that way if the nimbleness of the writ of injunction had been discovered then. These people were standpatters.

The standpatters of all ages have resisted progress, and blindly labored to fasten tighter the chains of superstition, ignorance and squalid poverty.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"I find that rubbers such as are worn by the lumberjacks in winter are about as good as anything that can be secured to go hunting in," said B. S. Austin of St. Paul, Minn., at the McKay. "One can buy them as plain rubbers, coming only to the ankles, or with varying lengths of leather attached to their tops, which will reach from a little above the ankles all the way to the knees, according to the kind purchased.

"Those with about eight-inch tops, reaching a little above the ankles, suit my fancy exactly. With them one is not supposed to wear any shoes. Over his ordinary hose he puts a pair of those heavy woodsmen socks, which keep his feet as warm as toast on a cold fall or winter day. The rubbers with their leather tops offer a waterproof covering for the feet, and the eight-inch tops are high enough to keep all water one is apt to get into from coming over the tops.

"The feature I like best about them is that they are very light. Leather boots are altogether too heavy for the woods. They tire me in two or three hours' walk. I can cover many times the distance by wearing rubbers. Another very good feature is that they are about as noiseless as anything a person could get. Leather boots make a big racket when one is going through the brush.

"Moccasins are no good for hunting, unless snow covers the ground and cold weather prevails. Otherwise they get wet too easily. For deer hunting in November they are a very poor article. They are not waterproof, and if they get good and wet they will stretch all out of shape. They are also apt to make a greenhorn's feet sore, for in walking through the forest he can feel the sticks and stumps he steps on through their soles.

"A good many men make the mistake of wearing corduroy hunting clothes. This material is not very good, I find. It is all right so long as it don't rain, but there is nothing in the world quite so disagreeable as wet corduroy. It works up into a sort of pulp, and after he has been in a rain for ten or fifteen minutes, the sportsmann begins to wonder why he brought such a garment. One objection to canvas coats is that brush makes a lot of noise striking against them. They keep out the water, however. Another objection is that they usually are just the color of a deer, and make the chances of the owner of being mistaken for a deer much better."

Homer A. Miles of Philadelphia, who is a guest at the Lenox, is an expert slight-of-hand performer. His clever tricks are more interesting than those of the average professional on the vaudeville stage, but the Philadelphia man employs them only for the amusement of himself and friends. Yesterday morning he was the center of a group in the lobby of the Lenox, and was showing his abilities along this particular line, greatly to the amusement and mystification of the crowd.

One individual suggested that further amusement could be had by placing Mr. Miles among strangers in the dining room at lunch, and then getting him started on some of his tricks. The others agreed that this would offer an entertaining diversion, and it was accordingly arranged that the Easterner should sit at a table where the others were unknown to him personally.

The lunch hour came, and those who were in on the plot grouped about another table near that of Mr. Miles, who took his seat quietly and ordered his meal. The watchers saw nothing unusual occur until Mr. Miles began eating. He picked up a roll and began nibbling at its end. Suddenly a frown appeared on his face, and from his actions it became evident that he had bitten on something hard, which evidently came from the roll. In a moment all the others at the table were sympathetically watching him as he extracted a little piece of something from his mouth and began rolling it around in his napkin to clean it off.

Mr. Miles gave an ejaculation of surprise when the something was cleaned. It was a diamond, and there was no doubting its genuineness. After remarking upon the strange manner of its discovery, he passed it around the table, and all the eaters took a look at it. The dining room girl was called over and asked concerning the baker. She said he was rather an eccentric fellow who was worth nearly a million dollars, as a result of a find of ore on his Northern Minnesota timber claim, but that, in spite of his wealth, he preferred working at his old trade of cook rather than be idle. He was a merry wag, she asserted, and every now and then dropped gold pieces or jewels in his pastry as a joke, and also in the hope that poor and needy persons would get hold of them.

The men could hardly doubt the story, for was not the evidence of this eccentricity before their very eyes? Mr. Miles maintained a serious cast of countenance throughout the interview, and took part in the speculative conversation that followed. No one would have suspected him of knowing more than any of the others.

At dinner last night the demand for rolls was so heavy that the supply was entirely exhausted before all the guests were served. Some of the men had two or three plates of them.

Dr. Jekyll in Type.

Boston Herald: The Herald desires to apologize for an apparent wish to insert within the very heart of a reverend gentleman's Sunday discourse the following unseemly and even ribald line:

Tsehee snh. db p eao- etaoino popopop

We do not name the preacher because he has without doubt spotted the offense. It is the very Jekyll of typedom that here breaks the continuity of a sermon with a line which simulates laughter at its beginning and closes explosively. Our contrition is heartfelt, but our cheerfulness is not shaken, although a joke turns in this direction.

THE WEATHER.

Just when everybody was talking about how the northeasters had passed us up, one came Saturday night, as predicted by the weather man, and it was a lively one, too, the first since August. It blew hard all Saturday night, and the rain, half sleet at times, pelted the windows untiringly. It fagged out yesterday, and though there was some rain during the day, and it was still cloudy even this morning, the storm had spent itself. Yesterday's highest temperature was 42 degs., and last night it was down to 34 degs. The weather man expects fair weather tonight and tomorrow, without much change in temperature.

A year ago yesterday it was cool and cloudy, and a year ago today it was fair.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The barometer continues high in northern districts, the highest readings occurring over Montana and Wyoming. The high pressure is attended by temperatures ranging between 14 degs. and 20 degs. in the Rocky mountains and eastern slopes, the southern limit of freezing weather including Northern New Mexico, the Texas Panhandle and Western Kansas. Shallow barometric depressions central over Mexico and Gulf districts caused rain or snow Sunday or last night in Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Northern Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Lake Region and Atlantic states. The western high pressure favors partly cloudy weather in this section tonight and Tuesday.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

"How so?"

Louisville Courier-Journal: "You evidently knew that lady."

"Yes, I knew her."

"And yet you didn't speak."

"No; ours is merely a glaring acquaintance."

Philadelphia Press: Kloseman—It's an awful thing to discover, just as the collection plate comes around in church, that you haven't a cent without a penny.

Newitt—Yes, because then you have to drop in a nickel or a dime, don't you?

New York Sun: The Venus of Milo explained.

"I twisted 'em off trying to fasten the three middle buttons in the back," she announced.

From this it was easily inferred that she had no husband.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "How was the man killed?"

"He fell off the fence and broke his neck."

"What is the jury hesitating about?"

"The coroner wants them to declare that the deceased came to his death by the new football rules."

Chicago Tribune: The young mother leaned fondly over the cradle containing her first-born.

"Clarence," she said, "let's name her Marigold."

"No, dear," answered the young husband and father. "We ought not to make her manifest destiny quite so obvious. Let's call her Hope."

Cleveland Leader: Bobb—Jones called Smith a blowhard the other day, and Smith did not resent it.

Jobb—That's all right; Smith plays the bass horn in the village choir.

Baltimore American: "The Society of the Black Hand is very rude, is it not?"

"In what respect?"

"Its members seem to have such an uncalled-for way of cutting their acquaintances dead."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Got a new mule, eh?" remarked the colonel. "How does he work, Mose?"

"Both ways?"

The Average Citizen.

He never registers at all;
He has no time to hear the call
Of public duty in his ear;
His private work takes all his care.
He does not like to mingle in
The primary's rude push and din,
Nor take the trouble that it means
To circumvent the "boss" machines.
He has no graft to gain, and thus
He saves himself a lot of fuss.
But when things wrong and crooked go
He's first to say: "I told you so."

He does not mix in politics,
He thinks it just a lot of tricks;
He leaves it to the man who made
Its management a paying trade.
And will not go outside his door
To look the situation o'er.
He knows naught of the candidate,
Nor of the issues he doth make;
He knows that on election day,
If busy, from the polls he'll stay.
Yet when bad men are voted in,
And trickery and corruption win,
And good men, voted out, must go,
He's first to say: "I told you so!"

When bosses' henchmen take their seat,
And in lawmaking halls they meet,
And disregard the public need
In clever loot and graft and greed,
Spend public funds for private waste,
Laugh when with public anger faced;
When business feels the burdens high
Piled by misrule on industry;
When public work is but half done,
And public funds to riot run;
When all to ruin seems to go,
He's first to cry: "I told you so!"

"OUR NEXT GOVERNOR."

Princeton Union: If Mr. Cole's vote falls short of expectations he can safely attribute the result—partially at least—to his trotting about the state with one Samuel Van Sant.

Paynesville Press: The editor of the Princeton Union is a Republican but he ought to furnish a diagram to show who his paper favors for governor.

Crookston Times (Rep.): The strongest Republican papers of the state refuse to say anything against Governor Johnson—most of them, in fact, warmly commend him as a man and a statesman, even though they condemn him as a partizan. When you make your prediction of the returns in November, don't overlook this fact.

Willmar Tribune: "Vote for Cole as an endorsement of Roosevelt," is the latest battle cry of the Republican politicians. As Roosevelt has spoken in strong terms of praise for Governor Johnson we should think a vote for Johnson would be more like an endorsement of Roosevelt.

Fairmont Sentinel: Ex-Governor Van Sant is campaigning with Candidate Cole and, taking note of the fact, Bob Dunn remarks thusly in his Princeton Union: "Political candidates can scarcely exercise too much discretion in selecting men to go forth with them upon their spell-binding tours. The Republican or Democratic nominee who trotteth upon such occasions with mugwumps, stuffshirts and hypocrites, with party sandbaggers and backstabbers, can expect no other than defeat at the polls."

Wadena Pioneer Journal (Rep.): It would be a mighty hard job to get a country newspaper man in the state to publish an unkind or mean remark about John A. Johnson. All who know him like him, and pretty nearly every editor knows him, as he has for years been a valued and esteemed factor in the annual meetings of the state editors. He is genial, bright, fair-minded and true as steel, and he don't exhibit these qualities now just because he is a candidate for governor, because he has always been that way. He can't help being an almighty good fellow with far more than the average ability, because it is natural for him to be that way, and he values the good will and confidence of his friends far more than he would money or high political position.

Anoka Free Press: We pity the poor newspaper scribblers who are compelled to write Cole stuff for their papers, attributing to him things of which he is not capable and hang praise where there is nothing to hang it on. Their task is a disgusting one and they are excusable for letting go a few blankety-blanks on the mere mention of "Cole."

Anoka Free Press: Ask the man you meet, whether Democrat, Republican, Populist or Prohibitionist, what kind of a governor Johnson has proven himself to be. His answer will be "good," fairly good," or "very good," according to his enthusiasm or lack of enthusiasm on the subject. Then ask him if he does not think that one good term deserves another, and he will answer "yes." That furnishes you with the key to the election this fall.

Crookston Times (Rep.): A. L. Cole is touring the Minnesota iron ranges this week—that strong Republican territory where Governor Johnson was received so enthusiastically. In this territory heretofore the Republicans have not even had to offer arguments for votes but there seems to be a spirit of unrest this year, which makes it necessary for Republicans to work vigorously even in their strongholds.

Le Sueur News (Rep.): It sounds as reasonable to say that a Republican legislature will refuse to enact into laws just and necessary measures recommended by a Democratic governor as it does to say that a Democratic governor will veto every just and necessary law emanating from a Republican legislature because the legislature was Republican. This kind of reasoning is short weight and should be investigated by the food department.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Anoka Union: The old fashioned slaughter house was not so bad after all. The product was clean and wholesome.

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: The American Economist, published by the American Protective Tariff league, says that "it is not unlikely that some outside money went into the Second district" during the recent primary which renominated McCleary for congress. Truly the Economist is in a good position to know something about the outside money.

Crookston Times: Strangely enough, James J. Hill's bitter indictment of Minnesota as a graft-infested state has not stirred so much indignation. Are we so callous or so superior to the charge that it does not matter?

Little Falls Democrat: The fact that Upton Sinclair is starting on a long theatrical tour just as he had set his Utopian colony to running in New York, displays a depth of sagacity that Upton's most intimate friends had not suspected him of possessing.

Crookston Times: There are a good many people up North who can solve the race problem all right, but they prefer to live in the North while they do it.

Le Sueur News: J. J. Hill rather charges that legislators in Minnesota serve two masters. May be that some do, but J. J. should remember that the railroad lobby which he and other magnates maintain about the state capitol, during legislative sessions, is placing a premium on crime and that if there is guilt at all, others besides legislators, are guilty.

Princeton Union: Dr. Frazier of Berkeley, Cal., devised a new language into which no words significant of anger, ill-will or other unpleasant emotions enter. The language is doomed to die a-bornin', for no newspaper man exists who will use it.

Austin Transcript: What you possess today is usually evidence of the needless things you did without yesterday.

Albert Lea Tribune: The gospel of "Don't worry" is one of the best ever preached poor humanity and everybody can do missionary work in assisting in its dissemination.

Preston Times: President Roosevelt would have congress enact a law taxing inheritances. This, of course, is aimed at the enormously rich and would prevent them from bequeathing their wealth in bulk, which would in turn have a tendency to break up the colossal fortunes which are becoming a menace to American institutions. Now for a change in the constitution which would allow a graduated income tax as well, and people would again gradually come into their own.

Albert Lea Standard: Talk about being a "Republican" or a "Democrat"—standing by the "party!" Humbug! Do voters like to be forever fooled? We don't believe it. They are getting their eyes open and more and more are learning the need of voting for men—right men—instead of a party machine or its bosses.

MARINE.

STEAMER GOES ASHORE.

McLouth of Marine City, Oat-Laden, Fast on Gull Island.

Charlevoix, Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer McLouth of Marine City, with 15,000 bushels of oats, went ashore last night on Gull island, near the Beavers. The tug Favorite has been sent for. The steamer is on a sandy bottom, and is not leaking. The McLouth was formerly the Rochester, and was sold last winter by the Union Steamboat company.

WILL MAKE NEW RECORD.

Steamer James Laughlin Expects to Load Big Flax Cargo.

The steamer James Laughlin, which is now on her way to Duluth, is expected to break another record when she takes on a cargo of flax at this port. The Laughlin holds the wheat record for the Great Lakes, having carried 378,000 bushels out of Duluth a week ago, and it is estimated she will load 390,000 bushels of flax.

The big steamer W. P. Snyder, which is of the same size as the James Laughlin, will probably establish a new grain cargo record at Fort William, to which port she is now on her way. It is not known what grain she will take on at Fort William, but it is said she is the largest boat which has ever visited that port.

It is expected that the grain shipments from the Head of the Lakes will be very heavy this week. The shippers last week lined up tonnage at 3 cents wheat to carry more than 3,000,000 bushels, and were looking for tonnage at last accounts. The ore trade is in about the same shape as for the past week and shippers are getting tonnage at the contract rate.

Shenandoah Loses Rudder.

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Capt. Campbell of the steamer H. C. Frick, reports that the steamer Shenandoah lost its rudder five miles southeast of Bureau island light and at anchor there, awaiting to be towed to its destination.

PREPARES STATEMENT ON TRACTION QUESTION

Says That Nothing Unreasonable is Demanded of Company.

During the time the agitation for cheaper fares on the street railway lines has been in progress, Mayor Cullum has been quietly gathering some statistics which will be ready for use when the time comes to present the case to the traction company. Those figures show that Duluth and the Twin Cities will be asking nothing unreasonable from the company in demanding a reduction, as in most of the other cities of the country reduced fares are in vogue.

"I had hoped," said the mayor this morning, "that we would get an opportunity to present the matter to the street railway officials quietly, before they publicly declared themselves. It will make it all the more difficult to get any concessions now that Mr. Lowry has spoken his attitude."

Mayor Cullum, in response to a request, prepared a paper containing his ideas on the traction question, which is as follows:

"In response to your request I have to say that it would be impossible to discuss the street car situation in all its details in the space that you might care to give me, and at the same time be fair to both the street car interests and the people. The terms upon which they are doing business must be considered; the varying conditions and surroundings, and the amount of actual capital invested, in determining what they are entitled to as a fair income on money judiciously invested. On the other hand, the city must consider its own development, the rights of property holders, police and health regulations. The nation and the states have found it necessary to regulate and govern in a large measure the rates and service of common carriers. Is it not fair to presume that the city, which is so vitally interested, should be allowed a voice in the management of a public utility such as lines of transportation?

"It may be somewnat difficult for some to distinguish the difference between a public service corporation and a private concern. The public service corporation, briefly, has been given the use of the public highways, to the exclusion of other concerns, in order that they may furnish the public with certain accommodations. They thrive as a city thrives. Their dividends depend entirely on the patronage of the public; while a private corporation receives nothing from the public and is not bound to account to the public as long as their affairs are handled in a business-like way.

"In requesting of the street car companies a reduction of fare, extensions of lines, or betterment of equipment, we must attempt to deal fairly with them and our demands must be reasonable, or if they are so inclined they can fall back on their franchise rights and decline to consider our demands. But a public service corporation will find it somewhat difficult to withstand the universal demand of its patrons, for while they have certain franchises, and certain conditions are named in the bond, yet the public have at their command other ways and means that they can use if forced to, that the companies would be bound to consider.

"It is conceded that such corporations are entitled to make a certain charge for service that will bring a certain income, and if the outlay continued the same from year to year and under all conditions, then a certain fixed charge might be maintained; but to fix an arbitrary charge of say 5 cents per passenger, under all conditions and regardless of their outlay, and their labor-saving devices, does not seem so reasonable. It would seem to the average man, that, after having overcome the difficulties of development, they might at some time be able to reduce their charge.

"Conditions in the cities of Minnesota are not unlike conditions in similar sized cities in other states, and we have abundant evidence of the most reliable nature, that very substantial reductions have been made in other cities of corresponding size. I shall not attempt to give all the instances in detail, but a few examples.

"For instance, of eighty-nine cities that have been asked to give data on this subject, twenty-one report that the traction companies sell six tickets for a quarter and one seven for a quarter, all with transfer privileges; eight of them sell what is called 'industrial tickets' during certain hours in the day for workingmen. Forty-four of these cities sell school children's tickets at 2½ cents in the majority of cases, and in a few cases at 3 cents per passenger.

"By the census report, straight 5 cent fares with transfer privileges in the majority of cases are used in about two-thirds of the cities in the United States for the ordianry passenger; one-third of the cities give to all their passengers a lower rate than 5 cents; more than 200 companies sell tickets for an average of 4 cents. In the Middle West the prevailing rate is six for 25 cents. In the state of Ohio, with but one exception, the fare will average 4 1-6 cents. The state of Massachusetts has a law obliging not only the city traction companies, but all companies doing a general transportation business, to carry school children at one-half the regular fare. Many special instances might be given. For instance, in the city of Cleveland, on forty miles of trackage, a straight 3 cent fare is charged.

"In the city of Detroit, at present, there is an ordinance submitted to the people which obliges the present street car company to comply with the following conditions: Five cents for an occasional passenger a single ride; six for 25c good at all times and entitled to all transfers; ten tickets for 25c, such tickets to be used between the hours of 5 and 8 a. m. and between 4:30 and 6:30 p. m. and entitle passengers to all transfer privileges, and to have printed on them the words 'Industrial Ticket.' The company is obliged further to pay a special tax of 2 per cent on its gross earnings; to pave, to clean and sprinkle between its tracks; and the city reserves the right to order extensions, regulate service, and finally to repeal the ordinance if found desirable at any time.

"The company has been for a month using half-page advertisements giving reasons to the public why this ordinance should be passed. It is anxious to accept these conditions. There is, however, much opposition to this ordinance on the part of a number of the citizens who believe the city should operate the system. There is also another concern which offers a very much more liberal contract to the city. It can be readily seen why the existing company is fighting so strenuously in favor of the ordinance. The conditional franchise under which the present company is operating has sixteen years to run. They are paying for labor 25c and 26c per hour. Just how much the conditions and surroundings in other respects differ from those in our own cities is a matter that could be fairly considered in a discussion with the home concerns; but it does seem, in view of these facts, that we are not unreasonable in demanding for the cities in Minnesota a reduction in rates.

"The laboring man, it has been shown, can be carried at a less rate during the rush hours, at a greater profit than what might be called the parlor car traffic, as railroads have found it profitable to carry excursionists at half-fare because of the fact that they can use all of their equipment at its greatest earning capacity. The laboring man is crowded and jammed into a car to its utmost capacity; every facility of the company is carrying its greatest load. It can also be shown by figures that a reduction in favor of school children is not a losing one for the company, as only those living at great distances have occasion to profit by the reduced rate. Even a reduction of six fares for 25c would be a material benefit to the laboring man and those who need most to save in their expenses, and would not be felt to any great extent by the more prosperous.

"In the city of Detroit, where a very considerable reduction in fares already exists under the old regime, it has been shown by the company that out of approximately 87,000,000 passengers, 63 per cent paid 5c fares; 26 per cent of the whole number paid 4 1-6c fare, or in other words, took advantage of the six for 25c ticket, and only 11 per cent of the whole number took advantage of the workingman's ticket, 3 1-8c fare.

"The city of Detroit has a population of 400,000. The street car company has carried, during the year 1905, 87,000,000 passengers on 187 miles of track, for which they received $3,806,000. The expense of carrying these passengers amounted to $2,273,000, which leaves them $1,690,000 for either improvements, interest on bonds, or dividends. All these figures are given by the company itself in its plea for an extension and in favor of the ordinance before them. Pages of figures are at hand and could be given if space allowed, to prove the statements herein contained, and we confidently hope that sufficient reasons will be given the company to justify them in giving us some relief."

FAR BELOW THE NORMAL

Voters' List at Present Smaller Than Two Years Ago.

Registration Must be Heavy to Bring Out Fair Vote.

With a smaller vote at the primaries than was recorded two years ago, it is necessary to get out a big registration on the remaining two days in order to have anything like a normal vote in the city on Nov. 6.

The total vote cast at the primaries last month was 6,636 as compared with 6,749. With the increased population the vote should have been at least 400 or 500 larger instead of more than 100 smaller.

First	988	925
Second	1,000	942
Third	739	781
Fourth	635	634
Fifth	933	906
Sixth	625	715
Seventh	1,061	1,065
Eighth	655	781
Totals	6,636	6,749

The total vote registered two years ago was 9,668, so that in order to equal that this year, something over 3,000 votes will have to be registered tomorrow and Saturday.

The election judges received their supplies from the city clerk this morning and the polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. in order to give every person an opportunity to register. There will be one more registration day after tomorrow.

FAMOUS DOCTOR AND HIS WORK

In the pine forests of Maine, in the northeastern quarter, a famous specialist in consumption and kidney troubles, has a camp in the deep pine woods. With the oil of the white pine trees he is effecting cures that are attracting the attention of the world, and are so certain that a relapse is almost unknown. Patients so ill that they had to be carried into the pine woods on a litter have come out in a few months completely cured.

A well-known local physician who is familiar with this treatment says it is just as efficient in the home of the patient as it is in the pine woods.

It has a peculiar healing power over affections of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, will break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and will cure any cough that is curable.

The treatment is very simple, consisting of the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine mixed with Whisky and Glycerine in the following proportions:

Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure)..... ½ ounce
Glycerine ..... 2 ounces
Good Whisky ..... 8 ounces

Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

Inquiry at the prescription department of one of the leading druggists elicited the information that the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine is put up only in half-ounce vials for dispensing. Each vial is securely sealed in a round wooden case, with engraved wrapper showing the name—"Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure)"—plainly printed thereon. There are many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), which are put out under various names, such as Concentrated Oil of Pine, Pine Balsam, etc. Never accept these as a substitute for the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine, as they will invariably produce nausea and never effect the desired result.

TWO VICTIMS OF ASSASSIN

Missouri Widow Killed in Home and Neighbor Shot Down.

Cole Camp, Mo., Oct. 22.—While Mrs. Alice Winemiller, a widow, was sitting with her five children in their home seven miles from Warsaw last night, shots were fired through a window and she was instantly killed and her son, aged 14, badly wounded.

Felix Crawford, a neighbor, who heard the firing and hurried to the scene, was shot and died two hours later. His son-in-law, J. A. Long, is charged with having done the shooting, using a shotgun. A posse headed by the sheriff is scouring the Pettis county hills searching for Long.

REFORMED FOOTBALL

First Game of Season is Played on Northrop Field.

Duluth Boy Chosen Treasurer of Freshman Law Class.

Minneapolis, Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first game of revised football took place on Northrop field Saturday afternoon, between the freshmen and sophomore elevens. The game was played in a rain and upon a wet and soggy field, making fast plays, kicking and forward passes almost impossible. The old-style play was used almost entirely.

The sophomores were playing together practically for the first time, and their play was very materially handicapped by lack of practice, although Hubbard, at right half, and Vidal, full back, did very excellent work.

The freshmen scored rapidly; in the first half, when Molstead dropped on the ball, after blocking a kick, behind the sophs' goal. Capron failed to kick it over, and the score was 5 to 0. Then came the most sensational play of the day, when George Capron, the former Shattuck star, made a splendid run of sixty-five yards for a touchdown, and converted it into a goal, making the score 11 to 0.

The second half was marked by more even work, the ball see-sawing up and down the field, and the game ending with the final score 11 to 0 in favor of the younger classmen.

The line-up was as follows:

Freshmen.	Position.	Sophomores.
Saxton	left end	H. Capron
H. Oswald	left tackle	Muir
J. Oswald	left guard	Lambert
Molstead	center	Schain
W. Smith	right guard	Graham
Nick Smith	right tackle	Robertson
Youngs	right end	Henderson
T. Smith	quarter	Cram
Hunt	left half	Anderson
Capron	right half	Hubbard
Meaney	full back	Vidal

"Reggie" Graham, the Duluth boy, played a very good game, and is also playing regularly on the 'varsity. He has a very good chance to win the coveted "M" in his first year of collegiate football.

* * *

Saturday morning the freshmen day law class held its first meeting for organization, the meeting coming rather earlier than usual.

The election of officers allowed the youthful lawyers an opportunity to indulge in some practical work in politics.

Earl White, the '06 graduate of D. C. H. S., was pushed forward by his other Duluth brethren in the law class for the important office of treasurer, and after much trouble and scheming, was elected by a majority of 20, to the satisfaction of all.

The other offices were mostly carried off by residents of the Twin Cities, they being more numerous and better acquainted.

BANKERS DENY FIGHTING FISH

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Tell of Their Part in Illinois Central Row.

New York, Oct. 22.—Following is given out by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., for publication: "Concerning the controversy which has arisen in connection with the recent annual election of the Illinois Central Railroad company, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who are acting as bankers, only, are unwilling to be drawn into these differences. They hold proxies on a considerable amount of stock which is sent by them to Mr. Fish at the instance of the owners and as far as Kuhn, Loeb & Co., are concerned, this ends their connection with the situation."

RED LAKE FALLS PRESENTS MANY OPPORTUNITIES.

A Minnesota City Where Merchants, Manufacturers and Farmers Grow In Wealth—Healy's Great Water Power—Unsurpassed Clay Beds for Making Brick and Tile—The Flouring Mills—Many Creameries and Cheese Factories.

By J. A. MONGER.

Red Lake Falls is a busy city of over 2,000 population, where up-to-date business men transact their business in substantial brick and stone business blocks. It has grown in the past like a green bay tree and will continue to grow in the future, as the electrical power and clay deposits are developed, and the unexcelled farming country is put under the civilizing touch of the plow. It is remarkably well built as to pretty homes, while nature has done wonders for it as to scenery. Indeed nature has given it many treasure spots, in valley and vale, through which the Clearwater and Red Lake rivers wind their course, making it in reality the "City Beautiful." If you will consult a railroad map, you will find this superb city is situated on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads, 245 miles northwest of St. Paul, and 300 miles from Duluth. A city that has waterworks, is lighted by electricity, has cement walks and graded streets, in a word all the environments of city life, the metropolis and judicial center of Red Lake county. Those of you thinking to make a new start in life, will make no mistake in locating here, especially if you desire to establish a manufacturing industry or engage in farming.

Red Lake Falls is the flouring mill center of the wheat belt, that grows No. 1 Northern and No. 1 hard. There are two flouring mills with a combined capacity of 1,500 barrels daily. The product of these mills has a local, interstate and export trade, the flour for Glasgow, Scotland, being shipped in 280 pound sacks. There is also a line of elevators attached to these mills for the storage of grain.

In creameries and cheese factories Red Lake county is one of the leaders in the state, having thirteen in successful operation, while there are four more building. These creameries and cheese factories bring the famers an annual income of over $200,000 cash. Quite an item this. The Red Lake Co-operative Creamery Association has a capacity of 1,500 pounds per week, and a payroll of $2,000 per month on a capital stock of $5,000, of which only $4,000 is paid in.

At no distant day Red Lake Falls is sure to be a great center for the manufacture of all kinds of building brick, tile, sewer pipe, and not improbably the finest of table china, owing to the purity of its almost inexhaustible supply of the finest clay for pottery and brickmaking. This clay is free from limestone and is chemically pure. It only needs the awakening touch of capital to make this one of the great pottery manufacturing centers of the country.

There are splendid openings for all kinds of woodworking plants in Red Lake Falls, where the new material is right at hand and where the electrical power is to be had for almost the asking, with the best of factory sites, located on the lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads, thrown in. Get busy and locate, is our advice. Opportunity only knocks at your door once in a lifetime.

The press of Red Lake Falls is the best index to its true prosperity. The Red Lake Courier, edited by William S. Cox, has given the city a wide reputation, that it could gain in no other way. Mr. Cox is also the able secretary of the Red Lake Falls Commercial club and is doing yeoman work in advancing the interests of the city along the best lines of publicity. The Gazette, published by L. A. Dautermont, and edited by Sam S. Halslet, is full in each issue of the best that there is to write about, and this completes the story of publicity as to city and county building. Both the Courier and Gazette have the fullest patronage, proving the public spirit of the business men of Red Lake Falls.

In schools there is nothing lacking. There is a high school and the Washington public school, besides St, Joseph's Catholic school, conducted by the Sisters of St. Benedict.

The churches are attractive edifices that would do credit to any city in the state. They include the Presbyterian, German Lutheran, St. Joseph's and St. Mary's Catholic denominations.

In secret societies we would mention the following: Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen, Catholic Order of Foresters, Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen, Red Men, Knights of the Maccabees, Rebekahs, Royal Neighbors, Ladies of the Maccabees and Woman Catholic Foresters.

This is the city that sowed the seed of its prosperity and that of the Red Lake county at the opening of the railroad era in 1886. From that day to this it has grown and expanded along the best lines of commercial life and agricultural pursuits. The fertility of the soil is the foundation that has proven a lasting one. The first settlers abused the soil, growing nothing but wheat year after year. The soil was so rich—a deep, black loam, with a subsoil of clay—as to make it almost impossible to stunt its productive qualities. The soil, like the human body, must have a change of diet, no matter how fertile it may be. The rotation of crops is a necessity if average yield and quality are to be taken into consideration. The greed of the farmers to raise twenty to thirty bushels of dollar wheat to the acre has almost depleted the productiveness of even this rich, black loam soil, that runs from two to three feet deep. Just think of it! The Red Lake country ought to prosper. It has the best land that the sun ever shone upon, well watered, and a climate that is unexcelled for divesrified farming, dairying and stock raising. But they do not make use of it. Why? The question will be solved by better farming, rotation of crops, raising of cattle and hogs. Tomorrow this will be the corn belt, as it was the wheat belt of yesterday. There is no section that grows better timothy or clover, or more tons to the acre, This is the garden spot of Red Lake county. All that is needed is sane farming and the right kind of tilling of the soil. This done, and the $15, $20 and $30 an acre land will jump to $80 and $100 an acre. Every kind of crops grow well, with abundant yield, but there must be rotation if the best results are to be attained. What more can be written on the subject with profit?

Red Lake is the trading center of this rich and productive farming country, that stretches out on all sides. It is the grain and flour mill market place, to say nothing of being the county seat, where all must come to pay their taxes and transact other county business.

One of the leading places of interest is the photographic studio of W. A. Riechal, who has one of the finest galleries in the state, being equipped with all the latest and best paraphernalia known to the art. Mr. Riechel owns his onw business block, 24 by 60, two stories, a fine residence and other city property. The views that illustrate this page were taken especially for The Herald, and speak for themselves.

Stand amid the forest shades in the valley of the Red Lake river, where the Healy Water power is located, and view the ever onward rush of the water, with the spray flashing upward and the mist filling the air, and you have a picture that you read about, but seldom witness. This river is being harnessed and utilized to furnish 14,000 horse power, which had been allowed to go to waste, until the master mind of Ed L. Healy, one of the pushing men of affairs, became impressed with its great importance, to not only Red Lake Falls but her sister cities of Grand Forks and East Grand Forks. This water power is situated on Red Lake river, below the junction of Red Lake and Clearwater rivers, within the city limits. This power is not new, but has been utilized for running Healy's 500 barrel flour mill. The old dam with a 12½ foot head, is being enlarged to an 18½ foot head, while turbines and dynamos for generating electricity are to be added, making it one of the best plants of 14,000 horse power capacity in the United States. Mr. Healy has secured franchises from the cities of Grand Forks and East Grand Forks to furnish them with electric light, heat and power, which is to be transmitted a distance of thirty-five miles. This will mean a new era for Grand Forks as it stands for cheap light, power and heat, which should give great stimulus to the industrial growth of that city. The service will be in operation early in 1907. This also means much to Red Lake Falls, for Mr. Healy has set aside eighty acres for factory sites, tapped by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads, that he proposes to furnish free to all who desire to use electrical power, which will be turned on at less than one-half the price of fuel. This will no doubt give new industrial life to not only this city, but the whole Red Lake country. In an interview with Ed L. Healy, the promoter and owner of this great water power, he said: "My plans are all prepared for going ahead as I shall bond the plant for $200,000, which money will carry out all the plans as outlined above."

ATTORNEY F. A. GRADY.

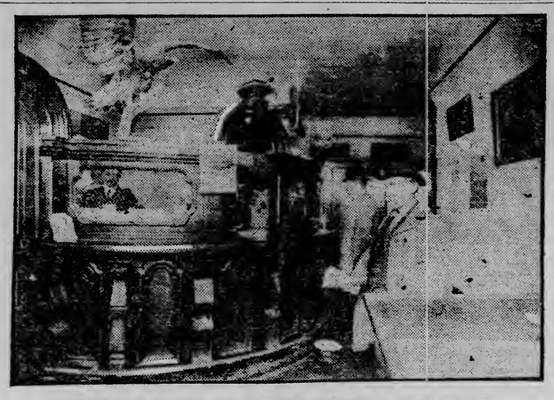

In the spring of 1897, the above gentleman located here coming from Thief River Falls, where he was in partnership with George H. Wyman. He was born in Olmstead county, this state in 1870, and in 1878 with his parent farmer greater opportunities than right here in the Red Lake country, in and around Red Lake Falls, a city of 2,000 population, with flour mills, grain elevators, creameries, best of churches and schools. A railroad center, having the two great trunk lines, Great Western and Northern Pacific, besides being the judicial seat of Red Lake county. This will be the great corn belt in the next five years as it has been the "bread basket" of the wheat growing area of the Northwest. The wheat farm is passing on, while its place is being filled by the dairyman and stock raisers. This is the greatest soil and climate for diversified farming, all kinds of grains, roots, clover and grasses, while the yield is fully one-third more than is usual. Why be a renter, when you can own your own farm, and be a free American citizen in the fullest sense of the word? Those interested in farm lands in the wonderful agricultural zone, should write to the Ed L. Healy Land Co., Red Lake Mills, Minn., and get reliable information. They own 2,200 acres of improved farms and wild lands, besides being agents for 50,000 acres more, all locat d in Red Lake and Polk counties. The price of these lands ranges from $12 to $35 per acre, according to location. If you want the best farm lands in the best location where values are bound to double, you will make no mistake in locating in Red Lake country.

FARM MACHINERY AND CARRIAGES.

Joseph Helm has a repository for agricultural implements, gasoline engines and cream separators, also an extensive line of carriages, buggies and wagons. There are few houses that carry a larger stock of better assortment to select from than will be found in this house. The main salesroom covers a ground space of two floors, each 75x100 feet, which will give some idea of the stock carried. The carriage repository is one of the best stocked we have seen for many a day. The trade of Joseph Helm extends to all sections of Red Lake county, and what is more, large as it is, it gains and expands as the country fills up. Mr. Joseph Helm is a native of Bavaria, Germany, born there Feb. 15, 1857. At an early age he came to America with his uncle, Rev. Krauthahn, to Chicago, and later to Wisconsin, Peshtigo. Two years later, he attended Calvary college, Fond du Lac, after which he learned the printer's trade, house and sign painting. This he followed down to locating here. Mr. Helm is a very enterprisng gentleman who has done his share in the upbuilding of this section of the county and state.

FRANZ F. FREUND'S STORE.

This is one of the busy retail stores of the city. The business was established in 1896. The lines of goods carried are, fine confectionery, fruits, cigars, tobaccos, stationery and groceries. The building, 24x50, two stories, is owned by its proprietor, Franz F. Freund, one of the pushing young business men. The Freund orchestra of eight pieces, is one of the leading musical organizations. It plays for socials, dancing and concerts and is a favorite on account of its excellent music. Mr. Freund is a native of Germany, born there in 1873 and came with his parents to the state at the age of 10 years, settling at Le Sueur, Minn.

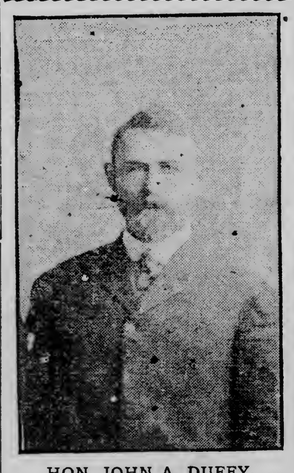

INTERIOR VIEW OF MERCHANTS' STATE BANK.

This is one of the wide awake solid financial institutions of this section of Minnesota. The Merchants' State bank was organized in 1899 and today has a capital and surplus of $30,000. It does a general banking business, makes a specialty of first mortgage loans, pays interest on deposits and has a choice line of improved farms for sale and long list of wild lands. The officers of the bank are: A. P. Loupin, president; Theo Labissoniere, vice-president; J. A. Duffy, cashier, and P. F. Pouliot, assistant cashier. The bank owns its building, a two-story pressed brick, with stone trimmings, 24x56, steam heated, electric lighted and fitted up with all the best equipment found in an up-to-date banking house. Among the shareholders of the Merchants' State bank we would name the following: Hon. Marcus Johnson, president Red Lake Falls Milling Co.; Chas N. Bourdon, president Bank of Wylie; Theo Labissoniere, general merchant; L. P. Berthon of Berthon & Armstrong, clothiers; Joseph Perrault, clerk of court, Red Lake county, and others of equal financial standing.

FIRST STATE BANK.

This is the oldest banking house in Red Lake county, having been established in 1884. It has a capital and surplus of $40,000 and does a general up-to-date banking business, having ample funds outside of its capital to make loans on farms and farm lands and pay interest on time deposits. The officers of this time honored financial house are. Theo Yarceau, president; Frank E. Hunt, vice-president; G. F. Hennings, cashier and C. L. Hansen, assistant cashier. One of the attractive bank buildings is that of the First State bank, a two-story brick, with subbasement, fitted up with fireproof vault, and safety deposit boxes for customers, which are protected by a Diebold time-lock burglar-proof safe.

HON. JOHN A. DUFFY.

The above gentleman is one of the prominent men of affairs in Northern Minnesota. He located in Red Lake Falls in 1887, to take the position as agent for the Northern Pacific and in all put in twenty years in railroad work. In politics he is a Republican and was secretary of the state convention that nominated A. L. Cole for governor at Duluth. In 1902, he was elected mayor, which office he is still filling to the perfect satisfaction of the taxpayers. Prior to this he served three years in the city council. He is one of the executive board of the Red River Valley Immigration and Development Association of Minnesota and North Dakota, that was organized last month to further the development of this section. Mr. Duffy is a man of ripe judgment and splendid ability who should play a large part in the business and political affairs of this section of the state. He is largely interested in improved and wild farm lands, having a long list of the best to select from, and being cashier of the Minnesota State bank, gives him the best of opportunities to make the best of land deals. Those having lands to sell or wishing to purchase will make no mistake in consulting John A. Duffy.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

This congregation was organized in 1887 and has grown and developed with the country. It has sixty-five families and two hundred communicants on its parish roll. The church property cost $10,000, but there is a church debt to carry. Rev. Father Ambrose Lethert, O. S. B., is the priest in charge, who is bending his best efforts to put the parish on a paying basis. Rev. Father Ambrose was educated at St. John's college at Collegeville, Minn., and in Cologne, coming to this country in 1866. St. Mary's is an English and German congregation and for this reason always enjoys a large attendance.

HON. W. M. WATSON.

This gentleman is one of the leading M.D.'s of Minnesota and one of the teachers in his profession at home. In politics he is a prince of good fellows. He has served this city as mayor and is a leader, who works for the truest interests of his city and county. We met him at the Commercial club, where he takes a very active part.

BANK OF RED LAKE FALLS.

Among the three banks that constitute the financial backbone of this city, we desire to call attention to the Bank of Red Lake Falls, established in 1899, which today has a rated responsibility of $150,000. It does a general banking business, makes loans on farm lands and pays interests on deposits. The bank owns a splendid two story brick, 25x50, with sub-basement, heated by hot water and lighted by electricity. The officers of the Bank of Red Falls are: M. O. Sortedahl, president; Samuel Gibeau, vice president; E. G. Storaasli, cashier, and P. O. Floan, assistant cashier.

RED LAKE COUNTY FARM LANDS.

This is for those of you who are interested in the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, as to the great fertility of the rich black loam, with sub soil of clay, that has made so many farmer settlers rich and will make thousands more if they come early. It must be remembered that the day of cheap lands in this section of Minnesota has all but passed. Nowhere in the United States has the intelligent farmer a better opportunity to secure a farm than right here in Red Lake county. Within a radius of ten miles of Red Lake Falls are to be found the best improved farms in the state, consisting of a section of land with good building stocked with about seventy head of live stock. Mr. Skala is one of the most enterprising of this city's many energetic business men, and has done much to build up Red Lake Falls.

HON. JOHN A. DUFFY.

SCHMITZ BROS. BRICK COMPANY.

There is no section of the United States that has such wonderful clay deposits as are located at Red Lake Falls. The clay is free from limestone and all chemical impurities, and unequalled for making brick, tile, and pottery. Schmitz Brothers' Brick company was established in 1901, and has grown to be one of the leading industries of its class in Northern Minnesota. They manufacture an extra fine sand mold brick, cream in color, or red, to suit the taste of the builder. The capacity of the plant is 2,000,000 bricks a season of a 100 day run. The clay deposit from which these bricks are made is 26 feet deep and covers an area of four acres, situated on the lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads. This clay makes unsurpassed pressed brick in cream or red color, with a look and finish that is hard to duplicate. The Schmitz Brothers came from Milwaukee, where they learned the art of brick and tile making, which is a guarantee that their brick is of the highest standard. There are now in the yards 300,000 brick ready for use at $7.50 per thousand, all of perfect mold, size and shape.

GRAND VIEW HOTEL.

Every city has its leading hotel and Red Lake Falls is no exception. The Grand View was built in 1882, by Fred Krueger, who later leased the house to W. H. Krueger, his son, who is its present proprietor. The Grand View is a twenty-room house, electric lighted, with sample rooms, and free bus to and from all trains. It is a most up-to-date hotel, with a large and growing patronage.

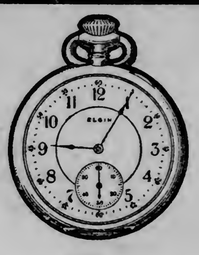

RED LAKE FALLS HIGH SCHOOL.

The public school system comprises what is known as Independent district, No. 15, and has two school buildings, which from an architectural standpoint are equal to those of any school district in the state, both being steam-heated, electric lighted, and furnished with all modern equipments. Prof. E. W. Chamberlain, a graduate of Carlton college, class of 1897, is the very capable superintendent, having been appointed to his position in August, 1904. The high character of the public school system of Red Lake Falls is due to his up-to-date, wide-awake methods as an educator, and a happy faculty of having none but the best instructors in the public school service of Red Lake Falls, which accounts for the good standing of its pupils in the various grades.

High school, Ella C. Hanson, principal; Lewis E. Twinam, Latin and German; Laura B. Wilson, mathematics; Alice Coughlin, seventh grade; Eliza Trudo, fifth and sixth grades; Mary Lamb, third and fourth grades; Mrs. J. J. Doe, second grade; Adie E. Foot, first grade.

Washington school, Leland E. Healy, principal; Helen Brady, third and fourth grades; Pauline Lieland, fifth and sixth grades; Henrietta Hennemuth, first grade. What we have said in reference to the high school standing of the public school system of Red Laks Falls, applies with equal force to the schools throughout the county.

WILL NOT BE PROSECUTED

Case Against Chishoim Boy is Discharged in Juvenile Court.

Court Will Next Saturday Investigate Another Accidental Killing.

Alfred LaDaux, a 15-year-old Chisholm boy who was held to the juvenile court with Albert Headlun, for the accidental killing of Carl Sunquist, has been discharged and is now at the home of his parents. In view of the widespread interest that was given the matter when the accident occurred several days ago many people have made inquiry as to what disposition was made of the matter by the county authorities.

Judge Ensign, who presides over the juvenile court, heard the testimony of the boys and others and, determining that the shooting was an accident, discharged both LaDaux and Headlun, after a very impressive talk on the value of human life and the extreme care that should be exercised in the preservation of the same, especially in the case of boys who have not yet reached the age of mature judgment and who are accustomed to carry deadly weapons.

In this case the boys were out hunting along the railroad track when Carl Sunquist, who was gathering wood in the brush raised up. Both boys mistook him for a bear and LaDaux fired, the bullet striking Sundquist in a vital spot. As he fell he cried out and the boys, frightened at their act, fled home and told their parents, who turned them over to the authorities.

When the matter was brought to the attention of the juvenile court petitions and letters were presented from nearly everybody in Chisholm asking the court to deal leniently with LaDaux and Headlun. The boys had an excellent record in school and out of it and this probably counted for much when Judge Ensign considered the case.

Next Saturday the juvenile court will have another accidental shooting case to dispose of. A few days ago Scott Hawes, a 17-year-old boy residing with a family at Buhl, accidentally shot and killed a 15-year-old girl, a member of the family. Hawes is still in custody at Buhl and will be brougat to Duluth for a hearing before Judge Ensign in juvenile court.

Some of the details attending the shooting have been learned by the county authorities and the others will probably come out at the boy's examination. Hawes' home is said to be in North Dakota. He has been residing for some time with a family at Chisholm, the county authorities not being familiar with the name. According to the reports the father and brother of the girl that was killed had been hunting the day preceding the accident and the son had, as he supposed, withdrawn the loads when he put the gun away. Hawes is said to have picked the weapon up under the impression that it was unloaded and pulled the trigger, when the cartridge was discharged and the load struck the girl, killing her almost instantly. It is probable that the case against the boy will be dismissed if the court finds, on investigation, that the relatives of the girl were partly responsible for the accident, and Hawes is found to have borne a good reputation.

It is a remarkable coincidence that out of three accidental killings in St. Louis county this month, two of the persons who did the shooting were boys. While only one of them was hunting at the time the accident happened, both were handling guns and this fact has led a great many citizens to express themselves in favor of more stringent laws regarding the handling of loaded weapons by children.

Frank Miller, a Bear River homesteader, was the victim of the other killing. His slayer was John Regan, a neighbor, who shot Miller in mistake for a deer. As Regan is a man grown his case will come before the grand jury.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

TRAVEL IS VERY HEAVY

Range Roads Carry Big Crowds All of the Time.

More Trains Must be Put on Before Very Long.

How much longer will it be before the range roads are forced to put on additional passenger trains?

This is a question which travelers along the lines of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Duluth & Iron Range roads ask themselves every time they board a train.

The heavy travel which the roads are enjoying at present is certainly indicative of prosperity and increasing population for this part of the state and the time is not far distant when there will be more passenger trains to and from range points.

Just the last two or three years have seen an astonishing increase in traffic on the range roads. Both lines have been making additions to their rolling stock. They have bought new coaches and still their trains are crowded every time they pull out of the Union depot, almost, and every time they steam into that big station.

The heavy business at present has none of the aspect of a sudden "boom," likely to collapse without a moment's warning. Rather, it is the natural steady increase which the opening up of new ore properties, and the bettering of the towns on the range that the increase in business has been brought about.

The business men on the range are prosperous. They come down to Duluth every little while, on business, and Duluthians and commercial persons from out-of town journey to the ranges to do business with them. The number of traveling men who go up on the ranges is increasing all the time. It has been announced during the past week that several more stories would be added to the largest hotel at Hibbing.

Almost every day of the year, the range trains are crowded, and it looks as if the only solution of the problem will be the placing in commission of more and later trains.

As it is now, it is impossible to get to the ranges after the regular afternoon trains have gone and the chances are that when the new trains are put on, each road will have one leaving Duluth later in the day, to permit range people having business in the city a longer stay here.

At present, busy range business men are often compelled to remain over a day here, although their presence is needed at home, when they would have been able to get back the same day had their been a later train.

When they come, the new trains will be a great boon to the same traveling men who have been mentioned before in this article. They would be able to make better connections were there more trains to be taken advantage of.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In your paper of Oct. 18 appeared a letter, "The Army Canteen," written by a veteran officer, ridiculing the work of the Women's Christian Temperance union. In a recent visit to St. Paul to the W. C. T. U. convention, Rev. Leland P. Smith, chaplain of the soldiers' home, said: "I thank the W. C. T. U. for the work they have done in helping to remove the canteen from the army and soldiers' homes. That drunkenness was diminishing among the old soldiers. But a few of them, having fought on great battle, seemed to think there are no more to be fought, not knowing that the greatest battle man can fight and win is over himself and his desires, and the greatest victory won is one over himself. These few still seem to think they must have their beer or whisky." Presume, like our friend, the veteran officer, having a certain amount of money to spend, can find no other beneficial way of using same, except for cheap whisky. I am sure that "The Veteran Officer" is not voicing the sentiment of all the old soldiers of 1863 that fought so valiantly for our country. My uncle, a veteran 63 years old, having fought in the Civil war, has never used alcoholic stimulants of any kind, and today is as young a looking man as he was at 45, showing that alcoholic stimulants are not a necessary part of a man's diet. There is a number of the W. C. T. U. women who are also members of the Women's Relief corps, and L. G. A. R., earnest faithful workers, and their main object is the comfort and welfare of the old soldier in his declining years. Now these good women of our state of Minnesota are planning to furnish the home that is being erected in St. Paul for the old soldiers, their wives and mothers, so they can spend their last years together in comfort. Loving thoughts are planning all sorts of comforts for these good men and women, and it seems to me that our friend, "The Veteran Officer," is not quite fair in ridiculing a work that is certainly not doing any harm and is doing some good. I mean the work of the W. C. T. U. I am sorry that our friend, "The Veteran Officer," with the money our country furnishes him, can find no other way to use it except in the saloon, when I am sure he would get so much more pleasure out of it by helping some one less fortunate than himself. There are so many needy people in the world who need a helping hand, and the comradeship existing between the old soldiers of the Grand Army might include some outsiders, and as we honor our soldiers, so might they in turn show us they are not ungrateful by setting an example to their weaker brothers. Not by using their money in the saloon, but outside of it for the good of the common welfare. I want to defend the women of our land, who are devoting their time and energy in helping to make this country of ours the most glorious and grand country in the world, better and cleaner, for our boys and girls to grow up in a pure atmosphere, and I think the example might be set by our old soldiers of the Grand Army. I know many of them who are splendid men and an honor to the country that honors them, who will agree with me that it was a movement for the welfare of our soldiers that the canteen was removed from the army and soldiers' homes. This is from a member of an unselfish and meritorious society of the W. C. T. U. and Women's Relief corps.

IRONWOOD SWAMPED

Duluth Team Outclasses Visitors and Wins Easy Victory.

High School Backs Scored at Will on Lighter Opponents.

The Ironwood line went down like tissue paper before the Duluth Central high school backs in the game at Athletic park Saturday afternoon, and after the first three or four minutes of play the size of the score was the only thing remaining to be decided.

The game developed into a procession up and down the field, and Duluth scored almost at will against their lighter opponents.

Ironwood was considerably outweighed, and in addition to this the visitors lacked the steam and the accuracy which marked the playing of the Duluth team.

The final score was 67 to 0, although it might have been much larger if Ryan and McDevitt had not been taken out in the second half to give the substitutes a chance to be tried out.

The Duluth line had no opportunity to show what it could do, as the backs had possession of the ball most of the time, and kept plowing through the Ironwood defense for five, ten and twenty-yard gains. The linemen did their full duty in opening up holes for the attacks, however.

The first touchdown was made after about five minutes of play and the second took about the same length of time, McDevitt carrying the ball over for both after he and Cummings and McKinley had worked the ball down the field by steady line plunging.

After that they came thick and fast, and the average time required to work the ball over the Ironwood line was about two minutes. The score at half time was 52 to 0, and Findlay then decided to remove Ryan and McDevitt, who had been doing yeoman service, and allow the substitutes to have a show. Caulkins and Cole were put in and they showed up well. Cole's work was especially pleasing, and he showed that he can be relied on as a substitute back in case one of the other three should be injured. The Duluth boys, however, realized that there was no need for any more scores, and they did not overwork themselves in the last half, being content with three more touchdowns.

The goal-kicking was good considering the conditions. The ball was so wet and slippery, and the field so soft, that it was very difficult to make an accurate kick. McDevitt got seven goals out of his nine chances, but Cummings and Peterson failed to register in their three chances.

Owing to the condition of the field, few attempts were made to pull off the trick plays made possible under the new rules. The double pass was tried once, but ground was lost on it, and on the whole everything but straight football was left severely alone.

Duluth.	Position.	Ironwood.
Coventry	center	Barnaby
Crawford	right guard	Vegelstock-

Bradley	right end	Holt
Ryan-Caulkins	quarter	Larson
McDevitt (Capt.)
Cole	left half	Le Blair
McKinley	full back	J. Krumm

Touchdowns—McDevitt, 3; McKinley, 3; Peterson, 2; Cummings, 2; Bradley and Ryan, 1 each; total, 12. Goals—McDevitt, 7 out of 9 chances; Peterson, 0 out of 1 chance; Cummings, 0 out of 1 chance. Time of halves, 25 and 20 minutes.

COACH FINDLAY HAS RESIGNED

Secures Flattering Offer From Ohio—Successor is Secured.

After whipping the Duluth high school squad into winning shape, Albion Findlay, the Duluth coach, has resigned and has gone to Massillon, Onio, to coach the Athletic club team of that city, at a considerable increase of salary over what he was receiving from the Duluth school.

Findlay is apparently headed for big company. During the six weeks he was coaching the Duluth boys, they showed a marvelous improvement in form, and within a year or two he will probably be found coaching one of the large college teams.

Findlay was loath to leave the local team, and refused the first offer made him. But he immediately received a still better one and tendered his resignation.

His place will be taken by Leahy, another Wisconsin man, who will follow out the methods adopted by Findlay. With the foundation so well laid, Leahy should be able to carry the team through the season in championship form, and from the little they have seen of his work the Duluth boys are confident that Leahy will come pretty close to filling Findlay's shoes.

FINDS CUBAN INSANE IN HORRIBLE PLIGHT.

Havana, Oct. 22.—Governor Magoon visited the National Insane asylum yesterday afternoon and found 1,660 persons of both sexes are crowded into filthy and dilapidated buildings, with a capacity for 400 only. All were sleeping on broken cots, relics of the last American occupation. Congress made an appropriation to enlarge the asylum, but the money was never expended, and the conditions little better than under Spanish control. The abuses will be remedied at once.

Pinkerton is Robbed.

J. H. Pinkerton, town treasurer of Shroeder, Cook county, was robbed of $3,000 of the town's money while walking from the dock at Grand Marais to a hotel last week. A robber suddenly appeared from the bushes and snatched the satchel which contained the money and made his escape.

Pinkerton was transferring the money from a Duluth bank to the Cook County bank. The bandit did not seem to be at all awed by Pinkerton's name.

ON COLLEGE GRIDIRONS

No Surprises Were Sprung in Games Played Saturday.

University Teams Made Better Showings Against Weak Opponents.

Saturday's college games were of little interest to Duluth followers of the sport.

No big games were scheduled, and there were no surprises.

Chicago had an easy time with Purdue and snowed the college men under by a score of 39 to 0.

The big Eastern teams made much better showings than they did a week ago. Pennsylvania, after suffering the chagrin of a defeat by Swarthmore a week ago, defeated the strong Brown eleven by the score of 12 to 0, playing hard and consistent football.

Princeton had an easy time with Bucknell, piling up 34 points. Bucknell scored on a place kick from the 40-yard line, but was unable to cross the Princeton goal line.

Harvard had an easy time with the Springfield Training school, and Yale defeated Pennsylvania State college 10 to 0.

A PIONEER'S TRUNK

Is Found in the Woods South of Allen Junction.

A trunk belonging to a woodsman who tramped through this Northland forest as early as 1856 has been found south of Allen Junction. J. C. Campbell of Cloquet, who was in Duluth yesterday, was telling about it.

The trunk is a small one and was evidently left in the woods by the owner, who intended to return some day and get it. Whether he was killed or why he never took possession of the little trunk again will never be known.

There was nothing inside which contained the name of the owner, although the pockets of some of the garments contained mildewed and rotten pocket and note books. In these were some figures and dates.

Beer Carriers—17th Century

At that time the most famous breweries in Germany and England were in the possession of the Emperor and the King. Previously the brewing of beer had been one of the prized secrets of convents and monasteries, directed by the skilled hands of monks and assiduously cultivated as one of the important arts.

In our time the art of brewing is indicative of wonderful progress --showing a more refined taste, and also a greater purity and increased food value.

Fitger's Beer

MEETINGS IN DULUTH

The seats at the Armory were two-thirds filled when the Cole-Clapp-Bede meeting was called to order thirty minutes after the time set, Saturday evening. This means an attendance of about 700.

Senator Clapp led off with the heavy thunder, and spoke for about forty minutes, when he was relieved by Mr. Cole, who arrived from the West Duluth meeting. The senator then went to West Duluth and relieved Congressman Bede, who returned to bring the Armory meeting to a close.

Senator Clapp started in on national questions, and gave an eloquent talk on the trend of the government of modern times toward paternalism.

He referred slightingly to William Jennings Bryan, whose vocal organs, he said, came the nearest to perpetual motion of anything that had ever been invented by the cranks in this line of mechanics.

"I want to say," said the senator, "that if Hearst carries New York, it is the end of Bryan."

The speaker threw in a good word for J. Adam Bede and asked the voters to back him up with a heavy vote. He then switched over to Knute Nelson and, with tears in his voice, brought the senior senator of Minnesota over from Norway in his infancy, followed him through life in this country, told of his wonderful devotion to his mother, fastened a little halo about his head, and sent him to Washington as a senator.

He then got around to state development and A. L. Cole. His first appeal for the Republican candidate was on the ground that he lived in the northern part of the state and therefore knew more about the needs of this section. He then attacked Governor Johnson's record.

"There are a great many good talkers," he said. "The Democratic candidate for governor is a good talker. Anybody can learn to talk but we want a man who can act." He then discussed Governor Johnson's record on the railroad rates in the state, and claimed that the governor had made no effort to enforce the law during the two years of his administration, or at least until last August.

"Why didn't the Republican governors for the last twenty-five years enforce the law?" called a voice from the rear of the hall.

The speaker called for the question to be repeated—the old trick of the campaigner—although it was plainly audible in all parts of the hall, owing to the silence which had fallen.

Immediately the senator began storming up and down the stage and went into a dissertation on the legislation the Republican representatives had passed.

"But why don't you answer my question?" called the impudent person from the rear of the hall.

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute!" shouted the speaker. "I'm coming to that! I'm coming to that!"

Cries of "Put him out!" were heard from all parts of the hall, but the speaker shouted to let him remain, and continued with his oration. He stated that in his legislation had been passed, which was declared invalid, and it took some time to remedy this. He then told of more legislation which had been passed, but carefully avoided a direct answer to the question, and ended with a triumphant "Well, I guess your Uncle Reuben knows something about the rate bill," which brought down the house, and silenced the lone questioner.

Mr. Cole then made his appearance. He plainly showed the effects of the strenuous campaign, and declared himself to be physically unfit to make the speech he desired to.

He went into the question of state taxation, showing that it took about $4,500,000 to run the state for a year, and that 80 per cent of this came from the tax on public service corporations. He outlined a plan of developing the state and increasing the earnings of the corporations so that there would be no more direct tax for state purposes.

"Increase the earnings of these corporations," he said, "so that ultimately they will pay all the taxes and pile up a fund for school purposes."

"Increase the earnings of these corporations," he said, "so that ultimately they will pay all the taxes and pile up a fund for school expenses."

He then presented a table of figures showing that there had been a loss in the rural population in the northern counties during the last year.

"What does this lead to?" he asked. "It ultimately leads to ruin."

He called attention to the active campaign for settlers waged by the Canadian government and urged a similar one for Minnesota.

"We can tell just as good a story, and tell the truth, as any state, or province in Canada," he said.

He finished his speech with an attack on the free passes on railroads and the rebate evil.

"We are naming the United States senators in the state conventions and compelling the legislators to elect them."

"Senator Nelson is just as much a Republican candidate for senator as A. L. Cole is for governor. There is the popular election for United States senators for you, and the Republican party is bringing it about without the aid of a constitutional amendment."

"If you want a seat in the senate to cost $50,000, the poor man won't get there. Senators Clapp and Nelson won't be there. And if the congressional elections continue so frequent and expensive, you will find me going into the mining business or investing in copper stocks."

"You can't run a church or a school or a W. C. T. U. without an organization, so how can you expect to run politics without an organization."

"Get out to the stockholders' meeting on Nov. 6 and vote your one share of stock in the commonwealth of Minnesota. Don't let the directors run this company."

"I have started in on my next campaign right now, and I invite you to vote for me two years from now, for fear that I shall be in Washington so much of the time that I won't get a chance to see you again."

The rally held at West Duluth was attended by a fair gathering of Republicans of that end of the city and Wade's hall was about two-thirds filled when Chairman L. A. Barnes called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock. Mr. Cole, the Republican candidate for governor, had arrived at the hall some minutes earlier and had greeted nearly all of those present, personally, before he began his address.

The candidate's speech was mostly on the issues of state development and the drainage question and was much the same as the address which he made later at the Armory in Duluth and made on his range tour. He stated that he is strongly in favor of advertising the state's advantages as had been done by Canada and the Pacific coast states.

Mr. Cole was followed by Congressman Bede and Senator Clapp, who urged the Republicans to stand by the party this year especially as the candidates are good, clean and capable men.

During the interval between Mr. Bede's speech and the arrival of Mr. Clapp, Clarence B. Miller, Republican nominee for the legislature, entertained the crowd with an eloquent address which lasted over half an hour in which he gave several reasons why he was going to vote for A. L. Cole for governor. He stated that he would vote for him because he is a Republican and stands for the principles which are needed in Minnesota. Another reason was because Mr. Cole is a northern man and understands and has made a study of the conditions in Northern Minnesota so that if elected governor he will be able to accomplish a great deal for this section. The southern part of the state no longer needs assistance and they do not realize how badly it is needed in the north. More settlers are needed in the northern section to make the northern towns and cities prosperous and Mr. Miller urged that it was much safer to leave this state development in the hands of a man who has made it a study rather than with a man from the southern section of the state who is not familiar with northern conditions and who cannot understand what is needed here.

When Mr. Miller had finished his address, Mr. Clapp had not yet arrived and the chairman introduced George J. Mallory, who stated that he was used to the job of acting as a "filler-in." He had no more than started his address, however, when Mr. Clapp was seen to enter the hall and was greeted by a burst of applause.

NEEDS MEN OF EXPERIENCE

Roadbuilding by Inexperienced Farmers Represents Money Wasted.

The farmer does not make the best roadmaster. This was the sentiment of most of the speakers at the meeting of the Carlton Good Roads association at Moose Lake Saturday.

The subject of good roadmaking was discussed at some length and the verdict was that in this part of the country, where the material is the best, the roads are exceptionally good. It was argued that the roadmaking should be done under the direction of men experienced in that sort of work.

Duluth was represented at the meeting by W. E. Culkin and H. V. Eva of the Commercial club. The farmers of Carlton county attended the meeting in large numbers, showing their interest in the movement.

There was a discussion of the large amount of money that is being expended yearly in building and maintaining roads with so little practical results. This is due, it is claimed, to the inefficiency of the roadmaster and the unsatisfactory poll tax system under which each farmer attempts to work out his poll tax with as little exertion as possible. The trend of the argument was that a competent man should be employed by the county to supervise the road work.

State Engineer George W. Cooley spoke of modern methods of making roads. He claimed that the combination of clay, sand and gravel found in all parts of Carlton county left no excuse for poor roads.

F. B. McLaren, secretary of the association, spoke on the topic, "By Their Roads Ye Shall Know Them." He was followed by W. E. Case of Cloquet.

W. E. Culkin talked of the aims and methods of good roads associations and urged co-operation between the people of Duluth and those of the surrounding country.

H. V. Eva spoke for the Duluth Commercial club, which he said is willing to help the good road cause along in every possible way.

The new road that is being built from Wrenshall to Fond du Lac was discussed a great deal and the advantage of making it a model highway was given consideration.

S.S.S. RIDS THE SYSTEM OF MALARIA

The healthy color of the skin is given to it by the millions of little red corpuscles in the blood. These are the carriers of nourishment, health and strength to all parts of the body—in other words the very life of the blood. When the germs of Malaria get into this vital fluid they destroy these corpuscles and rob the blood of its rich, lifes-ustaining qualities, rendering it thin, weak and watery and unable to supply the system with the needed strength to resist disease. Then the symptoms of Malaria such as pale, sallow complexions, weak vitality, poor appetite, deranged digestion, a general "let down" condition of the system, and perhaps chills and slight fever, show that this insidious disease is gradually affecting the entire health. Malaria must be removed from the system through the circulation, and the medicine to accomplish this is S. S. S. It not only cleanses the blood of all impure, unhealthy matter, but rids the system of Malaria, and restores the blood to a strong, healthy condition. S. S. S., besides removing the germs of Malaria, builds up and gives tone and vigor to the entire system by its fine tonic effects. Malaria is a blood disease, and S. S. S. cures it because it is a perfect blood purifier. Book on the blood and any medical advice without charge. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

THE WHEAT MARKET.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The wheat market today opened firm on a good demand by commission houses. The chief feature was small receipts in the Northwest which offset lower cables from Liverpool. December wheat opened ⅛@¼c to ¼@⅜c higher at 73¼c to 73⅜c and for a time held around the latter figure. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 709 cars against 1,056 cars last week and 1,206 cars a year ago.

The market became weaker late in the day on profit taking sales by commission houses with Northwestern connections. The low point for December was 72⅝c. The close was weak with December off ⅜c at 72⅝@¾c.

The corn market was firm chiefly because of unsettled weather conditions throughout the corn belt. There was a good scattering demand, but offerings were light. December corn opened a shade to ¼c higher at 42@42¼c to 42¼c and sold at 42⅜c. Local receipts were 319 cars with 166 of contract grade.

Prices eased off in sympathy with wheat, December declining to 41¾. The close was easy with December off a shade at 41⅞@42.

The oats market was quiet and steady, the chief influence being the firmness of wheat and corn. December oats opened unchanged at 33¼c and sold at 33¼c. Local receipts were 401 cars.

The provisions market was steady. The chief feature was the buying of January products by a leading packer. January pork was unchanged at $13.72½. Lard was a shade higher at $8.22½. Ribs were up a shade at $7.45@7.47½.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 22.—The flour market is steady. The uncertainty ruling in the wheat market tends to make buyers conservative. The demand shows no change in character, while showing a broader buying spirit than from hand to mouth. It is still restricted. The grinding capacity is reported to be heavier. Shipments, 50,355 barrels. First patents, $4.20@4.30; second patents, $4.05@4.15; first clears, $3.25@3.35; second clears, $2.40@2.60.

Grain Gossip.

Chicago Tribune: Milling operations of last week indicate that the winter wheat millers were working their advantage for all they are worth. They operated a basis of nearly 5c per bus lower than the millers were forced to operate This, of course, will call for a readjustment of values, and it was telling against grinding operations in the Northwest, which are usually at the top notch at this season of the year. Claims by a Southwestern milling authority that the Mexican millers would take soft winter wheat instead of the hard sorts to make up for their crop shortages this year will, if finally verified, have a material influence on the market. If, as claimed, the Mexican millers can absorb all of our red winter wheat it may affect the general undertone of the market, despite the probability that the grain will go out in small quantities. The prospect of a good market for all of the hard wheat available has caused a good demand for foreigners.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Closing Was Quiet But Strong Near Highest Level.

Call Money Offered Down to Nearly the Normal Rate.

New York, Oct. 22.—Vigorous recovery from Saturday's slump in prices marked the opening dealings on the stock exchange today. The strength of the London market helped to this result and rumors from abroad pointed to a large loan of gold by the Bank of France to the Bank of England. The strongest rallies were in stocks which suffered most in Saturday's breaks. Sales of 2,500 shares of Union Pacific were made at 183 and 182½, compared with 181 on Saturday. Anaconda rose 2½; Great Northern preferred, 3; Reading, Northern Pacific and Southern Pacific, 1¾; Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Canadian Pacific, Pennsylvania, Copper and Sugar, 1¼ to 1½, and Louisville & Nashville, Erie, Brooklyn Transit, Smelting and Distillers Securities about a point each.

Confidence in the stable character of the advance was strengthened by the readiness with which the traders took the selling to realize. Only a slight impression was made on prices by the selling, and the market subsequently went considerably higher than at the opening. All of the usual leaders scored handsomely, and there were a number of substantial advances in many minor stocks. Pullman jumped 5 points; Anaconda, 4; Reading, 2¾; St. Paul, 2⅛; Lead, Distillers Securities and International Pump, 2 each; the Smelting stocks, Consolidated Gas and Canadian Pacific, 1⅝ to 1¾; Atchison, 1½; Colorado Fuel and Cotton Oil, 1¼, and Ontario & Western, Atlantic Coast Line, United States Steel, United States Rubber first preferred, Pressed Steel Car and Locomotive, 1 each.

Call money fell back to 6 per cent, after opening at 7, Friday's highest rate. New buying orders poured into the market after a period of hesitation, and prices were carried to a substantially higher level. Anaconda's gain reached 7; Pullman, 6½; Great Northern preferred, 5; Reading, Northern Pacific and Canadian Pacific, 3¼ each; Union Pacific, 3; St. Paul, 2¾; National Lead, 2½, and Southern Pacific, Atchison, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Northwestern, Amalgamated Copper, Smelting and Colorado Fuel, 2 to 2¼ each. The market was quiet at some recovery at noon. Bonds were firm.

The failure of a board member contributed somewhat to the dullness and lower prices prevailed after 12 o'clock. St. Paul and Amalgamated Copper reacted nearly a point. Prices commenced to mend and Union Pacific touched 184⅛, the highest.

Higher prices were obtained for the Hill and Harriman stocks during the latter part of the afternoon, but the rest of the list was not essentially changed, although the tendency was upward.

The closing was quiet but strong near the highest level. The market gathered force from another upward flight of prices during the final hour when call money was offered down to nearly the normal rate. The gains were substantially extended all around. Great Northern preferred rose an extreme 7, Northern Pacific and Reading 4¼ each, Delaware & Hudson 4, Anaconda 9½, Colorado Southern 2nd preferred, Copper, Smelting and United States Rubber first preferred 3⅛ to 3⅜, Sugar 2¾, Colorado Fuel 2⅜, and United States Steel 1⅝.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 22.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: The horse market for the latter part of last week was very poor, with very few sales of any dimensions. Lumbermen are late and are not buying on account of the lack of help. Dealers are heavily stocked with a large assortment of heavy loggers. The prospects are for a first-class market a little later this fall. The retail market is practically at a standstill, with no perceptible change in view. Prices remain unchanged.

Copper Gossip.

Gay & Sturgis: The Boston news bureau says this morning: "The steady strengthening of the copper market has resulted in higher prices for basic articles which are dependent upon this metal for their manufacture. Coincident with the advances in the metal, the base prices of sheet copper and copper wire have also been raised. On Thursday last copper wire was advanced 1c per pound to 24½c, base price; on Oct. 11 the Sheet Copper Manufacturers' association announced a 2c advance in its listed base price to 27c per pound. There have been but three changes this year in the quotations on sheet copper, while since the first of the current month there has been the same number of changes in the prices of copper wire."

An associate of the Roeblings says: "The position of the copper market is such at the present time that we cannot guarantee prices of copper wire; quotations of any grade of wire or cable may be at a certain level at the moment, and in five minutes may have to be changed."

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 22.—The cotton market opened strong at an advance of 11@31 points and sold 30 to 34 points higher on the active covering of shorts and bull support following higher cables than expected, and apprehensions of unfavorable weather in the Western belt. There was heavy realizing at the advance and prices sagged off about 10 or 12 points from the best during the first hour, but there were large supporting orders around the ring at 11 cents for January. The rapidity of the advance unsettled confidence on the bear side, in view of the possibility of bad weather West and uncertainty as to the showing of the census report on Tuesday.

Futures closed steady. October, 10.93; November, 10.93; December, 10.91; January, 10.99; February, 11.07; March, 11.15; April, 11.18; May, 11.22; June, 11.23; July, 11.30. Spot closed quiet, 25 points advance. Middling uplands, 11.25; middling gulf, 11.50. Sales, 444 bales.

The country has been aroused and posses are scouring all Northern North Dakota in search of the robbers. One citizen was shot in the head, but will recover.

CLAIMS VALUE HAS ADVANCED

Athol M. Miller Says Value of Bowery Property Quadrupled.

The hearing on the value of the Ouelette & Baxter factory property at Garfield avenue was completed Saturday by the appraisers in the condemnation proceedings started by the Wisconsin Central Railway company. Today the commissioners were hearing testimony relative to the values of property at Eighth avenue west, between Superior and Michigan streets, comprising part of the proposed terminal for the railway company.

Athol M. Miller, who owned all four corners at Superior street and Eighth avenue west, including the triangular piece of land between Eighth avenue and the point where Michigan street joins Superior street, was a witness before the appraisers nearly all day. Mr. Miller purchased the property he holds in that locality from one to five or six years ago. He claims his property has trebled and quadrupled in value in the past five years, while property on Superior street, between Third and Fifth avenues west, has not more than doubled in value. He claims this big increase in value has been due to the growth of the city.

With reference to the triangular shaped ground at Eighth avenue west, Mr. Miller said he considered it worth $100,000 when he bought it five years ago. He admitted knowledge that the property had been sold just before he bought it for much less than that sum. The records produced by Francis W. Sullivan, attorney for the railroad company, showed that the property was sold shortly before Mr. Miller bought it for $1,800, the purchaser assuming a $3,500 mortgage.

Mr. Miller thought the property would bring $50,000 if sold in the present market, although in his opinion it is worth a great deal more.

SECOND TEAM IS A NECESSITY

A short meeting of the boys of the high school was held this afternoon for the purpose of talking over the football situation. Coach Findlay, having received a large offer for his services from a town in Ohio has left, and turned the team over to Mr. Leigh. As Leigh has helped Findlay in the work, he understands his tactics and the present condition of the team. The boys therefore still have a good coach.

Capt. McDevitt, however, pointed out that a good coach is not the only essential of a good football team; the boys must have a second team to play against, or they will go down to defeat when they run up against a strong eleven. "If some of you big fellows will get out and form a second team to help us along by giving us some opposition we will promise to turn you out a winning team," said he. "There has been some talk of giving "Ds" to the members of the second team. If you can't get up enough spirit to work for the good of the school, you have a chance to gain valuable experience for future years. Now it is up to you. If you will give us your support, do so at once. If not, we may as well throw up the sponge, for we can't win without your help."

The Lonely Life

The Tragic Confession of a Spinster, Who Realizes That No Fame or Wealth Can Compensate for the Solitude of Her Life.

In this article the author, whose name for obvious reasons we are not at liberty to disclose, drops for once the mask which she in common with other "Bachelor Maids," is accustomed to turn to the world.

Though no longer young, she frankly says she longs for the companionship of a husband and the care of children. The circumstances which have kept from her the happiness which these blessings bring are stated with the same directness which characterizes the whole article. It is the life-story of a "successful" woman, a drama of real life in which the last act is a tragedy.

CHINESE IN ARMY LINE

Chang Te Fu, Province of Honan, China, Oct. 22.—The autumn maneuvers of the Chinese Imperial army began today with about 30,000 troops from the provinces of Honan, Hu Peh, Chi Li, and Shang-Tung engaged, under the command of Yuan Shi Kai, commander-in-chief of the Chinese forces and Gen. Tih Liang. In the army are cavalry, infantry and artillery, the latter arm consisting of 150 guns.

According to the scheme of operations, a Southern army composed of the Hu Peh and Ho Nan forces, is supposed to have landed in the Yang Tse valley, and one wing is endeavoring to reach Pekin by way of the Pekin and Hankow railroad, and a Northern army composed of the Chi-Li and Shang Tung troops, is to compelled to defend the capital at short notice.

The troops engaged in the operations are equipped with the most modern accoutrements, rifles and guns, and present an appearance creditable to the foreign officers who have trained and drilled them.

The maneuvers have evoked the greatest interest in foreign countries. No less than thirty military attaches of foreign powers are closely following the operations, which will conclude with a grand review and entertainment of the foreign guests of the province and officers of the Chinese army.

PROBE TO HIT GRAIN REBATERS

Minneapolis, Oct. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—From the character of the witnesses to appear today before a special federal grand jury, it is certain that the rebate investigation will be devoted particularly to usages that have been developed in connection with the grain trade.

H. B. Duncan of Chicago, a special agent of the department of justice, is here, as is also S. H. Smith, rate clerk of the interstate commerce commission. They will play an important part in the investigation, though formally the inquiry is in charge of C. C. Haupt, federal district attorney.

The grand jury was called to assemble this morning, but owing to the inability of several members to reach the city on early trains, did not convene till afternoon.

DEATH OF C. W. FLETCHER.

Former Mayor of Two Iowa Cities Had a Genuine Romance.

Charles City, Iowa, Oct. 22.—C. W. Fletcher, a prominent manufacturer of Sioux City and twice mayor of that city, died there on Wednesday. He was once a resident of Charles City and was once mayor of this city. Since his death a little romance has come to light concerning his second marriage to the love of his youthful days in Minneapolis.

At the outbreak of the Civil war he was engaged to Miss Annie Rich, who lived in Vermont, but the war prevented his marriage. While he was fighting for his country he learned that his fiancee became engaged to another man.

This influenced him to come West and he fell in love with another girl in his new home and married her, the union lasting for forty years. After the death of his first wife he visited Minneapolis and there again met the sweetheart of his youth, who had been married and become a widow. The old love was renewed and in 1903 Mr. Fletcher and Mrs. Martin, as she was then known, were married. His second wife survives him.

This was a very fortunate escape.

INSURANCE GIVEN RAPS

Extravagance Scored and Economical Business System Urged.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 22.—A special commission appointed by the governor, which has been investigating the office of the auditor of state for a year with special reference to mutual and stock life insurance companies today submitted its report to Governor Hanley. The general conclusions are:

"The cost of life insurance to the public is too high. The present maximum premium rates for insurance are so much in excess of needs as to permit of extravagant management of companies, the theft of their funds, division of profits and other great abuses without rendering the companies insolvent. Indiana insurance companies, like many companies of other states, have been guilty of extravagances and abuses though they have maintained solvency.

"There is no real difference in essentials between insurance business and other business and no reason why it should not be conducted on an economical basis, according to definite principles. Indiana should not seek to protect home companies that are guilty of abuses, but should, by stricter laws, and a better supported insurance department, foster insurance on a sound basis and bring to this section business that has been going to companies of other states."

Those who visited Decker's Art Store Saturday were repaid by seeing on display the finest pastel work ever shown in Duluth. F. P. Trisch, an artist of international reputation, is exhibiting some of the latest work in landscape and still life, which is worthy of the highest praise. So beautiful are the pictures and so exquisitely finished that one can scarcely realize they are pastel, until the artist with a smile demonstrates the fact. Mr. Trisch may be seen at work every day this week at Decker's Art Store.

Vernon Center, Minn., Oct. 22.—M. W. Briggs, employed on the farm of Ed Warren, near this city, lost an eye and several fingers and suffered severe wounds in his face and arms as a result of an accidental explosion of dynamite while he was blasting stumps on his employer's farm. He was brought to this city immediately after the accident.

Both of the local physicians were out of town, and an automobile was sent to bring them back. Meanwhile a telephone call was sent to Mankato and two surgeons from that place came immediately. It was found necessary to remove the man's eye and to amputate some of the fingers on each hand. He is expected to recover.

The accident occurred as Briggs was touching a match to a fuse which he had just set. A basket, containing four or five pounds of the explosive was beside him, and it is thought that a spark from the match must have flown into the basket and ignited the dynamite.

WEALTH KILLS HEALTH.

Pittsburg, Oct. 22.—The iron and steel interests of J. Walter Rhodes have been sold, making the collapse of another young millionaire under the strain of amassing more millions and keeping up with the social race.

Rhodes, who is only 30 years old, has fully $3,000,000 in his own name and is one of two heirs to $10,000,000 more, but he is reported to be a physical wreck. By order of his physicians he will retire to a sanitarium for at least a year.

The $2,500,000 deal was closed on Friday afternoon through Edwin N. Ohl, vice president of the Cherry Valley Iron company, and by it the interests of Rhodes and his brother, William Baggaley Rhodes, are taken over by a syndicate.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The mystery veiling the death of Charles E. Stevenson, a well known attorney, Harvard fraternity man and relative of former Vice President Adlai E. Stevenson, was deepened Saturday night by the discovery of evidence of a secret marriage at Hammond, Ind., Feb. 22, 1905, to Ada Marsland, an Australian heiress, who is believed to be in Chicago.

Stevenson's body was found early Saturday morning at the bottom of an elevator shaft. Stevenson was prominent as a lawyer and had an excellent practice. He was a first cousin to Former Vice President Stevenson, and acted as secretary of the Chicago branch of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity of Harvard.

ACTRESS WAS MURDERED

Coroner's Physician Declares Chicago Hotel Death Foul Play.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The coroner's physician today after an exhaustive examination declared that Mrs. Margaret Leslie, an actress, whose dead body was found in a room in the Palace hotel several days ago, was probably strangled to death. It was considered at the time to be a case of suicide and the coroner, at the conclusion of the inquest, so reported. Lately several features of the case have thrown doubt on the suicide theory. There is no clue to the murderer.

FLOATING MINE KILLS 180 ON RUSSIAN SHIP

London, Oct. 22.—A dispatch from Vladivostok says the Russian wooden coasting steamer Warjagin struck a floating mine and foundered Saturday. Some of her passengers and crew were saved, but 180 persons were drowned.

INVENTORS REFUSE TO SELL TO STANDARD OIL

Stockholm, Oct. 22.—The two Swedish engineers who have invented a method of extracting the mineral oil from coal tar which possesses all the qualities of the best kerosene, have heretofore rejected offers made by John D. Rockefeller, and declare that if they do sell their invention to the American oil king, he will have to pay a price in proportion to his own immense fortune, or they will begin to extend their patent in all the countries of the world.

As soon as the news of the invention reached the United States, John D. Rockefeller cabled his agents in Paris, to hurry to Sweden lest somebody might get hold of the discovery before the Standard Oil. It is understood here that the agents were empowered to offer as much as one million dollars to the inventors, but they have no intention of selling out for any such amount, especially as offers from all countries are coming in every day. It is said that one offer was received indirectly from the kaiser, who has always been anxious to drive the Standard Oil company out of Germany.

The next few days will probably decide whether the Standard Oil company is to remain all powerful or whether it has at last met its Waterloo.

NEW THINGS

Continue to arrive.

The fact that we are constantly in touch with the Eastern market—and continue to get the new things as soon as they are introduced in the fashion centers of the East—coupled with our ability to place these new and beautiful things before you at the fairest possible prices, is something that Duluth people seem to appreciate. Our business keeps jumping ahead.

Our Mr. Gidding has just returned from one of his auxiliary trips to the Eastern markets to keep in touch with the new things and pick up any special values that might be found. You'll find both if you come to the store now. Some of the best things are not told of at all in our store news. New cloth and velvet suits, new tight and loose coats, new waists, new furs—all are awaiting your inspection.

Secretary Shaw Will Receive General Securities for a Time.

Amount to be Issued by Each Institution is Limited.

New York, Oct. 23.—Secretary Shaw of the treasury department announced today that he would stimulate national bank circulation to the extent of $18,000,000 by accepting approved securities other than government bonds for deposits already made, the bonds released to be used immediately as a basis of circulation, without withdrawal from the treasury. He does not object to the assignment of the bonds to other banks than those now holding them, but to insure their use, they must remain in the treasury, and in addition the bank taking out the circulation must agree to retire the same between March 15 and Aug. 10, 1907. The banks will be required, when taking out their circulation, to make application for its retirement, and the order or per cent of retirement from month to month will be determined by the treasury department.

In this way $18,000,000 of additional circulation can be immediately issued, and gradually retired during the spring and summer months. In this way, also, he expects to demonstrate, in limited form, the benefits of an elastic currency.

Mr. Shaw also authorized the announcement that after last night, deposits to facilitate gold importations would be discontinued. He said, in connection with the announcement, that importations had exceeded his expectations, and he believed for the present America had quite its share.

WOMEN STIR PARLIAMENT

London, Oct. 23.—Unusual excitement in connection with the re-opening of parliament today was caused by the presence of about 100 woman suffragists, many of whom, despite the protests of the police, managed to find their way into the outer lobby of the house of commons with the intention of button-holing the members. A number mounted vacant chairs in the lobby and began to harangue the few members present.

The police, after being reinforced, made a strategic advance against the invaders, taking the women singly, and gradually ejected them. The most militant of the women struggled so desperately that two officers were required to remove them. The shouting and screaming brought crowds of members from the house and the unwonted scene created temporary excitement such as has seldom been witnessed in or about the house.

During the height of the tumult a small band of the staunchest suffragists determined to break into the house itself, and, as though by concerted action, suddenly charged toward the entrance of the inner lobby, and some tried to climb over the barrier and others to crawl under it. For several minutes disorder prevailed and the police had all they could do to eject the women.

The reassembling of parliament drew large crowds to Westminster, despite the fact that the opening of the session was devoid of sumptuous ceremony or the appearance of royalty and was merely a resumption of the business of the preceding session. Ten members appeared as the clock struck midnight in order to secure first choice of seats.

HITS VOTES BY WOMEN

Mrs. Corbin Declares Suffrage Movement Socialistic Scheme.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Caroline F. Corbin, president of the Illinois association opposed to the extension of suffrage to women, has addressed a letter to Lessing Rosenthal, chairman of the women's municipal suffrage committee of the Chicago charter convention, in which she dwells on the relation of woman suffrage to the propaganda of revolutionary socialism, which, she declares, is the most active and strenuous foe of Christian Socialism. She says:

"Any economic scheme which puts woman upon a utilitarian equality with man, and makes her his competitor in the market places of the world to the destruction of her value as a home maker, which deprives her of that virtue which alone fits her for the duties of motherhood, by abrogating marriage and encouraging promiscuous relations between the sexes, must expect to be judged according to its merit by the world at large."

Mrs. Corbin concludes her letter as follows: "We ask that you will remember your mothers, wives, the women of your homes, and, by your action, protect them from the evil designs of socialism. That you will guard them from forced participation in political strife and contention, whose atmosphere will tend to reduce them to the coarse and materialistic level of the Socialistic conception of womanhood."

St. Paul, Oct. 23.—(Special to the Herald.)—Although suffering terrible tortures, Martin Hansen, a laborer living at 615 York street, buried to his neck in wet, heavy sand, his spine twisted and his lungs crushed until he could barely breathe, coolly directed his rescuers, who worked frantically to extricate him.

Hansen was at work with a number of other men digging a trench at Sixth and Hope streets, yesterday afternoon, when suddenly the sand began to cave. The other men escaped, and all set to work to dig him out. When taken from the trench, Hansen was exhausted by the strain. A physician examined him and announced that death might result while, if he lived, he would be crippled for life. He is a married man and has several children.

IS DROWNED NEAR TOWER

Frank Johnson Also in Boat That Sank, But Escaped.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 23.—(Special to the Herald.)—Saturday, the following telegram was received from Tower, Minn., directed to "Agent Great Northern," and singed "Frank Johnson:"

"Henry Bounty drowned yesterday. Tell Mrs. Bounty and advise quick what to do."

The message was turned over to Chief of Police Bailey, who vainly made search for someone by the name of "Bounty." It was surmised that the name had been distorted while being transmitted from Tower and that the man who had perished was Henry Buenther, the local taxidermist.

Inquiry elicited the fact that on Saturday, Oct. 13 Mr. Buenther had told his wife that he intended to make a trip to his claim, on the north shore of upper Red Lake, and that he would leave that day for the claim, going by the way of Thief River Falls. A mes-

San Francisco, Oct. 23.—Francis J. Heney formally assumed office yesterday as assistant district attorney of San Francisco, and began today the investigation of graft charges against the official bosses. Mayor Schmitz has been recalled from Europe in haste.

Mr. Heney prosecuted United States Senator Mitchell and other Oregon land grabbers, and has a high reputation as a relentless prober of evils.

The selection of Mr. Heney as assistant district attorney here is the result of charges that political bosses here have robbed the city of millions of dollars both before and since the earthquake. Prosecutions of some of the most noted men in California are expected and great sensations are assured.

BANDITS IN WARM TRAP

North Dakotans Coop Up Bank Robbers in Wheat Field.

Burglar Mortally Wounds Policeman in Street Fight.

Minot, N. D., Oct. 23.—The bandits who robbed the bank at Sawyer, N. D., yesterday morning of $4,500 after a battle with citizens, in which 300 shots were exchanged were surrounded last night in a wheat field six miles north of there by pursuers and twenty-five men armed with Krag-Jorgenson rifles left here to assist the posse. Since then no word has come, except that early this morning a pitched battle was in progress. Reports from the field are being anxiously awaited.

New York, Oct. 2.—Roundsman James McGarry and Carney of Brooklyn found a grating removed from the window of the cellar of a drug store at Kingston avenue and DeGraw street early today and went into the cellar to investigate. While they were searching a man climbed out of the cellar and jumped on the seat of a wagon where an associate awaited him.

As the robbers whipped up their horse, the roundsmen reached the sidewalk and opened fire. With the roundsmen in hot pursuit down the street a running battle took place. The police shots went wild but, at the first reply of the burglars McGarry was wounded in the face. A second bullet pierced his arm and a third brought him down with a wound in the head. He is not expected to recover. His companion pursued the burglars further, but they disappeared in Prospect street.

Carbondale, Ill., Oct. 23.—The Floyd bank of Vergennes, a small village of this county, was dynamited yesterday morning by four mounted robbers. The noise of the explosion aroused the villagers; and Abraham Kimmel, proprietor of the Kimmel hotel, was fatally wounded by a shot fired by one of the highwaymen. Four stores had previously been entered and looted. The robbers escaped, but bloodhounds are on the trail.

Two Young South Dakotans Lose Their Lives in Blizzard.

Denver, Oct. 23.—The snowstorm that began last Friday night still continues throughout Eastern Colorado, Southern Wyoming, Northern New Mexico, Western Texas and Western Kansas and Nebraska, but clearing weather in this region is promised by the weather bureau.

This is the heaviest October snowstorm on record in this entire region. The total fall in Denver up to last night was twenty inches, and several inches have fallen since.

The temperature continues to hover around the freezing mark, but thus far but comparatively little damage has been done. According to stockmen in Denver, cattle on the range will not suffer greatly, for they are said to be in excellent condition and well able to withstand a hard storm.

Fruit on the western slope will probably suffer considerably, as not more than half the apple crop has been picked owing to lack of help.

Trains on both the mountain and prairie roads have been greatly delayed, and some city streets have been rendered almost impassable.

Some places on the eastern slope of the mountains report a snowfall measuring three to four feet. While the temperature on the plains has fluctuated from 20 to 30 deg. above zero, it has been much colder at higher altitudes. At Curona, the highest point on the new Moffat-Denver-Salt Lake

"CLANSMAN" STIRS RIOT

Philadelphia Negroes Besiege Theatre Until Police are Called.

Colored Ministers Demand of Mayor that Play be Suppressed.

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—When Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr.'s, "The Clansman," was announced for presentation at the Walnut Street theater last night, the colored clergy of the city had made a formal protest to Mayor Weaver, claiming that "lynchings have been encouraged by the play."

The mayor refused to take any action and about half an hour before the theater opened, Ninth and Walnut streets, where the playhouse is located, were packed with colored people.

Director of Public Safety McKenny, who had hastened to the scene, begged the ministers to disperse the mob, but they refused.

A riot call was sent in and patrol wagons brought half a hundred policemen to the theater.

The colored ministers surrounded Director McKenny and demanded that he stop the play. The director delivered a brief speech, asking the crowd to disperse, and saying that he would endeavor to have the presentation discontinued. The crowd sullenly scattered.

Early in the evening a colored man attempted to create a disturbance in the theater. He was arrested, but the police had considerable difficulty in rescuing him from the crowd in the gallery.

WRECKED BANK IS SOLD OUT

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Judge Bretano, of the superior court today authorized the sale of the Milwaukee Avenue State bank, which was wrecked by its president, Paul O. Stensland, to the Assets Realization company for approximately $750,000. The bid accepted by the court was 71¼ per cent of the face value of the capital stock of the bank.

Edward Goes to Newmarket as Parliament Opens and Has Mishap.

London, Oct. 23.—King Edward, evidently aware that the proceedings in parliament would be devoid of any important features, left Buckingham palace in an automobile at noon, to spend the rest of the week at the Newmarket races.

As the king was leaving town, his car knocked down a man, but no serious consequences resulted.

BATTLE IN RUSS JAIL

Warsaw Expects New Strike Because of Drum Head Sentences.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 23.—An attempt of the convicts at Irkutsk, Siberia, to break out of jail last night led to a battle, in which nine convicts and the governor of the prison were killed and several persons were wounded. Seventeen convicts succeeded in escaping.

Fourteen members of the Socialists' fighting organization of Warsaw, who were arrested Oct. 20, have been condemned to death by drum head court-martial. It is expected that the action of the court will result in a general strike tomorrow.

The police are searching for a man named Voronin, brother-in-law of M. Onipo, convinced that he was a ringleader in the conspiracy to blow up the building where the court-martial trying the Cronstadt mutiny cases was sitting, in revenge for the execution of mutineers.

The plot was originally planned for the day Onipko, who was one of the leaders of the peasant part in the former parliament, was condemned to deportation and loss of his civil rights, for participation in the mutiny, but was abandoned on account of the comparatively light punishment meted to Onipko.

Viasoff, a soldier who volunteered to throw the bomb, was detailed both Oct. 11 and Oct. 16 to guard the judges in their consultation. Here the bomb could have been thrown without involving the accused or the witnesses in the fate of the judges.

In spite of the apparent quiet, St. Petersburg is teeming with conspirators. There are almost daily arrests and domiciliary searches. The capture of bombs and arms goes on apparently without end.

Secretary Shaw Will Receive General Securities for a Time.

Amount to be Issued by Each Institution is Limited.

New York, Oct. 23.—Secretary Shaw of the treasury department announced today that he would stimulate national bank circulation to the extent of $18,000,000 by accepting approved securities other than government bonds for deposits already made, the bonds released to be used immediately as a basis of circulation, without withdrawal from the treasury. He does not object to the assignment of the bonds to other banks than those now holding them, but to insure their use, they must remain in the treasury, and in addition the bank taking out the circulation must agree to retire the same between March 15 and Aug. 10, 1907. The banks will be required, when taking out their circulation, to make application for its retirement, and the order or per cent of retirement from month to month will be determined by the treasury department.

In this way $18,000,000 of additional circulation can be immediately issued, and gradually retired during the spring and summer months. In this way, also, he expects to demonstrate, in limited form, the benefits of an elastic currency.

Mr. Shaw also authorized the announcement that after last night, deposits to facilitate gold importations would be discontinued. He said, in connection with the announcement, that importations had exceeded his expectations, and he believed for the present America had quite its share.

London, Oct. 23.—Unusual excitement in connection with the re-opening of parliament today was caused by the presence of about 100 woman suffragists, many of whom, despite the protests of the police, managed to find their way into the outer lobby of the house of commons with the intention of button-holing the members. A number mounted vacant chairs in the lobby and began to harangue the few members present.

The police, after being reinforced, made a strategic advance against the invaders, taking the women singly, and gradually ejected them. The most militant of the women struggled so desperately that two officers were required to remove them. The shouting and screaming brought crowds of members from the house and the unwonted scene created temporary excitement such as has seldom been witnessed in or about the house.

During the height of the tumult a small band of the staunchest suffragists determined to break into the house itself, and, as though by concerted action, suddenly charged toward the entrance of the inner lobby, and some tried to climb over the barrier and others to crawl under it. For several minutes disorder prevailed and the police had all they could do to eject the women.

The reassembling of parliament drew large crowds to Westminster, despite the fact that the opening of the session was devoid of sumptuous ceremony or the appearance of royalty and was merely a resumption of the business of the preceding session. Ten members appeared as the clock struck midnight in order to secure first choice of seats.

HITS VOTES BY WOMEN

Mrs. Corbin Declares Suffrage Movement Socialistic Scheme.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Caroline F. Corbin, president of the Illinois association opposed to the extension of suffrage to women, has addressed a letter to Lessing Rosenthal, chairman of the women's municipal suffrage committee of the Chicago charter convention, in which she dwells on the relation of woman suffrage to the propaganda of revolutionary socialism, which, she declares, is the most active and strenuous foe of Christian Socialism. She says:

"Any economic scheme which puts woman upon a utilitarian equality with man, and makes her his competitor in the market places of the world to the destruction of her value as a home maker, which deprives her of that virtue which alone fits her for the duties of motherhood, by abrogating marriage and encouraging promiscuous relations between the sexes, must expect to be judged according to its merit by the world at large."

Mrs. Corbin concludes her letter as follows: "We ask that you will remember your mothers, wives, the women of your homes, and, by your action, protect them from the evil designs of socialism. That you will guard them from forced participation in political strife and contention, whose atmosphere will tend to reduce them to the coarse and materialistic level of the Socialistic conception of womanhood."

St. Paul, Oct. 23.—(Special to the Herald.)—Although suffering terrible tortures, Martin Hansen, a laborer living at 615 York street, buried to his neck in wet, heavy sand, his spine twisted and his lungs crushed until he could barely breathe, coolly directed his rescuers, who worked frantically to extricate him.

Hansen was at work with a number of other men digging a trench at Sixth and Hope streets, yesterday afternoon, when suddenly the sand began to cave. The other men escaped, and all set to work to dig him out. When taken from the trench, Hansen was exhausted by the strain. A physician examined him and announced that death might result while, if he lived, he would be crippled for life. He is a married man and has several children.

Frank Johnson Also in Boat That Sank, But Escaped.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 23.—(Special to the Herald.)—Saturday, the following telegram was received from Tower, Minn., directed to "Agent Great Northern," and singed "Frank Johnson:"

The message was turned over to Chief of Police Bailey, who vainly made search for someone by the name of "Bounty." It was surmised that the name had been distorted while being transmitted from Tower and that the man who had perished was Henry Buenther, the local taxidermist.

Inquiry elicited the fact that on Saturday, Oct. 13 Mr. Buenther had told his wife that he intended to make a trip to his claim, on the north shore of upper Red Lake, and that he would leave that day for the claim, going by the way of Thief River Falls. A mes-

As the robbers whipped up their horse, the roundsmen reached the sidewalk and opened fire. With the roundsmen in hot pursuit down the street a running battle took place. The police shots went wild but, at the first reply of the burglars McGarry was wounded in the face. A second bullet pierced his arm and a third brought him down with a wound in the head. He is not expected to recover. His companion pursued the burglars further, but they disappeared in Prospect street.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAIMED WITH CAUTION TO PEOPLE

Washington, Oct. 23.—The president today issued his annual proclamation naming Thursday, Nov. 29, as a day of Thanksiving, as follows:

The time of the year has come when, in accordance with the wise custom of our forefathers, it becomes my duty to set aside a special day of thanksgiving and praise to the Almighty, because of the blessings we have received, and of prayer that these blessings may be continued. Yet another year of widespread well-being has passed. Never before in our history or in the history of any other nation has a people enjoyed more abounding material prosperity than is ours—a prosperity so great that it should arouse in us no spirit of reckless pride, and least of all a spirit of heedless disregard of our responsibilities, but rather a sober sense of our many blessings, and a resolute purpose, under Providence, not to forfeit them by any action of our own.

Material well-being, indispensible though it is, can never be anything but the foundation of true national greatness and happiness. If we build nothing upon this foundation, then our national life will be as meaningless and empty as a house where only the foundation has been laid. Upon our material well-being must be built a superstructure of individual and national life, lived in accordance with the laws of the highest morality, or else our prosperity itself will in the long run turn out a curse instead of a blessing. We should be both reverently thankful for what we have received, and earnestly bent upon turning it into a means of grace and not of destruction.

Accordingly, I hereby set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and supplication, on which the people shall meet in their homes or their churches, devoutly acknowledge all that has been given them, and pray that they may in addition receive the power to use these gifts aright.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 22nd day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand, nine hundred and six, and of the Independence of the United States, the one hundred and thirty-first.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

By the president:

ELIHU ROOT, Secretary of State.

BARGE GETS A BIG BUMP

One of Pittsburg Fleet Slightly Damaged in the Harbor.

The Pittsburg Steamship company's barge No. 134 was damaged somewhat in a little wreck which occurred in the harbor, near the canal, this morning.

Tugs were conveying the barge, which came in light for ore, to the Missabe docks and in some manner she swung around across the bow of the steamer Kensington which was lying at anchor.

The steamer's anchor caught in the barge's side, breaking the anchor and punching a hole in the other vessel about amidships. The barge was pulled off by the tugs. The damage done was not so very serious and the barge will undergo permanent repairs here. It will take about three days to repair her.

She was brought up like lakes in tow of the steamer Mallejoa of Pittsburg fleet. Aside from the loss of her anchor, the Kensington was not injured.

The heavy sea which was rolling through the canal and across the harbor was probably responsible for the accident. No one was hurt aboard either vessel.

LAKE BOATS GO WEST.

Detroit, Oct. 23.—The steel passenger steamers, Chipewa and Iroquois, have been sold for $400,000 to the Puget Sound Day Line of Seattle, Wash., and will soon start from Detroit for the long journey down the St. Lawrence and around Cape Hern to Puget Sound. The steamer Indianapolis, recently bought by the same line, made the trip from Chicago to Seattle in fifty-one days. During the last season the Iroquois was operated on Lake Ontario and the Chippewa ra between Mackinac Island and Sault Ste. Marie.

The boats are almost duplicates and have a speed of eighteen miles an hour. They were built at Toledo, the Chippewa in 1900 and the Iroquois in 1901. The Iroquois is now at Detroit and the Chippewa at Cheboygan.

The sale was closed by George L. Craig of Toledo, who built the steamers, and T. H. Franklin of New York.

Capt. John Johnston and Chief Engineer C. F. Bishop, who took the Indianapolis to Seattle, will accompany the Iroquois as far as New York and then return here and take the Chippewa to Seattle.

Watterson is Here.

W. W. Watterson of Cleveland, superintendent of construction for the Pittsburg Steamship company, is spending a few days at the Head of the Lakes, mostly at the ship yards in Superior, where the Mataafa is being repaired.

He professes not to know what will be done with what remains of the steamer Lafayette, but says that satisfactory progress is being made on the other boats, all of which are recovering from the effects of last year's storm, via dry-dock treatment.

Huge Drydock For Detroit.

Detroit, Oct. 23.—The American Shipbuilding company has engaged engineers to plan a dry dock 612 feet long to be constructed at the company's Detroit plant. It is contemplated to have a dock large enough to accommodate the largest vessels on the Great Lakes, running diagonally across the ship yards from the present Shear dock to St. Aubin avenue, displacing the smaller one of the present two dry docks.

Jettisons Oats; Released.

Charlevoix, Oct. 3.—(Special to the Herald.)—The steamer McLouth ashore on Gull island reef, was released early today by the Manistique car ferry. About 50,000 bushels of oats, or a third of the cargo, was thrown overboard before the vessel floated. It is apparently uninjured. It is bound for Buffalo from Green Bay, Wis.

Charlesvoix, Oct. 23.—The steamer Shenandoah, which lost its rudder near Beaver Island light Sunday, was towed into Beaver harmor by the lighthouse tender Sumac at noon yesterday.

New Steamers Ordered.

Cleveland, Oct. 23.—President Wallace of the American Shipbuilding company has closed a contract with Michigan people for a steamer to be a duplicate of the Harry Coulby, to come out late next season and to cost $425,000. It will be 560 feet over all, fifty feet beam and thirty-one feet deep.

According to reports from Buffalo, President Pessano of the Great Lakes Engineering works at Detroit has secured an order from the Portland Transit company for two steamers to be duplicates of the steamers Ogdensburg and Rutland, which came out this year. The boats will be full Welland canal size.

Mr. Pessano also closed a contract with the Western Transit company for a package freighter to be a duplicate of the steamer Duluth.

Buffalo, Oct. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Cumberland, which arrived here today with iron ore, struck an old bridge abutment in the harbor and sank, blocking the channel. A wrecking crew is arranging to raise her.

Grain Shippers Fixed.

Cleveland, Oct. 23.—The freight market was quiet all around yesterday. Offerings of spot tonnage were light at upper lake ports and there was little chartering in ore or grain. Grain shippers at the Head of the Lakes are pretty well supplied with tonnage for this week's loading.

One Charter at Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—One charter—that of the Peck for corn to Midland at 1¾ cents—made up yesterday's business in the grain trade. Both demand and the supply of tonnage were very meager.

EXPECTS NORTHEASTER.

Opening Blizzard of Season May Visit Duluth in Few Hours.

The weather man expects Duluth will be visited by a disagreeable northeaster this evening, which will be accompanied by rain and possibly a quantity of snow. There will be a brisk to high wind and the temperature will be much colder.

This may be a part of the snow and wind storm which has been general all over the Western states during the last few days and if this in a fact, Duluth is probably in for a taste of bad weather. In some of the states visited by the storm it developed into the nature of a real blizzard with much snow and sleet.

Great Britain's Educational Bill.

There is a temporary suspension of hostilities in Great Britain over their educational bill, but which is sure to break out again when parliament meets this winter. The agitation has surpassed in duration, intensity and bitterness that of any other public question, dating back to 1870. It was in 1853 that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters was first compounded, and it succeeded because it contained true merit and deserved to succeed. It has been the standby in thousands of homes because of its efficacy in cases of dyspepsia, indigestion, nausea, headache, costiveness, biliousness, cramps, flatulency, bloating, poor appetite, colds, chills, female ills or general debility. We hope every sick man and woman will take the hint and try a bottle at once. You'll find it the best stomach medicine you've ever taken. Insist on Hostetter's.

DISTURBANCE AT MIDNIGHT

While acting in a disorderly manner near the corner of Fifth avenue east and Fourth street, last night at 12 o'clock, John Sobzak and Mike Czelke were placed under arrest. Frank Adamske and two other men attempted to interfere and for a time it looked as if the officer would fare badly, but he blew his whistle and summoned aid. The two disturbers, and Adamske were taken to headquarters, and this morning were each fined $5 and costs.

Otto Stab, claimed to be one of the other two men who escaped, was arrested this morning on a warrant, but entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of interfering with an officer.

IS WORKING SMOOTH GAME

The police department was this morning notified of a smooth game that is being worked on some local merchants.

A tall, slim, well dressed gentleman enters a store and states that he is buying supplies for a Great Northern construction gang. He makes a small purchase, and orders the goods sent to a box car standing in the yards. He then finds that he is short of change, and asks the proprietor to lend him a sufficient amount to bring his bill up to $10, and he will pay it all when the goods are delivered.

The stranger got away with it in two or three places in Duluth and Superior, and the police are now on the lookout for him.

RAILROADS

MORE PLANS OF THE SOO

Present indications point to the construction of the Soo road into Duluth, from two directions at the same time. One extension will come from the west and the other from the south, connecting Frederic, Wis., with the Head of the Lakes, and thus giving the most direct line between Duluth and the Twin Cities. It is believed that work on both lines will be started next year.

What route will the Soo follow in entering Duluth? Local railroad men are of the opinion that an agreement will be made between this road and the Wisconsin Central, whereby the former will use the latter's terminals here, running its trains into the Wisconsin Central depot, which is to be erected at the corner of Sixth avenue west and Superior street.

A very friendly feeling is understood to exist between the two companies, and as the Wisconsin Central has taken about the only available remaining right-of-way into the city, it seems both reasonable and probable that its tracks will be used by the Soo.

Two years ago the Soo and Wisconsin Central surveyors were in this district at the same time, and they are known to have been working in conjunction. The Soo is in direct opposition to the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, and it is hardly likely that it will use the Duluth terminals of either of these roads. If it can arrive at satisfactory terms with the Wisconsin Central, the problem of how to get into the heart of the city will be easily solved.

The Soo will in no way be a rival of the Central. On the contrary, it will bring business from the West to the latter, while the Central will bring Chicago business that might readily be transferred at Duluth to the Soo. The Soo at present has no Chicago connection, and a working agreement whereby each road would give business to the other could be brought about nicely.

If an arrangement along these lines is made, it will mean that three roads, the Wisconsin Central, the Soo and the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg, will all use the Wisconsin Central tracks in Duluth, for the Central and Rainy Lake roads are believed to have made an agreement that will result in the use of the same tracks by both lines.

Talk of the Soo extension to Duluth from Frederic has been going the rounds for the past two or three years. A crew of Soo surveyors are now working in the vicinity of Frederic, running a line northward. At first it was believed the extension would connect with the Sentry end of a logging road, extending toward Superior, making it necessary to build less than fifty miles of new track, but now it is understood that the line will cross the St. Croix river the extend into Pine county, Minn., thence north to the Head of the Lakes, joining the proposed extension from the West a little west of Duluth. Pine county is said to offer excellent territory for a new road.

The Frederic extension will afford a route to the Twin Cities that will be thirteen miles shorter than that of either the Great Northern or Northern Pacific. Every minute counts in the time made between the Head of the Lakes and St. Paul and Minneapolis, and friends of the Soo assert that this road would be able to corner the major portion of the Twin City business, at least the passenger end of it, as soon as the new road is completed.

It is thought likely that contracts for the construction of both Soo extensions will be let this winter, allowing actual construction work to begin in the spring as soon as weather conditions will permit.

NORTHERN RAILWAY CLUB.

Interesting Papers for Next Friday's Meeting---Good Season Ahead.

A paper of unusual interest, fitting in well at this particular season of the year, when the car shortage is so pronounced, will be read by J. H. Hicken of Superior, chief train dispatcher of the Great Northern, at the meeting of the Northern Railway club next Friday evening, Oct. 26. "Car Distribution" will be the subject.

"Mixed Metals" is the topic which will be discussed by James Gordon Malcolm of the National Lead company of St. Louis, Me. This paper also promises to contain much of interest to railroad men. The usual smoker and features of entertainment will be arranged for the amusement of members.

The club is starting in the winter season in good shape. It hasa large membership, and an active interest is displayed in all of its meetings. The annual meeting of the club will be held Friday evening, Nov. 23. This will be the first annual meeting of the organization. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year, and reports showing what has been accomplished during the first year of its existence will be read. A banquet will follow the business meeting. The membership of the club is now 450, and probably this will be increased before the November meeting.

An official account of the proceedings at the September meeting is just off the press. The booklet has its usual attractive appearance, and contains some interesting reading matter, as well as a good line of advertisements. The paper read by Arthur H. Krieger on "Radiation and Convection of Steam Surfaces" is printed in full, as is that of H. O. Olson on "Front End Construction." Mr. Krieger's paper has attracted widespread attention and comment and will be read with interest by those who were not present at the meeting.

The Northern Railway club has been peculiarly fortunate in having a good local field from which to draw able speakers on subjects of general interest to railroad men, and a number of strong papers for future meetings are now in the course of preparation. The coming season promises to be very successful all around for the club.

Railroad Yards Blockade.

The rush of fall business has resulted in a blockade in the Head of the Lakes terminals. The tie-up is particularly noticeable in the Superior railroad yards, which are so congested as to make it very difficult to move cars at all. The yard engines are working night and day, but seem unable to cope with the situation. An enormous amount of coal and grain is being moved. The rush season is now at its height, and the yard crews will have their hands full until the end of the year, taking care of the heavy business that is coming their way.

Austrians Jump Their Jobs.

Mr. Westendahl of the railroad contracting firm of Westendahl & Carlson, which has a contract for grading on the Southeastern line in the vicinity of Solon Springs, Wis., is in the city today trying to get a gang of laborers. They have had a gang of forty-two Austrians working for them since spring, but the foreigners quit the other day with scarcely an hour's notice, and with no reason other than that they wanted to get settled for the winter. The National Employment company is now getting together another bunch of men to send out on the work, which is about the easiest of any along the whole line, because of the fact that it is through a purely sandy country.

Northern Pacific Raises Wages.

The Northern Pacific road has made a voluntary raise in the salaries of men in the dispatching departments of $10 a month, effective Oct. 1.— The advance applies to chiefs, assistant chiefs and track men. About 120 men are affected by the raise, of whom nine are at the Head of the Lakes.

In your paper of Oct. 22, appeared a letter written by "X" in regard to the army canteen, which says that a few of the old soldiers still seem to think that they must have their beer and whisky.

This is in line with most of the correspondence and talks of the "X" type and is misleading as it insinuates that "beer and whisky" had formerly been sold at the army canteen, while it is a fact that "beer and light wines only" were to be had and were given to the soldiers under the government supervision.

The abolishment of the old time canteen now drives the soldier out of his camp and into the low dives of the neighborhood whenever he wants a drink, and these places find it more profitable and more convenient to sell their whisky with its 50 per cent of alcohol, instead of American beer with its 3 per cent of alcohol.

SHOW LARGE INCREASE

Commissioners Give Consideration to Athol M. Miller's Claim.

Seeking through the testimony of local real estate dealers to establish an estimate of value on the Superior street property owned by Athol M. Miller between Seventh and Eight avenues West, and wanted by the Wisconsin Central Railway company, the appraisers in the condemnation proceedings have brought to light a number of opinions which tend to show that there has been a big increase in the value of Bowery property within the last few years. The appraisers began yesterday to take testimony relative to Mr. Miller's property and expected to finish this afternoon.

Frank I. Salter, representing R. M. Newport & Co., S. I. Levine, who owns considerable centrally located property, J. A. Stephenson, a well known real estate man, and Athol M. Miller, testified before the commission this morning. Mr. Stephenson was called shortly before the noon adjournment.

The commissioners gave their attention to the triangular piece of property in the locality named which has a frontage of from 142 to 146 feet on Superior street, 134 feet on Michigan street and 64 feet on the avenue.

Mr. Miller bought the property in 1901 for about $5,000. He says that at that time he considered the property worth fully $100,000 and he thought he should get $75,000 for it were the property put on the present market.

W. M. Prindle testified that in his opinion the inside lots in the locality under consideration were worth $600 per front foot and that the corner lots are worth about $750 a front foot. He admitted that the last sale of lots, which he made in that locality was for $12,500, including a $1,500 building, which would figure out a sale on the basis of about $250 a front foot.

W. B. Silvey's opinions as to values were about the same as those of Mr. Prindle.

Henry Nolte thought the triangular piece of property ought to bring about $30,000 on the present market.

Frank Salter gave his opinion that about $900 a front foot for the inside property and $750 for the corners would be about the right prices for the Bowery property in the locality under consideration.

Mr. Miller says inside property, between Third and Fourth avenues west, on the lower side of Superior street, is worth about $1,500 a front foot, while that on the upper side is worth about $1,250 a front foot. He claimed that the same property was worth from $500 to $600 a front foot five and six years ago. He claimed his own property beyond Seventh avenue west had increased in value twice as fast.

Mr. Miller was under the impression that he bought the triangular-shaped property on the Bowery for $1,800 and assumed a $3,500 mortgage, but the records at the abstract office show that the mortgage was for only $1,400.

S. I. Levine, who testified this morning, said that property in the locality of the Miller property has been in great demand for store purposes in recent years because of the increase in business in that district. He claimed that during the past five years the Bowery property west of Fifth avenue has been in greater demand than that east of the same avenue. Mr. Levine asserted that the lots west of Fifth avenue are just as good as those on the east side, with the possible exception of a few of the big office properties.

As soon as the testimony is completed as regards the value of Mr. Miller's property, the appraisers will take up the remaining properties between Seventh and Sixth avenues west, among which is the Metropolitan Opera house building.

Among the owners interested is J. J. Murphy of Woodstock, one of the heavy out-of-town holders of Duluth realty. Mr. Murphy's holdings in Duluth have been variously estimated at from $800,000 to $1,000,000 in value. Mr. Murphy is in the city to attend the hearing.

The Superb Universal Steel Range

SUPERB UNIVERSAL

Absolutely the finest high-grade Steel Range on the market today—and we can prove it.

The Superb for 1906 has more improvements than any other steel range. It has these special features:

White Porcelain Lined Oven Door—Reflects light into the oven, will not discolor, and is practically indestructible.

Body of Range is made of the best extra heavy cold rolled polished steel, strongly riveted and interlined with asbestos, preventing radiation of heat, making the range more durable and saving fuel; ovens are large, quickly heated, and so well braced and riveted that plates will not warp or buckle. Heavy ornamental cast-iron base.

Broiler Attachment—This is an entirely new device and is attached to front key plate, whereby this plate is raised and lowered easily and quickly, allowing meats, etc., to be broiled directly over the fire and preventing the escape of smoke and odors into room. Can be used when adding fuel to fire.

Combination Check Draft and Pipe Damper, so made that either register, check or pipe damper may be operated entirely independent of each other to check fire or control heat in oven, a special feature found on Universal Ranges only. Pouch feed and draft register form cast part of left end of range.

Fire Box is adapted for burning all kinds of fuel, is fitted with duplex grate, which can be easily and quickly removed without disturbing other fire-box fittings, and which, when removed, forms a perfect grate for burning wood. The linings are extra heavy and well ventilated. Is fitted with fire box extension for wood. By removing end linings will take 27-inch wood.

Cast Iron Flue Back—which will not rust out, is attached with locked bolts, so that it can be removed at will and returned to place by simply removing the nuts on the outside.

Nickel Trimmings are the finest and most elaborate ever used in a steel range, and possess a whiteness and brilliancy only found in the Universal.

COOLEY ON GOOD ROADS

One of the features of the good roads meeting at Moose Lake last Saturday, which was attended by several citizens of Duluth who are interested in this excellent movement, was an address by George W. Cooley, engineer for the state highway commission, on "How to Make Good Roads." Mr. Cooley told of the organization of the highway commission and how counties can avail themselves of the special aid given by the state, and then proceeded to give valuable advice on the practical construction of roads, saying:

The highways of the county may be divided into three classes—the ordinary dirt road, the improved or gravel road and the perfect macadam highway. It is with the first of these that we must deal, as we will not be in a position for many years to pay the cost of construction of the more expensive highways, except in the near vicinity of large cities where their own personal interests require them to assist in the cost of construction. There are two principal requisites in the construction of an ordinary dirt road—first the drainage, second the foundation. In the ordinary sandy country less importance is placed on the former subject on account of the value of a certain amonut of moisture in an ordinary sandy road; but as a rule all excess water should be kept away from the road, and the condition of construction should be such that water may be easily and readily removed from the roadbed. Where drainage is necessary for a road, the ditches should always be kept open so as to carry the water to the nearest watercourse, and the road surface kept free from ruts, so as to prevent the accumulation of moisture on that part of the roadbed devoted to travel. The rain that falls on the road surface does not materially injure it, but the water that stands in ruts and low places is a continual menace to the safety of the highway. The foundation of the road, as the foundation of all structures, should be solid, hard, and as nearly as possible impermeable, and should consist throughout the entire width and to a reasonable depth of the same character of material. Sand should not enter into the construction of a clay road, nor vice versa, except under conditions which will provide for a thorough mixture of these materials. The practice of filling a hole in a sandy road with clay, or a hole in a clay road with sand, cannot be too strongly condemned. Nor can the practice of filling holes of either kind with sod taken from the side of the road. Sand and clay in proper portions can be made into an excellent road, always provided that the mixing is properly done under the direct supervision of some one who understands the use of such materials. It has been frequently the custom on sandy roads to place a layer of clay on the surface, leaving it to the actual travel to become mixed. The great objection to this practice is the long time resulted for a thorough mixing and the formation of holes, which tend to the partial destruction of the road.

As mentioned before, one of the most important factors in road maintenance is in keeping the water away from the surface of the road. This can only be done by providing for a slope on the surface, from the center toward the side. Now let me call attention to the ordinary custom of rounding up or turnpiking the road by running a road grader along the side and scraping the material up into the center. This certainly rounds up the road, but leaves it, as a former speaker has stated, more suitable for a potato patch than a highway. The road grader is a valuabe piece of machinery, but in its application it is too often wrongly used. All such grassy materia and vegetable matter of any kind should be thrown from the side of the road outward and carried away to widen out a fill in the low places or entirely wasted, as it has no value in road construction, except when thoroughly disintegrated or carefully mixed with sand. Neither should the road grader be used to remove wornout material washed from the road into the ditches, but that material should also be wasted or used for raising or widening the fills in the lower portions of the road. After all grassy material and vegetable matter is removed from the side of the road, the road grader may then very properly be used for raising the center of the road. As this process, however, produces a soft roadbed care must be taken to prevent the road from deteriorating under the action of travel. To this end the road should be carefully smoothed or planed after such turnpiking until after the weather and travel have compacked it to a condition which will enable it to shed water properly. The best implement for such purpose, and one of which every town should have half a dozen or more, is the ordinary drag. This drag may be made of a log ten or twelve inches in diameter and from seven to nine feet long, split in two and the parts separated about two feet, and then framed together after the manner of a wood rack, with their split faces toward the front. Hennepin county, the banner good roads county in the state, has been for years using drags on their roads and find the best and most convenient form of the drag as above described, except that the pieces are 4 by 6 timbers, framed together and provided with cutting edges of iron. This drag should be drawn along one side of the road in the same manner as the road grader is drawn, at an angle of about 45 degrees with the line of the road. The effect of the use of the drag is to destroy all ruts and low places and gradually produce a condition of smoothness and solidity of the surface. A drag of this kind is most satisfactorily used while the road is wet and should be used continuously as long as possible after a rain storm.

TWO YOUTHS IN BUTTE HAVE BECOME BANDITS

Butte, Mont., Oct. 23.—Apparently the "Amalgamated Order of Holdups," which has been doing a land office business in Butte and vicinity for several months, has reduced the age limit and taken into its ranks a few children.

At any rate, Arthur Hornberg, the 13-year-old son of M. A. P. Hornberg, a well-known business man, was held up Sunday night by a pair of youthful bandits who had a revolver almost as big as they were.

The young desperadoes conducted things in a decidedly workmanlike manner, not even forgetting to tell young Hornberg to "skiddoo" after they had rifled his pockets.

Hornberg says he was returning to his home about 8:30 when two boys on the other side of the street called upon him to come over to them.

"I did not do it at first," said young Hornberg, "and one of them pulled out a big, blue-looking gun and pointed it at me. It was a real pistol, all right. Neither of them wore masks, but I did not know either of them. After they held me up and took my watch and money, a girl living near by said she heard them quarreling over a division of the spoils and also saw their revolver."

CONFIRMS RUMOR OF BEEF MERGER

New York, Oct. 23.—That a $500,000,000 beef trust is in the course of organization, backed by English capital, has been confirmed by Frederick Sulzberger of the firm of Schwarzchild & Sulzberger.

While declining to enter into a discussion of the matter, Mr. Sulzberger said that his packing house had been invited to join, but had absolutely refused to be a party to the merger.

The Schwarzchild & Sulzberger company takes this stand because such a merger could only be operated in direct violation of the anti-trust law. Mr. Sulzberger would not admit having heard that the Western interests had endeavored to obtain capital from New York bankers and had been turned down by them for fear of the strong arm of the government.

Through one of the most prominent bankers of this city it was learned that an attempt had really been made to obain he money in this city. For business reasons, not one New York banker familiar with the scheme of consolidation of American packing plants would permit the use of his name.

That bankers here are amazed at the audacity of the promotion is shown by the fact that four of the most prominent bankers of this city were in conference not far from the Hotel Netherland. Each one agreed that it would be impossible to form a legal packing combination in this country.

LINEMAN IS BEING TRIED

The trial of Carl Iverson, an electrician accused of malicious destruction of property, is in progress before a jury in Judge Windom's court room today.

Iverson is an electrician in the employ of the Zenith Telephone company. He is charged with having bored a hole in the large trunk cable carrying the West Duluth lines of the Duluth Telephone company.

The men in the employ of the Zenith company are union men, while those employed by the Bell company are nonunion, and the feeling between them is very bitter at times.

On various occasions complaints have been made of the cutting of wires and the damaging of cables, and it culminated in the arrest of Iverson last week.

He entered a plea of not guilty, and his trial is in progress. He is represented by Attorney Alfred Jaques and the prosecution is being conducted by Assistant City Attorney McKeon.

FOUND DEAD UNDER WAGON.

Load Fell Upon Rosengren and Crushed Him to Death.

Alexandria, Minn., Oct. 23.—Andrew Rosengren was found dead under his wagon about one and a half miles east of Brandan. He had been in Alexandria for a load of baled hay, and when found the load had tipped off the wagon, which afterwards righted itself. The lines had become tangled in the feet of Rosengren and the horses had stood in the road for hours. Coroner Hensel was notified, but, as it was a clear case of accident, no inquest was held.

Rosengren and Martin Holt had been in Alexadria getting supplies to ship to the woods where they expected to carry on logging operations this winter. Holt remained in Alexandria and Rosengren was to return here for another load. The dead man left a family at Brandon.

CHURCHES RUN FOR THE RICH

St. Louis, Oct. 23.—Dr. William W. Boyd, who resigned from the pastorate of the Second Baptist church in December, 1904, and soon afterward went abroad, recently returned, and yesterday gave out his reason for having left the ministry, saying:

"It is impossible for the preacher to preach his convictions. The tendency of the modern fashionable church is wholly to subserve the interests of the rich. That is why I have quit the ministry."

Dr. Boyd said he would not again accept a regular pastorate, but would preach whenever invited to do so, providing he would be permitted to give expression to his honest convictions.

SPENT NIGHT ON WOODPILE

Three Turtle River Girls Run Away From Home.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Threatened with being sent to the state reform school, Lillie Forkey, aged 15; Sadie Stone, aged 13, and Elnora Stone, aged 8, left their homes at Turtle River Sunday forenoon, walked to Farley, thence to Lavina, and after vainly searching for a house in which to sleep, spent the night on a woodpile, being chilled and nearly frozen and suffering terribly until the Minnesota & International train brought them to this city yesterday morning.

The oldest girl, Lillie Forkey, is the daughter of Wallace Forkey, a carpenter who lives at Turtle River, and the younger girls are the children of Joseph Stone, a well-known character who has formerly lived in Bemidji. The girls stated that they had been threatened at Turtle River with being sent to the reform school and also with being expelled from the public school; for what reason they claimed they did not know. Rather than take the chance of being sent to the state school, they decided to leave the town and come to Bemidji.

SAFE BURGLARIZED.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 23.—Burglars blew the safe of Nelson & Olson's hardware store at Middle River and secured $200 in cash and valuable notes and papers. Olson was village treasurer and a part of the money taken belonged to the village. Money belonging to the Middle River Hardware company also was in the safe, but the drawer in which it was contained was not disturbed.

BABY COVERED WITH SORES

Would Scratch and Tear the Flesh Unless Hands Were Tied—Wasted to a Skeleton—Awful Suffering for Over a Year—Grew Worse Under Doctors—Skin Now Clear.

WOULD HAVE DIED BUT FOR CUTICURA.

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh.

"He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk. My Aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. So great was her faith in it that she gave me a small piece of Soap to try and a little of the Ointment. I took it home without any faith, but to please her I tried it, and it seemed to dry up the sores a little.

"I sent to the drug store and got a cake of the Soap and a box of the Ointment and followed the directions, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since.

"He is now strong and healthy, and I can sincerely say that only for your most wonderful remedies my precious child would have died from those terrible sores. I used only one cake of Soap and about three boxes of Ointment. (signed) Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D., No. 1, Woodville, Conn, April 22, 1905."

CAUGHT IN A SHAFT.

Chisholm, Minn., Oct. 23.—Vera Kneebon, aged 7 years, and her brother Lincoln, aged 14 years, children of T. H. Kneebon, received very painful injuries in the carpenter shop of the Monroe mine by being caught and thrown to the ground by a shaft which runs the machinery.

They were rendered unconscious by the fall, which broke the girl's arm in two places. They were also painfully bruised about their bodies. At the time of the accident no one was at work in the shop, but the cries of the children when they were first caught were heard by people near by, who at once went to the shop and found the little victims on the floor senseless.

NEWS FROM THE WEST END

GETS INTO A BAKERY

Cow Creates Havoc in West End Dealer's Supply.

Cows are very useful animals, but some residents of the West end have come to the conclusion that they are great pests as well. Among these are Theodore E. Dahljelm, proprietor of a bakery at 2914 West Third street, and Sergeant Robert J. Gillon of the police department, who lives at 2629 West Third street.

If they held such ideas before, they were certainly intensified last Friday. A rude cow visited both and left a trail like a marauding Confederate guerilla before the fall of Richmond.

The animal casually strolled into Sergt. Gillon's front yard during that excellent officer's absence from home, and proceeded to consume such flowers as had weathered the frosts. It was not so much the loss of the flowers that the sergeant's family deplored as was the fact that the cow punched many holes in the lawn with her four feet.

With only women on guard, the worst the cow got at Gillon's was a determined "shooing." Then it went to Dahljelm's bakery, entering by the back way. Oh, this cow was a regular bovine Raffles.

It seems that Mr. Dahljelm makes a specialty of the manufacture of a certain kind of hard-tack which finds much favor in the West end and which in looks resembles a doughnut on which a mastodon has rolled and flattened out.

Mr. Dahljelm is said to be greatly behind in his orders for this delicacy. Some of it was standing in barrels in the back room of his place of business, ready for delivery. The cow espied the barrels upon entering the aforementioned back room and soon developed as much of a taste for the hard-tack affairs as any West ender. She appeared to have got ten away with the two barrels without any great effort.

After leaving the rear room of the bakery shop, the cow went to the barn connected therewith. There she was found. The empty barrels and pieces of broken hard tack in the shop caused a search for the thief and an unmistakable trail led to the stable.

The cow was locked in the barn and a hurry call made for the pound-master. That official arrived in due time and took charge of the culprit.

The twentieth anniversary of the organization of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Swedish Baptist church was celebrated at the church Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Almen, who for almost ten years has been president of the organization, presided, and among the speakers were Rev. A. Edstom, pastor of the church; Rev. J. W. Loughridge, pastor of the Central Baptist church, and Miss Emily Matteson, missionary in Superior for the Women's Baptist Home Mission society.

The reports of Mrs. A. Thoren, secretary, and Mrs. Fred Falcen, treasurer, as well as that of the president, showed the society to be in good condition.

At the close of the celebration farewells were said to two prominent families in the church, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Johnegren, who leave for Portland, Or. They were presented with gifts by members of the church.

McGAUHEY IS SPEAKER

Two Harbors Pastor Gives Sermon in Second Presbyterian Church.

Evangelistic Services Will be Held All of This Week.

Rev. John McGaughey of Two Harbors was the principal speaker at the evangelistic services held last evening in the Second Presbyterian church, 1515 West Superior street.

"Conditions for a Revival" was his topic and he took it up in a comprehensive and entertaining style. He had no apologies to offer for the revival movement. He declared that it was just as important and quite as sensible to so stimulate interest in religion and make the thoughtless take heed as it was to adopt similar methods in business. He pointed out the fact that were it not for the stimulation that business gets from careful watchers all the time, it would be very unprofitable.

Rev. Mr. McGaughey declared that humility was one of the conditions for a revival; that people must make themselves humbly receptive, but at the same time be in a position to pray, in order to enjoy a pure Christian life. Personal purity counted a whole lot, he said and the thrusting aside of all sin was absolutely necessary.

The speaker was introduced by Rev. S. F. Sharpless, pastor of the church, who has the evangelistic services this week in charge.

Prof. Benjamin F. Butts, the well known New York singer, sang "The Holy City" very effectively. He has organized a chorus choir, which will be heard during the rest of the week.

Rev. Mr. McGaughey will speak tonight and tomorrow night and Rev. S. A. Jameson, pastor at large of the Duluth Presbytery, will be the speaker Thursday evening. The speaker for Friday evening has not been determined upon, but an effort is being made to secure an evangelistic worker of national reputation.

NEW BILL PLEASES.

The first bill at the Bijou theater booked by the International Theater company, of which the little vaudeville house is now a member, is giving great satisfaction to the patrons. The prices have been increased slightly, but the popularity of the theater has in no wise diminished.

The Laffell Trio, triple bar artists, have an act replete with astonishing tricks that are seldom given by performers in the same line of work. Quite as novel is the turn contributed by Contino and Lawrence, "the upside down dancers."

Maybelle Gage has a pleasing soprano voice and she has used good judgment in the selection of her numbers. Will Vidocq, for years the partner of Nat. Haines of "Gee, gee, get up" fame, also appears alone and makes good with a monologue.

Potter and Harris do some stunts on the Roman rings which are entertaining for those who care for that sort of thing, and the Rolands, who call themselves "society entertainers," furnish an interesting ten or fifteen minutes.

Jack O'Toole sings "When the Flowers Bloom in the Spring" to the accompaniment of colored views, and the moving pictures concern "Wanted—a Nurse" and "The Butterfly Catchers."

"THE WOMAN HATER."

Harry Beresford will appear at the Lyceum tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening in a comedy, "The Woman Hater." It is said to be so full of ludicrous situations that no audience can fail to be convulsed. Held as a woman-hater, Samuel Bundy, to the astonishment of his friends, puts aside his aversion to the ladies, and selects Mrs. Joy sion to the ladies, and selects Mrs. Joy sion as his bride-elect. He becomes so intoxicated with his new found happiness, that in his exuberance of spirits, he becomes entangled with other ladies. Before he realizes what has happened he finds that he is engaged to three. Of course, his position is one that requires strategy and even daring. Besides his own troubles he is mixed up with the love affairs of his nephew, Tom Ripley, and on top of that his friend, Prof. Horace Mulbridge, imposed upon him the duty of helping him out of a secret engagement which he has entered into with one of the very ladies to whom Bundy had successfully proposed. It is plainly evident that Bundy has his hands as well as his heart full, and he is kept busy explaining with artful falsehoods. The whole affair has half way unsettled the reason of Mulbridge, and his sister, who is one of the Bundy fiancees, decides to have her brother placed in a private insane asylum. Unfortunately Mulbridge and Bundy wear the same shade of trousers, and by mistake Bundy is taken to the asylum. His expostulations and attempts to escape are extremely ludicrous. To cap the climax the lady whom he really wishes to marry thinks he is crazy also, and although he has frightened the others out of his way he is about to lose his sweetheart also. Of course explanations follow and all ends happily.

A FETCHING SONG.

The song, "Nancy Brown," made Marie Cahill famous and the Yankee Doodle girls are singing one at the Metropolitan this week that is bound to have a vogue. It is very pretty and something after the order of "Nancy Brown." It is sung by Clara Whitney and chorus of Yankee Doodle Girls. The girls are dressed in tight-fitting svelte costumes of Quaker grey and their heads are adorned with sub-bonnets of the same hue. The number is a very fetching one and has received many encores at every performance. The Yankee Doodle company is here for all the week.

CORNHUSKING PROBLEM

Claimed to Have Been Solved by Two Janesville Men.

Janesville, Wis., Oct. 23.—A. M. Hollenbeck and Vernon McDole, Janesville young men, claim to have solved the cornhusking problem which has been the bane of harvester manufacturers.

Eight years ago these two Janesville men started to seek a solution to the problem. They have in that time built and rejected six machines. The seventh has just been completed. The machine was given a practical demonstration recently on the farm of John Hugunin in La Prairie.

The automatic standing cornhusker is operated by an eighteen-horsepower gasoline engine. The snapping rolls which take the ears from the stalk are upright and constitute one of the distinctive features of the mechanism. The two "noses" with almost incredible rapidity and thoroughness seize the ears of corn and convey them to the interior of the machine where the husking process is gone thru and the cleaned ears are then delivered to the crib by the elevator.

The inventors say the machine will harvest twenty acres of corn a day and perform the labor of thirty men.

TAXPAYERS RELIEVED

Corporations Pay More and the Citizens Less in Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 23.—Wisconsin taxpayers were yesterday relieved of the burden of about $1,500,000 by the remission of the state tax and one-half of a mill school tax. The decision was reached at a meeting of the state board of assessment, composed of Governor Davidson, Secretary Houser and Treasurer Kempf.

This is the first time in the history of the state that half of a mill school tax has been remitted. It was made possible by large payments on the part of the railroad companies, insurance corporations and other public-service concerns, under the increased taxation system in Wisconsin.

New York, Oct. 23.—The annual report of the Standard Milling company for the year ending Aug. 31, 1906, shows earnings, after charges and a 2 per cent preferred dividend, of $150,566, or 3.27 per cent on the common stock. The earnings show a marked improvement over those of 1905, but fall far short of 1904. No mention of operating expenses is made in the report. An insurance reserve of $208,867 is shown against $174,109 for 1905 and $123,210 for 1904. The following table shows the earnings for 1906:

Earnings	$468,150
Charges	179,850
Net earnings	288,300
Preferred dividend	187,795
Earned on common	150,505
Earned on common, per cent	3.27

Standard	$126,010
N. C. M. company	89,959
H. J. J. M. company	245,453
D. S. Millini company	9,388
Total	$468,150

The earnings of the Northwestern Consolidated Milling company show no increase, but the Hecker-Jones-Jewel Milling company makes a better showing. The Duluth-Superior Milling company's business showed improvement over last year, but was much smaller than 1904. A dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock has been paid the past two years.

AS SEEN BY THE ENGLISH

Times Cannot Account for Hearst and Treats Him Editorially.

London, Oct. 23.—London is taking unusual interest in the canvass of William Randolph Hearst for the post of governor of the state of New York. The idea seems to obtain that Mr. Hearst has succeeded in placing himself at the head of the "forces of discontent" which have massed 3,000,000 votes in Germany, under the name of Socialism, and which had they known their power might even have captured the last British parliament under the banner of the labor party. And strangely enough the opinion appears to prevail that Mr. Hearst, at the head of forces of this character, may be more powerful in defeat than in victory—that if elected he might be handicapped by the routine of office and find that patronage is a two-edged sword that cuts both ways, but that without the weight of an office upon his shoulders he might be able to keep up a more aggressive fight than if elected governor, where to a greater or less extent he might find his hands tied.

Curiosity—a feeling that in victory or defeat this spectacular young editor may yet cut a wide swath in the history of the world, even though he should never be elected president or governor, appears to be the paramount opinion as reflected by the English and Continetal press.

"The nomination of Mr. Hearst as candidate for the governorship of New York by the Democratic state convention—whatever else it may be—is an event of unquestionable piquancy. Mr. Hearst is one of the best-abused men in the Union. He has just been described by the North American Review as a 'living and glaring reproach to American civilization.' The New York Evening Post, commenting on his nomination, says there is no longer any question of party platforms; it is enough to point to Mr. Hearst and Mr. Hughes, the Republican nominee, that bid the people look on this picture and on that. As to Mr. Hearst's methods of influencing the Democratic convention, the correspondents at Bualffo have exhausted themselves in denunciation. The charges brought against him are the same as those that were bandied about on the eve of the presidential election of 1904. When Mr. Hearst carried the Democratic convention of Iowa on that occasion his delegates were greeted with cries of 'Brass collar' and 'How much did it cost?' It was just the same at Buffalo. We are told that no political body has ever sunk lower into degradation than this Democratic gathering. The corruption is declared to be so flagrant, and Mr. Hearst so bankrupt in political honor, that it is assumed every self-respecting person must vote against him, no matter what his party. Mr. Jerome, the district attorney, who was Mr. Hearst's chief rival in the convention, has already declared that he will support the Republican candidate.

"To the disinterested onlooker all this is simply bewildering. Mr. Hearst is denounced as a traitor, a disgrace to journalism, a traitor, a disgrace to corruption, an agitator who appeals to the lowest passions. No American politician has been more widely and categorically denounced. Yet the Democratic convention of New York in the whole Democratic party—deliberately nominates this man for the governorship, and thereby makes it possible, if scarcely probable, that he may become the Democratic candidate for the presidency two years hence and in the sequel, perhaps president of the Union. Are the members of this Democratic convention the only wise men among a blind people, and have they detected a kindred spirit in Mr. Hearst? It does not seem likely, and yet so general is the abuse of Mr. Hearst that it is almost the only alternatice to the darker stories, from offering a theory on this extraordinary. Outsiders are, however, fairly absolved situation. It is almost the only alternative to the wonder, not untinged with other sentiments, at the sporting instinct of a Democratic convention which chooses a a candidate for whom no 'decent Democrat' will vote.

"Who and what is Mr. Hearst, if we put aside for a moment the epithets with which he has been so freely covered? For so notorious a politician he is young—only43—and the stress which is still constantly laid upon his youth seems to suggest that the American public have not yet got over the shock of his first appearance. That may be dated back to 1895, perhaps, when at the age of 32, he plunged in to the larger world of journalism and politics and bought the New York Journal. Till then Mr. Hearst had been only a young Westerner of ample means. Now he transferred his activities to the East, or rather extended them over both sides of the continent, for he controls papers with great circulations in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angles. Mr. Hearst's newspapers have always born a special stamp. Of all 'yellow' journals—a term easier to appreciate than describe—none have been yellower than they; and Mr. Hearst, as their proprietor, has earned about as uneviable a notoriety as could fall to any man in such a position. What he is, apart from his newspapers, very few people seem to know. It is one of the sources of complaint that his personal views are entirely unknown. It is suggested that he does not possess any. As a member of congress he did not speak, and he seems seldom to have taken part in a division. Yet we are told that in this campaign he has repeatedly made forcible and successful speeches.

"Marked ability of some kind he must have; for no man entirely lacking in ability and magnetism could control the great business interests which Mr. Hearst controls and makes his way to the forefront of politics through a perfect blaze of reprobation. But what is known about him at present is little compared with the unknown. Under the searching test of the next two years we shall see what he is really made of.

"Betting on the election has already begun in New York, and 2 to 1 is apparently all that the 'decent' party are prepared to stake upon their chance. In fact, Mr. Hughes, the Republican, is a strong and energetic candidate, who made a great reputation in the late insurance inquiry and is known to be although some experienced observers believe that Mr. Hearst stands the better chance. According to some accounts, the conservative Democrats, who mean to fight Mr. Hearst, are deceiving themselves. He has the big battalions of his party with him. The 'East' side of New York, a vast population of immigrants aliens, barely educated and the prey of unscrupulous organizations like Tammany, are expected to go solid for Mr. Hearst. Large numbers, both of the lower middle class and of agricultural population, are thought likely to vote for him—and for quite disinterested motives of reform.

"That Mr. Hearst and Tammany are now allies is perhaps the most important fact in the situation; and it is also the most remarkable, for a month or two ago, Mr. Murphy, the Tammany leader, was being caricatured as a convict in Mr. Hearst's papers. What is to be the outcome of all these paradoxes? If Mr. Hearst secures the governorship for theDemocrats, it will be a sign that New York state may very probably go Democratic in the presidental election. Mr. Hearst, again, as the successful candidate for the governorship might in that case well be chosen as Democratic candidate for the presidency—Despite Mr. Bryan's elaborate combinations."

COG ROAD UP MONT BLANC.

Alpinists May Soon be Able to Climb by Electricity.

Geneva, Oct. 23.—A serious scheme to build a railway almost to the summit of the Mont Blanc range has been prepared by a Swiss syndicate, and has received the approval of the French government. The projected railway will provide "the greatest thrill on earth," taking passengers to the roof of Europe.

The syndicate which has obtained the concession is at present completing an aerial line to the summit of the Wetterhorn. It now proposes to build a simlar line from the valley of Chamonix to the summit of the Aiguille du Midi, a peak nearly 12,000 feet high, in the center of the Mont Blanc range.

The line will skirt a score of glaciers, dozens of crevasses and unfathomable precipices, and will give those who do not care for climbing the Alps on foot an idea of the dangers and the pleasures of mountaineering.

The electricity which will work the line will be generated by the River Arve. The coaches will be specially constructed to withstand the great changes of cold and heat.

McDOUGALL

KITCHEN CABINET SEASON

The Famous McDougall Kitchen Cabinets

Special Exhibition For One Week

We have just received a solid carload of the McDougall Kitchen cabinets. These will be on special exhibition all this week at our store and we want every lady who is interested in up-to-date ideas, in having an ideal kitchen, in sanitary living and good housekeeping, to see these cabinets.

No kitchen, however elaborate, is complete without one; no kitchen, however modest, but needs one. They cut in half the time and strength now spent in cooking. No cabinets made can compare with the McDougall in finish, convenience or beauty. They are the best and consequently the cheapest.

All McDougall compartments are dust, mouse and insect proof. This means a big saving in the course of a year. They are beautifully made of Satin Walnut, handsomer than oak, wear better and add more to the kitchen. They have polished metal tops, drop leaves if you like, dust proof drawers, roller-bearing flour bins, mouse and dust proof. All spices are kept in screw top cans—this is the only practical way of keeping spices; the flavor is all retained and does not get from one spice to another as when kept in drawers. Cabinets have sugar bins, shelves, large compartment for kettles, dishes, food, etc., large linen drawers, drawers for cutlery, card indexes for the recipes you use most—a kitchen want list—and have heavy easy rolling casters so you can move cabinet and sweep under it.

Did you ever look into the tiny compact kitchen of a dining car—how compact and handy everything is—how quickly the work can be done? That comes from having system, from having everything in its place and not having to run around for it.

You can have the same system in your own kitchen if you own a McDougall kitchen cabinet. It will save you hours of work, make the work you do a pleasure, and will more than pay for itself in a short time.

10 pounds of salt.
10 pounds of buckwheat flour.

NEGRO WARD OF NATION

Bishop Walden Calls on Whole Country to Take Action.

Ohio Methodists Scored by San Francisco Minister.

Cincinnati, Oct. 23.—At the meeting of the Methodist ministers of this section, yesterday, Bishop John M. Walden said of the race problem:

"This country will not fill its obligations until the nation comes to consider its relation with the negro as that of a guardian to a ward. This problem is not of the North or the South alone, it is a problem for the nation. During the days before the war, the idea that the negro was to have, when freed, his forty acres of land from the government was freely circulated. But when freed no forty acres came with it.

"There are three things that enter into the negro question—the thought of implanting in the colored man the idea of industry, the idea of honesty, the idea of home making. The colored man has been charged with laziness, but he will make a good business man and a good citizen if we only give him the chance. But the problem is with us, individually, with the Methodist Episcopal church collectively, and with the great United States government in a paternal sense."

It was voted to send the address to President Roosevelt, and ask him to act on it.

Rev. F. M. Larkin of San Francisco made a bitter attack upon the Methodists of Ohio for the small amount of money contributed to the stricken Methodists of San Francisco, saying:

"Not only have the Ohio Methodists failed to give money to the earthquake sufferers of our faith, but they refuse even to hear me, sent here for the purpose to present the matter to them in their pulpits. It is a shame. I have sent out letters to churches all over Ohio begging to be allowed to come and tell of the need of the earthquake sufferers of Methodist faith, and out of 100 of my requests for a hearing, I got three invitations.

"From San Francisco my brother ministers write: 'Unless you send us aid, we perish. We cannot preach to starving people, nor tell of the goodness of God in poverty stricken homes. Help us; we cannot maintain churches or hold together congregations without money assistance now.'

"One Congregational church in San Francisco received from its outside constituency $85,000, and the sixty-four Methodist Episcopal churches, burned and scarred, have received altogether $70,000. Think of that!"

JAKE'S FRIENDS CHILLY TO COLE

St. Paul, Oct. 23.—It is stated on good authority that Senator Moses E. Clapp, who was in St. Paul over Sunday between speeches for the Republican state ticket, is indignant over the treatment accorded him, and more especially Gubernatorial Candidate A. L. Cole in the Seventh congressional district, which was almost solid for Jacobson in the Duluth convention, and has never forgiven the defeat, apparently.

Messrs. Cole and Clapp have been touring the Seventh together, and regret to report that there seems little prospect of being able to hold that district in line for Cole this fall. At Marshall, a town ordinarily so strongly Republican that it even gave Bob Dunn a plurality, no one met the speaker at the depot, or had the courtesy to introduce them to the people of Marshall, and they had to tramp around introducing themselves. They had no opportunity to get a crowd together for a speech. They had scarcely better treatment, Senator Clapp says, at Granite Falls, and Tracy was also a frost.

SEES PERIL FOR HUGHES

New York, Oct. 23.—Chairman Timothy Woodruff of the Republican state central committee has sent out a vigorous warning to Republicans leaders throughout the state against over-confidence. He appeals vigorously to party workers not to belittle the strength of the opposition. Democratic leaders consider this a presage of victory.

Beginning his third and last tour of the state, Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for governor made two speeches at Kingston last night. He made a special plea for the Democratic votes, saying: "The political cockroaches and croton bugs of the Democratic party are not those with whom the Republicans are ashamed to associate in this campaign."

Continuing, he said: "I want to see Albany clean, and corrupt lobbying done away with. I want to see it understood that nothing can be accomplished except on a fair presentation of the case upon its merits, and further, that no individual and no corporation in the state of New York is powerful enough or rich enough to get anything at Albany which is not in the interest of all the people."

The announcement that Mr. Hearst would address a meeting held under the auspices of the Independence League last night, served to draw a crowd that jammed Madison Square garden. He was greeted enthusiastically.

Mr. Hearst declared that he would come down the Harlem river with a majority and that all the votes he would get in the city would be "velvet." He believed, he said, that he would be elected by a majority of 150,000.

"Mr. Hearst continued: "While I have been away, New York newspapers have been lying as industriously and persistently and recklessly as ever. They have had this time a little assistance on the side from 'Boss' Murphy, the gentleman whom the newspapers have declared to be so enthusiastically for me. Murphy says that Judge Rosalski had been put on our ticket for pay, but when Murphy was put on oath before the grand jury he was compelled to retract and admit that the statement was unfounded and reckless.

"If the lying newspaper proprietors and editors of this town were all put on oath before the grand jury there is hardly a political statement that they made during the whole of this campaign that they would not be compelled to retract and admit false in every particular. There has never been a more disgraceful spectacle in American journalism than this long line of envious editors viciously howling their lies to heaven, like dogs baying at the moon. There has never been a more pitiful sight than the crowd of New York newspaper proprietors, degenerate exponents of commercialism rather than journalism, who are spotted from head to foot with the mire in which they have been wallowing, and who frantically follow Tallyrand's advice: 'Throw mud, throw mud, some of it may stick.'

"I don't want the support of the 'Captain Kidds,' the so-called captains of industry. I defy them and they can vote for Hughes if they want to. I want to be elected by the people. I do not ask any man in this audience for his vote, but I want his good opinion."

TWO HARBORS BOY SERIOUSLY SHOT

By Another Boy While They Were Playing "Soldiers."

Two Harbors, Minn., Oct. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlson, was seriously, if not fatally, injured Sunday by being shot by a son of Mrs. Strand, while at play. The boys were playing "Soldiers," and had a 22-caliber rifle, which Strand, in play, pointed at Carlson, and pulled the trigger, not knowing it was loaded. The bullet struck Carlson in the side, passed through his liver and out of his back.

GIVES ELEVATOR MEN A HEARING

The board of review of the city of Superior will hold a meeting next Monday to which the representatives of the various elevator companies have been cited to appear and show cause why the grain found in the warehouses May 1 last should not be assessed by the city.

Last year $730,000 was assessed against the grain in elevators in Superior and the taxes have never been collected. The city instituted a suit for the recovery of the taxes and the case will come up at the November term of the circuit court. The city assessor of Superior omitted the assessment against the grain in elevators from the tax roll of the city this year on account of the case pending and anothers in which Judge Parish is said to have held that grain is not taxable.

When his books were turned over to the board of review the assessor explained his position and the board of review will push the matter further.

WILL NOT GIVE UP ITS FIGURES

At the request of F. A. Ross, attorney for the Superior Water, Light & Power company, the hearing yesterday for the purpose of giving Mayor Linley an opportunity to inquire into the gas question, was postponed until Friday. Mr. Ross claimed that he had not time to inquire into the case and desired to look up some supreme court decision which is said to involve questions similar to those that have arisen in the investigation started by Mayor Linley.

Some days ago the gas company officials refused to furnish the mayor's special committee with figures, showing the cost, production and income of gas in Superior. A hearing was instituted, and the mayor had the officials subpoenaed to appear and testify.

If the supreme court decision will protect the gas company from giving out the information sought, it is expected that the city will endeavor to get relief through legislature.

PRISONER ESCAPES.

Pipestone, Minn., Oct. 23.—William Bailey, a Murray county prisoner who has been confined in the Pipestone county jail, gained his liberty about 7 o'clock Sunday evening by cutting off a heavy padlock that held the iron grating to one of the jail windows. Though his escape was discovered within a few minutes after he got away, the darkness made it easy for him to elude pursuit.

Piles

A Trial Package Mailed Free to All.

The rectum, like the mouth, is lined with that soft, satiny material known as mucous membrane. Piles is a disease of that membrane and the blood vessels that lie under it.

Fissure and Fistula affect the same membrane, and belong to the same family. Pyramid Pile Cure slipped into the bowel, melt and spread themselves over the diseased and painful surface and act just as a salve would if the trouble was on the outside of the body and could be easily seen and gotten at.

The immediate relief they give even in the most agonizing cases will startle you, as it has already startled many thousands of "doubting Thomases" before you, who have tried everything and sent for the sample package, firmly convinced that they would again be disappointed.

But they weren't. Pyramid Pile Cure don't disappoint. They cure. They are for sale at all druggists at 50 cents a box, and are worth an even hundred to the person who needs them.

"This is to certify that I have used three 50c boxes of Pyramid Pile Cure and it has benefited me more than any other pile remedy I have ever used. I used the sample which you sent me, together with the three 50c boxes, and I am so much better, but not entirely cured, as my case is one of twenty-three years' standing. I did not expect to be cured all at once. I had almost lost all hope of ever getting any remedy that would help me until I tried Pyramid Pile Cure. I believe they will entirely cure me if I continue their use, which I intend doing so long as I can get the money to pay for them. I do not think any one ever suffered very much more than I have at times. Then I would be so nervous I could not get any ease in any position I could place myself.

"I cannot express my gratitude for the good your medicine has done me. I will continue to tell my friends of their merit. Yours, Emma Bodenhamer, Bedford, Ind."

Or, if you want to prove this matter at our expense, before purchasing, send your name and address to the Pyramid Drug Co., 56 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Michigan, and receive a trial package free by return mail.

SEEK SHARE IN MILLION

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 23.—Legal formalities necessary to attach $1,000,000, the property of the Hardford Life Insurance company and the Security Trust company, both incorporated under the laws of this state were carried out by the sheriff yesterday afternoon under a suit brought against the companies by attorneys representing 20,000 certificateholders in various parts of the country to compel the distribution of a so-called safety fund.

The Hartford Life Insurance company, which ceased active business in 1899, organized on the stockholding plan in 1867. Since 1899 it has continued to collect premiums on outstanding certificates as if it were continuing business, it being alleged that in 1899, the outstanding risks amounted to $99,000,000. Prior to 1880, the company invented a plan of assessment life insurance which was designated on "The safety fund plan," by which $3 was collected on each $1,000 of insurance and put into a fund, the surplus of which, when the fund reached $1,000,000, was to be distributed among the certificate holders.

The plaintiffs claim that the stockholders having authorized the collection of the assessment for the "safety fund" since 1899, although the company had ceased to write any more insurance, have failed to make a distribution of the fund and that the intent is to keep that fund for their own advantage through a final wiping out of certificates due to lapses following increased and exorbitant assessments.

COLE AT BEMIDJI.

Speeches Also Delivered by Senator Clapp and A. G. Bernard.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Republican rally was held at the opera house last night and was attended by a crowd that comfortably filled the house, but lacked fifty or more of being as large as the audience that greeted Governor Johnson on the occasion of his visit here, recently. Senator Clapp, A. L. Cole and A. G. Bernard spoke, and the meeting lasted more than two hours.

Senator Clapp arrived in the city from Duluth on the afternoon train and was met at the depot by a few of the local Republicans. Mr. Cole had decided to visit Walker and went to his home town from Duluth Sunday night, and spent Monday there, arriving in Bemidji at 6 in the evening. A delegation of about twenty Walker citizens came to Bemidji to hear Mr. Cole speak, and the band and a delegation of citizens from Cass Lake were also present.

Henry Funkley, Republican candidate for county attorney, presided at the meeting.

At the close of the meeting a reception was held in the club rooms of the Crookston Lumber company.

"WHITE SLAVE" TRADE'S FOES

Paris, Oct. 23.—President Roosevelt has cabled to Ambassador McCormick designating Secretary Vignaud of the American embassy to represent the United States at the congress for the suppression of the "white slave trade," which opened here yesterday. The primary object of the congress is to secure the effective co-operation of the various national committees, especially for the protection of emigrant women at the ports, and also uniformity in legislation providing for the punishment of traffickers in "white slaves."

HEROINE AT STEVENSON.

Austrian Child Saved From Being Run Over by Automobile.

Stevenson, Minn., Oct. 23.—This village has a heroine in little 12-year-old Beda Crosley, daughter of Jorn Crosley. Last Saturday about 5:30 p. m. while coming down Broadway she saw a big automobile coming down the street at a terrific rate, while right in its path stood a little Austrian, too frightened to move. Although Beda was frightened herself almost to faintness, she rushed to the little one and snatching her up, carried her to safety as the monter machine went whizzing by.

DOG SAVES LIVES AND PERISHES

Arouses Sleeping Family and Then is Burned to Death.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., Oct. 23.—Saturday night about midnight the residence of Peter Beaulieau, who lives on the north side, was completely destroyed by fire. Peter, a grown son, and three younger childern were asleep upstairs and no doubt would have perished had it not been for the family watchdog, who gave the alarm by barking and jumping on the bed occupied by Peter, and tugging and rubbing his nose in his face. He succeed in arousing him from his sleep, already stupefied by smoke.

Peter, seeing there was no escape by the stairway, as everything was ablaze down stairs, managed to open a window and threw some of the bed clothes down. He then carried the three children to the window and dropped them onto the clothing below. As he was bringing the last child he caught the dog by the collar, intending to throw the dog out also, but while he was letting down the child the dog broke away from him and rushed back to the accustomed corner. Peter tried to go back after him, but was forced back by flames and heat, and was compelled to jump out of the window and leave the dog to the flames, after having been the means of saving the lives of the sleeping children.

SCHOOL CAR FARE.

Those who are seeking to induce the Duluth Street Railway company to give the school children of the city half fare rates during the hours when they are going to school and coming home again should not be discouraged by the tone of President Lowry's recent interview.

It was given from a sick bed, when he was nettled by the demands that had been made for generally reduced fares. Whether he had even heard of the plea for the school children or not is doubtful, since in the Twin Cities the campaign has broadened to a demand for reduced fares for everybody. Mr. Lowry's health has been poor lately, and he has paid but little attention to the details of the business for a year. When he is made familiar with the justice of this request in behalf of the school children those who know him are confident that he will talk very differently.

As The Herald has said from the start, the reduction of fares for school children is all that should be sought at this time. It is a reasonable concession, and it is backed by public sentiment in the city of Duluth. It is one that the street railway company can make without sacrifice because where its own records show that less than 300 school children use the cars now, on the reduced fare several times that number will ride, so that it will be money ahead by the change.

But while we may all of us find attraction in the thought of six tickets for a quarter, that is, at present, an idle dream. The question of whether the company could afford to do it is not in issue. The fact remains that we have foolishly let it tie us up with a franchise under which it doesn't have to unless it wants to, and there is, therefore, little use in seeking to bring about such a radical change at this time.

We may look longingly at the cheap fares given in other cities where the franchises left loopholes for such reforms, but the humiliating fact remains that so far as any of us know, the only way we can even get such a concession as cheaper school fare is to ask for it. Since it is a reasonable and modest request, there is every reason to believe that it can be had if we seek it properly. But to encumber the campaign in behalf of the school children of Duluth by burdening it with demands for cheaper fares for everybody is, under the circumstances, to invite defeat.

Let's get back to the original proposition, half fares for school children, and make a sensible campaign for it. There is no reason why this concession should not be granted by the company, but it is all that can be hoped for at present.

BURTON.

Joseph Ralph Burton, late United States senator from Missouri, is now a convict in a Missouri jail, where he will spend six months as a punishment for selling his influence as a United States senator to serve private interests.

Commentaries on this incident of political life are drawing morals from Burton's conviction, and friends of the United States senate are using it to prove that the charges of corruption in that body are untrue. Says the Washington Post:

> The conviction of the late Senator Mitchell and the incarceration of Burton are sufficient to convince reasonable men that the United States senate is an unfruitful field for criminal exploitation. When a state sends a bad man to the senate, there is too often a tendency to condemn the senate itself for harboring him. But it is yet to be shown that the senate has ever shielded from punishment any man whose guilt has been established.

Yet Burton of Missouri is a mere petty offender compared with greater colleagues of his in the United States senate. His crime is petty larceny compared with the crimes that have made the United States a butt of popular reproach. Compared to these offenders, Burton is the criminal that steals a loaf of bread, and they are the great criminals that steal the bread that belongs to millions.

The real leaders of the senate, men like Aldrich, Elkins, Kean and Foraker, represent large business interests, and not the people. With the people on one side of the breastworks, fighting for their rights, these senators are found on the inside, defending the position of the trusts. As representatives of the people, their place is on the outside, but they have treacherously crept away and joined the enemies of the people. Isn't this crime? These senators may not think it is, but what do you think about it?

And if it is a crime, isn't it infinitely greater than Burton's? Burton is properly punished. He earned his six months in jail, and there is no particular sympathy for him. But his conviction, and the senate's virtuous action in closing the doors against him, are not enough to give the senate a clean bill of health. We shall all think better of its protestations of innocence when it shuts its doors upon such great offenders as those treacherous servants of the people who exert all their energies and prostitute their talents to help the cause of the people's enemies.

STATE ELECTIONS.

Minnesota, in common with most of the other states, is just now undergoing an experience that she enjoys—or endures—every other autumn.

She is having an election, to determine who shall be her next governor, and who shall fill the other elective state offices for the next two years. Incidentally, her counties are electing county officers, and her congressional and legislative districts are selecting lawmakers.

Everybody will agree that this experience comes often enough in Minnesota, but what of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where they elect their governors every year? On the other hand, is there not a tendency to envy states like Missouri? There, as a Kansas City newspaper says: "This is the season when Missouri has the laugh on states which have to go through the ordeal of electing a governor every two years." Missouri has an election every four years, and finds that it comes often enough.

At the beginning of his present term Governor Johnson recommended that the legislature of this state make provision for submitting to the people a constitutional amendment lengthening the term of governor to four years, with the provision that no governor should be eligible for re-election. He agreed in that message that if the legislature took such action, he would not attempt to benefit by it by becoming a candidate for re-election. The legislature, however, did not see fit to adopt such a measure, though one was presented to it.

Four years is a short enough term, and every four years is often enough to have elections. There are just as many states that give their governors 4-year terms as there are that confine them to two years. Twenty-one states elect their governor for four years, and twenty-one elect them for two years. One state, New Jersey, elects for three years, which must be an uncommonly awkward period because nobody will be able to keep track of what year the election comes in. As stated before, two states hold their governorship elections every year, which must keep the political pot boiling all the year around.

Two offices in Minnesota, clerk of the supreme court and state auditor, are now filled for four years at a time, and all the rest run for only two years. There is no more reason why the clerk of the supreme court and the state auditor should be elected for four years than there is why the governor, the secretary of state or the attorney general should be given the same consideration.

As a matter of fact, there would be no harm in having all officers, state, county and city, elected every four years, providing there were ample provisions for putting unsatisfactory officers out in the meantime. Then the elections, except those for congressmen, could all be wound up at the same time as the presidential election.

COLE'S NOMINATION.

> Mr. Jacobson did not mince matters. He stated that the corporations defeated him at Duluth, but Mr. Cole was not their first or second choice, and there was no reason why any Republican should not support him.—Minneapolis Journal's report of Republican meeting at Fergus Falls Friday night.

It is no news to anybody that the corporations defeated J. F. Jacobson for the Republican nomination for governor at Duluth last June. It is no news, either, that the joyful event was celebrated after the convention with an orgie that will go down in history as the most shameful gloating of the "interests" over the downfall of the people's choice that ever took place in Minnesota.

And yet Mr. Jacobson has stultified himself by proclaiming, in the same breath, that there is no reason why any Republican should not support the man that profited by this unholy victory of money and trickery over the people's will!

Mr. Jacobson attempts to show that Mr. Cole was neither the first or second choice of the corporations that defeated him. Who, then, was their first choice? Who was their second choice? Where did they give any evidence of having any choice except Cole? For what other candidates were their manipulated votes cast? Did they not throw them to Cole in a bunch and stampede the convention just in time to prevent the nomination of Jacobson?

Would any man of high principles, any man who valued his good name higher than he did an empty honor, accept a nomination that had been trailed through the mire of corrupt influences and that was handed to him stained with the filthy touch of trickery and deceit?

Are there not plenty of reasons why Republicans should fail to honor the perverted choice of a convention in which the corrupt interests stalked unchallenged and boldly and openly defied the wishes of the rank and file of Republicanism, defeating the popular choice by a well-turned trick and then rejoicing brazenly in their triumph?

It is shameful, but it will be more shameful still if the Republicans of this state should condone this treachery by accepting the candidate that was so created. Everybody in Duluth knew that the night before the convention voted A. L. Cole of Walker saw defeat staring him in the face and announced his intention to withdraw. That was late in the evening, yet before the stars paled with the oncoming of the morning's sun, the deal had been made that defeated Jacobson and nominated Cole.

Is it any wonder that patriotic Republicans look askance when partisan appeals are made to them, and when they are repeatedly told that "there is no reason why any Republican should not vote for Cole."

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Don't go to Mexico without flea powder, camphor and carbolic acid," said M. N. Lowes of Indianapolis, Ind., at the Spalding. Mr. Lowes was a member of a party of fourteen Americans which rode 550 miles across Mexico to inspect mining properties, making most of the trip by team and mule. "The camphor is for mosquitos," he continued, "and the carbolic acid for alacrans. The alacran is the small Mexican scorpion. Five minutes after you are stung the cords in your neck will stand rigid. There is only one remedy, and that must be taken quick—carbolic acid, greatly diluted and taken inwardly and poured on the part stung.

"The Carrizo mines are in the midst of a rich tropical fruit country. Bananas cost 1 cent a dozen, American money, and luscious pineapples may be had at 2 cents each. Tigers and deer abound in the mountains. At least there is a certain species of tiger, although it probably is not so dangerous an animal as its cousin in India. I made the remark before some Aztec Indians that I did not believe there were any wild animals in the mountains. This was interpreted to an old Indian. He quickly shouldered his rifle and disappeared. Next morning we saw him coming down a mountain trail, gun in hand and a deer across his shoulders. We gave him a peso for the game, and he was satisfied. We had venison steak and venison hash during the remainder of our stay at camp.

"We decided to go from the mines to the Pacific and took up our march, Indian file, to the bay of Chamela, fifty-five miles away, over the mountain trails. We traveled through forests dense with tropical vegetation, drinking cocoanut milk, eating bananas and pineapples as we went, parrots by the hundreds chattering along the trails. There were daily thunderstorms, but nothing so vigorous as those encountered in the higher altitudes."

"Green rooms in theaters have practically gone out of existence, and have been out of existence for the past ten or fifteen years, so the younger generation scarcely knows the meaning of the word," said L. C. Moran of New York at the Lenox. "The latest instance I know of in a green room was at the Iroquois, but after the theater was burned the fire ordinance compelled the management to change that part which was devoted to the green room to an exit. It is a strange coincidence that the fire also destroyed one of the last existing green rooms in Chicago, the one in the old Columbia.

"The original green room was at Drury Lane theater, and was built as a reception room for members of royalty, who could step from the box to the green room and meet the actors. Players received other friends there, too, and chatted and talked with fellow players during the performance. Rehearsals were also conducted in the green room and new plays were read to the members of the company there by the stage manager.

"Actors, after making up, would go to the green room before the performance where the stage manager would look them over, and if anything was amiss they were compelled to go back to their dressing rooms and change it. In those days, when the play was apt to be changed every night, a prompter and call boy were essential. The call boy would go to the green room and call for the player who was to make the next entrance.

"One of the reasons that the room has been done away with is the fact that plays have such long runs that an actor is able to time his entrance exactly. An actor may be lounging in his dressing room until he hears a certain sound on the stage which he uses as a cue, and he will then get ready for his entrance."

"I can think of nothing so distasteful to the eye as shoes that are run down at the heel, and yet I am everlastingly wearing that kind myself," said H. S. Gray of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "It is hard work for me to break in a new pair of shoes, and I never do it until I have to. An old pair is like an old friend, and I dislike to part with them until I really have to. But it looks very sloppy to see a man, otherwise well dressed, going along the street or across a hotel lobby with heels worn down at one side."

Beer to Kill Absinthe.

Le Matin: Who would believe it? France this year holds the record for the consumption of beer. It is estimated that by the end of the year four milliards of bocks will have been drunk. The consumption of beer has increased more than 40 per cent in five years. The consumption of absinthe, however, shows a decline. A blessing on beer if in the long run it triumphs over murderous absinthe!

THE WEATHER.

About the time people were going to their offices, stores and shops today, the morning was a piece of nature's work that was flawless. The sky was clear, the air was a grateful tonic, and the tempearture was just crisp enough to make it a delight to be out of doors. It clouded up a little later, but not alarmingly. However, the weather man looks for another northeaster of moderate volume tonight and tomorrow, with rain or snow. Yesterday's highest temperature was 44 deg. and last night's lowest was 34 deg.

A year ago today the weather was fair.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Areas of low barometric pressure are central this morning north of Alberta and over Kansas. The latter disturbance caused rain or snow Monday or last night throughout the Southwest, the Lower Missouri and Upper Mississippi valleys. High pressure areas overlying the Rocky mountains and Red River valley are attended by low temperatures in those districts, the southern limit of freezing temperatures including Northwestern Texas, most of New Mexico and Northern Arizona. Some rain also fell over the Atlantic states.

"The Kansas disturbance will doubtless cause rain or snow and strong northeast winds in this locality tonight and Wednesday."

A Defective Language.

Brooklyn Eagle: Undismayed by the obsoletion of Volapuk and the hopelessness of Esperanto, a California professor with time on his hands and a rage for humanity burning in his breast, has invented another language—Trinitl, designed for universal speech. It is composed of Greek, Latin and English, whence its name, and it differs from any other tongue in that it contains no cuss words. That settles it: Trinitl is doomed. It will be as dead as Volapuk in a year. Because language doubtless began with exclamations, rather than with explanations. The first word was a yell of dissatisfaction when prehistoric man, driving in a picture nail, missed it and smashed a nail of his own. Other first words were blink-blanks expressive of the emotions roused by missing a deer with an arrow, losing a trout at the surface of the river, discovering a frost on the day set for picking the plums, being waked by an enemy with a stone club at 3 in the morning, falling through the ice while skating, losing a favorite dog, finding that the hens had pip, or finding that the only She had decided to accept the plaintiff. If language does not explode freely, it is liable to implode with fatal results. Kentucky colonels have been known to expire from inability to express themselves when ladies were present.

His Mother's Birthday.

Cleveland Leader: A brief news item in the papers told, the other day, of a railroad directors' meeting which was postponed because the president of the company was "at his old home for his mother's birthday."

Assuredly a man could have few better excuses than this for absence from business duty. Mother's birthday. Of all the cycle of the year's days none is richer in tender memories to men and women. There is a magic in the words to send the mind leaping back to earliest childish recollection. Back to days when the mother was the most beautiful of things known—when her cheek was the fairest and her eye the brightest in all the great, big world. When her brown hair fell in silken spun glory over the brow whence came all wisdom, and the lips which spoke the final word in all things of human import were the reddest anyone had ever seen. Back to the days when mother's birthday was a fete day—when the bright eyes were wet and tender and the soft lips tremulous at the sight of little hands bearing gifts.

Down through the years the fete day has held its sacred place. Her cheek is wrinkled now and the eyes are not so bright and the silken hair is silver. But the tears of tenderness and the tremulous smiles are just as ready to the strong hands that bring gifts and greeting now as they were to the baby offerings of sped years.

A Long Time.

Harper's Weekly: In the service of a certain committee of the senate, the chairman of which is a Southern senator, is a certain capable young stenographer and typewriter, in addition to the clerk of the committee.

One day the chairman, missing the very capable stenographer, inquired of the clerk where he was.

Some days later the chairman again asked for the missing employe, only to receive the same reply from the clerk:

The chairman said nothing, but looked very interested.

A full week thereafter the head of the committee for the third time inquired as to the whereabouts of the stenographer. In reply the clerk began the usual announcement:

"He is not here today, sir; his—"

"Will you kindly advise me," interrupted the chairman, with alarming suavity, "whether that young man intends to stay away from his duties all the time his father is dead?"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Kasson Republican: The cry on every hand in this state is "revise the tariff"—not upward as McCleary would—but to better suit present conditions. We believe if the question was left to the voters of the state today that it would carry for revision two to one.

Preston Times (Rep.): The Times did not pay a dollar to the national Republican congressional campaign fund and it wouldn't have done so, had we been directly appealed to. Too many stand-patters and trust sympathizers in that bunch for us to waste our hard earned dollar on.

Albert Lea Sentinel: This is the year to vote for the man and not the tool, for the man who has made good, and not for Tom Shelvin's man or any other bosses' man.

Minneapolis Telegram: "What is a bank examiner?" asks a correspondent. So far as we have been able to determine, a bank examiner is a man who checks up the books of a financial concern after its officers have absconded with the funds.—Princeton Union.

That makes us think he ought to be called a "bank coroner."

Fairmont Sentinel: The daughter of Herr Krupp, the billionaire gun maker of Germany, spent $50) for her wedding trousseau and distributed $150,000 among laborers employed in the great Krupp works. That ought to jar the snobbish American heiress some.

Park Rapids Clipper: If the government insists on making the packers print on the label the contents of the can, the corn beef hash can might just as well be accompanied by the dictionary.

Long Prairie Argus: The campaign in this region seems very quiet, so far as the state ticket is concerned. Voters throughout the country are as well posted as the spell binders and sometimes better posted and they keep a close mouth, but will vote just as they please.

Hibbing Mesaba Cre: The "stand-pat" Republicans of the state are trying to pound it into the faithful that the "nomination" of a United States senator at a state convention is binding, but they are fighting shy of the plank favoring tariff revision adopted at the same convention. That's a different thing, you know.

Deer River News: But two weeks to election and General Apathy still in the saddle.

Le Sueur Sentinel: The chief difficulty with the present primary system seems to be that it is ahead of the people. It takes for granted that a man's conscience is tender enough to prevent him voting on the opposing party's candidate, one of the principal causes for complaint at present.

Eveleth Star: Special trains may be all right, but we believe that people have reached that stage of conscience-awakening when they do not fancy such traveling, and we would advise Republican candidates and officials to "cut out" such unnecessary frills in the future. There is no charge for this friendly tip.

Monticello Times: Senator Burton of Kansas, has been denied a re-hearing by the United States Supreme court and he is ready now to enter prison. Now let us have Depew, Platt, Aldrich, who are guilty of graver crimes than that which Burton was convicted of, going prison ward.

"Don't fret," replied the victim.

"The Vampire" Revised.

(Without Apologies to Kipling.)

A woman there was, and she loved a man
(Even as others have done),
It has been woman's way since the world began,
We called him a burlesque on nature's plan,
But she loved him only as a woman can,
Even as others have done.
Oh, she did not know, and she could not know,
When she gave him her heart and hand,
That her proud red lips would be made to sup,
The bitter dregs from humility's cup;
For she did not understand.

A woman there was, and she tried to keep
(Even as others have done),
All slumbering doubts and fears asleep,
But into her heart there fain would creep,
What others had sown, she was forced to reap,
Even as others have done.
Oh, the waiting hours, and the wakeful hours!
And the toil of head and hand,
The honor, and faith, and devotion rare,
Are lost in the depths of a deep despair;
For she learned to understand.

She made her prayer but to be denied
(Even as others have done),
She was shorn of her youth, her grace, her pride;
But she loved the man till the day she died;
Even as others have done.
Oh, the hearts that ache, and the hearts that break,
When a blow from Fate's strong hand
Has shattered to atoms our idol of trust,
And we find it was made of common dust,
And know, and understand.
—M. B. WILLIAMS in Chicago Record-Herald.

O Ye Tears!

Harper's Weekly: The president of one of the well-known colleges tells this story of one of his professors of chemistry.

It seems that the professor and his wife had not agreed upon some domestic question, the professor asserting that his means would not warrant the expense involved. His wife had used all her powers of persuasion without avail, and at last resorted to the final feminine expedient—a flood of tears. At this the professor picked up his hat, but paused to remark:

"You might save yourself the trouble of that, my dear; your tears have absolutely no effect on me. Why should they, being nothing but common water with a very small percentage of phosphorous salts and a trace of chloride of sodium?"

MARLBOROUGH MATCH FAILS

Paris, Oct. 22.—Disagreements between the duke and duchess of Marlborough which have been prolonged over a period of eighteen months or more, English society is convinced, will result in their separation unless the earnest efforts now being made by the father of the duchess and other relatives result in reconciliation.

W. K. Vanderbilt, the father of the duchess, arrived in London on Tuesday and went directly to Blenheim, where his daughter is with her children. The duke is not at Blenheim, and all negotiations for a reconciliation have been conducted through Mr. Vanderbilt.

Incompability is the only reason assigned for the strained relations existing between the duke and his duchess. This has become more acute during the last eighteen months, and they have been apart for increasingly long periods.

The duke's relations with his wife's family have not been cordial for some time, chiefly due, it is said, to the disappointment to his expectations caused by the second marriage of W. K. Vanderbilt.

The duke, according to all accounts is not blessed with a very amiable temper and affects an intense dislike for Americans, which is most trying to the duchess, who has many American friends of whom she is fond.

Nothing annoys the duke so much as tht frequently printed reports of his having received magnificent presents from his father-in-law. When Sutherland house was being built it was published that this was being done with money furnished by W. K. Vanderbilt as a Christmas present to the duke and duchess.

The duke, angered by the publication, gave out a sharply worded denial in which he intimated that W. K. Vanderbilt had never given either himself or the duchess anything beyond the marriage settlements.

Close friends of the duke say he is one of those men who could never be contented or consistently agreeable, and that the question of money really need not trouble them at all if it were not for other sources of disagreement.

The two children, the marquis of Blandford and Lord Spencer Churchill, are of course, a powerful deterrent to the separation of the duke and duchess. Their friends sincerely hope that a reconciliation may be effected, although it is said that the family of the duchess has foreseen the ultimate result for several years.

Because of the fact that the duke and duchess have been so much before the public since their marriage the report of their disagreement and possible separation naturally spread quickly in London society.

The relatives and friends of both parties are now working hard to the end that, if a reconciliation cannot be effected, they will quietly separate without appealing to the courts.

Society, while naturally much interested, expresses no surprise at this unhappy ending of what was regarded as the greatest of international marriages.

ALASKA'S GOLD FIELDS MAKE BIG SHOWING.

Washington, Oct. 22.—Official reports show increase in the value of Alaska's annual gold output from $2,400,000 in 1895 to over $15,000,000 in 1905. The gold production of 1905, according to reports of the United States geological survey, increased probably 60 per cent over 1904. The pioneer miners of the Yukon could not afford to handle gravel averaging less than $10 or $15 to the cubic yard. Now in the same district good wages can be made, even by crude methods, in extracting gold from pay streaks averaging less than $5 to the cubic yard.

RECORD BROKEN BY BUILDERS

Twelve-Story Building is Put up in Three Months.

New York, Oct. 23.—Three months ago there was nothing but a big hole in the ground where the new building for the Evening Post was to stand. Today on that spot stands the skeleton of a twelve-story steel building. The granite and cut stone work of one story is in place, the hollow tile floors and partitions of eight stories are ready, the plumbing, electric installation and elevator construction are well under way, and carpenters are now putting in temporary stairways and frames. Although only started on August 1st, it is already possible to get a definite impression of what the new building will be like when completely finished.

It is a striking example of the rapidity with which skyscrapers are now put up by American builders. The constant growth of business, requiring larger office accommodation, and the increasing value of the land upon which big buildings must be erected have led to a demand for the utmost speed in building construction, so that time has become more important than cost in new buildings, every month's delay meaning a loss of thousands of dollars in rentals or interest.

Architects and builders have met this demand for speed by adopting the steel type of construction which enables them to run up buildings of great height with amazing rapidity. But the steel has to be protected from rust and corrosion. Likewise the walls, floors and partitions and other parts of the building have to be absolutely fireproof. To meet these conditions builders encase the steel in hollow tile, and build the floors and partitions of the same material, no time having to be lost in waiting for the tile bricks to set or harden. The adoption of the steel and hollow tile type of construction is one of the reasons why even the biggest skyscrapers take less than a year to put up.

Hollow tile is found to be much the safest fireproofing for quick construction. It sets very much more quickly than concrete—which must be left thirty days to be perfectly safe. In winter it is very difficult to deal with concrete, whereas hollow tile can be installed without difficulty in almost any kind of weather. It is hollow tile which has also made it possible to put up Senator Platt's United States Express company building with such great rapidity.

Although buildings like the new home for the Evening Post are run up in a few months, they are not in any way jerry-built. They are put up to last. The Baltimore conflagration showed they could withstand fire; the Sand Francisco disaster showed they could withstand both earthquake and fire. In fact the big steel and tile structures of New York, Chicago, Baltimore and Pittsburg and other large cities are not only examples of rapid construction, but they represent the highest degree of perfection which American architects and builders have attained in the art of skyscraper building.

FOUR ACTIVE CANDIDATES

Legislative Nominees Are Not Ready to Pledge Themselves.

Detroit, Mich. Oct 23.—Four candidates are openly after the seat in the United States senate to be vacated by General Russell A. Alger next spring. They are William McMillan of this city, son of the late Senator James McMillan; Arthur Hill of Saginaw, a wealthy lumberman and a regent of the state university; Congressman Charles E. Townsend of Jackson, who has acquired prestige by his activity of the railroad rate regulation bill, and Congressman William Alden Smith of Grand Rapids, with Alden Smith of credit in the house of representatives.

Mr. McMillan, Mr. Hill and Congressman Townsend are all residents of the Eastern side of the state, while Congressman Smith is a resident of the West side. This fact is of importance because the precedent of the Republican party is that one senator shall be a resident of the west and one resident of the east side of the state. Senator Julius Caesar Burrows of Kalamazoo at present represents the west side.

Besides the four active candidates there are several others whose election is being suggested by their friends. Railroad Commissioner Theron W. Atwood says he is not a candidate, but he has warm friends who have come to look upon him as the most efficient organizer in the party and who insist that he be elected.

Governor Fred M. Warner also disavows any designs on the senatorship, but is enjoying an increased popularity on the eve of election to a second term. He too, has friends who refuse to be silent on the senatorship, although the constitution of Michigan carrles a provision against his election during the term for which he will be elected governor. The governor's admirers declare the United States senate is the judge of its own membership and that if the people of Michigan wanted the governor to represent them in the senate he would be seated in spite of the constitution.

Truman H. Newberry, assistant secretary of the navy, is persistently mentioned as a possibility in spite of his repeated disclaimers. Congressman McMorran, Congressmen Hamilton, Congressman Samuel W. Smith, and other local statesmen have also numerous friends who advise their election.

The election is to be made by the legislature in January. The legislature consists of 132 members, 100 in the state senate. It is the manner of nominating the candidates for the legislature this year that has contributed considerably to the indefiniteness of the situation. The legislature in 1905 enacted the first general primary election law in the history of the state.

The Republican platform called for a primary election law that would allow the political sub-division of the state to adopt the direct nominating system or retain the convention system, according to the will of the voters and after a long fight a law was passed following this general principle, but including a provision for the direct nomination of candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, the names of candidates for nomination to be placed on the primary ballots by petition.

In forty-three representative districts, and in eleven senatorial districts, the Republicans adopted the new law, and nominations were made in these districts by direct vote on Sept. 4. In four other counties, including Wayne and Kent, the largest two in the state, twenty-one candidates for the house and six for the senate were nominated by direct vote under special local laws which had previously been passed, and which were not interfered with by the general state law. In all sixty-four Republican nominees for the house and seventeen for the senate were nominated by direct vote.

In no previous contest for United States senator in this state have so many Republicans been nominated for the legislature who stand unpledged to any candidate and who declare they will vote as they please when the time comes.

The lack of interest in the nomination of the Democratic party in Michigan for members of the legislature is due to the fact that not a single Democrat was elected to either house in 1904 and that only eleven were elected in 1902. The election of five or ten Democrats is regarded as possible or even probable in 1906 among the Republican leaders themselves.

At all events, it is probable that it will take more than sixty votes to control the Republican senatorial caucus. A straw vote taken by a Detroit paper among eighty-seven Republican nominees recently disclosed the fact that all but twenty-five were not prepared to vote either for first or second choice and that those who did vote were about evenly divided among the more active candidates.

Perhaps the most interesting development in the campaign was the election last month of five Republican candidates for the house of representatives in Wayne county pledged to Congressman Townsend against an organized slate put up in the interests of Mr. McMillan among his home people. The effect has been to add largely to Congressman Townsend's prestige.

KITCHENER REJECTED BY AMERICAN WOMAN.

London, Oct. 22.—In society the latest story going the rounds is that Lord Kitchener has proposed to Mrs. Adair, and has been refused by the wealthy and fascinating American widow. This is heard from no less than half a dozen different people, who were so full of it they could talk of nothing else.

That Lord Kitchener should make such a proposal did not impress them as at all improbable, but they expressed unbounded amazement that any woman could be found—and especially an American woman—to refuse an offer of marriage from a man who is a peer, and is popularly regarded as the greatest British general of modern times. But Mrs. Adair knows Lord Kitchener probably better than any other woman. And she can better judge than anybody else what sort of husband this masterful man would be likely to make.

The story may or may not be true. If Lord Kitchener proposed marriage to Mrs. Adair, it must have been by post, for he is still in India. It was there he first met Mrs. Adair some years ago, and that she should have won his friendship, may be accounted a great triumph for her, for he is generally regarded as a confirmed misognist. She is said to be exceedingly annoyed at the turn affairs have taken, since there will now be a difficulty about maintaining that friendship on the old footing.

MET AND WED ON HORSEBACK

Novel Courtship and Marriage that Occured in Nebraska.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 22.—Introduction, courtship and marriage on horseback, all covered by a period of less than two months, is the novel experience of Samuel Agnew Brown, general manager for Davidson Bros. company, one of the largest department stores in the Northwest, and Louise Barbara Uhlrich, claimed by many to be the handsomest woman in the state of Iowa.

So far the only wedding journeys taken by this couple have been on horseback. The fact that they were married two weeks ago has just come out and has caused quite a deal of interesting gossip.

Mr. Brown has been West a little more than a year, coming from Baltimore, although he was formerly in the Wanamaker store in Philadelphia. Two months ago he secured a divorce from Josephine N. Brown of Buffalo, N. Y. The papers in the case have been extracted from the clerk's office, although such procedure is irregular and the details of the case have been covered up. His new bride has been married before, but cast off the name of Miller when she came West from New York two years ago, where she was a photographer's model.

The equestrienne bride is a brunette of perfect features, hair, eyes and teeth being most alluring. A tendency toward embonpoint prompted her to take up horseback riding. Mr. Brown, her new husband, was born in Louisville, Ky., and has always been devoted to horses, especially to the saddlers. About a week after Mr. Brown had secured his divorce from his New York wife, he was galloping over the prairie stretches of Nebraska across the river from Sioux City, when he overtook his future bride, who was having some trouble with the girth of her saddle. She asked him to assist in tightening it, which he did, and they naturally continued their canter together, exchanging names and Mr. Brown receiving a cordial affirmative when he asked if he might some time again, soon, accompany Miss Uhlrich when she went horseback riding.

They were soon going almost nightly, and two weeks ago Sunday, Brown made the astonishing proposal that, so long as their meeting and courtship had been on horseback, they ride to a clergyman's and be married in their saddles. Miss Uhlrich is said to have demurred somewhat, but was later persuaded. They were galloping along the same stretch of Nebraska country road upon which they first met. Turning their horses toward Dakota City, Neb., they rode to the residence of Rev. S. H. Shaffer of the Methodist church, called the minister out into the road and told him their errand. The preacher asked them into the house, but they protested they wanted to be married just where they were, and, after a little argument to overcome the prejudice of the Methodist divine, whose conventional ideas rebelled at the idea of this equine accompaniment, the good wife was called as a witness and the wedding proceeded.

"We'll take our wedding trip later," said Mr. Brown, after admitting the horseback wedding. "We have had several already on our steeds, but a trip East will come soon. Of course, the horseback wedding is a novelty, but I can see no reason why it should not prove as happy as one where the participants are cumbered with fashionable gew-gaws, instead of riding dresses, and in a stuffy house or church, instead of outdoors, where the air is pure and where nature smiles a blessing."

Mrs. Uhlrich Brown is a sister of the late Eugenia Uhlrich, who died in Paris two years ago after having attained considerable prominence in literary work. Her short stories were very popular. Louis Uhlrich, father of the bride, was an officer in the third Napoleon army.

Mr. Brown last winter had an unfortunate experience, which threatened to cause him some embarrassment. He accompanied Mrs. I. N. Tibbitts, a fashionable milliner and a widow, home from an evening card party. They were friends, and Mrs. Tibbitts asked Mr. Brown into her apartments to inspect a new book, written by an acquaintance of both. As they were turning the pages, the woman was attacked by a fainting fit and died before medical aid could reach her. She expired of paralysis of the heart.

CUBANS WANT PRESIDENT.

Washington, Oct. 22.—President Roosevelt may visit Cuba on his way back from Panama. Leading Cubans have urged the president to stop at Havana when he returns from the isthmus. President Roosevelt has given no intimation that he will visit Cuba, and it has been generally supposed that he would not do so. But it has been suggested that the president may desire to enlighten himself on conditions existing in Cuba and obtain information which could be obtained only from personal observation. The fact that Cuba is now a ward of the nation may lead the president to visit the island, but is he does so he will remain in Havana but three or four days. This would give him an opportunity to decide what should be done with Cuba.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind., says: "My wife had inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint; her suffering was terrible and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians, but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

WILL RUN MANY CAMPS

Logging Operations Will be Especially Active Around Tower.

Some Camps Have Been Established and Roads Cut Out.

Logging operations or preliminary work for logging operations in the Northern Minnesota and Northern Wisconsin districts are already well under way and the concerns that expect to be active this winter along that line of business are making haste to get their camps in readiness. Many of the contractors have their camps established, and roads cut, and in some instances a considerable amount of timber has already been cut and skidded. A scarcity of labor is the only thing that threatens to be a drawback to some lively logging operations before next spring.

The district about Tower, Minn., is showing especial activity in the way of logging operations this season. Twelve camps are said to be running within a radius of ten miles of that place, at which about 800 men are employed. Other men are being hired as fast as possible so that the number of men in camps will be just about doubled when the contractors have their full complement.

It is estimated that fully 75,000,000 to 80,000,000 feet of white pine will be cut in the Tower district this winter, and that all but about 10,000,000 feet will be put in by the Tower Lumber company and the Vermilion Lumber company, both of which have mills in operation at Tower, summer and winter.

The Tower company is running four camps, two at Bear Creek, and two at Pike river, where it expects to bank in the neighborhood of 40,000,000 feet of logs and to give employment to about 800 men.

L. McPherson, who has a contract to put in 15,000,000 feet of lumber for the Tower Lumber company, has established two camps on the east side of township 61-15 and is getting ready to start his winter's work. The logs will be shipped to Tower and a spur over two miles long is being built to the camps. This will connect with the Duluth & Iron Range company's tracks four miles south of Tower.

Contractor Dan Haley has about eighty men in his camp on the west side of township 62-14 on Lake Vermilion. He will put in 4,000,000 feet of white and Norway pine which will be rafted to the Tower Lumber company's mill next spring.

The Vermilion Lumber company will do the greater part of its logging near Trout Lake. About eighty men will be employed in the camp at that point.

The company will bank about 5,000,000 feet and this with what logs they will buy from the homesteaders and independent loggers will supply the mill for next season's run.

John McAlpine, the Duluth logger, has established a camp three miles south of Tower on the Tower and Pike river road where he will put in 4,000,000 feet of logs and about 1,000 cords of pulpwood. Mr. McAlpine will employ about eighty men. His timber will be shipped to Duluth for sawing.

John Owens will put in about 3,000,000 feet in in section 12, 61-15, where he has a crew of sixty men already at work cutting trees and skidding logs and mining timber. Mr. Owens, it is said, expects to clean up his timber holding in the Tower district this year, after several years of operation. His timber will be loaded at Millepost 99. The logs have not yet been sold, but the mining timber will go to points on the Mesaba range.

The Oliver Iron Mining company will run a camp of about eighty men, five miles east of Tower. The company will take out about 5,000,000 feet of mining timber this winter. The camps and roads have been built and cut out, but work has not yet started nor is it likely to until the freeze-up.

CASES OF INTEREST

CORRECTION OF CLERICAL ERROR—What the court refers to as a novel case of mistaken identity was developed in Idaho by the fact that an action was commenced and prosecuted to judgment against a domestic corporation named the "Couer de Alene Lumber Company, limited," while in the findings it was recited that the defendant was a Washington corporation, and throughout the findings and judgment the word "limited" was omitted. There was, in fact, a Washington corporation of the name of the "Couer de Alene Lumber company," and it appealed from the judgment, which through this mistake was entered against it. Under these circumstances it was held that it was proper to remand the case to the trial court with instructions to correct and modify the judgment so that the decree might run against the true defendant.

UNAUTHORIZED USE OF LITERARY PRODUCTION—An unusual case involving questions of literary property arises in Nebraska in a suit by the state against the State Publishing company, 106 Northwestern Reporter, 434. The state entered into a contract with the publishing company for the publication of a number of volumes of Nebraska Official Reports, the contract requiring the printing of a certain number of copies of each report and the delivery of the stereotype plates to the state after these copies were printed. The publishing company, however, secretly printed a large number of extra copies, which it sold on its own account, realizing a large profit therefrom, and the state sued to enjoin defendant from selling any such copies, and to require it to deliver to the proper officer of the state all copies so unlawfully printed and for an accounting of the profits. Relief was denied on the ground that the unauthorized use of the literary property of another furnished no ground for recovering damages except through the federal copyright laws, and that the mere fact that the state reposed confidence in defendant was not sufficient to create a trust.

NOTE GIVEN FOR PATENT RIGHT—A statute, which has several counterparts in other states, has been declared unconstitutional in Wisconsin in the case of the J. H. Clark company vs. Rice, 106 Northwestern Reporter, 231. The statute which declares that all promissory notes given for any patent, patent right or interest therein shall have written or printed thereon in red ink the words: "The consideration for this note is the sale of a patent, patent right or interest therein," and further provides that any person who shall sell a patent or patent right without complying with the statute, shall be liable to a penalty, and that all notes taken as required by statute shall be non-negotiable and subject to all the defenses in the hands of an innocent holder that would exist if they had not been transferred, is declared to be void because in conflict with the United States constitution, article 1, section 8, providing that congress shall have the power to secure to inventors for a limited time the exclusive right to their discoveries, and with the revised statutes of the United States, section 4898, declaring that every patent or interest therein shall be assignable, etc.

CONSTRUCTION OF OIL LEASE—A deed conveying one-half the oil and gas in certain lands except oil from a certain well, which was producing at the time of the lease, is construed in Ammon vs. Teofthman, 53 Southeastern Reporter, 73, and the exception is declared to include oil produced from the well excepted after it had become exhausted and rejuvenated by sinking it to a lower stratum not previously known to contain oil.

REGULATION OF COMMERCE—Tea and coffee are held not to be "provisions" within a Massachusetts statute prohibiting peddling without a license, but excepting the sale of "provisions" from the operation of the act. Commonwealth vs. Cardwell, 75 Northeastern Reporter, 865. In this case it is also held that a statute which permits the sale by peddlers of agricultural products of the United States without a license, but forbids unlicensed sales of agricultural products of other countries is a regulation of commerce within the constitutional provision giving congress exclusive power to regulate commerce.

CHICAGO DRAINAGE CASE — The Chicago drainage case, officially known as state of Missouri against state of Illinois, which was decided on demurrer in twenty-one Supreme Court Reporter, 331, has reached a final decision which is reported in twenty-six Supreme Court Reporter, 268. It is there held that the discharge into the Mississippi river from an artificial drainage canal of the sewage of Chicago mixed with a large amount of pure water from Lake Michigan, will not be enjoined at the instance of the state of Missouri on the ground that the sewage poisons the water supply, where the evidence tending to show such infection though disclosing an increase in the deaths from typhoid fever in St. Louis, nevertheless left it doubtful whether the typhoid baccilus can and does survive the journey and reach the intake of St. Louis in the Mississippi, and affirmatively showed other possible sources of infection in the discharge of sewage above the St. Louis intake from other towns and cities, some of which were situated in Missouri.

RES IPSA LOQUITUR—Strasberger against Vogel, 63 Atlantic Reporter, 302, contains a good illustration of the limitations of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur. The action was for injuries to a pedestrian who was struck by a brick falling from the chimney of defendant's house. There was no evidence that the chimney was out of repair and it was shown that certain persons were on the roof of the house and leaned on the chimney at the time the brick fell. These persons were there without defendant's knowledge and did not get on the roof through his premises. Proof of these facts was held not sufficient to justify a charge authorizing a verdict for plaintiff unless defendant showed that the falling of the brick was not caused by his negligence.

CONSTRUCTION OF MUTUAL BENEFIT BY-LAW—A strict construction of a by-law of a fraternal insurance society comes from Kansas in Taylor against Modern Woodmen of America, 83 Pacific Reporter, 1009, where it is declared that a by-law which provides that if any member shall become intemperate in the use of drugs the benefit certificate held by such member shall become absolutely null and void as to benefits and all payments previously made thereon forfeited, does not apply to the case of a member, who, prior to the enactment of such by-law, had become intemperate in the use of drugs and continued so thereafter.

CHANGE OF "INTEREST" OF INSURED—Garner against Milwaukee Mechanics' Insurance company, 84 Pacific Reporter, 717, lays down a doctrine, as to which it may at least be said that there are many opposing cases. It is here declared that the word "interest" in a forfeiture clause of an insurance policy, which provides that the policy shall become void if any change shall take place in the interest, title or possession of the subject of insurance, has application only where the insured owns and insures an interest less than title and has no application where the insured owns the title; consequently, where the insured owned the title of the subject of insurance and after the execution of the policy made an executory contract to convey the property, under which the consideration was fully paid but no transfer either of title or possession had been actually made, there had been no change in interest, title or possession within the meaning of the forfeiture clause quoted.

LIBEL BY UNAUTHORIZED PUBLICATION.—A very remarkable determination as to what constitutes a libelous publication is contained in Martin vs. Picayune, 40 Southern Reporter, 376. Plaintiff was a physician apparently of high standing in his profession, and was a member of a medical society, the members of which were opposed to advertising by physicians and had passed resolutions denouncing that practice. Defendant newspaper learned of a remarkable cure effected by the professional skill of plaintiff and published a rather glowing account of the case, stating that other physicians had treated the patient without effect, and containing various other laudatory remarks. Plaintiff alleged that this publication which, though true and obtained from the father of the patient, was not authorized by plaintiff, had a tendency to lead the public and his brother practitioners to believe that he was advertising and thereby caused them to class him in the category of quacks, who alone, it was alleged, resorted to advertising. Reversing a holding of the lower court that this petition stated no cause of action, the supreme court declares that it shows an actionable libel.

DURESS BY LABOR UNION.—A union of bricklayers and plasterers voted to refuse to handle brick from any manufacturer delivering brick to boss masons employing non-union men, and notice of the resolution was served on the manufacturer. Subsequently a manufacturer sold brick to a boss mason employing non-union men. Learning of this, the union voted to assess damages of $100 against the manufacturer. Afterwards the manufacturer began to deliver brick to a boss mason employing union men. The union demanded payment of the $100 under a threat that unless the same was paid the men employed by the boss mason would refuse to handle the brick, and payment was made. In March vs. Bricklayers' and Plasterers' Union No. 1, 63 Atlantic Reporter, 291, it is held that this payment was extorted by means of therats, in violation of the statute of Connecticut, punishing any person who shall threaten to compel another against his will to do an act which such person has a legal right to do.

IMPLIED COVENANT IN OIL AND GAS LEASE.—An oil and gas lease, requiring the lessee to drill a well within two years, providing that the time might be enlarged by the payment of an annual rental from the expiration of the second year until the well was drilled, and declaring that the lease should be void if no well should be drilled within five years, is construed in Brewster vs. Langdon Zinc company, 104 Federal Reporter, 801, and it is declared that, in view of certain provisions of the lease indicating that the production of oil and gas in paying quantities was the real consideration therefor, the lessee was bound by an implied covenant to exercise reasonable diligence in developing producing wells after it was found that the land contained oil and gas, and that the lease was subject to forfeiture in equity for failure of the lessee to take any steps to develop the land after an experimental well had been successfully sunk.

SELF-INCRIMINATION OF WITNESS.—In the paper trust case (Nelson vs. United States, 26 Supreme Court Reporter, 358) it is held that a witness ordered by a federal court to give evidence as to a violation of the anti-trust act cannot excuse a refusal to give such evidence on the ground that it is immaterial, and also that the right of a witness to claim his privilege against self-incrimination afforded by the United States constitution, Fifth amendment, is taken away, in so far as an examination concerning an alleged violation of the anti-trust act is concerned by the proviso of the act of Feb. 25, 1903, that no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture on account of anything concerning which he may testify, in a prosecution under certain named statutes, of whic the anti-trust act is one.

TWO RECRUITS FOR THE NAVY

Promising Applicants Break Hoodoo at Navy Recruiting Station.

The first recruits which have been secured for the navy service since Officer Blenkhorn was sent to Duluth, three weeks ago, were enlisted yesterday. Mr. Blenkkhorn has found Duluth and vicinity a rather dry field for naval recruits, and has been unable to secure any up to this time, although he has canvassed the city thoroughly.

The names of the two men who were secured yesterday are James E. Lynch of Grand Rapids and Olney Daniels of Metropolis, Ill. They are both good, healthy, well-formed young men, each 18 years of age, and Mr. Blenkhorn thinks they will make excellent sailors in Uncle's Sam's service. They will be sent to one of the following stations, according to the orders which are received from the navy department: Mare Island, Cal.; Newport, Va.; Newport, R. I., or League Island, Pa.

The army recruiting officer enlisted one man yesterday afternoon and two Saturday, and all three will be shipped to Fort Snelling today. The recruit secured yesterday hailed from Manistique, Mich., and gave his name as S. Messer. No additional recruits were reported as having been secured at the marine station.

PERMISSION IS REFUSED

Council Will Not Allow Italian to Move Building.

Bill Against Water Board Turned Down as Illegal.

By using its power to refuse a permit for moving a building, the council, last evening, prevented Frank Dodge, an Italian, from making use of a lot which he owns at the corner of Ninth avenue east and Fifth street, and will compel him to tear his building down and remove it, stick by stick, to the place where he desires it to rest.

Dodge saved $1,200 by working on the streets at day labor, and purchased a lot at the corner, purposing to move a little frame building which he owned on to the lot and open a confectionery and cigar store. The people in the locality were up in arms against the move, claiming it would cause their property to depreciate in value, and they appealed to the aldermen from the Second ward to refuse the permit.

The two aldermen, to whom the permit was referred, did not report, but last evening Attorney McMahon, for Dodge, asked that the council as a whole take it up and act on it.

Alderman Wilson moved that the permit be granted, and a rather heated discussion ensued. The city attorney explained that the only reason that a permit was necessary was that moving a building was not an ordinary use of a public highway.

Attorney McMahon argued that the council had no right to prevent a man from engaging in a lawful and legitimate business by an arbitrary use of its power, and that even if the council refused the permit, his client could tear down the building and erect it on the other side of the street.

"The only thing you will accomplish," said the attorney, "is to put my client to an expense of about $200 additional, for that building is going on that lot and you can't stop it."

The motion was lost on the following vote:

Mandamus proceedings will probably be begun to force the council to grant the permit, as it is claimed that the council has no right to use its power in an arbitrary manner, and there was no question of fire risk or police regulation involved.

A bill against the board of water and light commissioners for $794 was turned down as illegal.

The bill was for work done on Duluth Heights by the Morse-Fairbanks company. The contract was let without advertisements for bids, although it was in excess of $200, and for this reason was an illegal contract, as the charter provides that all contracts in excess of $200 shall be advertised, and let to the lowest bidder. The work had to be done quickly, however, and the board went ahead with it.

The aldermen did not question the bill itself, believing that it was a just one and that the work had been well done.

"I do not question the water board in any way," said Alderman Wilson, "but I do not care to lay myself open to indictment by voting for an illegal bill."

The bill was turned down, only Alderman McEwen favoring it. The alderman said he would take his chance on an indictment.

CANTILLONS GET MILLERS

Milwaukee Men Buy Minneapolis American Association Team.

Milwaukee, Oct. 23.—The Minneapolis baseball team of the American association was last night sold to Mike and Joe Cantillon of this city by A. H. Koch, who recently purchased it from the Mike Kelly group of Minneapolis capitalists. The consideration is not made known. Mike Cantillon will be president and manager, the coming season.

The Cantillons will still retain ownership of the Des Moines club, but will engage a player-manager for that team.

Dies of Injuries.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The Rev. C. J. Donigan, assistant pastor of the church of St. John, the Evangelist, who fell with the bleacher stand at New Star park during the Syracuse-Colgate game on Saturday, died yesterday afternoon. His back was broken. None of the other victims of the accident is in a serious condition.

Van Praagh in Town.

L. A. Van Praagh, the former manager of the Duluth baseball team, who is in the city from Winnipeg, says he has nothing new in the baseball line to give out, beyond the fact that Grand Rapids is contemplating the erection of a new ball park where Sunday games will be permitted.

Roll Fourth Game.

The fourth match in the series between the Centrals of Duluth and the Banks of Superior, will be pulled off this evening on the Central alleys. The Superior bowlers have won two and the Duluth bowlers one of the three matches that have been bowled, each team winning on its own alleys.

Billiard Tournament.

Ferris, Spears and Hatley, three of the best known billiard players in the Northwest, will hold a three-cornered tournament in the billiard parlors of the latter on Nov. 5.

Basketball Team.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Te Bemidji fire department will put a basketball team into the field this winter, and the material that is available insures a very strong aggregation. At a recent meeting, the following officers were elected: Harry Geil, manager; Arthur Gould, secretary; Scott Stewart, treasurer.

Tired of Renting.

The Boston & Duluth Farm Land company has located on its lands in Carlton county, within the past few months, a number of German farmers who have become tired of renting farms in Aitkin county and who wish to own farms of their own. It is claimed that the farmers paid from $3.50 to $4 per acre rent while the same money would purchase land outright in Carlton and St. Louis counties.

EXAMINATIONS IN NOVEMBER

Civil Service Commission Has Several Vacancies to Fill.

Besides the examinations which are to be held tomorrow at the local postoffice building for carriers and postal clerks, the civil service commission will hold examinations for several classes of the service during November. Among these are those for the positions of mechanical draftsman, teacher in the Philippine service, press boy and plumber and steam fitter.

The examination for the position of teacher in the Philippine service is probably the most important of all, and is held Nov. 30 and Dec. 1, at the Duluth federal building. Eligibles are needed to fill the existing vacancies and others which may occur. The salary of this position ranges from $1,000 to $1,200 per year, based upon the experience and the relative standing in the examination. Women will not be admitted to the examination unless they are the wives or immediate relatives of men examined at the same time, or who are already employed in the Philippines.

The examinatiin to secure eligibles for the position of mechanical draftsman will be held Nov. 21. This position pays $1,500 per year, and there are at present two vancancies, one at Wheeling, W. Va., and the other at Chattanooga, Tenn. The examinations for the position of plumber and steam fitter, and for the position of press boy, will also be held on Nov. 21. There is a vacancy in the position of plumber and steam fitted in the service in the quartermaster's department at large, at Fort Lincoln, N. D. This position pays at the rate of $900 per year. A press boy is needed in the railway service at St. Paul, at $420 per year. The age limit for this position is 15 to 20 years.

COUNTRY HOUSE HORSEPLAY

The English Hunting Set Branded as "Vulgarly Impertinent."

London, Oct. 23.—Says "Vanity Fair:" When Father Vaughan attacks a certain set for their tendency towards "horseplay at country houses" he by no means exaggerates.

"The country house season is now in full swing and the play which is sometimes indulged in is in many cases merely of a rough and boyish description," says the writer, who instances the case of the guests at a certain house playing leap-frog in the hall after dinner. The hostess bore a great name, and many of the guests were well known men and women in society.

"But leap-frog is a game of great refinement and eminent good taste when compared with other so-called amusements which have come under the writer's own notice. The following are two instances:

"A girl well known in a certain hunting circle told me she was staying with some people, and after dinner in the billiard room a man came up to her and said 'Oh, let me weigh you, Miss X. I will carry you across the room.' There were weighing scales in the room—but she laughingly and quite good naturedly refused.

"He then actually said, 'Well look here, if you don't let me carry you I shall empty my whisky and soda down the back of you pretty white frock.' She, never for a moment supposing he was earnest, said: 'All right, you can, but I shan't be weighed,' and a moment later he actually turned at least half his whisky and soda down the back of her neck, amid roars of laughter from everyone.

"Now, I don't believe even the Georgian period can beat this for sheer downright vulgar impertinence."

CONCERNING WOMEN

"How old are you," asked tht man of the prying disposition.

"Twenty-five," said the prompt and cheerful young woman clipping off two years without batting an eye.

"Did you vote at the last school election?"

"Nope."

"Why?"

"I didn't want to, especially,"

"Why?"

"Oh,—because."

The man with the prying disposition had in his mind's eye a table of statistics on woman as a voting machine or something like that, so he continued.

"What!" she inquired tartly, and after he viewed the bland but kind of greenish eyes with the glints of lightning back of them, he learned something and stuttered "I beg your pardon" as he coughed into his handkerchief and wiped the perspiration from his forehead.

"I am rather interested in women's rights," he proceeded. "Would you mind telling me if you voted at the last school election?"

"Why? Aren't you interested in politics?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. I think Bryan is perfectly grand. Anybody who can be so rotund and cheerful after so many crushing defeats and still have hundreds of people have faith in him must be fine. And I think Governor Johnson is dandy, too."

"Y-e-s, I guess so. Are there any Socialists in Duluth? I like Socialists." And then because she didn't care whether he ever called again or not, she yawned quite openly and apparently and wearily.

Then the man began to collect his statistics. Two women of voting age perfectly representative of the vast majority of women, were questioned at random and did not even know when the school election was held, let alone having gone to the trouble of voting.

Last week a gathering of women, strong for women's rights was held with this subject as the one for discussion. The leader had provided an array of direct quotations in favor of the right of suffrage for women from Lincoln and Governor Johnson and lots of preachers and famous people that was inspiring. They were all read with eclat, and inspired much enthusiasm, when what should a representative of the voting sex in this state, a small, rather undersized man, with an apologetic glitter in his eye, and he was only one of four men in attendance, do, but rise and say:

"Madam Chairman: May I interrupt proceedings for just a moment. I would like to ask how many of the ladies here voted at the last school election." And then because he had asked the question before and knew the answer, he sat down in masculine triumph. And one lone woman out of the gathering of fifty or sixty rose to her feet as a voter at the school election.

That does not prove much of anything, but it is rather interesting and kind of amusing. It is a fact, and that is the grievous part of it. And although its bald appearance in print may cause a storm of protest, and a cyclone of explanations, and a hurricane of feminine flutterings, the fact remains that there is scarcely a thing on earth in which the ordinary woman is less interested than the fact of election. Especially if she be unmarried. It is not that woman does not approve of woman suffrage. It is perfectly all right, theoretically, but so long as one may be facing the necessity of making the Christmas fruit cake at the time of the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November comes round, what is the use of adding to trouble and begin to wonder for whom to vote, the thing of course that must be settled the last thing before leaving the house?

"My wife had a headache the other day," said the man who can sit down to any well prepared meal and tell you just how to do it," and I thought I'd make her some tasteful and clear bouillon. I first consulted the cook book, and then I consulted the larder. The latter was a decently provided place, but there seemed to be nothing there that would make the kind of bouillon I had selected. So I went to the druggist's, and I asked for things for which there had been no call for the past seven years. But I got them all. This way of cooking, and not putting in half of what the receipt calls for, is no way to do. I went home and started. I followed those directions as faithfully as any cook ever did. I allowed two bay leaves to flutter into what was to be an aromatic combination that was to soothe away her headache. Two cloves were added, with tender thoughts, a blade of mace crushed was also put in, not to mention chopped onions and carrots, the tops of some celery and some sugar and things, and when I had quite finished, my clear bouillon looked like corn beef and cabbage. I said no word to the patient sufferer, but dumped the mess into the garbage can, with a few mental directions of where it ought to go. It was hot enough, too. Now, what do you think of that."

Nothing, absolutely nothing. Any person who cooks with the least air of expectancy knows of the thrilling possibilities of starting to make a cake, and ending with a roly-poly pudding, of the infinite possibilities to be attained by just playfully omiting one or more ingredients. But what a wholesome experience for the person who announces as he asks for a second helping of your pie: "All the high-priced cooks in the world are men."

What Women Read

BY KATHLEEN MONICA NICHOLSON.

Every few months there appears on the newstand a magazine devoted exclusively to women. This growing supply of this literature must be in consequence of an increasing demand for it.

Most of these magazines devote three-fourths of the space outside of that used for advertising purposes, to light fiction. The remaining quarter section is cut up into departments labeled, "Culinary," "Toilet," "Nursery," "Home Dressmaking," "Happy Home," "Answers to Correspondents" and some sort of social annex.

The fact that the Woman's Magazine devotes itself exclusively to women does not of necessity imply that the reading woman devotes herself exclusively to the Woman's Magazine. But there is a large—surprisingly large number of women who read very little beyond light modern fiction and the subjects included in the covers of the woman's journal.

It is quite right and as it should be, of course, that women give a portion of their reading time to the solution of the servant girl problem, or the reading of the latest thing in belts, the newest achievement in salads, the best yet in picnic sandwiches, and the startling promises of the magazine beauty specialists. But it is quite obvious too, that this should constitute but one department of her reading.

The reading, even to excess, of baby-talk, how to make muffins or fashion a lingerie hat or manufacture a home made gown is not harmful in itself. At least not until one attempts to create the "creations" designed by the magazine modiste when the result is quite apt to be disastrous. But most women read entirely too much fiction. But even in fiction reading, the best of this deals so largely with economic, social and political conditions, as well as phychological studies, national issues and their underlying principles, that a knowledge of these latter is essential of the author's thought and purpose.

The knowledge of these underlying principles of modern magazine and fiction thought is as necessary as is knowledge of history to the reading of a historical novel or as is a sense of humor to the appreciation of the hysterical one.

So many woman think it their literary duty to read every novel as it appears dripping from the press, that the perusal of the best general magazines and more weighty matter, is left to the man of the house.

The thought for which such writers as Lincoln, Steffens, William Allen White and Ida Tarbell stand as apostles is "easier" for men, generally, to master, than it is for the mass of women readers, since a knowledge of these questions is in almost any department of man's business world, acquired by absorption. This element of thought is a vital part of the atmosphere in which he moves and lives.

It is quite true, likewise, than to acquire this social, ethical, political knowledge, a woman must go a little out of her native element and make a somewhat more strenuous effort than would the average man. But once acquired, in a measure, it is quite as valuable a possession to a woman.

Too much knowledge has never hurt any one. Such questions as the human and social problems of the day, political evolutions, socialism, questions of cult, creed or dogma, are not in their fundamental principles, beyond the power of the average woman to master.

For to keep abreast of the trend of thought and effort requires the reading of many books on many subjects and is worth the average woman's while.

OCTOBER'S SNOW RECORDS ARE BROKEN IN DENVER

railroad, 2 deg. below zero, early yesterday, was reported. At Emery Gap, on the Colorado Southern railroad, snow drifted nine feet deep, and traffic was practically tied up.

A dispatch from Cheyenne, Wyo., says the storm, which has continued there for three days without interruption, is raging with increased fury. The Union Pacific is trying to keep its line open with snow plows, and passenger trains are arriving from eight to ten hours late, while all freight traffic has been abandoned. All freight wires are down east of North Platte and west of Rawlins.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 23.—All trains from the West were many hours late yesterday on account of snow and sleet storms in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado. The storm caused a freight wreck on the Burlington, delaying traffic. A bad sleet storm prevailed in Central Nebraska, breaking down trees, telegraph and telephone wires and causing suffering among stock.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 23.—As a result of being caught on the prairie during the fierce storm that swept Central South Dakota, David Genway and Hubert Brown, young sons of prominent residents of Chamberlain, have lost their lives.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 23.—Wind blowing at a velocity of sixty miles is sweeping across the plains country in the Texas Pan-Handle, with blinding sleet and snow. Grass is covered with ice, but cattle are in good condition, and the loss will not be heavy. At Channing a blizzard is raging. At Wichita Falls, 120 miles south of Amarillo, the weather is cold.

Havana, Oct. 23.—Many houses at Nueva Gerona and Sante Fe and in the intervening country in the Isle of Pines were blown down, much damage was done to the fruit crops, and the wireless station was wrecked by the last week's tornado. The steamer Cristobal Colon, a small coasting vessel plying between the Isle of Pines and the mainland made the passage during the storm. The garrison of American marines rendered valuable service in saving lives and property at Nueva Gerona.

sage was sent back to Tower inquiring if the name "Bounty" was the name that was filed in the original copy. Late Saturday evening, a reply came from Frank Johnson, to the effect that it was Henry Buenther who was drowned, and that he (Johnson) was in the boat with Buenther when it sank, Johnson escaping and Buenther going to the bottom; and asking that someone be sent to assist in recovering the body, which had not been found.

How Buenther happened to change his mind and go to Tower, instead of his claim on Red Lake is not exactly known. However, Mrs. Buenther states that he told her he had instructed Johnson to ship his "things" (meaning his boat and supplies) to Kelliher. She afterward ascertained that Johnson had sent the stuff to Tower and that she believed when Buenther found the mistake he decided to go to Tower, but said nothing to his wife of his altered plans.

Harry Biller states that he had a conversation with Mr. Buenther, a few days prior to his departure, while Buenther was in J. P. Omich's store. Buenther had purchased a sectional map of St. Louis county and stated that he had a friend coming from Wyoming who wanted to make the trip from Tower. Biller traced out the route from Tower, through Vermilion lake, up the Vermilion river, over portages and other impediments to the International boundary line. Buenther maintained that he had no intention of personally going to Tower, but that his Wyoming friend would make the trip. Biller warned him that the trip was a dangerous one, but was answered with the remark that the friend could "make it all right." It is said that Buenther went west; however, he must have come back and went to Tower, where he met his untimely end.

Henry Buenther was 47 years old, and had resided in Bemidji during the past five years. He leaves a wife and three children.

Buenther was considered one of the most skilled taxidermists in the Western states, and he has done work for people residing in all parts of the United States.

GIVES BANKS MILLIONS

and he had no disposition to disturb conditions in Europe by a continuation of the method of relief.

London, Oct. 23.—Trading on the stock exchange opened dull but, immediately after the tenor of Secretary Shaw's plan to relieve the American money market became known, prices improved. The bankers express favorable opinions of Mr. Shaw's arrangement for the acceptance of $18,000,000 in securities other than government bonds, in order to stimulate bank note circulation, regarding this as likely to be a more elastic plan of relieving stringency than is the releasing of treasury funds.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Acting Secretary Keep, of the treasury department, announced today that applications for increase in national bank circulation under Secretary Shaw's offer of yesterday would be favorably acted on in the order in which they are received at the treasury. If, however, a national bank should apply for an increase of two or three millions or even less, it probably would be necessary in the interest of smaller banks, to grant the application as to only a part of the sum asked for, and so extend the privileges conferred by the secretary's offer to as large a number as possible.

Bechtel Has Eloped Second Time With Same Young Girl.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—William Bechtel, living at Michigan City, this state, has eloped again, and has succeeded in getting further away than this city. Bechtel left a wife and family at Michigan City ten days ago and eloped with Miss Emma Brooks, aged 16 years. The couple were found at a hotel here, and Bechtel was arrested. On his return to Michigan City Mrs. Bechtel declined to proecute her husband and forgave him. Two days later Betchel again left home, joined Miss Brooks in East Grand Forks and from there they went to Bemidji. Peter Brooks and Miss Elizabeth Brooks, Hendrum, Minn., brother and sister of the girl who eloped with Bechtel, were here yesterday and they promise to make it interesting for Bechtel if they are able to locate him.

Mrs. Gina Solberg, who charged her husband with cruel and inhuman treatment and habitual intemperance, has been granted a divorce from Jens Solberg, Judge C. J. Fisk of the district court allowing her alimony amounting to $1,400 and giving her the custody of one child, a daughter 8 years old. The Silbergs lived near Northwood, this county, and some time ago Mr. Solberg decided to move West. He arranged to dispose of his property by auction, and then Mrs. Solberg took action. She started a suit for divorce and asked that her husband be restrained from selling the property. Judge Fisk made an order restraining the sale unless all of the proceeds were placed in a bank. This was done and $2,800 was realized, the court dividing the money between husband and wife in granting the divorce.

Charles Riley, giving Chicago as his place of residence, was sentenced to eighty days in the county jail for attempted assault on a young Norwegian girl living near Crookston.

Mrs. B. Klopp, aged 22 years, has disappeared from her home in Logan Center township, this county, without taking the public into her confidence, although it is said she left a letter for her husband, a prominent young farmer of that section. She took their one child to a friend in Larimore and left for the West. The father has taken the child to his wife's sister living nearby, and returned home. If he knows the reason for his wife's sudden departure or her whereabouts he is keeping his own counsel and appears to be taking no steps toward a reconciliation. They have been married four years.

Fargo—In the Broadway Methodist church in Fargo a father is working under the direction of his son. Rev. J. W. Danford, late of Minneapolis, is the new pastor, and his son, Rev. S. A. Danford, is presiding elder in this district. Both are popular.

At the First Methodist church Rev. H. G. Leonard has begun his sixth year as pastor. He has been one of the most successful ministers that ever held a pastorate in this city.

Further honors are coming to Judge Amidon of the United States court, as a result of his address last spring in Minneapolis before the Minnesota Bar association. Some time ago he received a personal letter of commendation from President Roosevelt, and has recently been appointed a member of the judicial administration committee of the American Bar association. The publication of the address in the large magazines and legal periodicals has attracted much attention to the ideas advanced by the judge.

Minot—Trick Head, a farmer living near Plaza, was run over by a load of coal Saturday afternoon and died Sunday.

Vermillion—Mrs. Ethel Bumsted of Baltimore, who came here a year ago for divorce, died suddenly Sunday night. She was a drug devotee and it is supposed that while in a delirious state she took enough poison to kill. It is said she was about to drop her divorce proceedings and go back to her husband.

Marsh Geetman attempted suicide Sunday by shooting two shots from a .22-caliber revolver into the back of his head. The bullets flattened upon his skull and did but little harm. He is a Civil war veteran and this was his second attempt upon his life.

Sioux Falls—Willie Gatewood, the 8-year-old boy who is an inmate of the South Dakota Children's home in this city, and for whose possession an Omaha aunt and the father of the boy, living in Winnipeg, were engaged in a race to Sioux Falls, is to be surrendered to the Omaha aunt, Mrs. Mabel Lewis. Superintendent Sherrard decided that if the aunt was found to be a proper person to have the custody, the lad would be turned over to her. A Nebraska representative of the children's home was instructed to investigate and report. The report now has been made and is of so satisfactory a character that the boy will be turned over to Mrs. Lewis without delay.

MRS. FURCA ACQUITTED

Eveleth, Minn. Oct. 23.—(Special to the Herald.)—Mrs. Mathilda Furca of Aurora, who was arrested last week on the charge of selling liquor without a license, was acquitted in Judge Prince's court yesterday. The charge was made against the woman on complaint of Michael Gaccomo of Virginia, who, as was brought out in the testimony, took this way of feeding fat a grudge against Mrs. Furca, there being little evidence against her.

Two weeks ago Gaccomo was arrested on complaint of Mrs. Furca, who stated that he had used insulting language and had been disorderly in her boarding house. The charge was not sustained and a few days after his release, Gaccomo had Mrs. Furca arrested for keeping a blind pig. The evidence showed clearly that the whole affair was spite work, and the court dismissed the case in disgust.

BECTON GIVEN SHOCK BY WIFE

Went to Theater and Discovered Her in the Chorus.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 23.—Citizens of Crookston and of Warren are watching with much interest for the outcome of the controversy between a young woman, formerly a resident of Warren and well-known here, and her millionaire husband, as to whether or not she shall appear in the chorus of a comic opera troupe.

Only a few years ago Vida Mohr was working as a stenographer in a Southern Minnesota town. She was unusually pretty and had numerous admirers among the young men of the village, and finally married one of them, a fine young fellow, but penniless beyond his salary of $75 a month.

Then they removed to Warren, where they resided for two years, their residence there being marked by an exhibition of jealousy on the part of the wife which is said to have unjustly involved a young woman of Warren. The young woman proved the falsity of the statements, and the outcome of the episode was the quitting of Warren by the handsome stenographer and her husband. Afterwards they moved to Crookston, but remained here only a short time, then going to Southern Minnesota.

After they left Warren the love of Vida for her husband apparently waned, and, after a time, they were divorced. She then went to Cleveland, Ohio, where she met M. W. Becton, an elderly gentleman, who had made a fortune in the manufacture of surgical instruments. Becton fell madly in love with the handsome Minnesota girl, married her and took her to New York, where he installed her in a palatial home. Everything went well for a time, but finally Mrs. Becton appears to have tired of the humdrum existence of a member of society, and started out to seek diversion.

One night Becton occupied a box at a theater party, where he went to witness the production of a popular comic opera. He was horrified to discover that one of the most attractive and energetic of the chorus girls who filled the stage was his wife, whom he supposed was at home nursing a sick headache. Then there was a scene which bordered nearer tragedy than opera bouffe. Mrs. Becton, however, was obdurate. She refused to leave the chorus unless her husband would settle upon her an income of $16,000 a year. This he angrily refused to do, and there for the present the controversy rests, Mrs. Becton continuing to appear in the chorus.

The Story of the WHITE HEART

Pillsbury's BEST Cereal

Just as soon as the housekeepers of America know that Pillsbury's Best Cereal VITOS, the White Heart of the Wheat, can now be had at all grocers, that one 15c. package makes 12 lbs of creamy white delicious food, its consumption may even over tax the production of the mammoth Pillsbury - Washburn Mills— the largest in the world.

Your Grocer has it now

DR. HARLAND B. MAINE,

The Noted Eye Specialist, Is In the City.

Dr. Maine has opened up optical parlors at 25 West Superior street (upstairs), bringing with him the most modern and scientific eye testing appliances. His skill for adapting glasses of every description to correspond with all kinds of Failing Sight, such as Plain Cylinders, Prisms, Spherical Convex, Spherical Concave, Periscopic, Cataract and Double Foci Glasses, can best be appreciated by those who have consulted him. He pays particular attention to the eyes of the young, who suffer from Weak Sight, Near Sight and Cross Eyes.

A Mistaken Idea.

Many believe that spectacles should be resorted to only when the sight becomes so defective as not to be able to do without them. This is a mistake which must be combatted. Whenever there is evidence of the need of their aid they should be used. A neglect of this rule sometimes causes unnecessary suffering which results in serious disease if this course is persisted in.

THREE KINDS OF DEFECTIVE SIGHT.

There are three kinds of defective sight, owing to the faulty formation of the eye ball:

Second: Hypermetropia or Far Sight, in which the length of the eye ball from front to back is less than the standard or normal eye.

Third: Astigmatism or Peculiar Sight, which is due to the want of symmetry of the cornea, which, instead of being spherical in its outline, is somewhat differently curved in two opposite directions. Some experience no unpleasant feelings, but notice that they cannot see as well as their friends. Such persons nearly always wear a frowning expression, which is so disfiguring and conspicuous. Others complain of pain, fatigue and intolerance of light with irritation of the eyes. If the adult, or especially the child complains of pain in the eye ball, orbits, temples or forehead, sometimes accompanied with severe headache, there is, as a rule, some fault in the organ of sight and not, as is often supposed, that the child is suffering with some incurable malady. Such a child is often forced to take up a calling for which it has really no taste or aptitude and makes a failure of life. Near Sight (Myopia), tends to increase. It is due to congestion and inflammation of the coats of the eye. The tendency to increase is greatest in childhood. If once checked it may not return during adult life. Binocular Diplopia (Double Vision) seeing an object or image both at the same time, or two for one.

BAD EYES ARE WHAT WE ARE LOOKING FOR.

It is to be regretted that there are so many of that sort at this day and age, but they must be cared for, and we are fully equipped to do it. No matter what you think the trouble is, do not do a thing till you come to us. IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING TO KNOW, and it is your duty to your eyes.

EXERCISE MORE CARE

City Departments Will Watch Charter Provisions More Closely.

Just what the outcome of the refusal of the council to pay the bill of Fairbanks-Morse & Co., against the water department, will be, remains to be seen.

The company has a claim for work done and the matter will probably be carried into the courts in a suit either against the members of the water board or against the board itself.

The aldermen recognized that the claim is a just one, but because the indebtedness was incurred in an illegal manner they dare not vote to pass it.

The result of the council's action will doubtless be to make all departments more careful in incurring expenses in a manner not provided for in the charter. This provision of the charter regarding expenditures of over $200 is quite frequently dodged in cases where quick action is required, and on numerous occasions heads of departments have sought loopholes in the law, which would enable them to let the contract without the formality of calling for bids, and have saved the city money by doing it. On small contracts the cost of advertising is frequently more than the difference that might be saved by competition between the bidders, and frequently a lower price can be secured by the personal solicitation of the head of the department.

Following is a statement by Comptroller McCormick regarding the bill in question:

"The $794 bill of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., reported on by the common council last night was not audited by this department, for the reason that it did not conform to the requirements of the charter. The balance of the bill, $3,818.40, was according to contract, and was approved.

"According to the charter, a contract must be entered into for materials, or for construction purposes, if the expediture is of the sum of $300 or more, except in the event of an extraordinary or sudden injury to the plant, whereby great damage might ensue by reason of any delay, in which instance the board of water and light commissioners may cause the damage or break to be repaired without contract, and in such manner as the commissioners may deem for the best interests of the city.

"We are holding another bill quite similar in nature, on which we have asked the city attorney for an opinion as to legality of payment under the emergency clause of the charter."

WORKERS ARE BUSY

Both Political Headquarters Actively Pushing Routine Work.

Jacobson and Tawney Coming Last Day of Month.

With the approach of election day a greater activity is noticeable around the St. Louis county Republican and Democratic headquarters. The Republicans have the largest force of clerks and stenographers employed, but Chairman McEwen of the Democratic committee is managing to send out a considerable amount of campaign literature. Three girl stenographers are today employed at the Republican headquarters in the Mesaba block, besides one or two clerks.

Precinct workers are much in evidence at both places, receiving instructions and handing in such reports as they have. The story is the same as told by Chairman McEwen and Chairman Gafvert. Both sides assert they are sure of victory. Chairman Gafvert said this afternoon that the outlook for victory appeared brighter than at any time since the opening of the campaign, and that encouraging reports being received from all parts of the county and state indicated a sure victory for A. L. Cole. Chairman McEwen asserted that Johnson would poll a much larger vote in St. Louis county than he did last time, and that his majority in the state as a whole would be larger.

What are expected to be the two banner meetings of the campaigns will be held in Duluth on the evenings of Oct. 31 and Nov. 1. The first will be a Republican rally, addressed by Congressman James A. Tawney, Jacob F. Jacobson and Prof. Martinson, the latter of Duluth. On the following evening will come the Johnson meeting at the Armory. It is not known for certain whether there will be any other speakers besides the governor himself. He will be easily able to fill the hall without assistance, and it is expected that Tawney will also have a large audience, for he has a national reputation as a speaker. These will be the last big rallies of the campaign, and there will not be much doing locally in a political way after the first until election day.

* * *

The ward workers are pretty busy these days. Meetings are being held nearly every evening. The Democratic committee workers of the Third ward held a meeting last night, and will meet again Thursday night at Alderman Jordan's residence, 128 East Fifth street.

The Sixth ward Johnson workers will meet Thursday night at Sloan's hall.

The Eighth ward Republican workers will meet Friday evening at the West Duluth Republican club headquarters, and the Republican workers in the first precinct of the Seventh ward will meet tomorrow night at 2232 West Third street. The Third and Fifth ward workers met at headquarters, in the Mesaba block, last night.

A large delegation from Lake county will arrive in Duluth at 7:30 on the evening of Nov. 1 to attend the Johnson meeting. They will assist in the reception of the governor.

John Hogan, a well-known Duluth Norwegian, says a lot of voters of his nationality are annoyed that the Viking Republican club should be held up as indicating that the Norwegians of Duluth favor the election of Cole for governor. He is behind a movement to organize a Viking Johnson club, and says he will be able to have ten members to every one in the present Viking Cole club. He asserts further that such Norwegians as are voting for Johnson are doing so because they think he is the best man, and not because he is a Scandinavian.

Today $300 was left at Democratic headquarters to be bet on Johnson, even money. Chairman McEwen says he has any amount of money to bet that Cole's majority in St. Louis county will be below the 1,500-mark.

VOTERS MAY REGISTER

Registration Places Will be Open Until Nine O'Clock.

This is the second day of registration for the coming general election in November, and voters all over the city are being urgently requested to turn out and register, if they have not already done so.

There still remains, after today, one more opportunity for registration. This will be next Saturday, but various things might occur to keep voters away from the place of registration that day, and the advisability of attending to the matter today is strongly urged.

Regisrations can be made in every precinct of the city up to 9 o'clock this evening. This hour, it is claimed, is late enough to permit all who have any desire to do so to attend to the matter. The weather has not been disagreeable enough today to give any voters an excuse to stay away from the places of registration, and the party leaders in the several wards are keeping pretty close tab on things to discover those who are neglecting their opportpnity to register.

Saved From Drowning.

While hunting on Rice lake yesterday Norman Richardson and Fred Areson were saved from drowning only by the prompt action of two other hunters, Tom Gleason and W. Walker. The boat of Richardson and Areson had been swamped by a big wave in the middle of the lake and it was fully fifteen minutes before Gleason and Walker, who saw the accident, could make their way to the exhausted men. They were finally pulled into the boat and taken ashore.

Open Till 9 O'clock.

Many people do not seem to have grasped the fact that the polling places are open until 9 o'clock in the evening for registration and not merely until 7 o'clock as they are on the day of election. There is therefore ample time for every man to get his name on the list after the supper hour.

Agree On Settlement.

The case of Pasquale Murante against the Drake & Stratton company was dismissed in the United States circuit court today, both parties having agreed upon a settlement. S. F. White and M. H. Race For Drunken Man.

The police patrol wagon and the ambulance had a race for a drunken man lying on Eleventh avenue west this morning. Telephone messages were received simultaneously by the police and health departments that a drunken man and a sick man were lying on the street. PAID RIVAL TO RETIRE

New York, Oct. 23.—When the grand jury resumed today its investigation into the charges made last week by Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, that Independence league candidates were demanding money from Tammany candidates to withdraw, and that money had been demanded of Democratic candidates for Independence league nominations, Charles V. Fornes, formerly president of the board of aldermen and candidate for congress; Congressman Joseph A. Goulden, Joseph Prendergast, clerk of the water board; Alderman Reginald Doull and John A. Allen, Independence league candidate for congress against Mr. Fornes, were on hand.

Congressman Goulden was the first witness called into the grand jury room. He was with the inquisitors about fifteen minutes. After he left, he said he had been shown a letter which he had admitted he had written to Francis E. Schoeber, also a candidate for congress, agreeing to pay $500 for the expenses of gathering endorsements of his name to a petition to be presented in the name of the league. He said he considered it no more than right and proper that he should make such an offer to cover what he deemed legitimate expenses.

MARKET IS HIGH HERE

Wheat Goes Higher in Duluth and the Other Markets.

Flax Active in Local Market and Tone is Slightly Stronger.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 23.—Wheat had a stronger tone in the American markets throughout the session and at the close today. There was a good buying demand almost everywhere, and unsettled weather was another bullish factor. Duluth exporters sold no Duluth wheat today, but they worked some winter wheat. The East is buying well here, the demand being better than the offerings, but the blockade at Buffalo is retarding business. Liverpool closed unchanged, Paris ½c to ¾c lower and Antwerp ⅝c lower.

The December option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth, Chicago and New York, ½-⅝c in Minneapolis, ⅜-½c in St. Louis, ½c in Kansas City and ¾c in Winnipeg. The October option closed ½c higher in Winnipeg. Primary receipts of wheat were 1,229,-000 bus, last year 1,369,000 bus. Shipments, 530,000 bus, last year 508,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 316,000 bus.

Primary receipts of wheat were 614,-000 bus, last year 317,000 bus. Shipments 326,000 bus, last year 356,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 26,000 bus.

Wheat was quiet during the early part of the session of the Duluth market, but livened up after the first hour and a half of trading, and prices advanced. December wheat opened unchanged at 73⅝c, advanced to 74¼@⅜c by 12:25 and closed at 74¼c, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday. May wheat opened ⅛c higher at 77½c, advanced to 78⅛c and closed at that price, a gain of ¾c over yesterday. Durum wheat closed unchanged and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of 1¾c over December for No. 1 northern.

Flax was active during the latter part of the session. There was a slight flurry at the opening, after which trading became quiet, but it was steady toward the close. The foreign flax markets closed quiet and unchanged. October flax opened unchanged at $1.13½, advanced to $1.14¼ and declined by the close to $1.13½, unchanged from yesterday. November flax opened unchanged at $1.13½, advanced to $1.14½, declined to $1.13½ and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday. CHAPTER II.

Are not speculative stocks selling for many times their reasonable value?

If you think so, let us sell your stocks for you to those who think otherwise — quietly—confidentially.

If you prefer to buy, we will execute your orders promptly.

Predictions are somewhat confusing.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—The wheat market today opened firm on a moderate amount of trading. Commission houses were good buyers, and the receipts in the Northwest were smaller than had been expected. The unsettled weather was also a feature. December wheat opened a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 72¾c to 72⅞c, declined to 72⅝@72¾c and reacted to 72⅞c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 917 cars against 1,002 cars last week and 1,076 cars one year ago.

The market became stronger late in the session, December selling up to 73⅛c. The close was strong with December ⅝c higher at 73¼@73⅜c.

The corn market was quiet but firm. The wet weather throughout the corn belt being the principal factor. Pit traders were the best sellers, but offerings were light. December corn opened ⅛c higher at 42@42⅛c and sold at 42⅛c. Local receipts were 321 cars with 212 cars of contract grade.

Prices became strong along with wheat, and December advanced to 42½c. The close was strong with December up ½@⅝c at 42½c.

The oats market was firm on covering by shorts. The market, however, was very quiet. December oats opened a shade to ⅛c higher at 32⅝c to 32¾@32⅞c and sold at 33c. Local receipts were 271 cars.

The provisions market was easier because of a 5c decline in the price of live hogs. Business was in small volume. January pork was 7½c lower at $13.60. Lard was down 2½c at $8.20. Ribs were 2½@5c lower at $7.40.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers:

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 23.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1 point to an advance of 1 point in response to cables, which were about as due on the weather-map, and made a more favorable showing than expected and this attracted some selling. The prospect appeared to be for colder weather again in the Southwest and there was considerable buying on this outlook as well as upon a private crop estimate making the crop about 11,250,000 bales. The market ruled quiet and irregular during the early session but prices in the middle of the morning were about net unchanged.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

New York, Oct. 23.—Stocks were under pressure when trading was resumed at the stock exchange today and fractional declines were recorded in all parts of the list. Colorado Fuel and Anaconda were conspicuous exceptions and gained a point each. Canadian Pacific declined 1¼, United States Rubber 1 and Louisville & Nashville, Pennsylvania and Sugar large fractions. Dealings were on a moderate scale only.

Stocks were offered more freely after trading had gotten well under way, notably in United States Steel, blocks of 5,000 shares being sold at each ⅛ down until it reached 47⅛. Prominent railroad stocks offered little resistance to the pressure, but the industrials were not particularly weak. Consolidated Gas yielded 2; Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred, 1½; St. Paul, 1⅜; Louisville & Nashville, 1¼; Reading and Smelting, 1⅛ each, and Great Northern preferred, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and Colorado & Southern, 1 each. The selling exhausted itself before 11 o'clock and the market became quiet at a slight recovery. Pullman moved up 1½.

After midday the general market showed more steadiness, though recoveries were small. The loss in Reading reached 2⅝, Great Northern preferred 4½, National Biscuit moved up 1½.

Prices gravitated in the second hour to a lower level under light offerings, with no sign of effective support. Losses of a point or upwards became general in the active list. Anaconda fell 4, Reading, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Smelting and Distillers' Securities 2 to 2⅜ each, Smelting preferred 1⅝ and Northwestern 1½. The market was distinctly weak at noon. Bonds were heavy.

Professional operators changed front in the afternoon and bid up stocks, thereby reducing the earlier losses considerably. The recoveries reached 2½ in Great Northern preferred, 1½ in Reading and Smelting, and a point in St. Paul, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific and Amalgamated Copper. National Biscuit was bought heavily and rose 1¾.

The market closed slightly irregular, but near the best. During the final hour recoveries of early losses were complete in some stocks and nearly so in all. International Pump and American Locomotive rose 1 each and Tennessee Coal & Iron 1½ over last night. Trading became very dull when prices got to about last night's level.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co: The market opened irregular and with a heavy undertone. Some liquidation was seen early and the list showed a fractional decline generally. Stocks were well taken on the decline. The announcement of Secretary Shaw's plan to increase bank not circulation was received with some satisfaction, but was not really a market factor. We look for nothing better than a scalping market until after the political cloud has passed away, favoring the bull side for a long pull.

* * *

Walker Bros., to Paine, Webber & Co: The market today was very steady and the afternoon strong. The money rates eased off a little and this had a very good effect. Traders bid prices up and shorts covered. The general tone of the market was better and the idea was that the bad effects of the late break were about over. We look for a steady market tomorrow in the hands of the traders.

* * *

Paine, Webber & Co.'s Waldrof Hotel Notes say: There is a belief that with last week's decline and the better feeling over the monetary situation that the rally should go somewhat further before any set back. Many stocks sold by the magnates during October have been rebought, weak accounts have been eliminated and the short interest built up.

Copper Gossip.

Gay & Sturgis: The striking of sulphide ores in the Old Dominion is a very important matter for that company. The Boston office has as yet received no advices on it. The president of the company says in an interview: "Development on the thirteenth and fourteenth levels indicates the existence of a big ore body of sulphides, but it is slow work getting at them, largely because of the lack of ventilation, which cannot be completely remedied until we get fully connected up with our new shafts. We are pushing this work to the limit.

"The Old Dominion is opening up both the thirteenth and fourteenth levels together. We sank a winse from the twelfth level to the thirteenth and then cross-cut on the thirteenth, and are drifting east and west fro mthe thirtetnth level cross-cutting. tI is probably here that the sulphide ore has been struck. The winse is being continued to the fourteenth level. We are also cutting on the fourteenth on the new shaft. If the Old Dominion can open up enough sulphide ore for its own needs without going to the other camps, the future of the stock is very bright."

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Old Dominion was the feature of the Boston market today. It was reported from the mine that they struck a large bouy of sulphide and that this will be of very great value to the property. Centennial was well bought from the lake and the floating stock was scarce. One house had a buying order for a few hundred shares of Mohawk and they were obliged to lift the price to 69 before it could be filled. Copper Range has not yet rallied with the rest of the market and will certainly do better in a day or so. North Butte and Butte Coalition were both fairly strong, but dull. Altogether the market showed very good tone and we advise the purchase of dividend payers at this level.

Gay & Sturgis: An official of the American Brass company says: "I believe that refined copper will sell at 25 cents per pound before it sells at 20 cents. The strength of the copper market is phenomenal. Consumption is ahead of production. That is all there is to it. Our business is the largest we have ever had and we turned away good orders."

Gay & Sturgis: The market looked very well with Old Domonion the feature. We think this stock is likely to sell 10 higher. Orders to buy the list generally were quite numerous this afternoon and prices look higher. Hayden and Payne were good buyers of Centennial. A large amount of this stock has been sold for one interest. This seems to have been absorbed now and the next advance is likely to carry the price above 30.

Gay & Sturgis: An inside source says today that Copper Queen has more ore in sight than at any previous time in its history, and that when it becomes necessary for Calumet & Arizona to open more ore bodies to take the place of those lost by extraction, they will be found and that depth will prove just as rich as the surface workings. The buying of Calumet & Arizona today was reported for New York account.

Russian Crops Short.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 23.—The ministery of agriculture has issued a report showing that on the whole the harvest in European Russia are below the average. Of the winter crops rye is below and wheat is above the average, but oats and summer wheat are below. Flax, hemp and potatoes are fairly satisfactory.

Montreal, Oct. 23.—Former Mayor Carter H. Harrison of Chicago was taken this morning from Rideout, Ont., via Toronto, to Chicago, suffering from a badly strained back and possibly internal injuries. With a party of friends, all of Chicago, he went moose hunting, back of Chapleau, when he was injured during a portage.

RAPS BOARD ON BOYCOTT

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 23.—Both Commissioners Clarke and Lane were present today when the interstate commerce grain hearing was resumed in the district court. Mr. Lane had been delayed in getting here from Chicago. Twenty grain dealers, elevator men and railway officials had been subpoenaed to testify today. The commissioners will leave tonight for Omaha, where the hearing will be taken up again.

B. R. Beall of the National Grain & Elevator company, affiliated with the National Board of Trade of Kansas City, a rival of the Kansas City board of trade, testified that farmers were blacklisted by the Kansas City board of trade. He also stated that rules of the Kansas City board of trade provided that any member of that organization dealing with members of the National board of trade were liable to suspension. He said that his company in its existence had sold probably 500,000 bushels of grain, none of which he was able to sell in Kansas City because of these restrictions.

Asked if his company had experienced any trouble from the Kansas City board of trade or from any railway in moving its grain outside of Kansas City, Beall said: "Yes. We experienced interruptions when we attempted an export shipment of wheat at New Orleans through the Illinois Central elevator in that city. They placed an embargo of 5½ cents a bushel on our shipment for running the wheat."

Beall said he had protested vigorously to officials of the Illinois Central railroad both at New Orleans and Chicago, and the charges were considerably reduced.

BIG STRIKE IS MENACED

Ten Thousand Southern Pacific Machinists Resent Discharges.

New Orleans, Oct. 23.—As a result of the discharge of ten machinists at the Algiers shops of the Southern Pacific railroad, and because of alleged discrimination of long standing against their organization, 10,000 members of the International Association of Machinists may be called out on strike on that system within a day or two.

The men affected are in all what is known as district No. 1, extending from New Orleans to Portland, Or.

Thomas L. Wilson, a vice president of the International union, says the national officers will first endeavor to secure the co-operation of Mr. Harriman himself to have the discharged men reinstated, and also will try to negotiate an agreement whereby arbitrary powers of master mechanics in discharging employes without cause will be abrogated.

Loggers Are Finding Difficulty in Getting Sufficient Men.

Houghton.—As yet there seems to be no oversupply of men available for work in this district. Local loggers are beginning to make preparations to start their camps, but because of the difficulty in getting skilled laborers, may be considerably handicapped in their efforts. Every effort is being made to get men at a reasonable wage, but little success has been encountered. Loggers this fall are offering as high as $45 per month for experienced men, but even then do not get as many laborers as they might desire. This scale of wages is generally regarded as too high to successfully operate, and it is a question whether there will be as much work done in the woods as a year or two ago. Unless there is a decided change for the better, the men who are now holding off will find that they will be without jobs.

At a meeting of the directors of the Good Will farm ex-Superintendent H. M. Draper was made to return to the home twenty-one children comprising the children's band, whom he took with him upon severing his connection with the home. Draper was met in Milwaukee by an attorney and induced to bring the children back. He is having constructed at Detroit an automobile in which the band was to travel to Seattle, Wash.

Saturday morning Mrs. Abigail Sullivan, one of Houghton's first pioneers, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Strobel, on Albion street in West Houghton. The deceased was 73 years of age and had not been well for the past five years. Her death was not unexpected. Mrs. Sullivan came to this country fifty-nine years ago from Ireland and settled at Detroit, coming to the Lake Superior district and settling at Eagle Harbor shortly after this. About thirty-five years ago she moved to Houghton, where she has resided since. The deceased is survived by nine children, who are: Jerry Dowd, Mrs. Mary Greenleaf, Mrs. A. J. Otterson, William Sullivan, John Sullivan, Mrs. John Strobel and Tom Sullivan of Houghton; Mrs. Kate Westlake of Port Arthur, Ont., and Daniel Dowd of Ripley.

An effort is being made by the Houghton county Republican committee to secure ex-Governor Van Sant of Minnesota to speak in the Copper country during the campaign.

In spite of the fact that the members of the State Federation of Women's clubs were fairly well settled in their minds about their choice of officers for the ensuing year, the annual election was a very spirited affair. The officers elected are as follows: President, Mrs. Clement C. Smith of Hastings; first vice president, Mrs. Florence G. Mills of Kalamazoo; second vice president, Mrs. Pamela Wilsey, Caro; recording secretary, Mrs. Nellie M. Ward, Benton Harbor; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Elnora Chamberlain, Hartford; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah Wright Lancaster, Alma; directors, Mrs. Augusta D. Barnes, Howell; Mrs. Cyrus E. Perkins, Grand Rapids; Mrs. Adell Halbert McMaster, Hancock, and Mrs. Ella E. Thomas, Cadillac.

Menominee—While running on his regular train from Escanaba to Iron Mountain, Conductor John Youngman dropped dead of heart disease while talking with a friend. He had been on the road for twenty-two years. He leaves a wife and two children.

Calumet—Andrew Theme, aged 45 years, was found dead yesterday in the back room of a saloon. His death is shrouded in mystery and he may have been the victim of foul play.

Marquette—Because of the lack of labor, the Pioneer Iron company's Carp river charcoal iron furnace was forced to suspend operations yesterday. It will be idle for probably three weeks or until work slacks up on the ore docks. Pig iron is selling for $27 per ton, which means a loss of $1,000 for every day the furnace is idle.

Two important Marquette range mining deals have been announced. Ogleby, Norton & Co., Cleveland, have purchased one-third interest in the Empire mine. The property which contains several million tons of ore, next year will ship 300,000 tons. The remaining two-thirds interest is held by the Northern Iron company of Chicago.

William A. Paine of Boston and Louis Neuberger have taken the option on the Barasa mine and will at once explore it with diamond drills. The property lies close to the big Negaunee mine but has never been fully developed and has been idle several years.

South Range—Before a fair sized crowd at the roller rink Saturday evening, "Kid" Redmond of San Francisco was given a decision over "Young" Kelly of St. Paul, on a foul. Both men were very fast and clever with the mitts.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequaled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by all druggists.

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 23.—A Schenectady bound Troy car of the Schenectady Railway company failed to take the curve at Union and McClellan street today dashed into a pole, turned over on its side and injured a score or more of passengers. NO CHANGE IN PRICES OF PRISON-MADE TWINE

Stillwater, Minn. Oct. 23.—Prices for twine manufactured at the state prison will be the same for 1907 as they were last season, the board of control and Warden Wolfer having fixed the price as follows:

	Per Pound.
Standard, 500 feet to pound	8½c
Sisal, 500 feet to pound	8¾c
Standard manila, 550 feet to pound	9¾c
Pure manilla, 600 feet to pound	10¾c

Many requests for club order blanks are pouring in and Warden Wolfer says that many orders for twine in carload lots are being booked. It is, in his opinion, an indication that Minnesota farmers will again take kindly to prison twine and that the state will have no trouble in disposing of its entire product.

CATHEDRAL AT PITTSBURG IS CONSECRATED BY PAPAL DELEGATE AND CARDINAL

Impressive and Imposing Services Before Vast Crowd.

Edifice Cost $3,500,000 and is Handsomest in State.

Pittsburg, Oct. 24.—The new St. Paul Roman Catholic cathedral, said to be the most beautiful edifice in the state, representing a cost of $3,500,000, and over three years work, was dedicated today by Monsignor Diomede Falconio, papal delegate to America, assisted by Cardinald James Gibbons of Baltimore, Archbishops Farley of New York and Ryan of Philadelphia and a score of other high dignitaries of the church. Ideal weather brought to the ceremonies a crowd that even the great cathedral would not hold.

Following the solemn ceremonies of last night of the ritualistic vigil, today's rites were begun shortly after daybreak, when the concourse of prelates, priests and acolytes as-

N. Y. LIFE IN COURT

Policyholders Arraign Directors for High-handed Doings.

Injunction Sought to "Restrain Waste and Diversion."

New York, Oct. 24.—The international policyholders' committee today obtained an order from Justice Bishoff requiring the New York Life Insurance company and its directors to show cause on four counts why an injunction should not be granted restraining them from carrying on their campaign for the "election of the administration ticket" at the expense of the policyholders.

The action was instituted by Stephen Farrelly, general manager of the American News company. He made the complaint in his own behalf and on behalf of all other policyholders to "restrain waste and diversion of the company's funds and to compel the directors to account for the large sums already expended in carrying on their campaign."

The action is the result of the company's alleged plan of campaign by which mutilated official ballots are alleged to have been sent out through the company's agents with the names of the candidates on the international committee ticket stricken off, and each ballot containing the number of an existing policy.

MURPHY HIT BY PARKER

Hearst and His League Rapped for Judiciary Deal.

New York, Oct. 24.—Former Judge Alton B. Parker, at a mass meeting of the judiciary nominators here last night, after saying that he had left the bench never to return, paid a ringing tribute to his former associates and the present members of the state court and appealed to his audience to vote for judges known to be free of political bias and political bosses.

"A machine," he said, "is not the proper place from which to select judges. Now there is no difference between the Republican machine, where the Republican party is in control and a Democratic machine, but in this particular canvass our work is directed against a combination of a Democratic machine and Independence league machine.

"Our Republican friends, while not able to endorse our ticket altogether, have nevertheless endorsed twelve out of the thirteen candidates and I suppose we ought to be satisfied with that, but if the gallant leader of the Republican machine, himself

FISH SELLS OUT STOCK

Illinois Central Magnate Quits Big Harriman Company.

New York, Oct. 24.—Stuyvesant Fish, president of the Illinois Central Railroad company, has sold to E. H. Harriman, his one-third interest in the Railroad Securities company, of which he has for several years been vice-president, and Harriman president, and has resigned as an officer and director of that corporation.

The Railroad Securities company on its organization, acquired 80,000 shares of Illinois Central stock, against which it issued $8,000,000 in collateral bonds, which were subsequently exchanged for stock interest certificates. Its Illinois Central holding, it is understood, aggregate 94,730 shares. Harriman and his friends, owning a two-thirds interest in the Securities company, have controlled this entire amount.

It is understood that Fish receives from Harriman payment for his interest in the Railroad Securities company, partly in cash and partly in Illinois Central stock, the amount of the latter delivered to him being something in excess of 80,000 shares.

Harriman's offer to buy out Fish's interest is said to have been made a few days before the annual meeting of the Illinois Central stockholders last Wednesday in Chicago.

FARMERS PLAN PACKING FIGHT

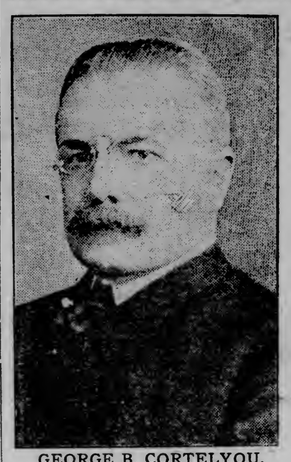

Home Curing of Meats and County Agents Projected.

Tokeka, Kan., Oct. 24.—Plans for opposing the packing companies and the fruit commission dealers were discussed at the meetings af the Farmer's National Co-operative congress last night. Two schemes probably will be put into execution, one, that the members will try to cure the majority of the meat they use themselves and also cure meats for the market, and the other to have an agent in each county to handle all the stocks for the members and ship to another agent at the market who will sell direct to the packing houses. There is no intention to build a co-operative packing house.

Declares All Conflicts With League Have Been Settled.

New York, Oct. 24.—The executive committee of Tammany Hall decided at a meeting yesterday to support the whole Democratic ticket, state and local. Charles F. Murphy, the leader of Tammany hall, delivered a speech to the members, in which he said that he expected all of them to do their utmost, so that on election day, the results, when compared with the best vote of previous elections, would preclude any possibility of any charge of treachery or knifing.

"The ticket must be supported," said Mr. Murphy, "to the full in every district. We are almost on the eve of election day and the time remaining should be devoted to using the best energies that each of you leaders can command. Now is the time to put your shoulder to the wheel and aid in rolling up the biggest Democratic vote in the history of the organization. The

PRESIDENT AT FUNERAL

Washington, Oct. 24.—With full diplomatic honors, the funeral of Senor Jorge Munoz, late minister from Guatemala to the United States, who died here last Saturday, was held in St. Mathew's Catholic church today.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Root, and several members of the cabinet, Admiral Dewey, Brig. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, and many other prominent army and navy officers as well as several members of the supreme court, attended. M. Jusserand, the French ambassador, was present as acting dean of the diplomatic corps, Baron Hengelmuller, ranking member of the diplomatic body, being detained in New York. Baron Speck Von Sternburg was the only other ambassador at the service, all the foreign representatives of that rank being away from their posts.

Senor Calvo, the Costa Rican minister, ranking Latin-American diplomatist at Washington, and representatives of practically all of the South and Central American republics were present.

Rev. Thomas S. Lee, pastor of St. Matthew's church, read the mass, assisted by several other clergymen.

The body was escorted from St. Matthew's church to Oak Hill cemetery by the Fifteenth calvry band, a squadron of cavalry and two light batteries from Fort Meyer. The remeains will rest temporarily in the receiving vault at Oak Hill cemetery, but will be taken, as soon as arrangements can be completed, to his native counitry, the Gautemalan government having so directed.

MORE MARINES MUCH NEEDED

Washington, Oct. 24.—In his annual report, Brig. Gen. G. F. Elliott, commandant of the marine corps, calls attention to the necessity for an increase in the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the corps, and says the demands for both officers and men are daily on the increase. He states that, unless prompt action is taken in this matter by congress during its coming session, he will be unable to carry out the directions of the secretary of the navy with regard to details, both ashore and afloat, and the efficiency of the corps will suffer materially.

Bent on Being Sent to Prison as Martyrs to Cause.

London, Oct. 24.—Ten woman suffragists arrested yesterday for rioting within the precincts of the house of commons were arraigned in a police court today and bound over to keep the peace for six months.

Such a commonplace outcome did not meet the views of the suffragists, who apparently desired to assume the roles of martyrs by being committed to jail, and when the magistrate announced his decision, a great uproar broke out in the court room. Ultimately the women had to be removed by force. Some of them were literally thrown out among the crowds waiting outside the building.

The shrieking women continued to make a demonstration outside the police court until Miss Parkhurst, who took a prominent part in the disturbances in the ladies' galleries of the house of commons, in April, was again arrested.

Some of the women who had been temporarily locked in an ante-room by the police, managed to secure a key and release themselves, but were again locked in by their jailer, who walked off with the key.

When the disturbances had somewhat subsided, the police reassembled the defendants, who were then informed by the magistrate that they must immediately find sureties for their good behavior, or be imprisoned for two months.

All of the ten women refused to enter into recognizances and were removed in custody.

Other speeches scheduled for the third and last day of his Indiana tour are at Lafayette, Delphi, Logansport, Culver, Plymouth, Columbia City and Fort Wayne. In conversation today he said he intended to write a book on his European travels, based on the letters he wrote while abroad.

MOODY TO BE JURIST

Attorney General Slated for Supreme Court Vacancy.

Washington, Oct. 24.—While no official statement is obtainable, unofficial information confirms the report that the president will appoint Attorney General W. H. Moody of Massachusetts to the place on the supreme bench made vacant by the retirement of Associate Justice Henry B. Brown of Michigan.

The announced intention of the president to appoint Mr. Moody came as a surprise, as it was generally understood that he had eliminated the attorney general from consideration in that connection, because of the fact mainly that Massachusetts already has a representative on the bench in the person of Associate Justice Holmes.

Mr. Moody's nomination will be sent to the senate when congress convenes, but the general expectation is that he will not take his seat on the bench until about Jan. 1, when, as previously announced, he expects to retire from the attorney generalship.

MRS. OELRICHS OPENS HER FIGHT FOR MILLIONS OF LATE HUSBAND

New York, Oct. 24.—Mrs. Herman Oelrichs of this city today filed an objection in court to the probate of the will of her late husband, Herman Oelrichs, on the ground that Mr. Oelrichs was not a resident of New York, but of California. Mr. Oelrichs left the bulk of his estate of several millions to his brothers and sisters.

THEIR EYES ARE OPENED

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—"The half has ne'er been told."

Such is the consensus of opinion of the party of members of the legislature, jobbers and commercial men of the Twin Cities and the southern and central portion of the state relative to the agricultural possibilities of the undeveloped portion of Northern Minnesota lying along the line of the Minnesota & International railway north of Bemidji. A party of thirty, aboard a special train, spent yesterday at Big Falls, Northome, Margie, Mizpah, Blackduck and other points, inspecting the soil, looking at exhibits of agricultural products and discussing ways and means o fassisting in the development of the vast area of land commonly termed by many of the people of the Twin Cities as the "big swamp," and mapping out a campaign for drainage of the north country through legislative action during the coming winter.

The special train of three cars, in charge of C. W. Mott, emigration agent of the Northern Pacific railway; W. H. Gemmill, general manager of the Minnesota & International railway; and W. H. Strachan, superintendent of the Minnesota & International, left St. Paul Monday evening and arrived at Big Falls at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening.

The party was met at Big Falls by a delegation of citizens and escorted to a hotel, where breakfast was served, after which a fine exhibit of agricultural products was shown and there were several speeches delivered.

Prof. Thomas Shaw of St. Paul, an expert on agriculture and one of the principal members of the faculty at the state agricultural college, spoke at some length. He had come up on this trip to satisfy himself as to the reports of the agricultural possibilities of this north country. He was very favorably impressed. He had examined the exhibits of roots, grains and grasses, and soil, and considered it a wonderful showing; and he believed that this land was capable of growing better grains, grasses and vegetables than any other section of the great North Star state.

Samuel G. Iverson gave an excellent talk on development of the north half of the state. He appreciated the need of the state doing its part toward draining its own lands and assisting in developing and settling the country. He believed that there would be greater activity hereafter in the North country, and he promised his vigorous assistance in obtaining a larger appropriation from the legislature to that end.

At Northome there was another exhibit of agricultural products that provoked surprised remarks from the party, and such was also the case at Blackduck.

Prof. Shaw again spoke, as did also A. M. Cosgrove, president of the Minnesota State Fair association; State Senator Gunderson of Alexandria; S. W. Mott, immigration agent of the Northern Pacific railway; George H. Ralph, state drainage engineer, and J. H. Beek, secretary of the St. Paul Jobbers and Manufacturers' association.

The special train arrived in Bemidji at 5 o'clock. After supper an informal meeting was held in the club rooms at the Masonic block, where a display of vegetables, wheat, oats and corn had been prepared, which included squash that weighed sixty-eight pounds, a potato tipping the scales at four pounds, and wheat which weighed sixty-one pounds to the bushel and graded No. 1 hard, all of which was duly taken note of.

G. W. Campbell acted as spokesman and introduced L. G. Pendergast of Bemidji as the first speaker.

Mr. Pendergast stated that there was not a spot on the American continent the size of the north half of the state that has such resources. He referred to the mineral wealth of the iron range, also to the standing timber owned by the state valued at $250,000,000. He believed the soil to be as rich as that of the valley of the Nile. There are 400,000 square miles of territory, capable of supporting 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 people, where only 350,000 to 450,000 live. He regretted exceedingly the practice followed by many hundreds of people in passing through Minnesota, never looking at the land that can be obtained here, and going to Canada. He alluded to the report of Mr. Ralph to the effect that it would cost but $1.25 per acre to drain the state lands that would sell when drained for at least $10 per acre, where now they would not sell for $5. He gave some very pertinent remarks anent the wants and needs of the people of the north half of the state, and was loudly applauded.

Prof. Shaw spoke on about the same lines as at Blackduck, except that he had noticed the soil in the city to contain much sand. We need not lose sleep over that fact, as intelligent tilling of that class of soil, which is mixed with clay, will bring just as large crops, with less labor. He advised the growing of rye, alfalfa and clover, and believed that winter wheat could be successfully raised here with great profit.

F. B. Wright of Minneapolis, candidate for the legislature, was the next speaker. He had been greatly pleased with his trip, especially with the pure air arising from the pines. He never traveled here much, but he had long since come to the conclusion that there was no poor soil in Minnesota, as he had seen the cut-over sandy lands of other counties produce elegant crops and was certain that this part of the state was equally productive. He wanted to see drainage in all parts of the state where needed. In the southern part of the state the present law would be inadequate, but up here it was different; the state owned much of the land here, and should drain its own lands. He would favor a large appropriation for internal improvements and drainage.

R. H. Jefferson of Bingham Lake, a candidate for the legislature, stated that he had lived in the state fifty-five years and had been a farmer all his life. He favored the draining of state lands, but no private lands. Settlers could not be diverted in this direction until the swamps are made tenable.

Ambrose Tighe, a member of the last legislature, also spoke, and was favorable to drainage. He favored the passage of the amendment to the constitution whereby more money could be raised by revising the taxation.

George Ralph, state engineer, was the last speaker and his address was along the same lines as at Blackduck.

FEATURES OF ELECTION LAW

Numerous requests for information regarding election laws have been made at the office of the city clerk during the last few days.

"It would probably clear up a great deal of uncertainty if one or two points were made clear," said Mr. Cheadle this morning. "It is impossible for a person to vote unless he has lived in his precinct at least thirty days before the election. If he registered at the primaries and moved on or before Oct. 6, he cannot register in his new precinct, unless he secures a removal certificate from his old precinct and presents this at his new polling place.

"Saturday is the last day of registration and nobody can vote unless he has registered on one of the three days of registration."

IMPROVE STREETS

Will Ask for Extension of Ramsey to Grand Avenue.

Do the citizens and property owners along Ramsey and Oneota streets desire that those two thoroughfares should be repaved either this fall or next spring? A petition has been left at the grocery store of A. M. Swingle in West Duluth, asking the city council to consider the improvement of these streets, and the property owners will have a chance to show their interest in the matter by signing the paper. The petition asks that Ramsey street be repaved as far as Oneota, and the latter as far as Thirty-eighth avenue.

The improvement of these streets is being agitatcd very strongly by the business men and residents of this section, who think they have been left in their present poor condition long enough. A number of the citizens are in favor of widening the roadway of Ramsey street, at the same time that it is paved, as its width at present hardly allows teams to pass between the street cars and the curb. An additional four feet on each side would give plenty of room and would be a great improvement.

Other requests which will probably be inserted in the petition are the extending of Ramsey down to the lake to connect with the West Duluth dock which will be built next spring, and extending it on the other end from Central avenue across the railroad tracks to Grand avenue, which would save a great deal of traveling for people on the last named street and vicinity.

The petition does not designate the kind of pavement, and this will probably be left to the property owners who can state their choice at the same time they sign the paper. Many of the citizens want the job done thoroughly when it it done, and therefore think the widening and extending of Ramsey should be asked for at this time. It is not likely that the paving could be done this fall as it is too late in the season, but it is proposed to get the signers now and go ahead with the project next spring.

Central avenue is getting its share of complaints against its condition during the wet weather and West Duluth business men as well as residents think it should be improved.

WILL BUY PIANO.

Royal League Will Install One in Rooms Over Bank.

The regular meeting of the Royal League was held last evening at their rooms over the Western State bank and about forty of the members were in attendance. A class of four were taken into the order during the evening. The piano committee, C. O. Applehagen, chairman, which had asked permission at the last meeting to postpone reading its report until last night, gave an opinion on the piano question, and the order decided to purchase an instrument. The piano, which will cost about $350, will be installed as soon as the lodge rooms can be prepared for its arrival. After the business of the meeting was concluded, the members enjoyed a smoke social.

SITE FOR PARSONAGE.

Residence Costing $5,000 Will be Erected by Holy Apostle's Church.

The trustees of Holy Apostles Episcopal church, yesterday completed negotiations for the purchase of the two lots on the corner of Fifty-eighth avenue west and Elinor street and the congregation will erect a $5,000 parsonage on the site. Plans have already been prepared and the excavation for the building will be commenced immediately. The water and sewer pipes will also be put in this fall. The house will be an eight-room residence, 28 by 34 feet in dimensions, and when completed will be occupied by Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, pastor of the church.

The pulpits of Holy Apostles church in West Duluth and of St. Lukes in the West end are at present being occupied by Mr. Mooney, but a new rector will probably be secured for St. Luke's at the beginning of the new church year.

Robbed of Wheel.

The mysterious disappearance of his bicycle this morning, leads George Govett to think that a thief must have been abroad in the rain last night, and decamped with his wheel. Govett lives at 710 Fifty-eighth avenue, and has been in the habit of leaving his bicycle on the front porch over night. He had done this for the last three nights and had not missed it, but this morning it was gone and the owner is at a loss to know where to look for it, or who to suspect of stealing it. The wheel was a Dayton and was in good condition and probably worth $35.

Sunday School Workers to Meet.

Regular meetings of the teachers, officers and anyone else who is interested in the Sunday school work of the Holy Apostles' church, will be held every Friday evening at the church. The first meeting will be held Friday evening, when the lesson for the following Sunday will be studied and plans will be considered for an increase in the attendance of the school. The meeting will commence at 7:45.

J. J. O'Brien left for St. Paul last evening on a business trip. He will return to West Duluth Friday.

G. A. Terrey, who has been confined to his home on account of sickness for several weeks, is expected to be able to be around again this week.

DROWNED IN PRIOR LAKE.

Shakopee, Minn., Oct. 24.—The body of Pat Gary, missing for two weeks, was found yesterday morning in Prior lake. Gary was but 24 years old, and was a member of a threshing crew. He was last seen two weeks ago Saturday, and it is presumed he fell from a wagon bridge into the lake that afternoon.

SEVEN LABORERS ARE ARRESTED

Charged with getting transportation under false pretenses, seven Austrian laborers were this morning arrested, and will be given a hearing in the municipal court this afternoon.

The men were shipped by a local employment office to a small town in Northern Wisconsin, and it is claimed that they refused to go to work when they reached there, although their transportation had been advanced to them. They returned to Duluth and were promptly arrested.

HE MUST FACE THE GRAND JURY

The child told her story to Judge Windom this morning, behind closed doors in the office of the Humane society in the city hall, and at its conclusion the court bound Helberg over to the grand jury. The bail has not been fixed, and Helberg will remain in jail unless released by the district court judges.

Helberg himself did not go on the stand to testify in his own behalf, and the little girl was the only witness used by the state.

County Attorney McClintock changed the reading of the complaint before the hearing, to make it come under the head of an indecent assault in place of incest, which was formerly the chanrge.

Department of Commerce Says City's Books are Properly Kept.

The city comptroller this morning received a request from Norfolk for an outline of the system of bookkeeping in vogue in his office. City Comptroller McCormick forwarded copies of the blanks used in the local office, and a brief outline of the system employed.

SHOWING IS VERY POOR

Registration on Second Day Was Lighter Than Expected.

Total for Two Days Behind That of Two Years Ago.

Hopes of obtaining a large registration for the coming election were dashed as a result of the showing made yesterday.

The number of names added to the list was very small, and unless a surprisingly good showing is made on Saturday, the vote on Nov. 6 will be exceedingly light.

The registration at the primaries was behind what it was two years ago, and it ran still farther behind yesterday. At the present rate it is doubtful if 9,000 votes will be registered in the three days.

The total registration yesterday was 989, which added to the 6,637 who voted at the primaries, makes 7,626. This is more that 2,000 less than that of two years ago.

A prominent Democrat of Biwabik, Minn., has written Chairman W. E. McEwen of the St. Louis Democratic county committee, a letter calling his attention to the fact that President Roosevelt's photograph is given among those of candidates on the Republican state ticket for 1906. Following is an extract from the communication:

"In a drugstore of our town I noticed a lithograph with the pictures of all the phizogs of the state officials of Minnesota in a cluster, and fairly in the middle of the bunch is the picture of 'Teddy the Great,' which does not appear to be so very unreasonable till you read in very large type at the bottom of the sheet the following: 'The Republican state ticket for 1906.'

"I asked the proprietor if he did not think it to a great extent misleading, as I was not aware that Teddy was a candidate this fall. I asked him if it were not calculated to catch some of the less inteiligent voters, who will want to vote for Roosevelt, and will vote the straight Republican ticket under the impression that they will have to do so in order to give him their votes. They will do this no matter how bad they may want to vote for Johnson. It seems to me the poster is very misleading."

It is understood that the interests of Cole and Lindbergh will be merged in the Sixth district, and that the state campaign there will be handled largely from St. Cloud from now on. Mr. Lindbergh is busy speaking every night, and carries on an energetic campaign days rounding up the votes. As much hard work will be expended in the Sixth as in any other district in the state. The Sixth is such a near neighbor of the Eighth that local politicians have manifested a lively interest in what is going on there.

The Viking Republican club will hold a meeting this evening at its headquarters, 1814 West Superior street. It is expected that several new members will be taken in. Plans will be made for starting an active campaign for more members, for it is the intention to make the organization an influential one in the political affairs of the city and county. Arrangements will be completed this evening for the entertainment of J. F. Jacobson of Lac Qui Parle county when he arrives in the city a week from today to speak at the Armory.

L. H. Johnson of Minneapolis, candidate for the speakership of the house, was ijn the city yesterday. He has been representative from his district for several terms.

"Those are the best Shoes my husband ever wore—they are Columbia $3.50 Shoes."

This is a remark by a woman and we happened to overhear it last week—it's better advertising than we could do if we praised all the good points of Columbia Shoes in full pages every day.

For comfort, durability and style, Columbia $3.50 Shoes are unexcelled, and there is a dollar's worth of extra quality in them for which we make no extra charge.

Try a pair, and we'll have you for a "steady."

"The Woman Hater," is a clever and laughable comedy, having many comical situations that stir the audience to much mirth and that is all the play is designed to do. Harry Beresford is a clever comedian and keeps the fun moving to the full limit all the time, but the company is not a strong one and the burden of keeping things moving falls too heavily on him. Beresford has the part of a supposed woman hater who is really of a romantic and sentimental turn of mind. Though not married it is not because he has not wanted to be, but because he has lacked the courage. When he finally musters up enough of it to propose, he gets himself into hot water, engaging himself to one and allowing two others to misunderstand him, and think that they are engaged to him. Then the fun goes forth merrily and before he is extricated from his embarassing situation he finally lands in an insane asylum by mistake. The comedy contains many bright and witty lines.

Another performance will be given this evening.

LADIES' DAY MATINEE.

Thursday is ladies' day at the Metropolitan and no smoking will be permitted in the theater at either the matinee or evening performance. The Yankee Doodle Girls should prove a great drawing card. The girls are uniformly good looking and they wear some fetching costumes. Among those used during the play, "Cupid Is the Captain of the Army" and "Mary Wise, the Village Maiden" numbers. The company does not conclude its engagement until Saturday night and will give its last matinee Saturday.

MITCHELL FREED.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Mitchell, proprietor of the Eveleth hotel, who was arrested last week on the charge of resisting Officer Kent by taking money out of the hotel cash drawer after a writ of attachment had been served, was acquitted in Judge Prince's court yesterday.

The writ was served on complaint of Saari Bros., grocery and meat dealers, in order to secure payment of a $986 bill. The prosecuting witness, Kent, stated that Mitchell took the money out of the cash drawer after it had been attached and against his express command. The defense admitted taking the money, but claimed the warrant had not yet been served. The court held that although the prisoner was no doubt morally guilty, he was not legally guilty of the charge preferred against him, and dismissed the case.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 24.—(Special to the Herald.)—A letter has been received from Dr. J. J. Curryer of St. Paul, assistant superintendent of the State Farmers' Institute, stating that a farmers' institute will be held in Bemidji on Dec. 11, if the business men, farmers and others of Beltrami county co-operate in getting out a large attendance.

CHICO CIGARS MAKE FRIENDS

S. F. Boyce Says They Are Now the Largest Sellers in His Cigar Case.

Give a man a Wadsworth Bros.' Chico and you make a friend for life, and at the same time show that you are a smoker of good cigars.

S. F. Boyce, who is the local agent for this brand, says he never before introduced a cigar to his trade that gave such general satisfaction as the Chico, and although he has had them for only a short time, they are today the largest sellers in his cigar case. It is quality that has made this sale, and that keeps increasing it from day to day.

"A man who first tried a Chico yesterday," says S. F. Boyce, "will come in today and get some more, and we are sure that he will continue a friend to Chicos."

They are made with a long, clear, Havana filer, of the best quality tobacco, burn freely with a pleasant, mild fragrance, and although they sell for but 5 cents, are equal to most 15-cent cigars, and superior to a great many of the 10-centers. If you like a good cigar from imported tobacco call at Boyce's Drug store for a Chico.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CLUB OF EVELETH

Reorganized and Manager and Phyical Director is Engaged.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Young Men's club of Eveleth, an organization which corresponds to the Young Men's Christian association in other cities, has been reorganized for the coming winter on a more extensive and efficient basis than ever before. The club has rooms in the basement of the Methodist Episcopal church, which have been neatly fitted up, one for an office, another for a reading room, where the leading newspapers and magazines may be found, and a third has been turned into a first-class gymnasium.

F. H. Gillette, a graduate of Hamline university, has been secured for manager and physical director of the club. As Mr. Gillette has studied under several noted physical culture teachers, and has had four years of practical experience in teaching, he should be able to make the gymnasium work unusually attractive and interesting. Classes in gymnasium work have been organized, which meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. Preparations are being made to organize a basket ball team, and it is hoped to form a basket ball league, including teams from the Fayal, the Spruce and Adams mines, the high school and the club.

A night school has been started for the benefit of those who, for any reason, are not able to attend the public schools, which has an enrollment of fifteen at present. Only elementary subjects are to be taught at first, but as interest increases, it is hoped to broaden the course. This school is particularly for the benefit of foreigners, who wish to master the essentials of written English.

The organization is on a firm financial basis, and any young man of good character may become a member by paying a $6 membership fee.

The officers of the club are: President, Leo Shapiro; vice president, E. H. Hatch; general secretary, F. H. Gillette; treasurer, G. E. Peterson.

SERIOUS CHARGE

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Of the three girls who ran away from Turtle River, Sunday, and were taken in charge by the city authorities here, Lillie Forkey, the oldest, was allowed to return to her home on promise of remaining with her father. Sadie Stone and Elnora Stone were held here and their father sent for.

The elder of the Stone girls tells a revolting story concerning her father, and he is being held here, awaiting the arrival of County Attorney McDonald, when he will be charged with a serious crime.

NOTICE!

The Viking Republican club will have a smoker this evening at the Norwegian Turner hall, 1814 West Superior street, at 8 o'clock. All Norwegians are invited to attend. Good speakers will address the club.

BEMIDJI PUZZLED

By Absence of Further News About Henry Buenther's Fate.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is an air of uncertainty connected with the reported death, by drowning, of Henry Buenther, that is certainly puzzling to his family and many friends here. Nothing further has been received from Tower, beyond the brief telegram from Frank Johnson, announcing that Mr. Buenther was drowned last Friday.

Mayor Carter sent a message to the mayor of Tower, requesting that all means possible be used to recover the body, and that the expenses would be paid from here. No response was received to this message, and not a word has been sent here relative to the manner in which Mr. Buenther met his fate or if anything was being done to recover the remains.

It is thought that Mr. Johnson is making a search for the body, and that when he finds it, will return to Bemidji.

FIRST LETTER IN FORTY YEARS

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Mary Lehman, 97 years of age, living at Pontiac, Mich., has just received the first letter that has come to her in forty long years. The aged lady is not without friends, but all her old immediate "set" have long since died. She came West from Pennsylvania nearly half a century ago and her old friends lost track of her until all were gone. "Grandma" Lehman is a great-great grandmother and though steadily failing, is still clear of mind. One of her girlhood friends, who had lived almost as long as she, is residing at Wyandotte, Mich. Through an item in a Detroit paper she learned of Mrs. Lehman's whereabouts and in a few days a dainty old-fashioned sweet brier scented letter note was delivered to "Grandma" Lehman—the first in forty years. The old lady could only fondle the missive tenderly while friends read it to her. It was the one link carrying her back to the old childhood farm nearly 100 years ago.

DEAD BODY FOUND

In Woods Near Kimball, Mich., But Identification Impossible.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The badly decomposed body of an unknown man has just been found in the woods near Kimball, Mich. The remains were in such a condition that examination was fruitless, although a crime is strongly suspected. The man had evidently been dead two or three months. It is thought that the body is that of a woodsman named Tellow, who disappeared several months ago.

CHILDHOOD SWEETHEARTS

Are Married After Being Parted for Forty Years.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—John McCullough and Mrs. Nancy Harris, both of Barron, Wis., childhood sweethearts, but separated in youth, have just been married in Escanaba, Mich., after being parted for forty years. The groom is 69 and the bride 53. Years ago in a little Indiana town the two were boy and girl sweethearts together and pledged each other their troth. The McCulloughs, however, soon moved to Wisconsin and here John married a Wisconsin girl. Mrs. Harris married twice, the first union being broken by divorce and the second by death. Mrs. McCullough also died. The old people happened to meet in Barron, when the love of youth again asserted itself, and the two decided to begin all over again. They are as happy as two children in their union.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Last evening the third annual Ministers' supper was served at the Young Women's Christian association, at which the board members of the association were hostesses. Nearly seventy guests were entertained and the affair was characteristic of the hearty cooperation which exists between the pastors of the city and those deeply interested in the association work.

The affair is always planned in an informal way and in compliment to the ministers, who have at every opportunity offered the most hearty support and help in the work undertaken.

The tables were laid in the dining room, and decorations followed out were tasteful and simple. The approach of the winter season was suggested in the red and green of the decoration. Pots of fern were the centerpieces of the tables, and bright red candles in silver candlebra added to the pretty decoration. A large number of the ministers and their wives and the members of the board and their husbands were present.

After the dinner an informal program of toasts was presented. Miss W. C. Agnew, president of the board of directors presided and introduced the speakers. Rev. J. L. Murphy of St. John's English Lutheran church was first introduced and he said in part:

"The work of the Young Women's Christian association or of the "Y" as it is often called in Duluth appeals to me greatly. The "Y" is rather suggestive of the life and parting of the ways which comes to the young woman who comes to the city to take up work. So often it is a case of right or wrong, and not always a choice offered. The protection of these young women is the work that this association is doing, and it should receive the heartiest co-operation of every citizen of Duluth."

Rev. J. W. Powell of the Endion Methodist church, was the next speaker. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" said Mr. Powell. "We can always get better results in giving people something to do, than in constantly exhorting them what not to do. The gospel which gathered all that was good in law and made possible a broader and greater spiritual life gave the first commandment as 'Thou shalt' and the second was like unto it 'Thou shalt.' The association makes possible a work among young women which the churches by themselves can not do, and in the near future a home of its own is the earnest wish of everyone who realizes in part the splendid work it is carrying forward."

Dr. T. H. Cleland, who has been prominently identified with the work since its beginning in the city, was warmly greeted as he rose to speak. The need of a Y. W. C. A. home was dwelt upon by Dr. Cleland. He said in part: "I do not like the idea of the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. being regarded as organizations aside from the church. These associations are the church of Jesus Christ, and in working here we are not leaving the church to work at something else, but we are continuing in the work. Protection is the thing that the association must extend to young women, and we owe it in greater part to them than to the young men; for with a woman, the indiscretion of thoughtlessly chosen companions and amusements is harder to repair in the world's way, than with men. And then the opportunity which is offered the citizens of Duluth in providing this home for young women is not inconsiderable. What nobler way could one expend money than in the equipment of a home for the shelter, protection and inspiration of women."

Rev. A. W. Ryan of St. Paul's Episcopal church was introduced and spoke a few words of congratulation and encouragement on the work of the association, and the last speaker was Watson S. Moore, the only one of the board of four advisory members present. Mr. Moore said in part: "I am connected with several institutions of the city, and this is the only one which is always on its feet financially, and the need of the advisory board has not yet become apparent to me. But I want to place myself on record as advising the members of the board to go on with their building whenever they get ready. I have three sons who promise to be young men by the time the new Y. M. C. A. building is finished, but I also have a daughter, who can hold down any two of the boys, and so when the time for your building arrives I want to contribute twice as much as to the Y. M. C. A. work." Needless to say Mr. Moore's statement was greeted with applause, and the remainder of his talk was an earnest and forceful plea for the necessity and opportunity for the work.

The affair was a most thorough success.

A SINGLE HISS

From Szamosy's Emotional Husband Greets Miss Vivienne

Duluth people are still watching with interest the Eastern papers for the notices of Miss Rena Vivienne. The following clippings are from Washington papers: The Herald of that city says,

"The second presentation of Puccini's beautiful Japanese music-drama, "Madam Butterfly," at the Columbia theater last night, was in a way quite as notable as the first, because of the debut in the principal roles of Miss Rena Vivienne as Madam Butterfly and Mr. McLennan as Pinkerton. The audience was large, and gave abundant evidence of its keen appreciation of the leading parts. Miss Vivenne has an attractive personality, and imparted to the role of Madam Butterfly a special charm. Her voice is clear and fresh, and met with ease all the demands on it. It has not the distinct dramatic quality of Mme. Szamosy's voice in the more impassioned scenes, but its sweetness and limpidity are delightful. Miss Vivienne speedily captured the warm regard of her audience by her graceful and spirited interpretation of her role, and was enthusiastically applauded after all the notable scenes. Mr. McLennan was an entirely adequate Pinkerton, and sang the part with fine effect.'

And Philander Johnson in writing of the opera refers to an incident of Miss Vivienne's appearance: "But each stage presentation, however, delicate and graceful, has its lath and canvas side. The bare realities obtrude themselves, despite the shrinking of the modern manager from any kind of publicity that is not in the nature of adulation and direct advertisement. Scarce had the first night won Szamosy a most cordial acceptance as a competent singer and charming actress than the news comes that Norwood-Brandt has entered suit against Manager Savage because she was not permitted to create the role in this country. Perhaps Szamosy, herself might have been content with this victory, but she has a husband. It is told that when Miss Vivienne, conscientious and efficient, though not aggressive, sang the part Mr. Szamosy posted himself in the upper part of the theater and gave way to his high strung, foreign feelings to the extent of the hissing! Imagine it! A hiss in an American audience, whose custom it is to pass the worst performer, even with no worse rebuke than a charitable silence! That there should be some room for jealousy is but natural, for there are points in the two performances which suggest comparison to the advantage of Miss Vivienne. However, admirable such conjugal devotion may be, the lack of discretion cannot be too strongly condemned. But these husbands of famous actresses! No wonder managers shy when they see them looming up."

Browning Lecture.

Last year one of the most largely attended of the club classes of the city was the Browning class of the Twentieth Century club, with John W. Powell, Jr., as leader. The club has arranged for a series of six morning lessons on Browning for this year, with Mr. Powell again leader, and the first will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the club rooms of the library. A very cordial invitation is extended any one interested to attend this first lecture, which will be "The Art of Optimism: Rabbi Ben Ezra." The remaining lectures of the course will be:

Nov. 22—Music and Life: Abe Vogler.

Jan. 10—Failure: Andrea Del Sarto.

Jan. 24—Success: Cleon.

Feb. 28—Knowledge and Love: Paracelsus.

March 28—Salvation: Saul.

FIRST SESSION

Of Annual Federation Meeting is Held.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 23.—Winona, the hostess city for the annual meeting of the Minnesota State Federation of Women's Clubs, received her guests this morning. Trains brought in several hundred delegates from different towns and cities in the state, and as the federation book shows 172 clubs, with a membership of 18,000, the representitive gathering promises to be a strong one.

A council meeting was held at 10 o'clock this forenoon, preparatory to the regular order of the convention.

Mrs. F. A. Rising of Winona welcomed the delegates at the opening of the session of the convention at 1:30 o'clock, and in a pretty manner extended greetings from the many Winona clubs to the visitors, assuring them that Winona's hospitable doors are open to all and every member of the state federation. The response was made by Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the Minnesota federation.

Reports of the officers and standing committee occupied the greater part of the afternoon. Mrs. E. H. Loyhed's address was the only one given this afternoon. She spoke on "Out of Door Art."

At the evening session confidences as to the last biennial, which was held last May in St. Paul, will be exchanged, and the opinions which will be discussed from the platform will be of interest, as the Minnesota women were more interested in the biennial this year than they were ever before, having played the role of hostess very gracefully and successfully.

Mrs. E. J. Lewis of Sauk Center, Mrs. W. B. McLean of Minneapolis, Mrs. L. D. Frost of Winona and Mrs. Robert Seymour of Duluth will speak on "The Biennial in Retrospect."

Club Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Adams were hosts at dinner last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Merrill's guests. The affair was given at the Kitchi Gammi club. A mound of roses formed the centerpiece and delicate sprays of the fern were laid on the cloth. Green candles finished the very attractive color scheme. The guests were:

Messrs. and Mesdames—
T. D. Merrill, A. M. Marshall.
Mesdames—
Clarke Ring of Saginaw, grave of Chicago
Harrison Musser, Benton Hanchett of Saginaw.
Misses—
Hanchett, Ring,
Virginia Morris, Arnold.
Messrs.—

Bridal Dinner.

Mr. and and Mrs. R. N. Marble were hosts last evening at the bridal dinner in honor of Miss Julia Duncan and Ralph N. Marble, Jr., whose wedding will take place this evening at the home of the bride's parents. The table decorations were in yellow chrysanthemums and the guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Marble of Chicago.
Misses—
Julia Duncan, Harrington
Mabel Duncan, of St. Paul,
Brewer, Helen Marble.
Messrs.—
Reigart Carson Agnew, of Ishpeming, Walter Brewer.

Egg plant, 20 cents each.
Leaf lard, 12 cents a lb.
Spare ribs, 10 cents a lb.
Shank soup bones, 10 to 35 cents each.

"How much" began the market person.

"B-r-r-r-r-ng" went the telephone, and then later the market man put down in the order book "One 10 cent soup bone."

"I said, how much ar—."

"You've got some——."

"Br-r-rng" interrupted the telephone and the market person petulantly kicked the sawdust into an untidy looking heap.

Soup bones off the shank make good soup, so does some kinds that come in cans and are heated with cream or milk. And soup, hot, steaming, rich and savory soup is about the only thing that will make a real hit with the family, a night like tonight.

Simplified Spelling

By KATHLEEN MONICA NICHOLSON.

The World's Work, in the October number, discussing the simplified spelling movement, refers caustically to the "emanations from the White House and the public schools of Duluth, the capital city of the Unsalted Seas."

"Time makes ancient good uncouth," sang Lowell. A most cursory examination of the English language lays bare the fact that it has been undergoing transformation since its inception. In fact, the work of weeding, pruning, grafting and cutting and otherwise modifying its structure and form has never ceased. The English language is a growing language, and change is consequently inevitble.

One glance over a page of early English print convinces one of the changes and modifications which have taken place in its structure. However, it is probable that the present movement is more direct and radical than have been previous attempts to overcome the intricacies of the English spelling book.

It is likewise probable that new complications will rise in place of the old intricacies. The apostles of the movement doubtless have considered those as lesser evils than the ones they are destroying. An examination of the list discloses a surprising number of words which have been "quietly reformed" for years. As, for instance, the dropping of u in honour, labour, "program" for "programme," etc. The words "dram," for drachm," and "gram" for "gramme," looks even to the opposers of the movement like a blessed relief.

It is some years since some of us started dropping "ough" in such words as thou, thoro, thru, etc. So that these words no longer looks so unnatural to us as they once did, and their good points are obvious. In the list of the three hundred simplified words, which has met the approval of our chief executive and has been formally adopted for official use, the most radically reformed have been those ending in "ed," where the letter "t" has been substituted. "Lookt," "carest" (for caressed) "kist," "mist" (for missed), and such words will doubtless require time to become familiar enough to our eyes to seem correct.

"Fulfil" for "fulfill," etc., seems a reasonable change for the better. Such words as, "fantom" for phantom, "fantasy" for phantasy, etc., will probably appear a trifle awkward at first.

Any radical movement will, of course, arouse the opposition of the conservative, yet such men as Brander Matthews have joined the crusade of reform—if "reform" it may be called.

Many of the magazines and periodicals regard the movement as iconoclastic, and destructive of the old traditional words that hold their origin apparent in their substance.

The movement is utilitarian, and in that it certainly savors of the spirit of the age—the tendency of which is to crowd out and eventually to destroy that which holds merely thru sentiment or tradition.

The Bookman suggests that to help the good cause along, the president drops the second "o" in the first syllable of his name and Mr. Matthews the second "t" in his.

The public schools of Duluth have taken no more definite stand in the movement than that of teaching both forms of the "simplified" words and leaving the use of either form to the choice of the individual.

CATHEDRAL AT PITTSBURG IS CONSECRATED

sembled at 5:30 to prepare for the service, which began at 6 o'clock. At that hour Monsignor Falconio, with a number of assistants, took up the march about the building, consecrating the outer walls, following which the entry into the building was made. Here the various altars were consecrated by the various bishops and their assistants, the ceremony of the main altar being conducted by the apostolic delegate.

These ceremonies concluded, the clergy assembled in a neighboring building and marched to the cathedral, where his eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, celebrated the mass at 10:30. This procession was spectacular, with the imposing train of church prelates and dignitaries arrayed in all the rich vestments and impressive pomp of the Catholic church.

The feature of the music was also a boy choir of sixty voices, which sang the processional, recessional and the responses, while the choir of local priests chanted the regular parts of the mass. The feature of note at the consecrational services was the Monsignor Nekes mass, in honor of St. Nicholas, never before presented in this country.

Tonight another impressive procession will be held, when Archbishop Moeller will officiate at vespers, which will close the consecration.

a man of learning, of character, of great ability and, I believe, of lofty patriotic purposes, was unequal to the opportunity of arising to the full height which the occasion offered him, what, I should like to know, could you expect of a machine that was dominated by a Murphy or a Hearst or both in combination?

"The evidence is unmistakable, that the leader of Tammany Hall realized that the only opportunity he would have for patronage this year would be in this judicial ticket. Did you dream or did I, did anyone suppose for a moment that there could be any inducement which would lead him to place his hand in the hands of the man who had denounced him as a corruptionist, and as a criminal and had pictured him with stripes upon him and a ball and chain at his feet? And yet he did it.

"He did more. Aspiring to be the leader of his party in the state, he nevertheless went to a convention and there by his will and by his force, by his ability to command there, he turned a minority into a majority. He made a convention which had a valid title, a fraudulent convention. Those things were done, which in business constitute a crime and which in politics ought to constitute a crime. Was there any other reward that was to come except the judges? None at all.

"May God in his infinite mercy and goodness incline the hearts of these, his people, to fight for our independent ticket, as they severally would fight for their birth right."

ticket, I am confident, will win and the victory will be all the greater with Tammany working in every district.

"William Randolph Hearst, in poplar estimation, has become the embodiment of this widespread revolt against special privileges and the corruption they have engendered. It was the recognition of this fact and the strong demand for his nomination throughout the state that led Tammany hall delegates to cast their votes for him at the Buffalo convention.

"Whatever differences may have arisen between representatives of the Democratic party and officers of the Independence league over local nominations they in no wise affect this main issue. Now that all matters of this character are settled finally and definitely, there will be no dissensions among members of the organization, all of whom henceforth have but one object—the triumphant election of the candidate of the party.

"Where a question of such vast importance to the whole body of the people is involved, it is hardly conceivable that any man sincerely attached to Democratic principles would hesitate to work cordially for Mr. Hearst and for the platform on which he stands. I believe he will be elected governor of the state of New York by a very large majority."

At the conclusion of the investigation by the grand jury of charges made by Murphy, that Tammany hall candidates had been "held up for cash considerations" by the managers of the Independence league, it was announced that the charges had fallen through completely. The official announcement was that the charges were "merely campaign gossip, and the grand jury did not dignify the proceedings by making a presentment as a result of its inquiry."

The grand jury announced that in its opinion, there was nothing wrong in an offer made by Congressman Goulden to pay the expenses of his rival incurred in getting signatures to his Independence league petition.

GAYLEY AND HIS PARTY

Will Remain All of the Week on the Ranges.

James Gayley of New York, first vice president of the United States Steel corporation, accompanied by other officials of the company, arrived in Duluth this morning from the Michigan Iron country and left immediately on a special train for the Vermilion range.

In the party are Thomas Morrison of Pittsburg, a director of the United States Steel corporation, D. M. Clemson, a director of several of the auxiliary companies and formerly president of the Pittsburg Steamship company of Pittsburg, D. G. Kerr, also of Pittsburg, ore agent for the steel corporation and T. F. Cole, W. J. Olcott, Pentecost Mitchell, J. H. McLean and J. Uno Sebenius of the Oliver Iron Mining company.

The party went up on the Duluth & Iron Range road and will remain at Ely today. Before the return to Duluth, the steel corporation's properties on the Vermilion and Mesaba ranges will be looked over and considerablt time spent on the Western Mesaba, in the neighborhood of Coleraine.

It is in this section that the corporation is planning such extensive operations. The Missabe's branch to Coleraine is now in use and the mines on the Western Mesaba will begin shipping in earnest early in the spring.

Gigantic stripping operations will be carried on there during the next few years by the Oliver Iron Mining company, operations that are said to be the greatest of the kind ever undertaken by a mining company. The work will take years.

It will be their first trip over the new line for Mr. Gayley and the others from the East.

The party is not expected to return to Duluth before Saturday afternoon.

Messrs. Cole and Olcott accompanied the officials from Michigan, where they have been looking at the corporation mines.

STATE WINS FIRST ROUND.

St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 24.—Judge Baxter of the district court yesterday filed an order overruling the demurrer of the defense in the proceedings brought by officials of the Law and Order league for the removal of Mayor Robinson of St. Cloud on the ground of his failure to regulate the saloons and resorts of the city.

Mayor Robinson demurred to the complaint, asserting that the court did not have jurisdiction. The defense now says it will go to the supreme court upon this issue. It is manifest that delay is its chief object at this time.

COURT MAY HAVE LIGHT CALENDAR

Few New Cases Yet Noted for Trial in District Court.

The November term calendar for the district court, which will be made up following Oct. 31, the last date for filing notes of issue, will include forty-nine cases continued over from the September term. Ten of these are divorce cases, ten are issues for the court to decide, and twenty-nine are for trial by jury. Not many new cases are being filed, but there is a week remaining in which the attorneys can file their notes of issue, and the last few days may witness quite a rush at the clerk of court's office.

Aside from the civil cases, the outlook so far has been for a short calendar.

Up to the present time there are only fifteen criminal actions to be investigated by the grand jury. In these the charges range from larceny to bigamy and incest. For the first time in several terms there are no assault or murder cases to be acted on by the grand jury. There is one manslaughter case, the defendant being the person who accidentally shot Frank Miller.

THREE INDIANS TURNED DOWN

Braves From Leech Lake Want to Join Marine Corps.

Three Indian braves, who applied at the local marine recruiting office yesterday for enlistment in the marine corps, were turned down by Lieut. A. W. McNeil, who informed them that no married men were taken into the service. The Indians were all three big, husky men, and were all fully up to the physical standards required by the corps and they were all very anxious to get into the service and go to Cuba. The leader was a married man, however, and as the other two would not join the corps unless he did so, they were all refused enlistment. The braves were from the Leech Lake reservation and bore the usual fanciful names. The leader gave the name of Big Mountain, another was Big Mountain's brother, while the third was Bill Howard.

Lieut. McNeil, who is in charge of the twenty-two marine recruiting stations in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Western Wisconsin, with headquarters in St. Paul, reached Duluth yesterday morning. He left yesterday afternoon for Hibbing and Virginia and will return to St. Paul tonight.

TO PAY HONOR TO NORSE HERO

Minneapolis and St. Paul Will Give Receptions to Capt. Amundsen.

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—Capt. Amundsen, who in his little sloop the Gjoa, successfully traversed the Northwest passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will arrive in St. Paul next Tuesday, and may be given a public reception here. The Minneapolis council will give him a public reception during the noon hour, in which the city officials will participate. Diplomatic etiquette prevents E. H. Hobe, the Norwegian consul, making a request of this kind, but prominent Norwegians, it is understood, will bring the matter to the attention of the authorities.

Mr. Hobe received a telegram yesterday from Capt. Amundsen, dated from San Francisco, telling of his warm reception in that city. Receptions are being tendered him all along the line en route to the East, whence he will sail for Norway, where he will be given a national reception by his fellow patriots.

BRYAN AND ROOSEVELT AS BASEBALL HITTERS.

Warsaw, Ind., Oct. 24.—Senator J. Beveridge in a speech here yesterday said: "Bryan was quoted as saying that Roosevelt was doing all right and that Beveridge talked all right now. If that is the case I ask all Democrats to support us and make it unanimous."

Continuing, the senator declared: "The reason Bryan never hits the ball is because he strikes, not where it is, but where he thinks it is. The reason Theodore Roosevelt is making home runs, is because he knows where the ball is."

MURDERED FOR GEMS

Theatrical Manager Confesses and Tells About the Crime.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—That Mrs. Margaret Leslie, the actress found dead in her room in the Palace hotel, Tuesday afternoon of last week, did not commit suicide, but was murdered, was disclosed yesterday, when Herbert H. Nicholas, the theatrical manager, arrested Saturday night on suspicion, confessed that he had aided in the murder, and that George Leopold, a drug clerk for whom the police are searching, was his accomplice. The woman's diamonds and her money were the motive.

Before Nicholas confessed he was subjected to a long investigation by the police, who had gathered a great deal of evidence against him. He first offered to tell his story if granted clemency, but when this was refused, he made a complete confession, implicating Leopold. He said that he and Leopold went to the woman's room and, after a few moments' conversation, he suggested that they have a drink, producing a bottle of whisky. Mrs. Leslie was taking off her jewels, and her back was turned toward them. While in this position, Leopold, according to Nicholas, seized the woman by the throat and choked her into insensibility. Throwing her on the bed, they placed a towel saturated with chloroform over her face. Then they took some of her garments and tied them tightly around her neck. Seizing her jewels, which were valued at $1,500, the men turned on the gas-jets, hurried out of the room and left the hotel.

The anxiety of Nicholas to realize money on the jewelry led to his arrest. Detectives working on the case found some of the diamonds in a pawnshop, and they were traced to Nicholas. At first he declared that Mrs. Leslie, who had been an old friend, had given them to him.

LIQUOR MEN HELP "LASSIE"

Salvation Army Woman Worker Appeals to Saloon League.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 24.—At the annual convention of the National Liquor league, that began yesterday, a feature of the opening session was an address by a Salvation Army woman of Newark, who appealed for funds for the army. The delegates responded with liberal donations.

James C. Leonard of Washington, chairman of the league's congressional committee, declared that the sentiment of congress toward the liquor traffic had changed, and that the members were tired and disgusted with the attitude of the opponents of the liquor trade. Of forty-six bills affecting the liquor trade, introduced at the last session of congress, only six passed.

WEDDING AT CARLTON.

Miss Jessie Coxe and Will Ramage of Worthington Married.

Carlton, Minn., Oct. 24.—One of the prettiest home weddings ever celebrated here was that of Miss Jessie E. Coxe, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Coxe, to Will Ramage of Worthington, Minn. The ceremony was performed last night at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Guy F. Davis, the Presbyterian minister, in the presence of relatives and a limited number of friends. The bride is very well known here, as well as in Duluth, while the groom, in addition to being superintendent of the slate brick plant here, is a director of the Great Northern Power company.

The couple received a number of beautiful presents, and the wedding was enhanced in attractiveness by the piano renditions of Miss Josephine Carey and songs of Miss Florence Williams, both of Duluth. Other guests were Mrs. W. D. Williams and Mrs. and Miss Waugh of Duluth and Mr. and Mrs. James Ramage of Worthington, Mr. Ramage being a brother of the groom.

PRINCESS TO TAKE VEIL.

Berlin, Oct. 24.—It is announced that the baby, Princess Monica Pia, the 3-year-old daughter of Countess Montignoso, formerly Crown Princess of Saxony, will be reared by a strict Catholic Bavarian family, related to the king, and when she is old enough she will be compelled to take the veil as a nun.

The announcement has aroused popular indignation, which is voiced by a newspaper, which declares it a brutal piece of cruelty and shameful injustice. It is forcing a child to do lifelong penance for her mother's fault. If the latter fights to secure her daughter's natural rights to choose her manner of life when the time arrives, she will have the sympathy of the entire nation.

MORAN NOT FOR BRYAN.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 24.—John B. Moran, Democratic candidate for governor, speaking here last night, said in reference to the presidential fight in 1908, that he was not affiliated with either Hearst or Bryan, but that if re-elected this year and next, he would go through the state and get delegates for a Massachusetts man for president. He said he refused to stand on that portion of the Democratic platform which mentioend a presidential candidate for 1908, as he had his own views as to who that candidate should be.

No official confirmation has been given. It is hinted that George T. Slade, son-in-law of James J. Hill, may be the new president.

WHERE IS GEORGE MOORE?

Elmore, Minn., Oct. 24.—George D. Moore is traveling through the country ignorant of the fact that his wife is dead at the Elmore home. Moore left Elmore some time ago for the West, selling county rights for the Kendall Farmers grain elevator and dump. His wife died Thursday and his son has been making every effort to find his father, but thus far has been unsuccessful.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 24.—Mrs. Frederick Neubert, who has been living at the home of her son, Fred Neubert, in Mankato township, committed suicide yesterday morning by drowning herself in a creek, near the place where she lived. Mrs. Neubert was missed from the house at breakfast time and search was made for her and she was found lying face down in the water and was dead.

TRAMP ROBBED THE MAN WHO BEFRIENDED HIM.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Oct. 24.—It is safe to say that in the near future, at least John Hanson, a well-to-do farmer of the town of Arthur, will be less generous in supplying wandering Weary Willies with "handouts."

The other day a ragged specimen of the genius hobo wandered up to Hanson's place and asked for a bit to eat and was accomodated. While the tramp's jaws were employed his eyes were not idle and he espied a glass jar in the pantry near by, in which Hanson kept his savings until he accumulated enough to make it worth while to take a trip to town and deposit them in the bank.

Just at this time the value of the contents of the improvised safety deposit vault was $60.50. It looked good to the tramp. He finished his meal and departed. Later in the day, however, he returned and while Hanson and his wife were in the barn attending to the milking, the tramp entered the house, and, unscrewing the lid of the jar, helped himself to its contents.

The theft was not discovered until the next morning when Hanson went to the jar to make a further deposit and found that his money had disappeared. No trace of the robber has been found.

A POLITICAL PHONOGRAPH.

The Herald has not, in this campaign, made any attack upon the character of Candidate Cole, nor does it intend to do so. Still, the mental habit and make-up of a candidate is a very proper subject for discussion during a political campaign, since it is upon such things that the voters must base their choice, except the dwindling few who ask nothing else but that the bosses shall hand them the party ticket with instructions to vote it in full and ask no questions.

Mr. Cole is an estimable citizen, and no touch of scandal has ever attached to his name. Yet The Herald has shown, by ample evidence, that he is not of the broad calibre that Minnesota has a right to expect in her governor. He originates nothing, and is but a mere reflection of the ideas of others. It has been shown that though he now appears as the champion of state development, he did nothing along this line in his first session in the legislature, and only exhibited his activities toward this end after Governor Johnson had brought state drainage, good roads and immigration to the attention of the 1905 legislature.

In his St. Louis county speeches Mr. Cole advocated the reduction of passenger rates to 2 cents a mile, and claimed some originality in this. Governor Johnson, addressing a gathering of commercial travelers more than a year ago, declared for the 2-cent rate, and promised to do what he could to bring it about.

In the speech-making at Two Harbors Hon. John G. Lennon of Minneapolis, who was on the program, declared that rebaters ought to go to jail. In his Duluth speech that night Candidate Cole, for the first time during his St. Louis county tour, said that rebaters ought to go to jail.

In one of his range speeches Senator Clapp said that the voters of Minnesota ought not to "send a ray of hope to Hearst in New York by electing Johnson." In a speech a few hours later Candidate Cole pleaded with the voters "not to send a ray of hope to Hearst in New York by electing a Democratic governor of Minnesota."

So Governor Johnson is not the only man whose ideas have been reflected in the speeches and promises of Candidate Cole.

Mr. Cole is none the less an estimable citizen for these things. He is none the less an estimable citizen for having in turn been a Democrat, a Populist and now a Republican. It is no discredit to him to have followed any of these parties, but his quick switches that have enabled him to cover all of them within a few years show a lack of balance that does not argue him to be of governorship size.

MAKING IT A FARCE.

The first day spent in jail by Joseph Ralph Burton, formerly a United States senator and now a Missouri convict, was not so bad, apparently.

According to the dispatches, it was varied by a half an hour of liberty, during which the "prisoner" excused himself to the sheriff and strolled over to his wife's boarding house and back again.

Then, too, his faithful wife prepared his breakfast and brought it to him in jail, and stated that she proposed to prepare all of his meals, to save him from the ignominy and perhaps the discomfort of enduring prison fare.

Really, however, there is no reason why Burton should have been allowed to stroll about town, any more than there was why the sheriff should give the rest of his charges half an hour or half a day off, to dispose of as they pleased. Because Burton was a senator, he is allowed privileges denied to common prisoners. It is such discrimination as this that makes men say harsh things about the law which nabs the poor man always, gets the rich and great but seldom, and when it is forced to seize them does it apologetically and tries to make their punishment as easy as possible.

FEDERAL DRAINAGE.

The governor of Oklahoma has issued a call for a national drainage conference, to be held in Oklahoma City Dec. 5, 6 and 7.

This is a vastly important matter, and it is to be hoped that every state in the union will be represented at the proposed conference. Each governor is entitled to appoint ten delegates, each mayor is entitled to appoint one delegate for every 5,000 of the city's population, each board of county commissioners is entitled to appoint one delegate, and so is the executive board of each drainage district, each commercial organization, and each agricultural, horticultural, irrigation or drainage association.

The reason Oklahoma is moving in this matter is that while the new state will have thousands of acres that will have to be reclaimed by irrigation, Oklahoma is to be admitted to the union under an enabling act which makes no grant for drainage purposes such as was done for many of the other states. Minnesota has had such aid; millions of acres of swamp lands have been given to her by the federal government with the agreement that they were to be drained by her. Minnesota has failed so far to keep that agreement, though it has been made clear that it can be done at an enormous profit. Governor Johnson brought this matter urgently to the attention of the legislature in his 1905 message, and the result was the passage of a bill providing for the survey of the swamp lands of the state and the preparation of a comprehensive plan of drainage which will be submitted to the next legislature.

The federal government now spends millions in irrigating arid areas. This is a proper investment, since these lands, now worthless, can be made fruitful by irrigation. But irrigation has no stronger claim upon the government's generosity than drainage. There is no more reason why public money should be spent in reclaiming dry lands by irrigating them than there is why public money should be used in reclaiming wet lands by draining them.

In neither plan is it contemplated that private property shall benefit at public expense. Nor is it expected that federal money shall be used to drain state lands. The government has done its share in giving the lands to the states; it is the duty of the states to drain their own lands.

So while the plan for a national drainage campaign should have the heartiest support, it must not be confused with the plan of state drainage. The government has many acres in Minnesota that it can and should drain at its own expense. But the state has no more right to expect that the nation shall drain its lands than private owners of swamp lands have to except that the state will drain their lands free of cost.

Possibly the nation might drain state lands while it is draining its own, assessing the cost to the state; and possibly the state might drain private lands while draining its own, making the owners pay the cost. But the best and quickest way is for the state to drain its lands without waiting for federal action. That will take much time. If the nation waits as long as Minnesota has, nothing will be done in a generation.

ELECTING SENATORS.

In his speeches in this county Senator Moses E. Clapp placed great stress upon the alleged fact that the Republicans had produced popular selection of United States senators in this state, without waiting for congress to act. This being very important, if true, one followed his explanatory remarks with keenest interest, to note how this had been done.

One learned, there, that the Republicans of Minnesota had produced popular selection of United States senators by having the state convention nominate the candidate for the senatorship. "Then," said he, "if the choice is not satisfactory, all you have to do is to vote against the legislative candidates who support that choice."

Nominating candidates for United States senator in state conventions is a very long way from popular election. It is even a long way from popular nomination. If the Republicans of Minnesota wish to secure popular selection of senatorial candidates without waiting for the constitutional amendment necessary to bring about popular election, they have a simple way open to them. All they need to do is to add a few words to the primary election law, and make it apply to senatorial candidates. Then the field will be open, and the people will pick their candidates. It is true that the legislature will not be legally bound to elect the candidates nominated at the primaries, but that will make no difference. They will be morally bound, and no legislator who values his political existence will dare risk it by flying in the face of the popular expression of choice at the primaries.

It is claimed that the nomination of a senatorial candidate at the state convention is also morally binding upon the members of the party. This is most absurd. To follow it up to its logical conclusion would be to elect our legislatures solely upon the issue of their choice for United States senator, and we have more important issues than that to select them upon. That would be to reduce the legislature to the status of a political convention, and the senators and representatives to the level of delegates. It would throw out of consideration all practical questions of state interest.

Because a legislative candidate favors one senatorial candidate or another is no good reason for electing him. What the people want to know is how he stands on drainage, good roads, railroad regulation, re-apportionment, and other questions of great importance to the state.

To make the United States senate responsive to the will of the people, it must be elected by the people, directly and without confusing circumstances intervening. Until that can be done, the next best thing is to extend the primary election to cover this office, and let the people select their candidates by direct vote.

SUBLIMATED GOSSIP.

According to a dispatch from Paris published in The Herald last night the matrimonial bark of which the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough form the crew is having parlous voyaging. It is reported that domestic difficulties, extending over a long period, have resulted in estrangement and then in separation, and that divorce is a possibility.

This is gossip, of course. It is gossip just as much as the whispered report from Rumor's busy tongue that there is trouble in the family of Bill Smith, the grocer, and that Mr. and Mrs. Smith "fight like cats and dogs." In the Marlborough case, however, it appears that the trouble is "incompatibility," which is a euphemistic method of saying the same thing.

But the prominence of the parties to this piece of gossip, one being a daughter of one of America's richest families, and the other being the son of one of England's oldest families, seems to make their domestic difficulties proper subjects for public discussion.

If these reports turn out to be entirely true, it will not make international marriages on a mercenary basis any more popular than they have been, at any rate. This particular marriage was always considered a peculiarly happy one, and none suspected that she who was Consuelo Vanderbilt was likely to have any of the trouble that heaped itself upon she who was Anna Gould.

However, the chances are terribly against couples that engage in matrimony on a business basis.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"It cannot be denied that there is a strong Hearst feeling in the State of New York," said J. H. Carey of New York at the Spalding. "The feeling seems to be growing stronger that Hearst is to be elected. He is putting up the most phenomenal campaign ever seen in the state. One of the incidents of his campaign tour illustrates this.

"It seems that the Hearst delegation arrived at one of the cities of the state to hold a political meeting. On the night on which they arrived there was a comic opera in the town. The show had the more desirable meeting place. Rather than lose out, Hearst called in the manager and gave him $2,500 to turn over the house for his political meeting. The Hearst papers are also conducting a remarkable campaign, and they are of great influence."

"The New Hampshire people are preparing to have a bill introduced in congress which will prevent the wanton destruction of the forests in the mountain regions," said R. L. Smith of Nashua, N. H., at the McKay. "Ten years ago the Green mountains were thickly covered with forests of fir, pine and hemlock. Today there are patches extending for miles where nothing but tree stumps and broken timber can be seen. Although a large amount of the land is worthless from a productive point of view, as there is solid rock below a foot or two of earth, the forests have always beautified the famous Green mountain region.

"Some of the wood is cut down for commercial purposes, but the hundreds of hunters who visit the region each year recklessly destroy thousands of dollars' worth of forests. Several prominent people with private preserves and resorts in the region are trying to secure a lease on the entire premises and then adopt some means which will make the land fit for something more than the axe of the hunter."

"The last season has been the most successful in the history of our glass works," said V. L. Kirby of Massillon, Ohio, at the St. Louis. "The large number of office buildings erected during the year has had a great deal to do with this, as the amount of glass used in the modern structures of that kind is enormous.

"We are carrying on experiments with the sand found in the western districts of Virginia, and should the experiments prove successful, I believe that the cost of glass manufacture will be greatly decreased. As is well known, most of the glass-making sand comes from small beds in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana. The sand from Ohio is about exhausted, and that from Indiana is of poor quality. The cost of transporting the product from the Keystone state makes the manufacturers' profit extremely small.

"In order to get flawless glass we need sand that is fine in texture and containing little foreign material. From reports, the West Virginia sand seems to fill the bill, but it is not known whether there is a sufficient amount of it to make is worth while developing the beds. A sifting plant is generally erected where the product is secured, and the sand undergoes several thorough sifts before it is finally sent to the plant. When it arrives there it is supposed to be ready for manufacture."

The Age of Gold.

Washington Star: "We were simply money mad." Thus spoke to the court one of the young bank clerks arraigned in Pittsburg recently on a charge of robbing the institution. He packed a good deal into one sentence, and described a disease that is widespread. The victims are numerous, and are found on nearly every rung of the ladder from bottom to top. It is the golden age of gold. Everywhere wealth is piling up, and methods of accumulation are in many cases so loose and questionable they differ little in morals from plain, old-fashioned theft. The man with nothing wants something; the man with something wants more. It is a great chase, and then a weak youngster is an easy prey in the presence of opportunity to help himself. For these reasons inspections of all banks and trust companies should be increased in frequency and thoroughness, and made, as too often they are not, absolutely worthy of the public acceptance.

In a Tender Spot.

THE WEATHER.

All night long the wind howled around the house, the rain pounded in important fury upon the windows, and all out of doors was drenched in sadness. This morning the rain still persisted, the northeast wind drove it rapidly before it, and heavy clouds flew by just over the tops of the houses. It was a real northeaster, the second in a few days. The weather man expects the wind to shift out of the northeast tonight, and he expects rain or snow and cooler weather tonight. Tomorrow it will be warmer and partly cloudy. Yesterday's highest temperature was 42 degs. and last night's lowest was 36 degs.

A year ago today it was cold, and in the night the temperature dropped to 20 degs.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Disturbances of more or less energy are central this morning over Southern Wisconsin and Alberta. The Wisconsin low pressure is causing strong easterly winds in the lake region and rain in that district and the central valleys. This storm will cause further rain and high easterly and southerly winds in the lake region tonight, but it will move somewhat to the eastward by Thursday, attended by a shift to high southwesterly winds and clearing skies over most of the lake region. High pressure areas overlie New England states and the southwest with cool temperatures in the latter district. The Alberta disturbance is causing warmer weather in the extreme west and far northwest."

WHITTLED TO A POINT.

New York Sun: Stella—Did they throw rice over the bride?

Bella—Yes; that is why she invited them to eat her first biscuits.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "It is reported that the man who invented barbed wire is dead."

"Well, he certainly had his good points."

"No?" repied the sentimental youth. "Evidently you never got a kiss from your best girl over the telephone."

Harper's Weekly: Laundryman—I regret to tell you, sir, that one of your shirts is lost.

Philadelphia Press: "I want to get a mitten, please," said the little girl, "if it don't cost too much."

"O! you mean a pair of mittens, don't you, my child?" replied the shopkeeper.

"No, just only one; one that's suitable for a boy that's goin' to propose an' be rejected."

Washington Star: "I'm afraid I haven't many good arguments for our side of the question," said the orator.

"No arguments?" replied the campaign manager. "Then quote statistics. They sound wise and everybody would rather take them for granted than try to understand them."

Cleveland Leader: "I believe from the way you talk about money in your sleep that you have been gambling again."

"My dear, that's only a kind of mineral I'm interested in."

"Nonsense; you keep talking all the time about 'ante' and 'money.'"

"That's just it, you see. Antimony, my darling, antimony."

Washington Star: "Your one idea seems to be money," said the critical friend.

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum; "that condition has one advantage. You don't have the usual difficulty of getting people to accept your ideas."

Washington Star: "You think your next speech will make an impression?" said the campaign adviser.

"I do," answered the candidate.

"Have you any new argument to place before your opponent?"

"No; but I have a lot of new names to call him."

A Musical Preference.

I'm mighty fond o' music, though I never had a chance
To even learn enough to play the fiddle at a dance.
But anyhow, if there is opportunity fur choice
Instid of any instrument, I take the human voice.
I don't go in fur op'ry, 'cause when anybody sings,
Somebody else is jokin' or a dancin' highland flings—
There's just one kind that suits me right, on every Sabbath day
I like to sing "Old Hundred" an' to hear the organ play.

I practice it each week day, so's on Sunday I will be Less likely to get nervous an' start singin' off the key
There's an echo in its rhythm that comes solemn-like an' vast,
An echo from the martyrs who went marchin' through the past,
An echo from the heroes who have triumphed o'er the foe,
An echo from the loved ones with us not so long ago—
I s'pose my taste ain't cultured, but be all that as it may,
I like to sing "Old Hundred" an' to hear the organ play.

A prominent lumberman says the output of logs around Duluth this winter will be about 80,000,000 feet.

Capt. Anson of the Chicago ball club yesterday signed Baldwin, formerly of the Duluth club, but Baldwin has not yet been released from the Duluth club.

The docks at Oneota were badly damaged by fire yesterday afternoon. They were built by the Oneota Lumber company and purchased last spring by Mayer Sutphin, who soon after sold one-half of it to J. A. Willard of Mankato, and others. The fire was confined to the Willard portion of the dock.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: If the United States senators of this nation put the same energy into their work at Washington that they do in campaigning for their several political parties the press notices received would be more pleasant, and the general good to the nation would be more noticeable.

Stillwater Gazette: Somebody, who knows as little of the subject as some of us do of heaven, has sent out the story that all the wives of the olden time were red headed. We believe this is a slander on the auburn-haired contingent, and speaking from personal observation can truthfully say we have known some lovely and lovable women who were unmistakably red hair. Skiddoo, you fellows who write chestnutty stuff about the red-haired women.

Littlefork Times: No matter what changes he may make in spelling, the president will always spell success in the same old way.

Warroad Commonwealth: There are a number of people who think reform in this country has gone too far and who are loud in declaring it, but if their records were looked over it would generally be found that they used to ride on railroad passes.

Breckenridge Gazette: The state campaign is now making a noise just like a cat sneaking up on a mouse. Do you hear it?

Northfield News: The two political parties in Cuba were called the "Moderates" and the "Liberals," and the trouble in the end was that the Moderates were too extreme and the Liberals were not at all liberal.

Long Prairie Democrat: If the railroad and warehouse commissioners are to be given credit for the reduction of freight rates, why didn't they do it before? The same commissioners have been in office for the past six years.

Carlton Vidette: Now that the "free pass" system is about to be abolished, it is as Artemus Ward used to say, "amoosin'" to see how many candidates are flourishing the anti-pass banner in order to ride into office on a free vote.

Pine City Pine Poker: Railroad rebating isn't as popular as it was some years ago. Special privileges in the tariff schedules will have to go, too.

Albert Lea Tribune: It is less than three weeks until the election and yet there is little interest shown by the average citizen, and even the candidates have some difficulty in getting very much enthused over the spiritless affair as it exists in Minnesota. There is danger that a vast number of citizens will be too busy at other work and too little interested in politics to go to the polls and vote.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press: The political fight over the state offices is certainly a tame affair this year. There is no enthusiasm and in consequence the wise heads are at sea as to what the results will be. When the voters think instead of hurrahing, the party leaders have to keep guessing.

Rochester Post and Record: A New York waiter has retired with a hundred thousand-dollar bank account, and nearly all this has come to him in the way of tips. Here is a striking lesson in thrift and economy for waiters and Pullman porters who will save their tips.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Hard labor is a plaster that alleviates the pains of the mind.

It's easy for a woman to keep secrets that are not interesting.

Two women like to start a fuss and then leave their husbands to fight it out.

Even when a man knows a woman's age, she never thinks he thinks she looks it.

Enthusiasm.

I kind o' like campaignin' time I like to hear 'em tell
Jes' what the gover'ment should do to keep things goin' well;
I like to hear 'em talk about the corporation folks
That holds us common people by the throat; I like the jokes
An' funny pictures that they print 'bout rival candidates.
It's fine to be a portion of the crowd that congregates
In a patriotic spirit fur the glory of the land.
But best of all I like "three cheers!" an' music by the band.

I sometimes don't exactly know the cause of all the din;
Some feller starts the shoutin' an' the rest of us join in;
But it's kind of beneficial now an' then to raise a cheer,
An' keep the speaker feelin' it's worth while to persevere.
An' the music they are playin' when the boys go marchin' by—
It's better than an op'ry, an' the cost ain't near so high—
Although there's often arguments I don't quite understand,
I'm always in it with "three cheers" an' music by the band.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It worries a woman not to have anything to worry over.

Children would insist on stealing castor oil to take if you locked it in the pantry.

Even if a girl hugged a man while he was doing it, she could get indignant at his kissing her.

One of the worst habits a man can have is to have headaches on account of his bad habits.

If there was an internal revenue tax on milk, men would order it in barrooms just to be able to kick about the way the government robs the public.

Talking on Stilts.

Washington Post: The Fortnightly Review, in a learned article, says: "Phonetic individualism would presently result in a state of sheer linguistic delinquescence. This, of course, is an absolutely unthinkable eventuality." A few more like that will put an end to opposition to the simplified spelling propaganda.

Over and Above.

Harper's Weekly: "Mother, does Dr. Smith wear his everyday clothes under that long white gown when he preaches?" asked a little girl who had seen the edge of the minister's trousers under his robe.

"Yes, dear," was the reply.

RAILROADS

A FARE AND ONE-THIRD

Central Passenger Association Lines Announce Holiday Rate.

It Will Apply to Western and Southwestern Districts.

A Christmas rate of a fare and a third for the round trip has been decided on by lines in the Central Passenger association for the benefit of those who desire to visit their homes during the holiday season. The rate will apply to Western Passenger and Southwestern Passenger association territory, irrespective of distance. In the past the rate has applied only to points within a radius of 200 miles.

The Central and Southeastern Passenger associations have been notified of the rate, and may use it for basing purposes. Tickets will be on sale Dec. 22, 23, 24, 25, 30 and 31, with the return limit fixed at Jan. 4.

Passenger agents report that business is keeping up extraordinarily well, some of the roads even enjoying an increase over last month. It is considered remarkable that the passenger business is keeping up so well, considering the heavy movement of the summer months, when the roads did the best business in their histories.

California business is moving at a moderate pace, but will become brisk very shortly. One-way colonist rates will be discontinued Oct. 31, and before this time arrives those of an economical turn of mind who wish to spend the winter in California will invest in a colonist ticket. Some of the roads are planning on putting in service additional tourist cars the last few days of October, in order to take care of the traffic.

The Eastern and Southern roads have been making a strong effort to turn the tide of winter travel to Florida and Cuba and away from the Pacific coast. Agents of these lines thought the San Francisco fire and earthquake would help them in this respect this season, and possibly their wishes will be realized to a certain extent. On the other hand, the recent severe storm along the South Atlantic and Gulf coast, in which so many lives were lost, may have a tendency to keep many tourists away from the South this winter.

Passenger traffic to California has been good ever since the earthquake, and railroad officials interested say their business this winter will not be seriously affected as a result of the San Francisco disaster. The scare has blown over, and people are said to be traveling to California points as freely as they ever were.

W. T. Wilke Back From East.

W. T. Wilke, city passenger and ticket agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, has returned from an extended trip to Eastern points. He stopped at Quebec, Montreal, New York, Boston and other points in the East.

THE SINGING MUCH ENJOYED

Prof. Benjamin F. Butts sang two solos at the evangelistic services at the Second Presbyterian church, 1515 West Superior street, last evening. Prof. Butts' fine voice was brought out to fine advantage in two numbers, "The Name of Jesus" and "Tell Mother I'll be There."

Rev. John A. McGaughey of Two Harbors was the principal speaker last evening and his topic was "The Insufficiency of Negative Christianity." He declared that the person who did nothing at all was often quite as bad as the wicked person; that this world wanted positive lives and not those whose conservatism permitted them to neither err greatly nor to accomplish any good.

He pointed out that opportunities came to everyone and only the self-centered persons allowed them to slip by unused. Some lives, he said, might be written in a single sentence and that sentence would represent that the life had accomplished nothing.

Rev. Mr. McGaughey will preach again this evening. The chorus choir, under the direction of Prof. Butts, will sing, and Prof. Butts will sing some solos.

MANY BONES ARE FRACTURED

While working on the new addition to the Lenox hotel, Carlo Tardano, an Italian laborer, fell from a scaffold on the fourth story of the building, into the alley, this morning, and suffered severe injuries.

The manner in which the accident occurred is not known. Had he fallen on the cement sidewalk in front or at the side of the building, he would undoubtedly have been killed. As it is he may recover, although he sustained a broken leg, a broken arm, several fractured ribs and a brogen jawbone.

A cold is much more easily cured when the bowels are open. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar opens the bowels and drives the cold out of the system in young or old. Sold by all druggists.

CLERKS STRIKE WITH OTHERS

New Orleans, Oct. 24.—Texas & Pacific railroad clerks all left their places today, conferences with representatives of the road having failed to adjust their grievances, which are similar to those of the Southern Pacific strikers.

Following the discharge of ten men by Master Mechanic Nolan, all the machinists and laborers of the Southern Pacific at Algiers struck today. Fourth Vice President Wilson of the International Machinists, who is here from Washington, says the strike will extend all over the Southern Pacific lines unless the trouble is adjusted.

ROUNDS UP PLOTTERS.

Fifty Alleged Mexican Revolutionists Clapped Into Prison.

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 24.—Governor Creel of Chihuahua, Mexico, yesterday and last night caused the arrest in that state of more than fifty persons, letters from whom, addressed to E. Flores Magoon, former head of the St. Louis Mexican junta, were found on revoluttionists recently arrested here. It is now alleged that Capt. Jiminez Castro of the Mexican army, who was arrested at a meeting of the El Paso junta, was a Mexican spy.

RECORD IS NOW A TIE

Jones and Snyder Both Take 380,000 Bushels of Wheat.

A tie is now scored in the grain carrying record of the Great Lakes. Yesterday evening the steamer B. J. Jones left the Duluth harbor carrying 380,000 bushels of wheat. She took this on at the Great Northern elevator and this was a little more than 2,000 bushels better than the record made by the Laughlin a few days before.

But now comes the steamer William Snyder with exactly the same record. A special telegram to The Herald from Fort William says that the Snyder left there last evening bearing 380,000 bushels of wheat, or precisely the same load as taken by the Jones.

The B. F. Jones broke the record in wheat cargoes about two weeks ago and while she was proceeding to Buffalo with her big load of 370,000 bushels, the James Laughlin, a sister ship, comes into port and made another record with 375,000 bushels. Now the B. F. Jones is once more in the lead, and he rrecord is likely to stand for the season.

The James Laughlin will arrive at Duluth probably tonight and it is expected she will set a new mark in big loads as far as the flax cargoes are concerned. She will take on a cargo of flax here and is expected to load 390,000 bushels of this grain.

Ironwood, Mich., Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Nick Frank, a patroiman at Jesseville, received several knife wounds while in the act of arresting a drunken Italian, who was causing a disturbance. The Italian was resisting the officer when two of his friends assisted him in getting away. Frank shot at them and wounded one of them. Word was sent to Ironwood to be on the lookout for the men, who would attempt to reach Hurley and elude the officers. They were captured near the bridge by Marshal Foley and brought to the city jail. The wounds received by Officer Frank were found to be slight cuts in the leg.

During a free-for-all fight between a number of railroad men from Chicago, Monday night, several large plate glass windows of Ehler's saloon were broken and considerable other damage to the saloon. Five of the men were placed under arrest. The men compose an extra gang of section men at work on the tracks around the mines and they have been boarding in box cars placed on a siding near the Norrie mine.

Traverse City—Julius Smith, aged 17, was killed while hunting ducks on the bay Monday. A gun was discharged as he shifted his position in the boat.

Houghton—Word has been received in the Copper country of the death of C. W. Pickford in Washington, D. C., where he has lived during the past few years, the end coming Wednesday of the week just ended. The deceased was the father of Mrs. James Pascoe, the wife of the newly-appointed elder of the Houghton district of the Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. Pascoe spent some time in Washington at the bedside of the dying man, but had to return to his duties in the Houghton district before the end came. The deceased was a long time a resident of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and was one of the progressive citizens and business men of that city.

Calumet—It is expected that the next Lake Superior Presbyterian assembly will determine where the Upper Peninsula Christian Endeavor union shall be held next year. This question was not decided upon when the convention came to a close in Calumet Sunday. The officers who were elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President, E. R. Aler, Marquette; vice-president, Miss Belle Stewart, Calumet; secretary and treasurer, Miss N. Nelson, Marquette; missionary superintendent, Miss Emma Doles, Marquette.

Marquette—By the first of next month Marquette will be able to boast of a modern and up-to-date clubhouse. The Marquette club, which is the organization which will occupy these quarters, is sparing neither expense nor effort to make their future home handsome and convenient, and if the contractors fulfill their part of the obligations, the club will take possession on the first of next month, and celebrate the occasion with a house night which will long be remembered as an example of good cheer and hospitality.

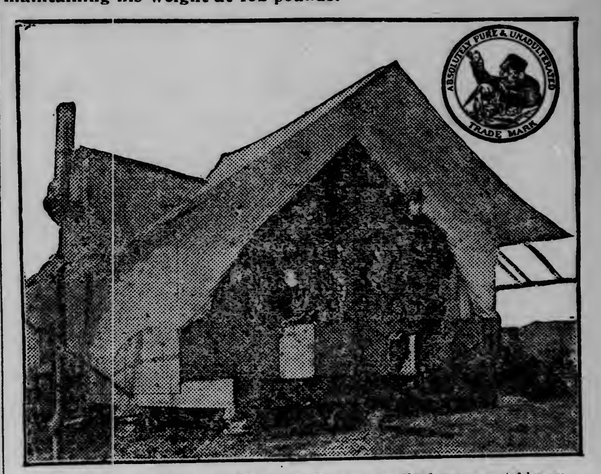

Negaunee—G J. Maas has purchased Medard Gauthier's farm, immediately opposite the Negaunee cemeteries, comprising nine acres, between the tracts owned by Charles Martel and the Pioneer & Arctic company. The Gauthier farm was one of the very few parcels of land in that section not owned by one of the corporations operating mines here.

Paul Swartzer, George Kellan and J. Pross, all bricklayers and plasterers, left Sunday night for San Francisco, where they will spend the winter working at their trade. Mechanics of all kinds are in great demand in Frisco and it is said that the wages paid are exceptionally high. The Negaunee men have been promised $12 per day. All are first-class mechanics, one or two of them having been paid as high as $6 per day during the summer months.

Mr. Meyer Britwitz, who was completely broken down in health and failed until he weighed only 120 pounds, recovered his health and increased his weight 32 pounds, and now has no difficulty in maintaining his weight at 152 pounds.

A constantly growing law practice necessitated my working quite hard and assiduously. My health began to fail, but I could not neglect the interests of my clients and properly care for myself. I began to lose weight and developed a distressing hacking cough, which was extremely severe and violent, especially when arising in the morning, and these paroxysms usually left me weak and with a feeling of iassitude. My whole system was broken down, and after consulting with a number of eminent physicians I decided to take drastic measures, and abandoned my law practice entirely and took up my residence in Liberty, N. Y., where I lived for one year in a canvas tent.

Early in my stay in Liberty I was advised by a friend of mine to use Duffy's Malt Whiskey as a tonic. This I did twice daily, and found its effects to be invigorating and bracing, with none of the after effects or cravings usually produced by intoxicants. I found it sharpened my appetite considerably, enabling me to eat heartily.

While, of course, my recovery was due in a measure to my method of living, at the same time I feel certain that the use of Duffy's Malt Whiskey was a material factor in my speedy recovery. My cure was complete, as is evidenced by the fact that I have again resumed the practice of law, and whereas before my illness I never weighed above 120 pounds, today I easily tip the scale at 152 pounds, and find that I have no difficulty in maintaining that weight.—MEYER BRITWITZ, Attorney-at-Law, 99 Nassau Street, New York City, N. Y., July 18, '06.

HER GEMS ALL GONE

Actress Anna Held is Robbed on Sleeper of $150,000.

Money and Valuable Papers Stolen by Two Men.

Cleveland, Oct. 24.—The police of this city and a well known detective agency are working hard to discover the whereabouts of $150,000 worth of jewels that Anna Held, the actress, reported had been stolen from her state room on a Pennsylvania train early Monday morning, while she and her husband, Florence Ziegfeld, Jr., were temporarily absent.

The gems were in a small hand satchel which also contained over $6,000 in money and papers, bank notes, etc., which Miss Held said she valued at $100,000.

The local police were incredulous at first, but Chief Kohler says he is convinced that the robbery was committed. Miss Held gave a description of two men on the train she said she suspected, and the detective agency reported that one of them had gone to Baltimore. Miss Held says she believes she was followed by the two men from Baltimore to this city.

The more valuable pieces stolen consisted of a string of sixty-three pearls, valued at $35,000; a fifteen inch corsage piece of diamonds and emeralds, valued at $25,000; a string of fifty-one pearls, valued at $25,000; a dog collar with four brooches of diamonds and eight strings of pears, valued at $25,000; a diamond brooch, worth $6,000, and some thirty other rings, chains of diamonds, necklaces, valued at from $500 to $5,000 each.

ADMISSION IS AGAIN REFUSED

John Herren's Eyes Are Found to be Still Afflicted.

The word of no physician other than Dr. E. L. Cheney, marine hospital physician and surgeon, has any influence on United States Immigrant Inspector William H. Dean, when it comes to certifying to the health of aliens applying for admission to the United States at this port. John Herren of Minneapolis was rejected this morning for the second time within two weeks, and returned to Port Arthur, despite the fact that he was armed with a certificate of a Canadian physician to the effect that he has been cured of trachoma, which disease was the cause of his first rejection.

Herren is a Norwegian. He has been a resident of Minneapolis for the past two years, and always considered himself in the best of health. When he left for Canada a short time ago, he fully intended returning to his home in the United States, and had no idea he would meet with difficulty in doing so. He is a carpenter by trade. About two weeks ago, he arrived in Duluth on one of the north shore boats. With the other aliens on the boat, he was examined by Immigrant Inspector Dean and Dr. Cheney.

The doctor certified that he was afflicted with trachoma, a contagious disease of the eye, and, acting on this information, the board of special inquiry refused Herren admission to the United States, and ordered his return to Port Arthur, the port where he boarded the boat. The young fellow was highly indignant that he should thus be rejected, after having lived in the country for two years, but there was nothing for it but that he must go back. Accordingly he was returned.

It seems that, immediately upon his arrival at Port Arthur, he consulted a Canadian physician, who began treating his eyes. In a few days Herren was pronounced cured, and was given a medical certificate to this effect. He was a passenger on the next boat to Duluth, which appened to be the America.

Full of hope, but fearful of his reception, Herren again confronted Inspector Dean this morning, upon the America's arrival in port. He was recognized at once. He produced his doctor's certificate, but, upon Dr. Cheey's testimony that he was still afflicted with trachoma, Herren was for a second time rejected and ordered returned to Port Arthur. He will go back with the America, and probably will make no more attempts to get home through the port of Duluth. Physicians say trachoma cannot possibly be cured in two weeks' time, and some say it cannot be cured at all.

The government has not time to bother with doctors' disagreements, and always takes the word of the official physician against that of all others, no matter how numerous they may be.

MAYOR BANS "CLANSMAN"

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—Mayor Weaver issued an order yesterday, suppressing the further production here of Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr.'s "The Clansman," which was to have had a week's engagement at the Walnut Street theater.

The mayor's action was prompted by the demonstration Monday night at the theater by several thousand colored citizens, and by protests by a delegation of representative colored clergymen, doctors, lawyers and business men, who called on him and objected to the continuance of the play, because of its alleged tendency to arouse racial prejudice and to incite riot.

Counsel for the management of the theatrical production claimed that there was redress through the courts for those opposed to the play, and charged that the colored people and not the players were responsible for Monday night's riotous demonstration.

AYERS CLEARED AT SIOUX FALLS

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 24.—The first of the alleged land fraud cases to be tried in South Dakota, after having been on trial in the United States court in this city several days, came to a sudden end yesterday, when on motion of the attorneys for the defense, Judge Carland directed a verdict for the defendants in the cases of Thomas H. Ayers, John I. Newell, John F. McGuire and Howard A. Binwork of Pierre, stockholders and agents of the Gas Belt Land & Abstract company, with headquarters at Pierre.

It was shown by the evidence presented by the prosecution that the defendants procured fifteen widows of soldiers from New Ulm and other points in Minnesota to go to Pierre and make entry on fifteen different tracts of government land; that all their expenses were paid by the agents' company from the time they left home until they returned, it not being necessary for the widows even to pay the land office fees. The tracts were immediately leased to cattlemen.

In his decision directing a verdict in favor of the defendants, Judge Carland held in substance that at the time the allege offense was committed, in July, 1903, rulings of the land department and federal laws authorized soldiers' widows to make entry of public land without the necessity of making settlement upon it, and also authorized them to lease the land even without ever seeing it, as was the case as in this instance.

The law, however, was changed in December, 1903, but too late to benefit the prosecution in the case of Ayers and the other three men.

At the April term of the United States court, in Sioux Falls, an indictment was returned against defendants charging them with engaging in a conspiracy to defraud the government out of tracts of land between the Missouri river and the Black Hills, in Western South Dakota. The indictment contained twenty-three counts and was one of the most voluminous documents of the kind ever returned by a federal grand jury in South Dakota.

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward Leland, alias Edward Lamott, one of the noted convicts of the state prison at Stillwater, was discharged today, having served his sentence of ten years, after deducting good time allowance. He figured in a conspiracy to escape from the prison when Gen. Reeve was warden, but it was blocked and two guards were arrested. One of them, Patrick N. Cunningham of Caledonia pleaded guilty and was sent to the state reformatory and has since died. The other, John F. Roberts of Minneapolis, was found guilty in the district court at Stillwater and paid a fine of about $700. Freeman P. Lane, attorney for the two guards and also for Leland, was accused by the latter of irregularity in professional conduct and the supreme court disbarred him for a year.

Sawyer Bank Robbers Captured by Sheriff's Posse.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—After a chase lasting thirty-six hours, the sheriff's posse succeeded early last evening in landing the five bandits who robbed the Sawyer, N. D., bank early Monday morning, when a battle ensued with citizens, during which 300 shots were fired, the robbers getting away with $4,000. The men were discovered on a farm near here. Escape was attempted, and in a fight which followed one robber was severely wounded in the leg. Another member of the party ran into a slough with $900 in gold and bills and dropped the money into the water. Money was also scattered on the prairie by the bandits. Chief of Police Hagen secured $3,500 of the money. Four of the captured men are young and well dressed, none being over 25 years old. The money was being carried in the bags and was composed of gold and bills, all the heavy silver having been thrown away.

Patrick Hood, living northwest of the city near Plaza, was run over by a wagonload of coal Saturday and his head was badly crushed. He would not allow a doctor to touch him for several hours. He died from his injuries.

Grand Forks—Word has been received here that for the second time in two months the postoffice at Colgate, in Steele county, has been burglarized.

Fargo—The car shortage has caused delay in collections in this state. The men whose notes were due the first of the month have had a hard time meeting their obligations. The collectors generally understood the situation and have not been insistent except in a few instances.

Valley City—The local police arrested Gust Anderson, who was engaged in frightening women in the north end of town. He attempted to commit suicide three different ways while in the city jail, by hanging, burning and severing a jugular vein. The first was tried with a rope made of handkerchiefs and fastened to the roof of the cage. It was a flat failure. He ignited his hair and succeeded better. Most of his hair was burned off. He then went for the jugular with a piece of glass. He was then removed to the county jail.

William Moug, a liveryman, who was injured in a runaway a week ago, is dead. His skull was fractured near the base and in the ear. It was severe enough to allow of the escape of brain matter, and yet he lived eight days. Physicians consider the case remarkable.

Chamberlain.—The 15-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Rhodes, who live on a large farm near here, was playing about in the dooryard while the mother was attending to her household duties. Suddenly hearing the little one scream, the mother ran to the door to find a large bald eagle, with its talons fixed in the child's dress, endeavoring to lift its burden from the ground. The child was heavy for its age, however, and the eagle could not much more than lift it. Seizing a broom the mother attacked the eagle fiercely, causing it to drop its prey. The bird fought back with vigor, finally was beaten into submission and took flight. The child was badly scratched.

Mitchell.—Miss Inglebaugh Peterson was buried in Graceland cemetery yesterday afternoon. It was a tragic death which brought this estimable young lady to her grave. She was kindling a fire in the kitchen stove when in some way the flames caught on the sleeve of her dress, and in trying to extinguish them with her apron the fire spread to the rest of her clothing. In a moment she was a burning mass of flames. She ran outdoors in her great fright and spying the watering trough nearby she jumped into the water and extinguished the flames, but not before she had been burned in a very serious manner.

Sioux Falls.—To find her husband dead in a chair was the painful experience of Mrs. Wendell Obert late yesterday afternoon upon returning to her home in Sioux Falls from a visit in Canistota. Illuminating gas is supposed to have caused the death of Mr. Obert, who was one of the pioneer residents of Sioux Falls and was well known throughout the state. When Mrs. Obert left last week for her visit Mr. Obert was in the country, and it has not yet been established just when he returned. When Mrs. Obert opened the front door of the house she was driven back by a strong odor of gas. After a moment she and her sister-in-law, Mrs. McKinnon, who returned from Canistota with her, entered the house and found Mr. Obert sitting in a rocking chair stiff and cold in death. He was fully dressed, including his hat. One of the burners of the gas stove was found fully turned on, but not lighted, with a newspaper over the burner. In his right hand the dead man grasped a newspaper. One theory is that Mr. Obert accidentally turned on the gas burner by carelessly brushing against it, and that while reading fell asleep and was asphyxiated.

WILL NEED GOOD VOTE

Constitutional Amendments to be Voted on Are Important.

At the coming general election in November the voters of Minnesota will be given the opportunity to express themselves for and against three constitutional amendments that will be submitted. More or less attention has been given these amendments by the public speakers in either party, and their importance has been urged, but there are still a large number of voters who have not yet fully posted themselves regarding the proposed changes.

It may not be a matter of common knowledge that to adopt a constitutional amendment in Minnesota requires a majority of all votes cast at the election. A majority of the votes cast in favor of the amendment will not carry unless equal to a majority of all the votes cast at the election. For instance, if 200,000 votes were cast and only 150,000 should vote on the constitutional amendment, a majority of the 150,000 would not be enough. The amendment would require a vote of more than 100,000 to pass.

This means, practically, that a failure to vote on the amendments is as much a vote against them as a direct negative vote, and the voters are urged to keep that in mind.

Inquiry has been made of The Herald regarding the three amendments and their relative importance, in answer to which the following general information is given:

The first amendment in importance, although the second in number on the official ticket, is the "amendment of article 9 of the constitution, relating to taxation, to take the place of sections 1, 2, 3 and 4, and the amendment adds one at the end of said article adopted in 1889."

It is a matter of common knowledge that the present provisions as regards taxation are hard and fast, and absolutely prohibit any reform in taxation. The present form of taxation is provided for by the state constitution, and it is proposed to amend it.

The proposed amendment will, it is claimed, remove most of the restrictions surrounding tax legislation and the legislators will be permitted to devise some new system.

As an instance of the present conditions, it is pointed out that the law requires all personal and real property to be assessed at its full value, but everybody knows that the enforcement of the law has been a "howling farce" and the burden of the taxation has fallen most heavily on the people who were the least able to withstand it.

The new amendment would permit, though it does not provide, an income tax. If the amendment passes and the income tax is determined to be a just system, it can be provided for. It cannot be had under the present constitutional provisions.

The only objection, it is claimed, that has been made to the tax amendment is that it makes a slight change in the matter of exemptions. The old provisions exempted church property and used words "used for church purposes." The proposed amendment omits those words, and it is claimed by some that this would permit the churches or church societies to escape taxation on any property owned by them and not used for church purposes. It is the opinion of some of the leading men in the Minnesota legal fraternity, however, that the courts would be hardly likely to place that construction on the law in the proposed amendment. Even if the courts were to do so it is claimed that the great benefits which are expected to result if the amendment carries will more than offset this feature because of the fair and just methods of raising public revenues that would follow.

The second amendment in importance and which appears first on the official ballot, is "amendment to section 16 of article 9 of the constitution, establishing the road and bridge fund and authorizing the legislature to levy an annual tax for the purpose of constructing and improving roads and bridges within the state." This amendment provides that the state tax for road purposes be raised from 1-20 of a mill to ¼ of a mill and that the increase shall be distributed over the state, each county getting not more than 3 per cent or less than one-half of 1 per cent of the increase, annually.

The state now raises by its road tax not more than $50,000 per year and the new tax, it is said, would raise less than $500,000 per year. This amount is considered a modest figure as compared with that other states more advanced in roadmaking are giving to this important work. As an instance it might be mentioned that the state of New York recently voted $50,000,000 in bonds for a system of state roads, to be spent at the rate of $5,000,000 annually for ten years.

The third amendment is an "amendment to article 1 of the constitution: 'any person may sell or peddle the products of the farm or garden occupied and cultivated by him without obtaining a license therefor.'"

The amendment exempts producers, such as farmers and market gardeners, from paying a license fee in order that they may dispose of their products.

Under the constitution as it is at present form, it is impossible to make this exemption without exempting all peddlers and itinerant merchants of all kinds from the license requirements. Though it is tacitly overlooked in most of the communities, and farmers are permitted to peddle without a license, technically they are lawbreakers. The new amendment would provide for an exemption in the case of the farmers and gardeners, without exempting the other classes of peddlers that should be required to pay a license.

OPERA BOUFFE AT SWANVILLE

Townspeople Lacked Nerve to Tackle Robbers —Latter Also Afraid.

Little Falls, Minn., Oct. 24.—An attempt was made Sunday evening to rob the Bank of Swanville at Swanville, nineteen miles west of this city, which seemed more like an opera bouffe than a robbery. The robbers evidently came from Burtrum. They pried open the front door of the bank and attacked the brick wall of the safe deposit vault with picks and crowbars.

While at work here they were heard by a citizen, who shot out of his window with a revolver and bawled lustily for help. This came in the form of the village marshall carrying a repeating rifle, and villagers armed with hayforks and other primitive weapons. An attempt was then made to induce this party to lead an assault on the bank, but the posse couldn't be convinced of the utility of the scheme, and the robbers were left to their work undisturbed.

In the meantime the thieves broke through the wall of the vault and blew the door of the safe with nitro-glycerine. The Swanville publicity agent then telephoned the sheriff to come at once, as the robbers had blown up the safe. The sheriff advised them to "shoo the naughty burglars away," or turn a hose on them.

Finally, apparently frightened at their own wickedness, the robbers decamped without obtaining any money, as they had been unable to pierce the strongbox. The vault is a wreck.

PUT ACID IN HIS WHISKY.

Latter Was Not an Antidote and Robinson is Dead.

Edgewood, Iowa, Oct. 24.—William Robinson, a drayman of this place, proved the fallacy of the claim of some physicians that alcohol is an absolute antidote for carbolic acid poison, by committing suicide by the use of the drug, which he placed in a glass of whisky. Despondency over his inability to break the drink habit is alleged to have been the cause of Robinson's act. He leaves a wife and one son.

TAFT CANCELS DATE.

Secretary of War Unable to Pay Visit to Fort Snelling.

Washington, Oct. 24.—It is announced today that Secretary Taft will be unable to visit Fort Snelling on his forthcoming Western trip early next summer. The secretary planned a trip of inspection to all of the army posts in the West, including Snelling, but the plans have been changed materially because of the Cuban troubles.

NEW BLOOD IN CABINET

Meyer and Oscar Straus to Take Portfolios in 1907.

Cortelyou in Shaw's Place and Others Moved Around.

Washington, Oct. 24.—The following statement regarding prospective changes in President Roosevelt's cabinet was made public at the White House yesterday:

"On the retirement of Secretary Shaw and Attorney General Moody from the cabinet, the following changes will be made:

"Secretary of the treasury—George B. Cortelyou.

"Postmaster general—George Von L. Meyer.

"Attorney general—Charles J. Bonaparte.

"Secretary of the navy—Victor H. Metcalf.

The general understanding for some time has been that Attorney General Moody will retire Jan. 1 next, and that Secretary Shaw will follow him, March 4. On the first of the year, therefore, Mr. Bonaparte, who is now secretary of the navy, will succeed Mr. Moody as attorney general, and he will in turn be succeeded by Mr. Metcalf, the secretary of commerce and labor, the latter's place being filled by Mr. Straus. Mr. Cortelyou, now postmaster general, will take Secretary Shaw's place, March 4, at which time Mr. Meyer is to become postmaster general.

The announcement of the prospective changes in the cabinet was made following a protracted cabinet meeting at which the whole matter was considered fully.

The changes contemplate the introduction of two new men into the cabinet—Mr. Meyer, who is to be postmaster general, and Mr. Straus, who is to be secretary of commerce and labor. The fact that Mr. Meyer was to have a place in the cabinet had been known for some time, but the name of Mr. Straus has been mentioned only incidentally, if at all.

The transfers of Cortelyou to the treasury, Bonaparte to the attorney generalship and Metcalf to the navy, had been generally accepted as among the probabilities for some time, although both Bonaparte and Metcalf were for a time loath to leave their present positions, because they had become so fully identified with the work of their respective departments.

Mr. Meyer, who will become postmaster general, is ambassador to Russia, to which place he was appointed March 6, 1905. He was ambassador to Italy from 1900 to 1905. He is a native of Massachusetts, and has been well known as a business man.

Straus will be the first Hebrew ever made a member of the president's cabinet. He was born Dec. 3, 1850, and is well known as a merchant, diplomat and author. He represented the United States as minister to Turkey on different occasions, and was appointed by President Roosevelt to fill the vacancy caused by the death of ex-President Harrison as a member of the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague.

FARMERS PLAN TO RUN PRICES

Society of Equity Proposes to Erect Many Storage Places.

East St. Louis, Ill., Oct. 24.—The first national convention of the American Society of Equity, composed of farmers, began here yesterday with more than 500 delegates present from Illinois, Kentucky, New York, North Carolina, Utah, Wisconsin, Ohio and Indiana. The convention seeks to regulate values of grain and farm products by regulating the supply in relation to the demand.

In his annual address, President Drayton said: "This is not a trust, nor a combine to force extortionate prices, but rather an organization to get profitable prices for farm products. Our idea is to establish granaries in the grain country, cold storage plants, hay barns and places to store all sorts of farm products. If the market is low the society will hold the product until the demand forces up profitable prices, when the goods may be sold. The poor farmer who cannot afford to hold his grain will be given a warehouse receipt, good for two-thirds the face value of the grain represented."

RICHES GUSH FROM GROUND

Franklin, Pa., Oct. 24.—From a poor man to an oil producer with an income of $95 an hour, is the transition of Andrew Rapp, who has located the biggest oil well the Pennsylvania oil fields have known in twenty-five years.

When the well was drilled the oil began to flow so fast that in half an hour it was gushing to the top of the derrick. The well is gushing seventy-five barrels an hour, which, at the present price, amounts to $2.086 a day. The well will increase the production to probably 4,500 barrels a day when plans can be made to care for it.

The lucky operator is 55 years old and has been in the business for years. He has been able to keep just about even, though his debts have at times threatened to swamp him.

TAKE PAUPER TO NEW YORK

William H. Dean, United States immigration inspector at the Duluth port, leaves this afternoon for New York in company with the Austrian, George Blatnik, who has been ordered deported to his former home.

Blatnik has been a pauper and an occupant of the county poor farm for the last six months, suffering from locomotor ataxia, and his case was considered by Mr. Dean and the poor commissioners about two weeks ago. Orders have since come to Mr. Dean from the immigration department that Blatnik should be deported. Mr. Dean and his charge will arrive at New York on Friday and Blatnik will be placed on board the steamer, Goscogne, at Pier No. 42 North river, Saturday noon. The boat will land him at his old home town of Rudolfswerth, where he will be cared for by his relatives.

Blatnik has been in this country about a year and a half, during which time he has been an occupant of the poor farm nearly six months. He is absolutely helpless and as he has no friends in the United States his deportation was necessary. Otherwise St. Louis county might have been obliged to support him for a period of twenty years or more. He is not averse to going back to his native land. On the other hand he is anxious to be where he can be cared for by his relatives and friends.

Immigration Inspector Dean expects to return some time next week after he has seen Blatnik safely upon his journey.

DIED FROM BURNS.

Balaton, Minn., Oct. 24.—Live coals in a stove in which Mrs. Andrew Nelson was starting a fire and had poured kerosene oil, ignited the oil and caused the can in which it was contained to explode, resulting in burns from which the woman died in a few hours after the accident. A husband and three small children survive her.

Catarrh of the Stomach

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlansen, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. R. S. Workman, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom passing backward into the throat reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrh of stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

SIMPLE FORMULA HEALS THE LUNGS

Will Break Up a Cold in Twenty-Four Hours.

Mix half ounce of the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine with two ounces of glycerine and half a pint of good whisky; shake well and use in teaspoonful doses. A famous throat and lung specialist, who established a camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine, and whose remarkable cures there have attracted great attention from the medical world, declares that the above formula will heal the lungs and cure any cough that is curable. It will break up a cold in twenty-four hours. The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost.

Inquiry at the prescription department of a leading pharmacy elicted the information that the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine is put up only in half-ounce vials for dispensing; each vial is securely sealed in a round wooden case with engraved wrapper, showing the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure)—plainly printed thereon. There are many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pines (Pure), which are put out under various names, such as Concentrated Oil of Pine, Pine Balsam, etc. Never accept these as a substitute for the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine, as they will invariably produce nausea and never effect the desired result.

Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) is also said to be a perfect neutralizing agent for uric acid.

Some say that city girls are poor, ignorant things. Some of them cannot tell a horse from a cow, but they do know that Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is one of the greatest beautifiers known. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

DOLLS PROVIDED FOR THE MONKEYS

London, Oct. 24.—That the monkeys in the London zoo recently have been supplied with dolls and apparently are highly delighted with these unaccustomed playthings are facts with which Americans may already have become acquainted. The spectacle now afforded at the Regent's Park monkey house of simians gravely mothering doll babies is however, a highly novel one, and as there has been a lot of curiosity as to how the thing came to pass and how it is regarded by the powers that be in the zoological gardens, I interviewed the secretary of the zoo on both these engrossing points.

Oddly enough, it seems that the introduction of London's monkeys to the delights of playing with dolls is entirely due to W. P. Dando, who, it may be explained, is the offcial photographer to the zoological gardens. Recently Mr. Dando went to the monkey house to take some photographs of the chimpanzees there, and with him went his little girl, who happened to be carrying a fluffy-haired wax doll.

Mickie, one of the chimpanzees, was so attracted by the doll that the photographer couldn't get him quiet enough to take a picture, and, at last, in desperation, he handed the plaything over to the monkey. The result was eminently satisfactory. After playing a few minutes with the toy, Mickie agreed to behave and posed beautifully for the camera holding the doll in his arms as carefully as if it had been alive.

The next few days all the other apes were jealous of Mickie. Some of them wept and refused to be comforted. Jerry Dunn, the keeper in charge of them, told the inquiring public of the state of affairs. Dolls of all kinds, from half-broken china ones to rag babies began arriving at the zoo. Some were brought by little girls. Others came by post addressed to different apes by name. And then there was rejoicing in the monkey house. Each ape was supplied with a woolly doll or rag baby.

The china offerings were thrown away by the careful Jerry, who feared breakages and, perhaps, wounding of his pets. The dolls still come every few days. A constant supply is needed, for excepting Mickie, the dwarf chimpanzee and Delia, the red-haired ourang-outang, who are careful, the bigger apes play with their dolls for a little while and then tear them to pieces.

The monkeys are now shut up in glass cages for the winter. If Jerry Dunn and the juvenile visitors to the zoo have their way, the monkeys may have a Christmas tree and on it plenty of nice new dolls.

OWEN ON THE TICKET.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—The supreme court yesterday refused to issue a writ of mandamus to prevent the secretary of state from certifying the name of Attorney Walter C. Owen, of Maiden Rock, as the Republican nominee for state senator in the Pierce-St. Croix county district, to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Frear, of Hudson, who resigned after being nominated at the recent primaries for secretary of state on the Republican ticket.

Attorney Spencer Haven, of Hudson, representing the old Stalwart faction of the Republican party, asked for the writ on the ground that under the circumstances the senatorial committee has no authority to nominate Owen.

George W. Chinneck, of River Falls, Stalwart, has just filed his nomination papers as an Independent candidate. Charles Donohou, of New Richmond, is a non-partisan candidate for the office.

Senator La Follette will begin his stumping campaign in this county Thursday, speaking at Albion, Cottage Grove and Sun Prairie. Later he will be heard in the northwestern part of the state. Owing to his break with State Chairman Connor, who is also the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, La Follette has arranged not to speak under the direction of the state central committee, but will make his own dates and speak under the auspices of county committees.

Senator Spooner will probably take the stump next week.

EDISON'S NEW STORAGE BATTERY

Says Horses Will be Driven Into Obscurity by Discovery.

New York, Oct. 23.—Thomas A. Edison has accomplished a surprise for the world. He has worked out successfully the problem of cheap power. He promises to put on the market within six months a new storage battery which will enable every man to travel in his own private carriage at about the cost of carfare. Without danger, without breakdowns, without cost, almost, a carriage, once supplied with the new power for $200, will travel without repairs for fifteen years for 100,000 miles if necessary, says "the wizard."

Mr. Edison reiterates the declaration that he has invented a storage battery which will solve the problem of congested traffic in the big cities of the world as soon as he can manufacture enough of the batteries. He is erecting two large factory buildings, now nearly completed, and is installing in them new machinery especially for the manufacture of the motor battery.

"In fifteen years from now the horse will be a curiosity; we shall be paying 50 cents to look at him in sideshows," said Mr. Edison to an interviewer.

"Last year I was sure," replied Mr. Edison, "but now I am dead sure. There is a difference between the two. It's one thing, for instance, to be sure and another thing to be—Wall street sure.

"I never believed that nature, so prolific of resources, could provide only lead as material ingredient of battery," said Mr. Edison. "I have always found her ready for any emergency, and based on this confidence that she has never betrayed. One day I discovered that nickle rust was as good as lead. Then I thought I had accomplished the task."

But he hadn't, to the satisfaction of his commercial instinct. The question of the weight of the battery was most important, as was that of its durability.

Nickel rust failed, other things failed, everything the ingenious Edison, with his trained, scientific mind could conceive, failed.

"Then I tried cobalt," he said, and punctuated the statement with a broad smile.

"And it worked"

"It certainly did, but cobalt, being one of the rare metals, the problem was not solved. I scoured the country to find cobalt and discovered lots of it in Canada, in Wisconsin, in Oregon and in Kentucky. Then I knew that I was all right."

MEMORIAL TO CARL SCHURZ

Plan to Secure German Professors for Wisconsin University.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 23.—A "Carl Schurz Memorial Professorship" is to be established at the university of Wisconsin as a result of the movement just started here by a number of prominent German-Americans. The plan is to raise an endowment of $50,000, the income of which will be used for the establishment of an annual course of lectures at the state university, to be given by prominent professors of German universities. This memorial professorship, to be held by German university professors, will be the first of the kind in any American state university. It is hoped that the establishment of this new chair will lead to the exchange of professors between the university of Wisconsin and German universities. A similar plan of exchange of professors has just been entered upon between Columbia university and the university of Berlin, through the establishment at the university of Berlin of the Theodore Roosevelt professorship in American history.

The proposed endowment will make it possible for the students of the state university to enjoy each year the advantages of lectures and instruction by the prominent German specialists in history, literature, science and all other important fields of knowledge. These lectures, many of which will be in German, will be of interest not only to students, but to all German-Americans of the state. If this new professorship leads to the exchange of professors, members of the faculty of the state university will lecture at German universities.

This form of memorial is generally considered the most appropriate to the memory of Carl Schurz, and it is also fitting that the professorship should be established at the university of Wisconsin, since he was identified with the institution in its early history as a member of the board of regents. In recognition of his work as a great German-American statesman and scholar, the state university conferred upon him in 1905 the honorary degree of doctor of laws. His last appearance in Wisconsin was at the commencement exercises of that year, when he delivered the principal address, one of his most memorable addresses.

Formal organization to carry the project into effect will be begun at once by the appointment of a large executive committee with branches in all the most important cities of the state. This committee will take charge of raising the fund of $50,000 among the friends and admirers of the great German-American statesman and scholar. It is expected that alumni and friends of the university will also contribute toward this memorial. The plan has the hearty approval of President R. Van Hise and the university professors, several of whom were present at the meeting.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Hearst men were quietly ordered out of the permanent headquarters of the Democratic state committee in this city yesterday by Ex-Mayor Thomas M. Osborne of Auburn, a bitter Democratic foe of W. R. Hearst, who had paid the rent of the headquarters at No. 44 State street since July, and in advance until next May, and in the afternoon, State Committeeman Patrick E. McCabe and the Democratic county committee officers moved to the county committee room in another building and then hurried to New York to report to Hearst and State Chairman Connors.

This morning, a large force of stenographers was put to work in the State street headquarters in a campaign, declared by those directing it, to be "for the best interests of the Democratic party." This work, it is alleged, is being done practically under the direction of Osborne and other Democrats, whose opposition to Hearst has been constant.

Osborne was the moving spirit in the so-called "Albany conference," held here Sept. 5, by Democrats desirous of preventing Hearst's nomination, and at the Democratic state convention at Buffalo, was active in the same cause.

S.S.S. KILLS THE GERMS OF SCROFULA

The laws of nature and heredity are fixed and invariable. Parents who are related by the ties of blood, or who have a consumptive tendency, or family blood taint, are sure to transmit it to their children in the form of Scrofula. Swollen glands, brittle bones, weak eyes, hip disease, pale, waxy complexions, emaciated bodies, running sores and ulcers, and general weak constitutions are the principal ways in which the disease is manifested. Those who have inherited this blighting trouble may succeed in holding it in check during young, vigorous life: but after a spell of sickness, or when the system has begun to weaken and lose its natural vitality, the ravages of the disease will become manifest and sometimes run into Consumption. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and forces out the scrofulous deposits, kills the germs and completely cures the disease. It changes the quality of the blood by removing all impurities and poisons and supplying this vital fluid with rich, health-sustaining qualities. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable medicine and is especially adapted to systems which have been weakened and poorly nourished by scrofulous blood. Literature on Scrofula and medical advice free.

AUTHOR OF QUO VADIS

Not Liked Though He is Admired by His Neighbors.

Warsaw, Oct. 24.—Proud as the Poles are of the author of Quo Vadis, Sienkiewicz, the man is not well beloved in his native land. He has the reputation of being close-fisted, and his compatriots like an open hand. The following incident greatly amused his friends at the time it occurred:

Sienkiewicz has a very pretty daughter by his first wife, a fair-haired girl with a bright complexion. Her life is rather dull, and one winter she determined to enliven its monotony by giving an evening party on her nameday —that is, the day dedicated to the saint after whom she was christened. These namedays are kept as birthdays in Poland.

At first Sienkiewicz declared that he would not give any party at all, as the strikes had begun and several people who had attempted to entertain had received threatening letters from the Socialists. But the daughter prevailed and invitations were sent out for a "small and early." Those who were lucky enough to be invited looked forward to the party with expectation, for they knew but little of the Sienkiewicz interior, and who is not interested in the furniture and table appointments of a famous man? But alas! A day or two before the great event, Miss Sienkiewicz wrote to her friends, canceling the invitation with many apologies, for her father had received a letter saying that if he gave the party his windows would be broken as well as those of the carriages which conveyed his guests to his doors.

The letter was supposed to be signed by a prominent Socialist society, and is said to have ended with an admonition to the author of Quo Vadis to set a better example to the Polish people than to give dances when hundreds of men were on strike and had not as much as a crust of bread to give their starving families. The tone of the whole thing was very much exaggerated, as, though the situation was grave, the strikers had full pay for the time they were locked out and the only people who suffered at this stage of the revolution were their employers. But the desired effect was produced. Everybody laughed, and those who had not been invited laughed loudest of all.

The poor daughter was very disappointed and she and her brother afterward hinted that they suspected a disappointed acquaintance had played them this trick. But, knowing the great man's aversion to spending money upon frivolities, many people were malicious enough to suggest that Sienkiewicz had written the letter himself and shown it to his daughter in order to save the expense of having people at his house. It is a significant fact that the latter explanation of the affair soon gained credence in the Polish capital.

During the general strike, which took place in the autumn of 1905, the working classes in Warsaw suffered considerably, as many factories were closed for good and the owners of those which were still open refused to pay for the whole of the time spent in strikes. The price of bread, owing to the bakers' strikes, had risen by leaps and bounds, and hundreds of families were starving. Relief committees were formed and Sienkiewicz was asked to lend his name as president of one, assuring him that he would not have to be prominently active or attend meetings.

Nearly everybody who could possibly do so sent subscriptions. People went without little daily luxuries in order to be able to help their poorer brethren. Peasants who had no money to give, contributed in kind. Every village for miles around sent cabbages, barley and potatoes, till the square by the general postoffice was crowded with their long, narrow carts. And still it was not enough.

Henry Sienkiewicz, in a moving speech, delivered before a large audience, pleaded the cause of the workingman and after dwelling upon the duties of rich citizens, suggested that everybody in Warsaw who rented a flat should pay a uniform tax of one rouble for each window which looked out upon the street. This seemed fair enough, as only the well-to-do rent flats looking on the street, the poorer ones have to be content with a view of the courtyard.

People with a dozen windows or more coming under Sienkiewicz's category, looked a little aghast, as they had already given freely to the poor. But as the great man was to set the example, the others said they would willingly follow it. But the worst of it was that the great man himself declined to practice what he had preached. The day after making his moving speech, he left Warsaw, and those who had begun the work of levying the tax, which was called by his name, learned that he had gone abroad for an indefinite period. Neither did he send the committee the tax for his windows.

FRANCE'S OLDEST RECRUIT.

Paris, Oct. 42.—It matters not how old a man may be, he may even be a centenarian, but if he becomes a naturalized Frenchman, he must serve his time in the army just as if he were the veriest recruit in his teens.

It is a conscripted army, the French one, and all over 18 must put in thirteen days' military service with some regiment or corps, either in the field or in barracks. The born citizen does his service before he is 21, but the other day the queer case of the brothers Felendler came before the war minister. They have just become naturalized. One is 48, the other 40. The minister looked up the law. He decided they must do their service, for, as he announced, there is nothing in the conscript law mentioning the age of naturalized citizens. Even if the Felendlers were 100 years old, they still would have to serve.

So Leon Felendler, nearly two score and ten is the man of the moment, for he is the oldest recruit in the French army. The batch of recruits with whom he is learning the goose-step are not out of their teens. The grey-beard has been photographed in the midst of his company, and looks strangely out of place. Hugo Felendler, his brother, 40 years old, has just finished his thirteen compulsory days with the colors.

The Felendlers were born in Poland, but while they were still young children their parents emigrated to France. Both Leon and Hugo married French girls and have families of grown-up children.

The other day Leon went to enter his son, aged 17, at one of the government's technical colleges. But when it was found that the pupil's father was not born in France, the son was refused until Leon had taken out naturalization papers. So soon as the Felendlers became naturalized Frenchmen they were immediately conscripted.

And that is how Leon Felendler has broken the record in conscripts. Two of his sons performed their service last year and, therefore, are senior to their father on the war department's lists.

Many a man of numane impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. Overdriven, overworked, when what it needs is something that will digest the food eaten and help the stomach to recuperate. Something like Kodol For Dyspepsia that is sold by all druggists.

PRINCETON MEN IN BUSINESS

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 23.—Figures which have just been compiled from the new directory of living graduates and former students of Princeton university show that the college graduate of today is more and more choosing a business rather than a professional career. These statistics show that nearly one-third of the living alumni of Princeton are in business.

The increasing number of college men who are entering and influencing business life in America is one of the marked changes that has come over our educated population in the last twenty-five years. It is not so long ago that practically all boys sent to college were destined for a professional career—law, divinity, teaching, medicine, journalism, engineering, etc. But all this is changed.

Exclusive of the class of 1906, there are 7,190 living alumni of Princeton. Of the 6,522 classified according to their occupation, 2,285 are in business, 1,498 in the law, 924 in the ministry, 699 practising medicine, 433 teachers, 290 engineers, 104 journalists, 50 ranching and farming, 50 gentlemen of leisure, 41 students, 34 in the army, 31 civil service, 26 architecture, 19 chemists, 10 artists, 9 authors, 7 in in the navy, 5 librarians, 4 musicians and 4 dentists.

Among the living alumni of the classes prior to 1841, who number twenty-four, none is engaged in business, prior to 1850, only 5 per cent, and prior to 1870, only 15 per cent. In the '80s the number of graduates following a business career shows a marked increase, amounting to 25 per cent. This percentage remains practically the same for the alumni in the '90s. In the classes which have been graduated since 1900, the increase is very marked, averaging 50 per cent.

It is a fair presumption that there will be an increase instead of a decrease in the number of students who will follow a business career, and that the tendency of the times to educate a man for business by sending him to college for four years, or a shorter period, will increase rather than diminish.

HOME MISSIONS WORK.

Congregational Association's Finances Reported in Good Condition.

Oberlin, Ohio, Oct. 23.—The sixtieth annual meeting of the American Missionary association of the Congregational church began here today. Treasurer H. W. Hubbard of New York, reported that the total receipts had been $428,627; that the debt had been reduced from $89,254 to $67,912; that the income of the Daniel Hand educational fund for colored people had been $71,413; that the reserve legacy account for current work 1906-07 would be $65,732, and for 1907-08, $38,672,—a total reserve legacy fund of $104,405.

The report of the executive committee read by Charles A. Hull, of Brooklyn, N. Y., said there had been a very considerable excess of receipts over expenditures during the year, and, notwithstanding large unanticipated expenses for buildings and repairs, the recent recurring deficit had been overcome and the debts of the association reduced more than $20,000.

NO RAISES THIS YEAR

Chief Troyer Says Policeman's Pay Has Become Inadequate.

No salary raises will be given city employes this year.

Nearly all of the heads of the departments have turned in their salary recommendations to the council, and none of them call for any increases, with the single exception of the assessor, who recommends that the salary of the assistant deputy, Benjamin Smith, be raised $10 a month.

The engineer, comptroller and treasurer have all recommended the same salaries for their assistants.

Chief Troyer submitted quite a lengthy communication with his recommendation, and stated that he had hoped to secure a substantial raise in pay for the men in the department this year. He claimed that the big increase in living expenses had made it difficult and almost impossible to support a family in comfort on a policeman's pay. The first class patrolman gets only $75 a month, which is below the average paid in other cities the size of Duluth, where living expenses are lower than they are here. The chief stated, however, that the conference committee had made no provision for this in fixing the amount which was to be allowed to the department, and that it probably could not be brought about this year.

All of the heads are required to turn in their estimates and recommendations before the end of the month, and the council will then fix the salaries for the ensuing year. It is seldom that any changes are made in the recommendations of the heads of the departments, and the salaries are generally approved as fixed by them.

J. J. Murphy Testifies About His Duluth Investments.

Claims He Was Approached by "Department Store" Offer.

"If it were not for the years of experience involved in trying to live up to the old adage that 'a man ought not to put more than one-tenth of his eggs in one basket,' I would invest all my money in property in Duluth, Superior and the Northwest."

This statement by John J. Murphy, of Woodstock, Ill., a man of considerable wealth who has large investments in real estate all over the country as well as in various stocks and bonds, was made before the commissioners in the Wisconsin Central railway condemnation proceedings this morning.

Mr. Murphy's statement followed an expression of his belief in the great future of Duluth. An investor in Duluth realty ever since 1889, Mr. Murphy is as enthusiastic over the possibilities of the city as he was when he made his first purchase and he claims that during the period he has owned property here, the prices have greatly increased.

The appraisers began this morning taking testimony relative to the question of values on the property Mr. Murphy owns on the lower side of Superior street, between Sixth and Seventh avenue west, where the Wisconsin Central Railway company proposes to locate its depot when its new line shall have been constructed into Duluth.

Mr. Murphy's property under consideration comprised lots 108 and 110, block 3, or the 100-foot property immediately east of the 50-foot lot on the southeast corner of Seventh avenue East and Superior street. On the ground there are some store and lodging houses and the Star of Hope Mission building.

In January, 1905, Mr. Murphy bought the two lots for a total of $57,000, including the buildings, and he now asks the commissioners to appraise it for the railroad at $100,000. He claims that the property has advanced 20, 30 and even 40 per cent in value in the past year.

Mr. Murphy testified before the appraisers in his own behalf all the morning, and was being questioned by Mr. Crassweller, for the railroad company, when the board of appraisers adjourned until afternoon.

The testimony was opened with a statement of Mr. Murphy's holdings in Duluth realty. Besides the 100 feet mentioned, he owns a 75-foot property on the upper side of Superior street, near the incline, known as the Bell hotel property; the 100-foot property on which the Lenox hotel is built; a 25-foot lot on the upper side of Superior street, at Sixth avenue west and adjoining the 50-foot property owned by the Ham Brewing company; a 50-foot property on the lower side of Superior street, running through to Michigan street, and opposite the depot, known as the Waverly hotel property; two 25-foot lots at 1125 and 1127 West Superior street; the southeast corner of Lake avenue and First street; a 100-foot property at the corner of First street and Sixth avenue west.

Although he first began buying Duluth realty in 1889, Mr. Murphy has bought most of his Duluth holdings within the past two years. He once owned the Burrows corner, at Third avenue west and Third street, and sold it for $65,000 to the present owners.

Besides his real estate investments here, Mr. Murphy has been buying in Canada and North Dakota, his real estate business extending over a period of forty years.

Mr. Murphy in establishing his qualifications as a witness on values of realty, stated that he has given a great deal of attention to the matter of comparative values of real estate in Duluth and many of the other cities of this country. In his judgment the values of lots 108 and 110, which the railroad company want, are worth from $8 to $10 per square foot. At $8 a square foot the value set by Mr. Murphy would be $92,000. This valuation eliminates any element of improvement or value for railroad purposes.

Mr. Murphy said he attached the value mentioned to the property for several reasons, the chief of which was its prospective location for wholesale houses. He argued that the fact the lots run through from street to street, the nearness of the viaduct, the steamboat landings, freight depots is an element in the matter of values. He further took the ground that the proximity of the property to the Seventh avenue west incline railway is a matter of great importance, in fact so much importance does Mr. Murphy attach to the future rise in values of property because of the development that he believes the incline railway will bring about, that he confines his purchases, as far as possible to land in that immediate neighborhood.

Mr. Murphy explained at some length, but in an interesting manner, how he first planned to secure the ground between Fifth and Seventh avenues west and build up a large wholesale district. He mentioned several negotiations that he had under way toward that end, following his first purchases of property in that locality. He compared the locality with similarly located property in Chicago, which has in recent years developed into big wholesale districts because of the same advantages offered by the property between Fifth and Seventh avenues west.

Talking in general of increasing values of real estate, Mr. Murphy claimed that property that is at all favorably located, is worth more today than it was a few years ago. He argued that cheaper money has resulted in a stiffening of realty prices and asserted that good real estate investments today are far better than investments in bonds. He cited several instances of bonds, which he held and compared the income from them with the income he is getting from his real estate investments, a showing that was decidedly in favor of the realty investments.

Mr. Murphy expressed his position in the pertinent inquiry, which he directed at large during his testimony, and which follows:

"What can a man put his money into, that is as safe as real estate in a growing community?"

Another reason that he gave for his valuation of the 100-foot property under consideration, is that the leases are subject to termination on sixty and ninety days' notice, and Mr. Murphy has in mind that sometime he would build an addition to the lodging house buildings and increase his annual rentals by at least $2,000.

After Mr. Murphy had explained his position as regards values, William Harrison, his attorney, produced the correspondence alleged to have been had between R. B. Knox of the North Star Realty company, and Mr. Murphy, regarding the purchase by Mr. Knox of the two lots now under condemnation proceedings.

According to the letters read the correspondence was opened in October, 1905, when Mr. Knox, representing the North Star Realty company, wanted an option on the property and Mr. Murphy refused to give it. In one of the letters, claimed to have been written by Mr. Knox, it states that his customer wished to purchase Mr. Murphy's property for an improvement which would enhance the value of his, Murphy's, other property in the vicinity. The letters read indicated that Mr. Knox asked for a price, but received no answer and wrote Mr. Murphy again in December, 1905, when, according to the letter read, he told Murphy his client wanted the property as a site for an installment department store.

To this letter Mr. Murphy's alleged answer stated that the lots were under lease, but that under the conditions named by Mr. Knox, he would sell the 100-foot propert yfor $80,000 and would also sell the 75-foot property across Superior street for $48,000.

Mr. Knox's reply is claimed to be a telegram accepting the terms and making an appointment with Mr. Murphy at Woodstock, Ill. Mr. Murphy testified that when Mr. Knox came to see him, there was a hitch in the negotiations because the latter wished the contract to be made out to him with a cash payment of $1,000 by check in Mr. Knox's name, while Mr. Murphy insisted that the conveyance should run direct to the "department store people." Mr. Murphy claimed that his talk with Mr. Knox was along the line of the use of the property for a large department store building.

This arrangement failing to go through, as Mr. Murphy testified, Mr. Knox asked what terms would be acceptable and Mr. Murphy asked for a cash payment of from 5 to 10 per cent on the price asked. Mr. Murphy claimed that Mr. Knox never told him who the "department store people" were, nor did he mention that the property was to be used for railroad purposes. He said that the first intimation he had that the railway company was after the property was in a letter written by Mr. Harrison sometime afterward.

Following up the break in negotiations at Woodstock, Mr. Murphy testified that Mr. Knox left with the statement that he would see his clients. shortly afterward Mr. Murphy received a letter, it is claimed, in which Mr. Knox stated that one of his clients was very ill, but the matter would be taken up again as soon as possible.

Mr. Murphy claimed that so far as he was concerned the negotiations were broken off entirely, and that it was not until March, 1906, that they were renewed, when Mr. Knox called on him at Woodstock and proposed carrying out the contract to buy the 100-foot property. Mr. Murphy testified that he told Mr. Knox he felt under no obligations to carry the deal any further, but that before the latter left Woodstock, he, Murphy finally offered to take $100,000 and gave Mr. Knox a day to decide whether he would take it at that price.

According to Mr. Murphy's statement that was the last of his negotiations with Mr. Knox, whom he has never since seen or corresponded with.

A letter under date of July 7, 1906, from Col. Gillis, and purporting to ask Mr. Murphy for his lowest cash price on the lots in question, was read by Mr. Harrison. Mr. Murphy's answer set $100,000 as the price, and included the statement that if he could not get that figure he would take his chances in condemnation proceedings.

Under the questioning of Frank Crassweller for the railway company, Mr. Murphy admitted that he was offered the southeast corner of Seventh avenue east and Superior street, the 50-foot property adjoining his lots on the west, for $35,000, and that he offered $24,400 but did not complete the purchase.

Mr. Murphy also admitted that he was offered the Hartley property, the 100-foot property on the southwest corner of Superior street and Sixth avenue west, for $100,000, but claimed that he did not buy it, his impression being that he thought he had enough property in that locality, and the Hartley property was rather too large a proposition.

"I had enough," declared Mr. Murphy. "I did not want to own the whole West end and be taxed out of existence."

FEW TAKE EXAMINATIONS

Nine Applicants Examined for Postal and Carrier Positions.

Only nine applicants appeared at the federal building this morning to take the civil service examinations for letter carriers and postal clerks, and a shortage in eligibles will probably be the result. The postoffice authorities had expected about twenty-five for the examination, but they did not put in an appearance. There were only five who took the examination for carrier and six for position of clerk. One of the latter was a woman.

About four eligibles are needed in the carrier force and from the prospects at present it does not look as though they would be obtained at this time. Only three took the examination this morning and it is not likely that all of these will be able to pass the examination. Four eligibles for the clerk force are also needed, and it seems that thtse may be obtained, as there were six who took this examination.

The examination began at nine o'clock and lasted about four hours. It is thought that the reason there were so few present to be examined this morning was that the majority of those expecting to take the examination were not aware that the date had been changed from Nov. 21, to Oct. 24. This change was only announced a few days ago and probably a number of applicants are still planning to take the examinations on the later date.

HILL'S BIG IRON DEAL SIZED UP AS CLEVER SCHEME TO EVADE LAW

St. Paul, Oct. 24.—(Special to the Herald.)—A prominent local railroad official sees in the recent lease by the Great Northern railroad of its ore lands in the Northern part of Minnesota to the United States Steel corporation, a shrewd evasion of the provision of the Hepburn law, which forbids a railway to carry its own products.

"The Great Northern," said this official, "has made arrangement with the United States Steel corporation, whereby the Steel corporation leases the lands from the railroad and pays so much per ton for the ore, delivered by the railway at Duluth.

"Now this provision in the contract, that the ore shall be delivered by the railroad to the Steel company at Duluth, insures the carrying of all that vast quantity of ore by the Great Northern road to the Duluth dock. Thus, the Great Northern, by reason of its ownership of the ore lands, really gains all the traffic in the product of the mines, and counteracts the spirit, even if it does not actually violate the letter of the law.

"For carrying this ore for a distance of eighty miles the company gets a rate of 80 cents per ton, for the contract provides that the railroad company shall receive so much for every ton, plus this freight, as the ore is delivered at Duluth. This is 1 cent per ton per mile—a very heavy freight rate.

"The Duluth & Iron Range is thus shut out from all competition in the carrying of all this ore. The Great Northern does not own the ore that it carries. The mining is done by the Steel corporation. Yet the result is the same."

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Firm But Eases Off on Selling by Pit Traders.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—The wheat market opened firm today on a fair demand by commission houses, higher cables and smaller receipts in the Northwest. Pit traders, however, sold actively and the market soon eased off. December wheat opened ⅛@¼c to ¼c higher at 73⅛c to 73½@⅝c and sold at 73⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 532 cars against 795 cars last week and 955 cars one year ago.

The corn market was firm on a fair demand by commission houses. Firm cables and wet weather throughout the corn belt lent strength to the local market. December opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 42⅞c to 52⅞c, decline dto 42⅝c and sold at 42⅝@¾c. Local receipts were 169 cars, with 102 of contract grade.

The oats market was quiet and firm. A firm demand shorts held prices steady. December opened ⅛c higher at 33⅝c and sold at 33¼c. Local receipts were 251 cars.

Provisions opened easier on a 5@10c decline in the price of live hogs. Trading, however, was very light. January pork was 5c lower at $13.57½. Lard was unchanged at $8.22½. Ribs were down 2½c at $7.40.

Close: Wheat—December, 72¾c; May, 77⅛c. Corn—December, 42½c; May, 42⅝@¾c. Oats—December, 33¼@⅜c; May, 34¾@⅞c. Pork—January, $13.70. Lard—October, $9.75; January, $8.30. Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, Oct. 24.—The flour market is easy. Millers' reports indicate an easy flour situation. Trade shows no evidence of expansion and if anything leans to dullness. Buyers are acting a little more conservative and appear to be bearish on quotations. Shipments, 65,280 barrels. First patents, $4.20@4.30; second patents, $4.05@4.15; first clears, $3.25@3.35; second clears, $2.40@2.60.

Copper Gossip.

Gay & Sturgis, Butte, Mont., wires: The expert's report of vast copper deposits opened in the Snowstorm mine near Mullan, Idaho, has caused a sensation among copper interests in Butte. Amalgamated, Heinze and other big operators have sent their experts to investigate. J. W. Adams, general superintendent of mines of the Boston & Montana company, who has just returned, says that, outside of North Butte and one or two other big mines, there is nothing at the Butte district to compare with Snowstorm, which has more than 1,000,000 tons of ore blocked out and in sight that will average better than 5 per cent copper and 7 ounces of silver to the ton, capable of yielding 1,000 tons of ore per day for three years without further development. The vein has been opened to a depth of 1,500 feet. Mining men returning predict that the property will, in a few years, be a very important factor in the copper world.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Old Dominion was the feature today. The balance of the list remained firm, but showed little activity. We understand that possibly Shannon may pay a dividend of 50 cents in the near future. The action of the stock is certainly encouraging. New York interests are buying Isle Royale, but certainly advise the sale of the stock on any advance. The return of President Evans of the United States Smelting company was celebrated by a 3 point advance, and a further rise is confidentially predicted.

Paine, Webber & Co.: Boston News Bureau says: The directors of the United Copper company declared the regular semi-annual dividend of $3 per share on the preferred stock.

TRAINS TIED UP BY SNOW

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 24.—The Union Pacific has been blockaded for twenty-four hours between the city and Sydney Neb., and ten passenger trains are stalled in the Cheyenne yards as a result of the four days' storm which ended last night. Rotary plows are at work and with mild weather today it is expected traffic will be resumed on schedule time before night.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 24.—Snow on the Rock Island road which completely tied up that road for forty-eight hours has been removed and trains resumed their regular schedule this morning.

Norfolk, Neb., Oct. 24.—The storm still prevails in the northwestern part of the state and in Southern South Dakota. There is a foot of snow on the Rosebud reservation. Wires are down on the Northwestern main line west of Stuart. The temperature has fallen in the northeastern part of Nebraska.

PAY TRIRUTE TO OLD LEADER

Tiffin, Ohio, Oct. 24.—An heroic statue of Gen. William Henry Gibson, famous as colonel of the Forty-ninth Ohio Volunteer infantry, and later widely known as a leading Republican campaign orator, was unveiled here today by his grandsons, Gibson and Shannon Bradfield, under the auspices of the state of Ohio, whose chief executive, Andrew L. Harris, and senior United States senator, Joseph B. Foraker, were the orators of the occasion. Preceding the unveiling there was a parade of military and civic organizations, and an immense crowd was present.

BLOW SAFE OF BANK.

Goshen, Ind., Oct. 24.—Six masked men blew open the outer safe of the Shipshewana bank early today after tying and gagging three men in a livery stable next door. A small amount of money was secured, as efforts to blow the inner safe were unsuccessful. The men escaped on a handcar.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Slight Strength Soon After the Openiug Did Not Last.

New York, Oct. 24.—The first business in stocks today was small and at prices but little changed from those of last night. The losses outnumbered the gains and included the most important stocks. St. Louis Southwestern fell 1⅜, Northern Pacific and Reading a point each, and St. Paul and United States Steel large fractions.

The opening decline did not proceed far before supporting orders began to make their appearance and the market rallied to yesterday's closing level. Decided strength in St. Paul assisted the recovery, especially among the grain carriers. Prices again declined to about midway between the highest and lowest figures of the first hour. St. Paul, Kansas City Southern preferred, National Biscuit and Hocking Coal gained 1 to 1⅜. Bethlehem Steel preferred sold at an advance of 7 points.

Prices moved fitfully and frequently reversed their course durin gthe second hour. A new high level was reached and then a pronounced reaction carried some stocks lower than at first. St. Paul, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and the Interborough-Metropolitan stocks were lifted 1½ to 1¾ over last night, National Biscuit 2⅛, American Pneumatic Service 2¾, the preferred 1¾ and American Locomotive 1. The market became dull and heavy at the reaction. Bonds were firm.

The market lacked the energy to rise even when there were no stocks pressing for sale. Dullness was the most distinctive feature of the midday dealings. Some of the leaders reached a slightly lower level, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific and Republic Steel preferred losing a point. Federal Mining improved 4 and American Tobacco preferred and North American 1¼.

A close scrutiny of the list failed to show much alteration in prices after 1 o'clock, though the average was lower. The unwillingness of the traders to undertake vigorous operations one way or the other kept the market idle most of the time. Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Distillers Securities fell a point each.

The market closed dull and weak. There was a conclusive rise of 2⅛ in Norfolk & Western on the increase in the dividend to a 5 per cet rate. This was not held, and the general list sold off to the lowest prices of the day under light offerings. Atchison, Louisville & Nashville, Baltimore & Ohio and United States Steel fell about a point each, Toledo, St. Louis & Western 1¼, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Rock Island preferred, Reading, New York Central and Smelting 1½ to 1¾ and Anaconda 4½.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 24.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 3@10 points, which was not a full concession to much higher cables than expected, demands being restricted by a more favorable weather map, while there was considerable selling by local professionals. Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 24.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: There is a slight improvement in the horse market, especially in the line of large loggers. Delivery horses have picked up to some extent. There are a few more buyers in the market, and on the whole the general tone of the market is better. The well-known horseman, Mr. Froelick, is on the market with a load of first-class drafters.

CITY MAY END OVER-CROWDING

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 24.—The supreme court today reversed and remanded the decision of the circuit court of Cook county, which issued an injunction against the officials of the city of Chicago to restrain them from enforcing the ordinance compelling the Chicago City Railway company to provide sufficient cars so that the cars should not be overcrowded and providing for a penalty for each day's violation of the ordinance.

MANY INJURED IN A WRECK

Pittsburg, Oct. 24.—Train No. 310, of the Cleveland & Pittsburg division of the Pennsylvania line west, known as "The Pittsburg Special," jumped the track today near Allegheny and the engine went over the bank into the Ohio river. The fireman and engineer were badly injured and were rescued from the river while about a dozen passengers were helped out of the two cars. All were limping and had to be supported. Four trainmen also were seriously injured.

INDIANS DEFY RETURN ORDER

Omaha, Oct. 24.—Word was received here to day that Capt. McGregor of Maj. Grierson's command, with an orderly and a scout overtook the refractory Utes on Little Powder river, about forty miles north of Gillette, Wyo. It is said the Indians absolutely refused to return to their reservation and declared they were going to Dakota. Maj. Grierson, it is said, has determined to await reinforcements before trying to force the removal of the tribe, as cowboys report to Utes are holding nightly dances and are in a mood for trouble.

BOAT BURNS; CREW SAFE

New York, Oct. 24.—The small freight steamer Hastings, owned by the New Haven & Bayonne Transportation company, and bound from New York to New Haven with a load of steel, was burned and sank in Long Island sound, off Stamford, Conn., early this morning. Her crew of eleven men got away in a lifeboat and were picked up and brought to New York by the steamer Middletown.

About 4 o'clock, when off Stamford, the Hastings collided with an unknown schooner. An overturned lantern set fire to the steamer, and when it became evident that it could not be saved, the crew took to the lifeboat.

CLEMENCEAU'S PLANS RADICAL

Paris, Oct. 24.—The Clemenceau cabinet has begun the formulation of a program that is expected to be broad, with possibly some surprises. In well informed circles the impression prevails that the plans of the government include, besides the complete carrying out of the law providing for the separation of church and state, legislation establishing workmen pensions, the state purchase of the Western and some of the Southern railroads, and the creation of a state monopoly of petroleum and alcohol.

The draft of the budget, as presented by the budget commission under the Sarrien ministrty, which has been bitterly assailed, especially by M. Poincarre, the ex-foreign minister, as being improperly balanced, probably will be revised.

SWITCHMEN RESTIVE.

Pittsburg Roads Called on to Install Eight-Hour System.

Pittsburg, Oct. 24.—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, in the Pittsburg switching district, have presented a new scale of wages to the eighteen division superintendents of the various railroads. This provides for eight hours work, with pro-rata pay for overtime, and an answer is requested on or before Nov. 3. The demands are about the same as those of the Chicago district.

HOUSE SURE SAYS BRYAN

Washington, Oct. 24.—In a letter to Chairman Griggs of the Democratic congressional committee, explaining why he would be unable to visit Cynthiana, Ky., Mr. Bryan wrote:

"The indications are that we shall have the next congress and then our Democratic house can send to the senate remidical measures and join issues with the Republicans, if they refuse to adopt them. The Republican leaders are so under the control of predatory wealth that they will not support the president when he attempts to follow Democratic advice and secure some reform. The president does not go far enough or fast enough in the direction of reform, but his political associates are all the time throwing obstacles in his way.

"The best way to support the president is to elect Democrats in the place of Republicans, for the record shows that the Democrats have stood by him better in the senate and house than the Republicans have. My interest in this campaign has been shown by the fact that I am devoting every day to campaign work."

SCANDAL UP IN NEW FORM

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 24.—Only those directly connected with the trial of Clifford Hooe, the former negro coachman of Augustus Hartje, millionaire wall paper manufacturer, for perjury in connection with his depositions reflecting on Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, were permitted in criminal court today, when the case was called.

Mrs. Hartje, who will be the star witness, was on hand early, but remained secluded in the district attorney's office. It is said the commonwealth expects to prove by her that she was not at home on the dates mentioned by Hooe in his deposition, and therefore the story he told in that statement could not be true.

Assistant District Attorney John Robb, Jr., offered in evidence the entire record in the Hartje divorce case. This was objected to by Attorney Ferguson, on behalf of Hooe, as incompetent and irrelevant. Judge Fraser overruled the objection.

STEALS GIRL FROM HOUSE

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 24.—Mrs. J. H. Sidebottom reported to the police today the mysterious disappearance from home of her 18-year-old daughter, Miss Fannie Fennell, between midnight and 5 o'clock this morning. An examination of Miss Fennell's room today, showed that she had slept in her bed and left her clothes undisturbed on a chair. The mother says an odor of chloroform prevailed in the room.

Mrs. Sidebottom and daughter visited Denver, Colo., last August, and, after their return, Miss Fennell, it is claimed, began receiving letters from an unknown man, who said he had seen her first out West and had followed her to Birmingham. The writer professed his love and said he would kill her if he could not get her.

The letters have been turned over to the police, who are working on the case. It is said that a mysterious man in a hack visited the house twice last night.

LEPER COLONY PROVES COSTLY

New Bedford, Mass., Oct. 24.—The five lepers cared for by the state of Massachusetts at the isolated colony on Penikese island, in Buzzard's bay, have cost the Bay state for the first fourteen months of the experiment $49,043, according to figures made public today. The greater portion of this sum, however, was expended for necessary initial expenses which included the purchase of the island, the building of four cottages for the patients and other equipment.

GIVES THANKS TO ROOSEVELT

Washington, Oct. 24.—President Roosevelt has received the following letter from Grand Master Morrisey of the grand lodge of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen:

"Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 21, 1906.—I write to express the appreciation of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen for the consideration you have shown the railway employes of our country in directing Attorney General Moody to intervene in the first case tried under the employers' liability act, for the purpose of supporting the constitutionality, validity and interpretation of this law. It is good tl feel that we will have the support of the government in such a vital manner, and particularly so when it is known that there is to be an organized attempt on the part of the best legal talent of the country to have this very beneficial act made void."

INSIDE TIPS PROFITABLE

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24.—At the grain hearing by the interstate commerce commission yesterday, E. W. Shields, elevator agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and active manager of the Simonds-Shields Grain company of Kansas City, acknowledged that when he was in Chicago last fall, he was called on to advise about a special export rate on corn. He helped make a rate, effective several days later, then came home and bought corn right and left. He shipped 3,500,000 bushels of corn under the special rate. He bought more than 1,000,000 bushels before other dealers learned that the reduced rate would be made.

Again this summer, he said, he happened to be waiting around the office of the vice president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway when the railroads agreed on a cut of two and a half cents a hundred pounds on wheat. He went out and sold several hundred thousand bushels for delivery under the rate.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 24.—The annual meeting of the American Civic association, was attended by about seventy-five delegates, all of whom are experts in the beautifying of cities, opened at the Hotel Pfister today. Mayor Becker welcomed the gathering and President J. Horace McFarland of Harrisburg, Pa., made the response. The first session was taken up with routine business.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 24.—By a decision of the supreme court today, the sale of the Kellogg Switchboard & Supply company to the American Telegraph & Telephone company is forbidden, on the ground that such a sale would be against public policy, the latter company already being engaged in the manufacture of switchboards.

LOU DILLON GOLDFIELD

The production of ore from the great Goldfield Mohawk mine, which now aggregates from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 per month, sets a new mark for bullion output from a gold mine. This, in connection with the yield of gold from the Goldfield Combination, which is paying 240 per cent per annum dividends, the Goldfield Jumbo, Goldfield Red Top, Goldfield Silver Pick and others that are contiguous, and on the same great vein system, stamps the immediate territory as the richest in all the world. The Mohawk veins all trend westward, and the properties that are situated directly west of the Mohawk are the Silver Pick and Lou Dillon. The tremendous mine output from this group of bonanzas has doubled the market value of Silver Pick stock in two months and has been responsible for the purchase of the Lou Dillon by a syndicate of Nevada capitalists.

• • • • •

A company has been formed under the title, "LOU DILLON GOLDFIELD MINING COMPANY," to take over and operate the property. Exhaustive mine development has been begun with a view to exploring the great Mohawk series of veins where they cross the Lou Dillon. Able mining engineers declare emphatically that they undoubtedly traverse Lou Dillon ground. Though representing one of the largest cash transactions of the year, the price paid for the Lou Dillon was exactly one-half what the property could have been turned for two days later. The Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company is incorporated for $1,000,000, divided into one million shares, par value $1. Three hundred and fifty thousand shares have been placed in the treasury. For immediate development the unsold portion of 250,000 shares are offered at 30 cents per share, representing one of the most extraordinary investment opportunities of the year.

The Lou Dillon property, comprising over 19 acres, adjoins the Silver Pick estate on the west. It is not more than 1,200 feet from the great Mohawk and is only 800 feet from the Combination mine which is earning 240 per cent per annum dividends.

Developments of recent date on the Silver Pick have been of sufficient importance to give great value to the Lou Dillon, aside from its contiguity to the Mohawk. At least eight lessees are actively engaged in developing Pick ground and are making a mine showing that indicates that the property will soon be on even terms with the great bonanza mines of the district.

On a lease, which is within a few hundred feet of the Dillon, several veins of high grade ore have been encountered that carry average values of from $70 to $340 per ton. Sinking is being done as rapidly as possible in order to open these veins at the same depth at which the great Mohawk ore bodies were disclosed. According to their pitch and trend, they come together in the Lou Dillon ground and, with every degree of certainty possible, it is predicted when they meet they will form a tremendous deposit of high grade ore.

Plans have already been perfected and work begun in the thorough development of the estate of the Lou Dillon Goldfield Mining company. A 60-horsepower hoisting plant and other mining machinery have been ordered and will be installed at once. In the meantime sinking is in progress on company account, and by lessees. No less than four ledges of gold ore have been exposed on Lou Dillon territory. These all apex within the boundaries of the property, a fact that is of first importance, as it precludes the possibility of legal controversy with reference to extra-lateral rights, and gives the company the ownership without possible question to all the ore bodies that lie beneath the surface of the claim. Several of these are making history for the Silver Pick property, and have made such a great mine showing that Silver Pick stock is now in strong demand at 90 to 95 cents per share. They all center on Lou Dillon ground and pitch into Silver Pick territory, where they have been opened up extensively, showing high grade shipping values in numerous places. That the Lou Dillon management will encounter them in the present plan of development, and open one of the great bonanza gold mines of the camp is practically a certainty, based upon examination made by the most expert mining authorities of the district.

A comparison of prices between Lou Dillon-Goldfield and that of shares in adjoining properties will show that this is one of the most extraordinary investment opportunities presented in recent years in Southern Nevada. The great Mohawk, which lies well within 1,200 feet of the Lou Dillon, is quoted on the Exchanges of San Francisco, Goldfield and New York at $3.85 to $4.00 per share; Red Top, the next door neighbor to the Mohawk, is in firm demand at $1.50 to $1.60 per share; Silver Pick, which lies immediately next to the Lou Dillon, commands a price ranging from 85 to 95c per share according to recent market fluctuations. Other stocks representing holdings in mining properties situated in the immediate vicinity of the Lou Dillon, are quoted from 45c to $3.00 per share. Of one, the Combination, which is now paying 240 per cent per annum dividends, you cannot now buy any stock at all. The holders refuse to name a price.

The price at which the first treasury offering of Lou Dillon may be purchased does not more than represent the actual value of the property as a "good prospect." We realize that in the purchase of the Lou Dillon we secured an exceedingly valuable piece of mining ground at a very low figure. And in line with our policy to put our clients in with us on what is termed a ground floor basis, we are offering a limited allotment of treasury shares in the Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company, at a price that attaches to the security an unusually attractive speculative, as well as investment, feature.

The President of the Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company is Hon. John Sparks, Governor of the State of Nevada. The Vice-President is John D. Campbell, famous as the man who took a million and a half dollars worth of ore out of the Goldfield Jumbo, in less than a year from a lease covering a hundred lineal feet of ground, and famed as President of the Stray Dog and Indian Camp Manhattan Mining Companies. The Treasurer is L. M. Sullivan of the L. M. Sullivan Trust Company, and the Secretary is James E. Degan, Cashier of the Nye and Ormsby County Bank of Goldfield. These men stand for everything that is good and clean in mining and finance, and any company with which they identify themselves is etitled to the support of the most conservative investors.

• • • • •

Few, if any, of the prominent mining promotions of recent years from Southern Nevada have embodied such unlimited possibilities as the Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company stock. In fact, the possibilities of an investment in the issue are without limit. Less than a year ago Mohawk was selling at 25 to 30 cents per share; today it is quoted above $4.00. Six months ago Silver Pick was a neglected issue around 20 cents per share; it is an active trader today around 90 cents per share. Red Top two years ago was considered only a fair prospect and a nominal trader at 15 to 20 cents per share; today it cannot be purchased for less than $1.60 per share. The same is true of a great many stocks representing interests in companies owning neighboring property. Lou Dillon-Goldfield is offered today at 30 cents per share, this being the initial subscription price, and representing not more than the actual value of the company's holdings as they stand practically undeveloped. Within a few months Lou Dillon should be in exceptional demand at $1.00 or more per share, just as surely as can possibly be predicted. The Lou Dillon is believed to have the continuation of the great Mohawk vein system; it has proved veins of gold ore; it has location directly on the trend of the greatest bold-bearing veins that have ever been uncovered in the history of the world of mining. Able management and aggressive development are the only essentials required to make the Lou Dillon one of the great gold producing mining bonanzas of the country. These have been provided and the future of the property is assured beyond cavil.

• • • • •

There were a great many who failed to secure Eagle's Nest Fairview at the subscription price, owing to delays in sending in reservations. That issue was over-subscribed 600,000 shares in two weeks. To these we beg to say that equally as great an opportunity is presented in Lou Dillon-Goldfield. Immediately after the subscriptions on Eagle's Nest closed, the stock took a sharp jump of 7 to 10 points. Beyond any question it should continue its upward movement until it is selling at par before the year's end. The same should prove true of Lou Dillon-Goldfield, and we urge investors to wire reservations and on receiving telegraphic notice of allotment of stock to follow immediately with remittances in full. This will be the last offering of Lou Dillon, and those who do not order Lou Dillon-Goldfield subscription stock at once will miss one of the greatest investment opportunities of the year. Subscriptions for less than 100 shares cannot be considered. Reservations will be considered in the order in which they are received up to the time the full treasury allotment is subscribed for; and the right is reserved to refuse or cut down any late order. Use the wires.

BIG GAMES SATURDAY

First Real Gridiron Battles Will be Pulled Off Then.

Minnesota Will Have Hard Struggle to Defeat Ames.

Saturday will mark the real opening of the football season in the West and also as far as the local high school team is concerned.

The high school team will have its first hard game of the year. Up to the present time the boys have been engaged in piling up big scores against weak teams, and have had no opportunity to show what they can do against a team that is on an equal basis with them. The St. Paul Mechanic Arts' high school, however, always puts a strong eleven in the field, and the Duluth team will have its first real game on Saturday.

The weather has kept the Duluth boys from getting regular practice this week.

• • •

The Minnesota team will have its first game of the season, against Ames college. A year ago a game with Ames would have aroused no interest, but this year the Aggies are strong, having downed Nebraska, and the uncertainty added by the new rules leaves the outcome very much in doubt. The supporters of the Gophers will breathe much more easily after the contest is over.

The Indiana-Chicago game is also expected to be a close affair, whereas last year it would have aroused but mild interest.

One thing that is bothering Stagg a great deal is the kicking ability of Captain Hare of Indiana. The Hoosier leader has a reputation of being second only to Eckersall as a drop kicker. If Indiana is able to withstand the Maroon attack, a drop kick by Hare may result in the defeat of the Maroons.

Sheldon developed a fast team at Indiana last year and has all of his 1905 regulars on the team this season. The Hoosiers are fast and the new rules appear to have been made for their special benefit.

Illinois and Michigan should play a good game at Ann Arbor. The Wolverines will in all probability be the winners, but they will have no walkaway, as a year ago, when Yost's team rolled up 33 points on the Illini.

Illinois has a strong line this season, according to all reports, and its forwards are likely to give Michigan no end of trouble in scoring. With Curtis and Garrels in the backfield, the Wolverines should be able to count once, however, while there seems to be but little chance of a count for Illinois unless some trick clears the way for a long run and a touchdown.

DULUTH MEN WIN FOURTH

Honors Are Now Even in Inter-City Bowling Match.

Duluth bowlers again turned the tables on their opponents from across the bay last evening, winning the fourth game of the series by the score of 2,353 to 2,657.

This makes two matches apiece for each team, and a fifth and deciding match may be played in the near future.

Three games were played last evening, the visitors winning the first by three pins, but falling down badly on the second and third. Following are the scores:

MAY MERGE LEAGUES.

Plan to Combine Western League and Western Association.

Des Moines, Oct. 24.—Information has been given out through the Cantillons, owners of the Des Moines franchise, that the plan of the Western league magnates for next season is to practically merge the Western league and the Western association and to elect Shively, now president of the association, president of the new Western league, which will be an eight-club organization, leaving out Denver and Pueblo.

The plan is to have the new league formed of the following cities: Des Moines, Omaha, Lincoln, Sioux City, of the Western league, and Wichita, Topeka, Joplin and St. Joseph, of the Western association.

MAY TRY AGAIN.

Sir Thomas May Challenge for American Cup Once More.

New York, Oct. 24.—Sir Thomas Lipton, through his secretary, last night stated that he had not announced his intention of again challenging for America's cup. He would not deny that he might challenge, but would have nothing definite to say on the subject before his conference with officials of the New York Yacht club.

Sign Articles.

New York, Oct. 24.—Terry McGovern and "Young Corbett," with their representatives, met here yesterday and later it was announced that they had signed articles to fight the first week in January, the scene of the battle to be where the biggest purse was offered.

IMPROVED BASEBALL

New Game Would Allow Batter to Run Either Way.

Is Claimed That It Would Greatly Add to Interest.

New York, Oct. 24.—The improved baseball game suggested by "Kid" Elberfield some weeks ago has been tested by Joe McGinnity, who is now training the young idea how to pitch at Princeton, and the Iron Man is enthusiastic.

"Run the bases either way, and increase the science," is the meat of the scheme which Elberfield and McGinnity are fostering.

When the first batter in an inning comes to the plate, he shall have the right to run to first or third, as he pleases, keeping the selection to himself until he starts. Each succeeding batter in that inning is compelled to run the same way.

"You see," explains Elberfield, "the first man who played baseball, and the fellows who decided on the nine positions, must have been right-handed; otherwise, why should a runner be compelled to run to the right, and why should the shortstop be placed between second and third to stop hits by right-handers?"

"It is a big handicap," argues McGinnity, "for a right-hand batter to run to first base, and it would be equally hard for a left-hander to run toward third—"

"Therefore," chimes in Elberfield, "the batters who come up first in an inning should have the choice of running either way."

As both Elberfield and McGinnity argue, it would certainly increase the science of the game, as the first baseman would have to be able to play third, and vica versa, with the third baseman.

For a while the bunters would have a picnic, as the third and first baseman would be puzzled as to which should play in close, and the second baseman and shortstop wouldn't know which should be ready to cover third or first bag when the third or first baseman went in to field the ball. Now, wouldn't that be a pretty mixup?

Another advantage in this new game, Elberfield maintains, would be the effect it would have on the crowd if the game was close.

McGinnity says he has tried it, and it not only causes a lot of amusement, but a lot o fexcitement.

The Iron Man, by the way, has been engaged by Princeton to coach the new pitchers down there this fall and next spring.

As all of the regular Tiger pitchers graduate this year, Joe is having a hard time picking out a youngster. His main trouble is getting a man with sufficient weight and strength to make him speedy. Most of the candidates, he says, are too small.

BEELL THROWS FRED McLEOD

Fred Beell, the Wisconsin farmer, is winning all kinds of plaudits for his work on the mat these days. Following is a clipping from a Chicago paper:

"Farmer Fred Beell, from Wisconsin, displayed all of the scientific points of wrestling in his match with Fred McLeod at the Casino last night. The Badger state champion won the catch-as-catch-can match in two straight falls, after a whirlwind bout.

"Both men were in fine condition and put up the best exhibition of the wrestling art seen here in years. Every trick known to the game was brought into play, with no apparent advantage. Beell was the aggressor the greater part of the time, but McLeod's defensive tactics were superb. Finally Beell forced the Scot over on his back with a half Nelson and bar hold and slowly drove the older man's shoulders to the floor. The time for the first fall was 33 minutes and 36 seconds.

"The second fall was brought about by a merciless face hold that Beell clapped over McLeod's chin. McLeod was forced to his back, and Beell quickly shifted his grip to a half Nelson and shoulder hold that gave him the second fall and the bout."

UNCLE SAM'S HANDY MAN

Secretary Taft in the Role of the Peacemaker.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 24.—The war in Cuba sent Theodore Roosevelt to the presidency. Will the new trouble in Cuba do the same for William H. Taft?

The Spanish-American war brought Taft, like Roosevelt, to the front as a man of varied abilities. He has been an able member of the Ohio bar, and had been quickly elevated to the bench by Governor Foraker. Then President Harrison made him solicitor general of the United States, from which place he resigned to accept a United States judgeship in the sixth judicial circuit. This was where he stood when President McKinley, always partial to the men of his native state, asked him to accept the chairmanship of the Philippine commission at a time when the problem that the commission had to solve was the most vexed before the country. Taft had been an able, useful citizen, and an ideal judge, but he was in no sense a national figure, until from motives of purest patriotism he resigned his congenial place on the bench to go to the Philippines.

Taft's work in the Philippines called, perhaps, for more skill and diplomacy than in any other phase of the tangle following the struggle with Spain, but the 297-pound Ohioan threw himself into the task with enthusiasm, and did all that was required, using his famous smile and perpetual good nature as a balm to smooth away the hurts. He danced at a public ball given in his honor on his arrival, and by the way he piloted his bulk through the mazes of the Spanish fandango delighted the Filipinos more than could the most profound expression of statesmanship.

It must not be understood that Taft's work in the Philippines was plain sailing by any means. He and Gen. Chaffee differed as to the necessity of keeping the islands under a strict military law. Taft thought a policy of pacification better; Chaffee argued that to ease up would be to forfeit all that had been gained by the dangerous and costly work of months. The governor prevailed eventually, and the Filipinos came to look upon him as their great friend.

Taft passed from the post of governor of the Phillippines to that of secretary of war, when that post was vacated by Elihu Root. Once more he proved the right man for the right job. More than any other man in the country he understood the questions that had grown up in Cuba and the Philippines, problems by no means solved yet, but which must be matters of concern for years yet to come. It was a queer choice, big, good natured Bill Taft, the man of peace and fun, to be charged with administrating the national military service, but the cabinet has known no abler member.

It has been the experience of Taft to have to accomplish that for which there was no precedent. When he went to the Philippines, he confronted a situation such as the United States had never known before. It was a new thing for Uncle Sam to become the owner of foreign islands and savage people at warfare with the flag of the republic.

Later in Cuba, Taft was dealing with still more extraordinary conditions. He assumed the governorship of a nation that the world and the United States recognize as a republic, but whose government was voluntarily and cheerfully turned over to Taft because its own authorities admitted their inability to prevent disorder. A position of more delicacy could hardly be imagined. It was a post that required firmness, lest in the early stages an outbreak should work damage to American interests, and result in loss of life. To come out of all this complication successfully, as Taft has done, called for abundant patience and good nature, as well as fine diplomacy.

If has been said of Taft that he can do more with a smile than any man in public life. Here is another parallel to Roosevelt. When the rough rider chieftan returned from Cuba, every paper and magazine in the country delighted to print pictures of a grinning face that showed a set of good strong teeth, parted with jollity. The smiling Roosevelt face undoubtedly contributed much to the popularity of the president, and so it may help the case of Taft.

Taft never had the power to master subjects without working. He has little of that superficial brilliancy that brings many public men to the fore in a day. He is intellectually a strong man, but his greater gift is his power of sustained work.

In Cuba he delved into every phase of the situation, met all of the men who are factors, big and little, in present conditions, traced every cause of quarrel, and addressed himself thoroughly to the task of correcting evils, getting the malcontents propitiated, and employing all his moderation, his sanity and his energy toward the restoration of order.

In dealing with the lighter affairs of life, Taft has been as equally successful as in shaping the destines of nations. His trip to the Philippines something over a year ago will not soon be forgotten by any member of his large party. The secretary was the life and fun of the crowd, full of jokes and merriment from morn until night. The close friendship and goodfellowship Mr. Taft cemented among the members of his group on this journey is more than indicated by the number of weddings, which resulted from the jaunt. Indeed they have been so numerouse that the secretary, because of his apparent friendliness with love's little messenger, gained the nickname of Cupid Taft, which, not altogether to his liking, has stuck to him.

ATLANTA RIOT TRIAL FAILS; WITNESS NIPPED

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 24.—The first trial of the men charged with participating in the recent riots here caused by negro assaults on white women, resulted yesterday in the acquittal of Walter Edmunds, a white, charged with the murder of Frank Smith, a negro, one of the first victims of the rioters on the night of Sept. 22. Judge Roan ordered the arrest for perjury of the chief witness for the state, Tom Oaks, 18 years old, on whose evidence the indictment against Edmunds was returned.

Says Paramount Question is Proper Enforcement of Law.

Elmer Adams Makes Denial of Statement by Dr. Cole.

The State is Fairly Alive This Week With Campaigners.

HON. JOHN LIND.

St. Paul, Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ex-Governor John Lind has sent out the following to his friends throughout the state:

My Dear Sir—As my many business engagements will prevent my making any extended tour of the state this fall, I have determined to communicate with some of my friends by letter.

I want to say that I regard the election of Governor Johnson, this fall, as being of the highest importance to the people of this state. Governor Johnson has given a most honest and capable administration, and just at this time, when the paramount question is the proper enforcement of law, a failure upon the part of the people to give their endorsement to his administration would be very unfortunate.

In my speeches two years ago, in supporting Governor Johnson, I said, in speaking of the timber trespasses, that the most deplorable phase of the entire question was that, whether there had been corruption or not, the law had plainly been disregarded. This is no longer true. Under Governor Johnson's direction, efficient means have been adopted for the prosecution of the timber trespassers. He has likewise been most active in bringing about insurance reform. The dairy and food department, so important to the people of this state, has been most efficient. The board of equalization, appointed by him, was

FIGHTING TRIP OF OCEAN BARK

Crew Breaks Into Liquor Cargo and Engages in Mutiny.

Victoria, B. C., Oct 25.—The British bark Don, which arrived today after a belated passage from Glasgow, with a general cargo, including shipments of liquors and explosives, rifles and cement, was in collision with a French ship in the Irish channel soon after starting, and put back to Plymouth for repairs. Then a call was made at Montevideo to land Capt. Jeffreys, who was ill. From there the mate, Capt. Roach, took charge.

Off Cape Horn, where heavy weather was encountered and the vessel was hove to under storm sails, the crew brok into the shipment of liquor, and all hands became intoxicated. They refused to work the ship, which lay helpless, threatening to drive ashore on Horn island. A change of wind alone saved her.

From that time on, more or less liquor was abstracted from the cargo and more intoxication and fighting, until finally the captain got control by threatening to use firearms and managed to make port without any further serious trouble.

NEW CABINET DELAYS WORK

France's Parliament Meets and Adjourns for Fortnight.

Paris, Oct. 25.—The French parliament reassembled this afternoon, but the opening was robbed of all interest because Premier Clemenceau had officially advised the presidents of the chambers that the ministerial declaration would not be ready for several days. After brief and perfunctory sessions both chambers adjourned until Nov. 3, the only business transacted being the appointment by the senate of a commission to consider a proposition to transfer the ashes of Emile Zola to the Pantheon.

Both President Brisson and President Dubost, in calling their respective chambers to order, made references to the national bereavement in the loss of the submarine boat Lutin and her crew of sixteen men.

AGED MAN MAY DIE IN EFFORT TO SEE BRYAN.

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 25.—Fred Schelly, 80 years old, walked twelve miles to hear William J. Bryan yesterday, and when he reached the outskirts of the city fell unconscious from exhaustion and is in a critical condition. Mr. Bryan ordered that the old man be taken to a private hospital and cared for at his expense.

SETS TITLE AT NAUGHT

Too Good an American to Want to be a Lord.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 25.—R. R. Carew, heir to an earldom and several castles and many broad acres in England, prefers to be an American citizen and a Los Angeles realty dealer, and spurns a title and rich estate whic hare his for the asking.

Carew was a resident of Chicago when the Spanish-American war broke out, and enlisted in the First regiment of that city. At the charge up San Juan Hill he was wounded. He was slow to recover in Chicago, and so came West.

Mr. and Mrs. Carew are making preparations for a trip to England. Mr. Carew recently learned of the death of his father and two older brothers, and is going back to visit his sister. He says nothing could induce him to remain, or to set up any claim to his father's earldom. He would say nothing of his family connections. He admitted the general truth of the story told by his friends.

When he was a mere lad his father, to give him training in business, sent him to Wales to manage some property there. The son intrusted an agent to attend to his affairs while he was absent on one occasion. The agent signed his employer's name to fraudulent papers, securing a sum of money, and leaving the country. Out of this grew a family estrangement of thirty-two years' duration.

The new earl was once a Michigan state senator. He married an American girl.

POPE BETTER; SEES PILGRIMS

Improvement in Condition Such That Audience is Granted.

Rome, Oct. 25.—Dr. Lapponi this morning found that the pope's condition was improved, the swelling of his foot having almost disappeared and the pains ceased and his temperature being normal. He was, therefore, allowed to receive the British pilgrims, but, instead of an audience in the hall of the consistory, as prearranged, which would have made it necessary for the pontiff to walk, it was held in the throne room. The pope was carried to the throne, and the pilgrims filed before him and kissed his hand. Although the pontiff was languid and pale, his general condition seemed satisfactory.

KICK ON RIOT HOLIDAY.

Chicago, Oct. 255.—The executive boards of the Illinois Coal Operators' association and of the Coal Miners' union met here today to adjust differences. The chief matter slated for discussion is the making of a holiday of Oct. 12, the anniversary of a riot at Virden, Ill., in which a number of men were killed. The operators declare this is a direct violation of the agreement. It is believed by both sides that all differences will be amicably adjusted.

NEW YORK POLICE SHAKEN UP BY BIGGEST CHANGES OF CAPTAINS ON RECORD

Commissioner Bingham Also Finds Crimes Badly Handled.

COMMISSIONER BINGHAM, Who Has Shaken up New York's Police.

New Yor, Oct. 25.—The most sensational shake-up the New York police department has ever experienced, will go into effect tomorrow morning, when every captain, except one, in the five boroughs in the city will be transferred by order of Commissioner Bingham.

The changes are made "for the good of the service," the commissioner announced today.

It is current report that the changes were made because of proof that the captains had been neglecting their legitimate business to devote their time to working for the Tammany county candidates and for the Hearst state ticket.

When General Bingham was appointed by Mayor McClellan, he announced that he would not permit the police department to enter into partisan politics, but would expect all of the officers to devote themselves strictly to their legitimate business. Recently there have been several sensational crimes in various precincts, and the captains and men have been blamed. Quiet investigation was set on foot and today's shake-up was the outcome.

PRAIRIE FIRE.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 25.—Farmers coming from north of the city tell of a disastrous prairie fire which burned over the entire township of Parnell with but a small exception, and destroyed several haystacks and other property. The fire started Sunday morning from a camp fire, and soon reached large proportions.

During the past year Mr. Havener has lost by death his father, mother and brother, and his 5-year-old son was killed in a street car accident.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Up to the close of business yesterday, the treasury department had received twenty-five applications from banks for temporary increases in circulation, under Secretary Shaw's offer of Monday, aggregating about $7,000,000, and it is expected that the entire $18,000,000, will be applied for as fast as the banks can arrange for securities.

IMMIGRATION OF THIS YEAR MAY REACH 1,400,000 TOTAL.

Washington, Oct. 25.—"The total immigration to the United States may reach 1,400,000 people this year," said Secretary Metcalf of the department of commerce and labor, as he left the White House after a brief talk with the president last evening. He added that the immigration problem required new and stronger restrictive legislation.

MANY LIVES LOST IN BIG FIRE TRAP IN KANSAS CITY, KAN., WHILE FIFTY ARE BADLY HURT IN MAKING ESCAPES

Dead Victims of the Holocaust May Number Thirty.

Ladders Prove Too Short to Reach the Upper Floor.

Numerous Exciting Incidents During Work of Rescue.

Kansas City, Oct. 25.—In the ruins of the Chamber of Commerce building in Kansas City, Kan., destroyed by fire early today, are from half a dozen to thirty bodies, according to estimates given out this morning by firemen who had worked at the scene all night; though Assistant Fire Chief Lind insisted that the dead would not reach over six. At that time four corpses had been recovered, while fifty injured were in hospitals and private houses.

The actual loss of life will not be known until a thorough search of the ruins can be made, probably not then, as some firemen assert that many bodies must have been burned to ashes.

The building, used as a tenement house and containing 100 rooms, held, as near as can be learned, between 200 and 300 persons at the time the fire broke out at 12:30. Most of these composed families, but many were transients, whose names are unknown.

The negro janitor, when found about noon, said there were thirty families, numbering 100 persons and about twenty transients in the building.

It was the custom for many of the transients, who came mostly from the nearby railroad yards, not to register, and thus all trace of them is lost for the time being. The known dead are:

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. A. Sparks.

D. R. YOUNG, aged 62, a laborer.

Among the missing, all of whom are certainly dead, are:

MRS. E. M. BRIGMAN and her two children, Amos, aged 15, and Leota, aged 12.

GEORGE MULLEN, invalid, aged 60 years.

MRS. ED WINSLOW and two daughters, Mabel, aged 9, and May, 4.

The injured include: George Sparks, hands and face burned; Mrs. Sparks, hands, neck and face burned;

FLIES LIKE GIANT BIRD

Paris, Oct. 25.—Santos-Dumont won the Deutsch-Archdeacon cup yesterday on the field at Bagatelle with his Bird of Prey, a flying machine. The prize, amounting to $10,000, was offered for the first aerial appliance which, unsupported by gas, should make a circle of one kilometer without coming to the ground.

Santos-Dumont's flight was free with sustained balance. The huge contrivance, propelled by a 60-horsepower motor, shot four or five meters into the air and continued at this height until the aeronaut cut off the power and allowed the screw to stop. Then the horizontal movement was replaced by an inclined movement, and with a thud which smashed the wheels and a part of the lower frame, as well as the rudder, the Bird of Prey came to a standstill.

After repairs had been effected Santos-Dumont made another attempt, and this time his aeroplane fulfilled the requirements and won the prize.

AUTO MEN ON STRIKE

Chauffeurs in New York Tie Up Electric Cab Service.

Non-Union Driver Attacked and Forced to Use Pistol.

New York, Oct. 25.—Three hundred chauffers employed by the New York Transportation company, which operates 350 public electric cabs, struck today for an increase in wages. As a result, nearly all the cabs remained in the big garage at Fiftieth street and Eighth avenue.

The men declare that they are compelled to report for work at the garage every morning at 7 o'clock, and some days they are not given any work at all. They are paid 16 2-3 cents an hour for what time they work. They demand for chaffeurs of the ordinary electric machines, a uniform wage of $2 for a twelve hour day, and less costly uniforms, and for the drivers of vehicles hired to private families, $2.50 per day, instead of $2.31, the amount they are now receiving.

A non-union man who attempted to take one of the electric vehicles from the garage was attacked by a crowd of strikers and was being roughly handled when he drew a revolver and fired into the crowd. No one was hit. Two arrests were made.

President Mead, of the Transportation company, said the company regarded the demands of the men as unjust and would not grant them at present.

After the trouble encountered by the non-union chauffeur, it was decided not to attempt to send out any more machines without police protection.

STREET CARS FATAL TO TWO

Minneapolis Men Meet Death Under Rapidly Moving Coaches.

Minneapolis, Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—One man was killed and another fatally injured so that he died in the hospital early today by street accidents in Minneapolis last evening.

John Roehl, a carpenter, living at 2013 Third street north, was killed by a rapidly moving Twentieth avenue north car about 7 o'clock. A heavy rain obscured the motoneer's vision, and Roehl was deaf and did not hear the car approaching.

John C. Ryan, a blacksmith, living at 235 Selby avenue, St. Paul, was struck by a car at Twenty-seventh street and Chicago avenue. His leg and one arm were broken. He was taken to the Northwestern hospital, where he died early today.

Two special cars from Chicago and other Western points and two from New York brought a large number of the fraternity here. Fletcher D. TAKES ISSUE WITH BRYAN

Senator Culberson Attacks Railroad Government Ownership.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 25—At a banquet last night by citizens of Dallas to the Texas legislature, Senator Charles A. Culberson made the first pronounced public utterance in the state against government ownership of railroads since Mr. Bryan proposed the scheme two months ago. The cheering throughout his remarks was general.

Declaring that the future of the Democratic party depended on its adherence to fundamental principles and especially opposition to paternalism and centralization, he said that, great as had been the offenses of the Republican party, any single proposition in its history was as naught compared with the policy of government ownership and operation of railroads.

Senator Culberson declared this principle was first announced in the platform of the Populist party and that the measure involved the most advanced and aggravated form of paternalism ever offered under a free government.

The total loss was about $70,000. The fire is believed to have been incendiary.

ATTEMPTS TO KILL HIMSELF

Andrew Neimi, aged 30 years, a farmer residing near Eveleth, who was adjudged insane in the probate court, yesterday afternoon, attempted to commit suicide shortly after he was returned to his cell in the county jail. In some manner not known, Neimi secured a razor. Although he was under guard he drew the blade across his throat in a moment the guard was not looking.

Neimi was removed to St. Mary's hospital, and it is thought that he will recover. The unfortunate man has a wife and two children, who still reside on the farm. Some months ago his mind began wandering, and he would frequently wander away into the woods and get lost, although but a short distance from his home.

WILL EXTEND VIADUCT.

Railroad Companies Will Expend $75,000 in Superior.

Next spring the Northern Pacific and Terminal Railroad companies will expend $75,000 in the construction of an extension to the Belknap street viaduct in Superior. The structure will connect with the approaches of the viaduct built over the Great Northern Railway company's tracks and when completed a safe roadway will be furnished over every track between Oakes and Elmira avenue.

The viaduct extension, it is said, will be due to the persistent efforts of Mayor Linley who has been urging the matter with the officials of the railroads. Two months ago the Northern Pacific company agreed to share its part of the expense and recently the Terminal company notified the city authorities that it would co-operate in the work.

WOMAN ATTACKS SUFFRAGE PLAN

Chicago, Oct. 25.—With surprise, horror and resentment pictured on their faces, forty conspicuous leaders in women's clubs who had stormed the meeting of the charter convention committee on municipal elections with an appeal for equal suffrage in the new charter, demanded that further reading of a letter from Caroline F. Corbin be dispensed with.

Mrs. Corbin is president of the Illinois association opposed to the extension of suffrage to women. She was unable to attend the conference, but sent the committee a letter in which she said the women's suffrage movement was a type of Socialism allied with the Maxim Gorky propaganda, and excorating the Chicago university professor who said that a girl who had had "her fling" would make a good wife, brought several of the women to their feet with cries of "stop."

Mrs. Charles Henrotin, wife of the Belgian consul; Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, and Prof. Graham Taylor of Chicago Commons demanded that the reading of the communication cease.

After Mrs. Henrotin protested, the committee decided that inasmuch as there was no one present representing the opponents of women's suffrage, Mrs. Corbin's letter should be read.

She contended that there is a close relation between woman suffrage and the propaganda of revolutionary Socialism, and that, carried to its last analysis, even the marriage ties are treated lightly. She cited the fact that every platform written by the Social Democratic party in Europe and this country for thirty years has declared for universal suffrage without distinction of sex."

SEVEN KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 25.—By an explosion in the mine of the Cambria Steel company here yesterday, seven men were killed and two painfully burned. The explosion is thought to have been caused by the ignition of gas in setting off a blast, in a heading three miles from the mouth of the mine shaft.

An official statement by the manager of the Cambria Steel company says: "By an explosion in the Rolling Mill mine of the Cambria Steel company seven men are dead and two are painfully but not fatally, injured. Up to the present only one of the dead has been identified. He is an American born miner, Sampson Luther. It is believed the other dead are all foreigners, as are the two injured.

CANDIDATE COLE IS CORRECTED

In Regard to Drainage Plank in Democratic State Platform.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the speech which he delivered here Monday night, A. L. Cole, Republican caddidate for governor, made the assertion that the Democratic party inserted nothing concerning drainage in its platform when the state convention was held at Minneapolis, but that a paragraph was afterward inserted, when the convention had adjourned, and fixed up as a part of the original platform, and that he believed that a Beltrami county man called attention to the omission and had the plank inserted.

P. J. Russell of this city, a member of the Democratic state committee, brands the statement as being utterly false; that he (Russell) introduced the drainage plank and that it was passed before the adjournment of the convention.

FIRE ON AUTOIST.

Racine, Wis., Oct. 25.—For the third time within a month Frank K. Bull, a wealthy manufacturer, was shot at Tuesday night while autoing with his son and friends in their machines. The bullet was presumably fired from a buggy passing. One tire was shot through and a bullet also grazed Bull's head.

HOW BUENTHER MET HIS DEATH

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first authentic information relative to the manner in which Henry Buenther, the Bemidji taxidermist, was drowned near Tower was given out here when C. F. Schroeder of this city, returned from Tower, having been on a trip inspecting the country north of Tower. Mr. Schroeder, with a party of friends, had been down Indian Sioux river, north of Big Trout lake (a trip which Buenther had planned to take), and returned to Tower when he heard that Buenther had met his death.

According to Mr. Schroeder, Buenther and Frank Johnson arrived in Tower Thursday evening and registered at a local hotel, Buenther using an assumed name, "Henry Bounty." They spent the night at Tower and left Friday morning on their intended trip. They went across Vermilion lake on a steamer, and portaged three-fourths of a mile to Big Trout lake. They had a portable canvas boat, which they put in Big Trout lake and started across the lake. Big Trout is filled with dangerous rocks, and it is supposed that the boat struck one of these. At any rate, they had not gone far, when the boat collapsed, precipitating the occupants into the water. Both Johnson and Buenther started to swim to the shore of Pine Island, which is in the center of the lake, and were easily breasting the waves and making good progress, when Buenther, without an outcry of any kind, sank from sight. Johnson could render him no assistance and swam to the shore of the island. Buenther was nowhere to be seen. The water was bitterly cold, and realizing that he would perish if he remained on the island, Johnson, with commendable pluck, again jumped into the lake and swam to the mainland. He walked around the arms of Big Trout lake to the outlet of Bear creek, a distance of twenty miles, where he boarded the steamer and went to Tower, from which place he telegraphed to Bemidji the brief announcement that Buenther was drowned.

A searching party was sent out from Tower, but no news has been received from there relative to the success of the expedition in finging Buenther's body. Mr. Schroeder states that Big Trout lake, besides being filled with rocks, is very deep at the point where Buenther sank, being perhaps 200 feet to the bottom, and he believes that it will be next to impossible to bring it to the surface.

Allan Benner and Charles Cassier have left this city for Tower and will assist the party there in their efforts to locate the body, and bring it back to Bemidji.

MINERS' CHIEF GROWS FIERY

Attacks by Dissenter Answered by Charges of Plotting.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 25.—Replying to charges that the officials of district No. 11, United Mine Workers of America, had not acted in the interests of the organization, National President John Mitchell, in the special convention here yesterday, accused the dissenters of an effort to disrupt the union.

Delegate T. C. Llewellyn of Linton, criticised a decision of the national officers and by inference declared that they, including President Mitchell, were not above suspicion.

Mr. Mitchell, who had been sitting at one side of the hall as a spectator, jumped up and said that Llewellyn had been the recipient of credentials of the Industrial Workers of the World, and was allied with the Western Federation, and as its ally, was doing all in his power to break the supremacy of the United Mine Workers in the Indiana field. When he finished, he was cheered to the echo.

WAR ON BILLBOARDS.

American Civic Association Proposes to Fight Defacers of Scenery.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 25.—"Tax the bill boards out of existence," will be the battle cry of American Civic association for the next year as a result of the plans decided at its annual convention. Sentiment in favor of aggressive steps against the billboard, characterized all the addresses and the organization will bring to bear upon this problem the same powerful influence that made successful its campaign for the preservation of Niagara Falls.

Secretary Woodruff referred to the despoliation by billboards of scenery throughout the country, and said that the next great work which the American people must wage is that against the destruction of landscapes and surroundings by billboards and unsightly posters. This campaign must be waged, on the one hand, to abate the nuisance, and on the other hand to create a public sentiment sufficiently strong to force a solution of the question.

A. H. West, aged 66, carpenter at Missouri Pacific shops, roomed alone on fourth floor; face, neck and hands severely burned; Thomas Hunter, blacksmith, bruised and overcome by smoke; Patrick Morley, railroad laborer, hip broken; Capt. J. E. Buehhalter, fireman, back hurt by falling ladder; M. H. McCall, railroad laborer, bruised and cut; Thomas Connor, engineer, escaped from third floor on fire, and hands burned; Alexander McCambridge, engineer, bruised and burned; John Kane, engineer burned; W. Mulvihill, train dispatcher, Missouri Pacific, burns; Arthur Childers, policeman, knocked from ambulance by wire and run over, serious; Emmet Scott, arm broken, face and head bruised; J. E. Branahan, wagon-maker, both legs broken by jumping from third floor; J. K. Sankow, packing house employe, bruised and burned; Mrs. Mary Sankow, bruised by fall from fire escape; Edward Bayless, slight; W. J. Morley, fireman of Missouri Pacific, jumped from third story, leg broken; Fred Creel, reporter, cut on head by falling brick; Frank Ditar, swung to ground from fourth floor with aid of rope, hurt internally; A. J. Jackson, laborer, slight; Mrs. J. H. Rose, wife of Missouri Pacific hostler, hands burned by sliding down rope from fourth floor; unknown babe, fatally hurt, dropped from second floor to policeman who waited to catch her; E. O. Earnhart, foreman Fowler Packing house, hands badly burned by sliding down rope from third story; S. H. McCauley, Missouri Pacific fireman, cut by glass; Frank Otterman, railway mail clerk, cut and bruised.

The Chamber of Commerce building was situated at Park and Central streets, in the Riverview district of Kansas City, Kas., at a junction of the elevated railways, two blocks west of the Kaw river and a mile southeast of what now is the business district of Kansas City, Kas. It was erected fourteen years ago at a cost of $85,000, to be used as a board of trade. The city grew away from it, however, and it was never used for its original purpose, but for years had been occupied as an apartment house. It was four stories in height, with a deep basement, and faced the two streets. It was built of brick and stone and contained 100 rooms, almost all of which were, as far as can be learned, occupied by families or individual laboring men or railway enmployes at the time the fire started.

The ground floor was occupied by W. A. Lovelace's barber shop, Edward T. Summer's drug store, Central Avenue Gas Fixture company, Mrs. Belle Wagner, restaurant; the Smith Overall laundry, and The Labor Record.

The fire broke out on the ground floor from some unknown cause at 12:30 o'clock. Isolated as it was, the burning building was difficult of access, and it was some time before the fire department reached the scene. Several companies were at a fire in another part of the city.

When the firemen arrived the entire building was in flames, while a stifling smoke filled the structure from the burning stocks of merchandise on the first floor, and some of the occupants probably were never able to leave their rooms.

Men were hanging from window sills on the upper floors, and frantic women, with babies in their arms and children clinging to them, leaned far out from the windows, unable to find any means of escape, and yet taking advantage of the little fresh air that the windows afforded.

The firemen quickly ran their ladders up, but they did not reach above the third floor. Many persons were on the floor above. Many of the persons in the interior were already overcome by the dense smoke, and had to be carried out by the firemen. But many were able to escape down the ladders without assistance.

After getting every one they could find, out of the second and third floors, the firemen turned their attention to the people above. As ladders did not reach above the third floor, the men on the fourth floor literally pitched their wives and children down to the firemen on the ladders, and then jumped down themselves. Some of the more excitable ones jumped to the ground and were either killed or badly injured. Some whom the firemen tried to catch fell the entire distance to the ground.

Frank Diter, a mail clerk, jumped from the fourth floor and caught hold of a ladder two stories below. Although he saved himself, he broke all of the fingers of both hands.

Jesse Ford, a laborer, carrying his wife in his arms climbed out of a window of the fourth floor, walked along a beam until he reached a point directly over a fireman's ladder and then dropped the woman to a fireman below. The fireman caught her and passed her safely to the ground. Ford then went back and got his nine months old baby and saved it in a like manner. He then jumped himself and was caught by a fireman.

H. G. Wilson was one of the first persons on the fourth floor to get the attention of the firemen. He appeared at a window directly above a ladder and dropped his baby to a fireman. Then he dropped his wife down and she was saved, and he followed, escaping serious injury.

John Lynch grabbed the baby of John Sparks and jumped with it, and with the child, fell in the burning debris below. Both disappeared and were killed.

The fire interrupted traffic on the elevated road and a motorman, whose car stood opposite the burning building, said he saw five or six persons in the upper floors struggling frantically to escape and he is certain all of them succumbed.

The total financial loss is estimated at $100,000. Of this amount $60,000 was on the building owned by W. A. Bunker and insured for $40,000.

Piles

A Trial Package Mailed Free to All.

The rectum, like the mouth, is lined with that soft, sathy material known as mucous membrane. Piles is a disease of that membrane and the blood vessels that lie under it.

Fissure and Fistula affect the same membrane, and belong to the same family. Pyramid Pile Cure slipped into the bowel, melt and spread themselves over the diseased and painful surface and act just as a salve would if the trouble was on the outside of the body and could be easily seen and gotten at.

The immediate relief they give even in the most agonizing cases will startle you, as it has already startled many thousands of "doubting Thomases" before you, who have tried everything and sent for the sample package, firmly convinced that they would again be disappointed.

But they weren't. Pyramid Pile Cure don't disappoint. They cure. They are for sale at all druggists at 50 cents a box, and are worth an even hundred to the person who needs them.

"This is to certify that I have used three 50c boxes of Pyramid Pile Cure and it has benefited me more than any other pile remedy I have ever used. I used the sample which you sent me, together with the three 50c boxes, and I am so much better, but not entirely cured, as my case is one of twenty-three years' standing. I did not expect to be cured all at once. I had almost lost all hope of ever getting any remedy that would help me until I tried Pyramid Pile Cure. I believe they will entirely cure me if I continue their use, which I intend doing so long as I can get the money to pay for them. I do not think any one ever suffered very much more than I have at times. Then I would be so nervous I could not get any ease in any position I could place myself.

"I cannot express my gratitude for the good your medicine has done me. I will continue to tell my friends of their merit. Yours, Emma Bodenhamer, Bedford, Ind."

Or, if you want to prove this matter at our expense, before purchasing, send your name and address to the Pyramid Drug Co., 56 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Michigan, and receive a trial package free by return mail.

IMPORTANT GATHERING

National Fraternal Congress Convention Will be Noteworthy Event.

Secretary-Treasurer C. A. Gower Here Looking After Arrangements.

C. A. Gower of Lansing, Mich., is in Duluth looking after the interests of the National Fraternal congress of which he is the secretary-treasurer.

This morning Mr. Gower expressed himself as pleased with the arrangements being perfected for the successful entertainment of the twenty-first-annual session of the National Fraternity congress to be held in Duluth the third week in August, 1907.

"It may be a matter of interest to you," said Mr. Gower, "to know that the societies represented by this congress pay out annually somewhere in the neighborhood of $100,000,000, and have paid out in all over $250,000,000 to beneficiaries of the various constituent orders."

When asked as to the number of delegates expected to attend next year's convention, Mr. Gower stated that at the convention in Montreal there were present some 300 delegates, besides as many more friends and relatives of the delegates, not to mention the bonding and commercial interests represented for business reasons.

The personnel of this convention is drawn from and chosen by 5,000,000 members of the leading fraternal beneficiary orders, chosen on account of their ability and sterling character, most of whom have won honorable fame and distinction through service to their state and nation in professional or public career. In addition to the male delegates to this convention, Mr. Gower said that the leading club women and women interested in fraternal beneficiary work in United States and Canada were also delegates.

He asserted that after looking Duluth over thoroughly he was convinced the session of 1907 would be one of the most successful ever held. He said that next year's convention is expected to be the most important for the reason that the Associated Fraternities of America, which is comprises within its membership all of those fraternal beneficiary societies not included in the membership of the National Fraternal congress, has also selected Duluth for its 1907 convention, and the question of consolidating the two congresses will come up for final settlement at the meeting. Mr. Gower did not express any opinion as to what the result of the efforts to consolidate would be, but gave assurance that the most interesting session ever held by either of the congresses would take place in this city when the forces meet in August next.

The National Fraternal congress is composed of sixty of the largest and oldest fraternal beneficiary insurance societies, and Mr. Gower expressed himself as very much pleased to find that most of them had strong representations here for the reason that it has been the custom to devote one evening during the session to receptions by the local lodges tendered to the supreme officers of the different societies.

This congress came to Duluth through the efforts of A. E. McManus, who was a delegate to that convention from the Modern Samaritans of Duluth, Minn., and Senator George R. Laybourn, who was delegate from the Independent Order of Foresters from the State of Minnesota, and Mr. Gower stated that he looked to these gentlemen to take the laboring oar in the preliminary arrangements for its entertainment when it does come.

Mr. Gower left on the afternoon train for Minneapolis, accompanied by Mr. McManus. While in the city the Lansing man was a guest at the home of M. H. Stanford, an old friend. Mr. Gower has for many years been prominent in public life in Michigan, and for a time was state superintendent of public instruction. In 1905, when the National Fraternal congress met at Mackinac Island, he delivered the welcoming address on behalf of the governor.

The Associated Fraternities of America met in Detroit this year after the close of the other convention in Montreal, and decided at that time to accept the invitation of Mr. McManus to hold their next meeting in Duluth. Several large cities of the country went to large expense to land these conventions, but lost out when Duluth stepped into the ring. Because of the prominence and wealth of the men attending the convention of the National Fraternal congress, it is considered one of the most desirable of the year, and always is eagerly sought by the large cities of the United States and Canada.

Has Expired and Heirs Are to Divide $44,000,000.

Ladysmith, Wis., Oct. 25.—An Appolonia citizen, Fred Siglin, announces that he has been informed by friends that he is heir to an immense estate on Manhattan island, New York. According to the attorney from waom the information is alleged to have come, some of Siglin's ancestors formerly owned a large block of property on the island, and they leased 160 acres of it for a period of ninety-nine years. This period has just expired and Siglin says that his attorneys inform him that the land will revert to the heirs shortly. If the claim is established, Siglin says that something like $44,000,000 will be divided up among the heirs.

MRS. ANNA N. KAISER.

MRS. ANNA N. KAISER, Two Rivers, Wis., was a sufferer from pelvic catarrh to such an extent that she could scarcely do her own work. In describing her symptoms, she wrote.

"I have such terrible backaches and pains below my shoulder blades, way down my back and across my hips, and at times pains in the pelvic organs, so that I am not able to lie down or sleep. I also have pains through my left side and am afraid I may be getting heart trouble."

"I feel much stronger and do not get nervous as I used to. The pain is entirely gone, except when I work a little too hard. The medicine has done me wonderful good. I am taking Peruna and Manalin. My bowels are also in good condition."

Reports Her Cure.

"I must drop you a line to let you know that I am well now and cured with your medicine. I must thank you for the advice you gave me.

"The medicine is something wonderful. I cannot praise it enough for the good it has done for me and I hope many others will be freed from their suffering.

"I have advised others who are suffering as I did to consult you and many are taking my advice. If ever I need medicine again, I know that Peruna will help me."

An Excellent Tonic.

Mrs. Emily Ross Perry, 819 18th Ave., N. E., Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

FARMER SUES BURGLAR.

Discovers Latter is Husband of His Divorced Wife.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 25.—Complications pile on complications in the case of John Wipf, farmer, who sues John Smith, burglar, for $2,000 damages for injuries received when the farmer was arresting the burglar, who, he says, he caught crawling from a window of his house. Wipf now says he has satisfied himself that Smith is the husband of his former wife, from whom he was divorced five years ago. He thinks Smith was looking for something other than valuables when he ransacked his house, hunting through all the bureau drawers and leaving a roll of $400 in currency. Wipf captured Smith after a pistol duel and brought him to town in a wagon, the hired man sitting on his chest. On the way Wipf says he was offered first $100, then larger sums until the price finally reached $1,400, to set his prisoner free. The knowledge that Smith had so much money led Wipf to institute a civil suit against the man he charged with breaking into the house, for damages resulting from the fight which followed. Smith was credited with explaining his actions by saying that he had been prompted to search the house by a neighbor, and Wipf says Smith called him by name when he first found him. On the witness stand the most startling complication of all came with an absolute denial from Smith that he had broken into the house, or that he had fired at Wipf, or that he had offered money for his release. In testifying thus he gave the lie direct to Wipf, Mrs. Wipf and the hired man. Smith further naively explained that he was a San Francisco refugee and was seeking employment as a cook in the Union Pacific grading camp several miles from the Wipf farm and lost his way, and stopped to get a drink of water from the Wipf well.

CIRCUS PERFORMER

Sues for $40 a Week Salary for the Death Dip.

New York, Oct. 25.—Because she was not allowed to risk her life twelve times a week for $40 in the "Dip of Death," Octavia La Barbe has gone into the courts.

It was when her lawyer stated to the court that his client had contracted with the circus managers for $40 weekly and board to appear twice daily in "Turbillon de la Mort" that the cheap price for life risks became known.

Counsel for the circus promptly admitted that the agreement had been made, but he said there was a clause which permitted the breaking of the contract if it became evident that her work would not be satisfactory. She had, he said, represented her weight as 98 pounds, but later she tipped the scales at 150 pounds. He said her weight would have imperilled her life.

Miss La Barbe replied that the weight mattered not at all.

AUSTRIAN LABORER

Billings, Mont., Oct. 25.—An Austrian laborer, who had been employed on the irrigation canal at Huntley and whose name is believed to be A. Grehft, was yesterday picked up near the railroad track, where he was lying in an unconscious condition.

Examination showed that his nose is broken and his face badly battered, and it is thought his skull is fractured.

As he had received his pay check a day or two ago, it is thought he was murderously assaulted and robbed. He is unable to speak English and his story cannot be learned till an interpreter can be found.

Wholesome is what wholesome does. If your biscuit and cake are bad, perhaps it's your baking powder. If so, change to Hunt's Perfect.

COL. JAMES' WIDOW

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 25.—Mrs. Mary H. James, who has been acting postmaster since the death of her husband a few months ago, received official notice yesterday from Washington stating that she had been appointed postmistress of the local office to fill out the unexpired term which Col. James was to serve. The appointment was recommended by Congressman J. Adam Bede, who was in Virginia shortly after the death of Col. James, and the announcement is received with approval on the part of all the business interests and others of the city.

Company Must Show Cause.

Charles H. Mear & Co., an Ashland firm, has been ordered by Judge Ensign to show cause why a stay of proceedings for sixty days should not be granted in the company's suit against C. J. Petruschke, the Duluth box manufacturer. The company was recently given a verdict against Mr. Petruschke for lumber sold him. Mr. Petruschke claimed that the lumber was inferior in grade to what he ordered and was supposed to pay for. He asks the stay of proceedings to enable him to get a transcript of the testimony taken at the trial to use in appealing the case to the state supreme court.

Andrew Neimi, aged 39 years, a farmer residing near Eveleth, who was adjudged insane in the probate court, yesterday afternoon, attempted to commit suicide shortly after he was returned to his cell in the county jail. In some manner not known, Neimi secured a razor. Although he was under guard he drew the blade across his throat in a moment the guard was not looking.

Neimi was removed to St. Mary's hospital, and it is thought that he will recover. The unfortunate man has a wife and two children, who still reside on the farm. Some months ago his mind began wandering, and he would frequently wander away into the woods and get lost, although but a short distance from his home.

WILL EXTEND VIADUCT.

Railroad Companies Will Expend $75,000 in Superior.

Next spring the Northern Pacific and Terminal Railroad companies will expend $75,000 in the construction of an extension to the Belknap street viaduct in Superior. The structure will connect with the approaches of the viaduct built over the Great Northern Railway company's tracks and when completed a safe roadway will be furnished over every track between Oakes and Elmira avenue.

The viaduct extension, it is said, will be due to the persistent efforts of Mayor Linley who has been urging the matter with the officials of the railroads. Two months ago the Northern Pacific company agreed to share its part of the expense and recently the Terminal company notified the city authorities that it would co-operate in the work.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—With surprise, horror and resentment pictured on their faces, forty conspicuous leaders in women's clubs who had stormed the meeting of the charter convention committee on municipal elections with an appeal for equal suffrage in the new charter, demanded that further reading of a letter from Caroline F. Corbin be dispensed with.

Mrs. Corbin is president of the Illinois association opposed to the extension of suffrage to women. She was unable to attend the conference, but sent the committee a letter in which she said the women's suffrage movement was a type of Socialism allied with the Maxim Gorky propaganda, and excoriating the Chicago university professor who said that a girl who had had "her fling" would make a good wife, brought several of the women to their feet with cries of "stop."

Mrs. Charles Henrotin, wife of the Belgian consul; Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, and Prof. Graham Taylor of Chicago Commons demanded that the reading of the communication cease.

After Mrs. Henrotin protested, the committee decided that inasmuch as there was no one present representing the opponents of women's suffrage, Mrs. Corbin's letter should be read.

She contended that there is a close relation between woman suffrage and the propaganda of revolutionary Socialism, and that, carried to its last analysis, even the marriage ties are treated lightly. She cited the fact that every platform written by the Social Democratic party in Europe and this country for thirty years has "declared for universal suffrage without distinction of sex."

SEVEN KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 25.—By an explosion in the mine of the Cambria Steel company here yesterday, seven men were killed and two painfully burned. The explosion is thought to have been caused by the ignition of gas in setting off a blast, in a heading three miles from the mouth of the mine shaft.

An official statement by the manager of the Cambria Steel company says: "By an explosion in the Rolling Mill mine of the Cambria Steel company seven men are dead and two are painfully but not fatally, injured. Up to the present only one of the dead has been identified. He is an American born miner, Sampson Luther. It is believed the other dead are all foreigners, as are the two injured.

CANDIDATE COLE IS CORRECTED

In Regard to Drainage Plank in Democratic State Platform.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the speech which he delivered here Monday night, A. L. Cole, Republican candidate for governor, made the assertion that the Democratic party inserted nothing concerning drainage in its platform when the state convention was held at Minneapolis, but that a paragraph was afterward inserted, when the convention had adjourned, and fixed up as a part of the original platform, and that he believed that a Beltrami county man called attention to the omission and had the plank inserted.

P. J. Russell of this city, a member of the Democratic state committee, brands the statement as being utterly false; that he (Russell) introduced the drainage plank and that it was passed before the adjournment of the convention.

FIRE ON AUTOIST.

Racine, Wis., Oct. 25.—For the third time within a month Frank K. Bull, a wealthy manufacturer, was shot at Tuesday night while autoing with his son and friends in their machines. The bullet was presumably fired from a buggy passing. One tire was shot through and a bullet also grazed Bull's head.

HOW BUENTHER MET HIS DEATH

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first authentic information relative to the manner in which Henry Buenther, the Bemidji taxidermist, was drowned near Tower was given out here when C. F. Schroeder of this city, returned from Tower, having been on a trip inspecting the country north of Tower. Mr. Schroeder, with a party of friends, had been down Indian Sioux river, north of Big Trout lake (a trip which Buenther had planned to take), and returned to Tower when he heard that Buenther had met his death.

According to Mr. Schroeder, Buenther and Frank Johnson arrived in Tower Thursday evening and registered at a local hotel, Buenther using an assumed name, "Henry Bounty." They spent the night at Tower and left Friday morning on their intended trip. They went across Vermilion lake on a steamer, and portaged three-fourths of a mile to Big Trout lake. They had a portable canvas boat, which they put in Big Trout lake and started across the lake. Big Trout is filled with dangerous rocks, and it is supposed that the boat struck one of these. At any rate, they had not gone far, when the boat collapsed, precipitating the occupants into the water. Both Johnson and Buenther started to swim to the shore of Pine island, which is in the center of the lake, and were easily breasting the waves and making good progress, when Buenther, without an outcry of any kind, sank from sight. Johnson could render him no assistance and swam to the shore of the island. Buenther was nowhere to be seen. The water was bitterly cold, and realizing that he would perish if he remained on the island, Johnson, with numbed limbs, struck, again jumped into the lake and swam to the mainland. He walked around the arms of Big Trout lake to the outlet of Bear creek, a distance of twenty miles, where he boarded the steamer and went to Tower, from which place he telegraphed to Bemidji the brief announcement that Buenther was drowned.

A searching party was sent out from Tower, but no news has been received from there relative to the success of the expedition in finding Buenther's body. Mr. Schroeder states that Big Trout lake, besides being filled with rocks, is very deep at the point where Buenther sank, being perhaps 200 feet to the bottom, and he believes that it will be next to impossible to bring it to the surface.

Allan Benner and Charles Cassler have left this city for Tower and will assist the party there in their efforts to locate the body, and bring it back to Bemidji.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 25.—Replying to charges that the officials of district No. 11, United Mine Workers of America, had not acted in the interests of the organization, National President John Mitchell, in the special convention here yesterday, accused the dissenters of an effort to disrupt the union.

Delegate T. C. Llewellyn of Linton, criticised a decision of the national officers and by inference declared that they, including President Mitchell, were not above suspicion.

Mr. Mitchell, who had been sitting at one side of the hall as a spectator, jumped up and said that Llewellyn had been the recipient of credentials of the Industrial Workers of the World, and was allied with the Western Federation, and as its ally, was doing all in his power to break the supremacy of the United Mine Workers in the Indiana field. When he finished, he was cheered to the echo.

WAR ON BILLBOARDS.

American Civic Association Proposes to Fight Defacers of Scenery.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 25.—"Tax the bill boards out of existence," will be the battle cry of American Civic association for the next year as a result of the plans decided at its annual convention. Sentiment in favor of aggressive steps against the billboard, characterized all the addresses and the organization will bring to bear upon this problem the same powerful influence that made successful its campaign for the preservation of Niagara Falls.

Secretary Woodruff referred to the despoliation by billboards of scenery throughout the country, and said that the next great work which the American people must wage is that against the destruction of landscapes and surroundings by billboards and unsightly posters. This campaign must be waged, on the one hand, to abate the nuisance, and on the other hand to create a public sentiment sufficiently strong to force a solution of the question.

The Chamber of Commerce building was situated at Park and Central streets, in the Riverview district of Kansas City, Kas., at a junction of the elevated railways, two blocks west of the Kaw river and a mile southeast of what now is the business district of Kansas City, Kas. It was erected fourteen years ago at a cost of $85,000, to be used as a board of trade. The city grew away from it, however, and it was never used for its original purpose, but for years had been occupied as an apartment house. It was four stories in height, with a deep basement, and faced the two streets. It was built of brick and stone and contained 100 rooms, almost all of which were, as far as can be learned, occupied by families or individual laboring men or railway employes at the time the fire started.

The ground floor was occupied by W. A. Lovelace's barber shop, Edward T. Summer's drug store, Central Avenue Gas Fixture company, Mrs. Belle Wagner, restaurant; the Smith Overall laundry, and The Labor Record.

The fire broke out on the ground floor from some unknown cause at 12:30 o'clock. Isolated as it was, the burning building was difficult of access, and it was some time before the fire department reached the scene. Several companies were at a fire in another part of the city.

When the firemen arrived the entire building was in flames, while a stifling smoke filled the structure from the burning stocks of merchandise on the first floor, and some of the occupants probably were never able to leave their rooms.

Men were hanging from window sills on the upper floors, and frantic women, with babies in their arms and children clinging to them, leaned far out from the windows, unable to find any means of escape, and yet taking advantage of the little fresh air that the windows afforded.

The firemen quickly ran their ladders up, but they did not reach above the third floor. Many persons were on the floor above. Many of the persons in the interior were already overcome by the dense smoke, and had to be carried out by the firemen. But many were able to escape down the ladders without assistance.

After getting every one they could find, out of the second and third floors, the firemen turned their attention to the people above. As ladders did not reach above the third floor, the men on the fourth floor literally pitched their wives and children down to the firemen on the ladders, and then jumped down themselves. Some of the more excitable ones jumped to the ground and were either killed or badly injured. Some whom the firemen tried to catch fell the entire distance to the ground.

Frank Diter, a mail clerk, jumped from the fourth floor and caught hold of a ladder two stories below. Although he saved himself, he broke all of the fingers of both hands.

Jesse Ford, a laborer, carrying his wife in his arms climbed out of a window of the fourth floor, walked along a beam until he reached a point directly over a fireman's ladder and then dropped the woman to a fireman below. The fireman caught her and passed her safely to the ground. Ford then went back and got his nine months old baby and saved it in a like manner. He then jumped himself and was caught by a fireman.

H. G. Wilson was one of the first persons on the fourth floor to get the attention of the firemen. He appeared at a window directly above a ladder and dropped his baby to a fireman. Then he dropped his wife down and she was saved, and he followed, escaping serious injury.

John Lynch grabbed the baby of John Sparks and jumped with it, and with the child, fell in the burning debris below. Both disappeared and were killed.

The fire interrupted traffic on the elevated road and a motorman, whose car stood opposite the burning building, said he saw five or six persons in the upper floors struggling frantically to escape and he is certain all of them succumbed.

The total financial loss is estimated at $100,000. Of this amount $60,000 was on the building owned by W. A. Bunker and insured for $40,000.

Piles

A Trial Package Mailed Free to All.

The rectum, like the mouth, is lined with that soft, satiny material known as mucous membrane. Piles is a disease of that membrane and the blood vessels that lie under it.

Fissure and Fistula affect the same membrane, and belong to the same family. Pyramid Pile Cure slipped into the bowel, melt and spread themselves over the diseased and painful surface and act just as a salve would if the trouble was on the outside of the body and could be easily seen and gotten at.

The immediate relief they give even in the most agonizing cases will startle you, as it has already startled many thousands of "doubting Thomases" before you, who have tried everything and sent for the sample package, firmly convinced that they would again be disappointed.

But they weren't. Pyramid Pile Cure don't disappoint. They cure. They are for sale at all druggists at 50 cents a box, and are worth an even hundred to the person who needs them.

"This is to certify that I have used three 50c boxes of Pyramid Pile Cure and it has benefited me more than any other pile remedy I have ever used. I used the sample which you sent me, together with the three 50c boxes, and I am so much better, but not entirely cured, as my case is one of twenty-three years' standing. I did not expect to be cured all at once. I had almost lost all hope of ever getting any remedy that would help me until I tried Pyramid Pile Cure. I believe they will entirely cure me if I continue their use, which I intend doing so long as I can get the money to pay for them. I do not think any one ever suffered very much more than I have at times. Then I would be so nervous I could not get any ease in any position I could place myself."

"I cannot express my gratitude for the good your medicine has done me. I will continue to tell my friends of their merit. Yours, Emma Bodenhamer, Bedford, Ind."

Or, if you want to prove this matter at our expense, before purchasing, send your name and address to the Pyramid Drug Co., 56 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Michigan, and receive a trial package free by return mail.

IMPORTANT GATHERING

National Fraternal Congress Convention Will be Noteworthy Event.

Secretary-Treasurer C. A. Gower Here Looking After Arrangements.

C. A. Gower of Lansing, Mich., is in Duluth looking after the interests of the National Fraternal congress of which he is the secretary-treasurer.

This morning Mr. Gower expressed himself as pleased with the arrangements being perfected for the successful entertainment of the twenty-first-annual session of the National Fraternity congress to be held in Duluth the third week in August, 1907.

"It may be a matter of interest to you," said Mr. Gower, "to know that the societies represented by this congress pay out annually somewhere in the neighborhood of $100,000,000, and have paid out in all over $250,000,000 to beneficiaries of the various constituent orders."

When asked as to the number of delegates expected to attend next year's convention, Mr. Gower stated that at the convention in Montreal there were present some 300 delegates, besides as many more friends and relatives of the delegates, not to mention the bonding and commercial interests represented for business reasons.

The personnel of this convention is drawn from and chosen by 5,000,000 members of the leading fraternal beneficiary orders, chosen on account of their ability and sterling character, most of whom have won honorable fame and distinction through service to their state and nation in professional or public career. In addition to the male delegates to this convention, Mr. Gower said that the leading club women and women interested in fraternal beneficiary work in United States and Canada were also delegates.

He asserted that after looking Duluth over thoroughly he was convinced the session of 1907 would be one of the most successful ever held. He said that next year's convention is expected to be the most important for the reason that the Associated Fraternities of America, which comprises within its membership all of those fraternal beneficiary societies not included in the membership of the National Fraternal congress, has selected Duluth for its 1907 convention, and the question of consolidating the two congresses will come up for final settlement at the meeting. Mr. Gower did not express any opinion as to what the result of the efforts to consolidate would be, but gave assurance that the most interesting session ever held by either of the congresses would take place in this city when the forces meet in August next.

The National Fraternal congress is composed of sixty of the largest and oldest fraternal beneficiary insurance societies, and Mr. Gower expressed himself as very much pleased to find that most of them had strong representations here for the reason that it has been the custom to devote one evening during the session to receptions by the local lodges tendered to the supreme officers of the different societies.

This congress came to Duluth through the efforts of A. E. McManus, who was a delegate to that convention from the Modern Samaritans of Duluth, Minn., and Senator George R. Layburn, who was delegate from the Independent Order of Foresters from the State of Minnesota, and Mr. Gower stated that he looked to these gentlemen to take the laboring oar in the preliminary arrangements for its entertainment when it does come.

Mr. Gower left on the afternoon train for Minneapolis, accompanied by Mr. McManus. While in the city the Lansing man was a guest at the home of M. H. Stanford, an old friend. Mr. Gower has for many years been prominent in public life in Michigan, and for a time was state superintendent of public instruction. In 1905, when the National Fraternal congress met at Mackinac Island, he delivered the welcoming address on behalf of the governor.

The Associated Fraternities of America met in Detroit this year after the close of the other convention in Montreal, and decided at that time to accept the invitation of Mr. McManus to hold their next meeting in Duluth. Several large cities of the country went to large expense to land these conventions, but lost out when Duluth stepped into the ring. Because of the prominence and wealth of the men attending the convention of the National Fraternal congress, it is considered one of the most desirable of the year, and always is eagerly sought by the large cities of the United States and Canada.

Has Expired and Heirs Are to Divide $44,000,000.

Ladysmith, Wis., Oct. 25.—An Appolonia citizen, Fred Siglin, announces that he has been informed by friends that he is heir to an immense estate on Manhattan island, New York. According to the attorney from whom the information is alleged to have come, some of Siglin's ancestors formerly owned a large block of property on the island, and they leased 160 acres of it for a period of ninety-nine years. This period has just expired and Siglin says that his attorneys inform him that the land will revert to the heirs shortly. If the claim is established, Siglin says that something like $44,000,000 will be divided up among the heirs.

MRS. ANNA N. KAISER,

MRS. ANNA N. KAISER, Two Rivers, Wis., was a sufferer from pelvic catarrh to such an extent that she could scarcely do her own work. In describing her symptoms, she wrote.

"I have such terrible backaches and pains below my shoulder blades, way down my back and across my hips, and at times pains in the pelvic organs, so that I am not able to lie down or sleep. I also have pains through my left side and am afraid I may be getting heart trouble."

"I feel much stronger and do not get nervous as I used to. The pain is entirely gone, except when I work a little too hard. The medicine has done me wonderful good. I am taking Peruna and Manalin. My bowels are also in good condition."

Reports Her Cure.

"I must drop you a line to let you know that I am well now and cured with your medicine. I must thank you for the advice you gave me.

"The medicine is something wonderful. I cannot praise it enough for the good it has done for me and I hope my others will be freed from their suffering.

"I have advised others who are suffering as I did to consult you and many are taking my advice. If ever I need medicine again, I know that Peruna will help me."

An Excellent Tonic.

Mrs. Emily Ross Perry, 819 18th Ave., N. E., Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

Discovers Latter is Husband of His Divorced Wife.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 25.—Complications pile on complications in the case of John Wipf, farmer, who sues John Smith, burglar, for $2,000 damages for injuries received when the farmer was arresting the burglar, who, he says, he caught crawling from a window of his house. Wipf now says he has satisfied himself that Smith is the husband of his former wife, from whom he was divorced five years ago. He thinks Smith was looking for something other than valuables when he ransacked his house, hunting through all the bureau drawers and leaving a roll of $400 in currency. Wipf captured Smith after a pistol duel and brought him to town in a wagon, the hired man sitting on his chest. On the way Wipf says he was offered first $100, then larger sums until the price finally reached $1,400, to set his prisoner free. The knowledge that Smith had so much money led Wipf to institute a civil suit against the man he charged with breaking into the house, for damages resulting from the fight which followed. Smith was credited with explaining his actions by saying that he had been prompted to search the house by a neighbor, and Wipf says Smith called him by name when he first found him. On the witness stand the most startling complication of all came with an absolute denial from Smith that he had broken into the house, or that he had fired at Wipf, or that he had offered him money for his release. In testifying thus he gave the lie direct to Wipf, Mrs. Wipf and the hired man. Smith further naively explained that he was a San Francisco refugee and was seeking employment as a cook in the Union Pacific grading camp several miles from the Wipf farm and lost his way, and stopped to get a drink of water from the Wipf well.

CIRCUS PERFORMER

Sues for $40 a Week Salary for the Death Dip.

New York, Oct. 25.—Because she was not allowed to risk her life twelve times a week for $40 in the "Dip of Death," Octavia La Barbe has gone into the courts.

It was when her lawyer stated to the court that his client had contracted with the circus managers for $40 weekly and board to appear twice daily in "Turbillon de la Mort" that the cheap price for life risks became known.

Counsel for the circus promptly admitted that the agreement had been made, but he said there was a clause which permitted the breaking of the contract if it became evident that her work would not be satisfactory. She had, he said, represented her weight as 58 pounds, but later she tipped the scales at 150 pounds. He said her weight would have imperilled her life.

Miss La Barbe replied that the weight mattered not at all.

AUSTRIAN LABORER

Billings, Mont., Oct. 25.—An Austrian laborer, who had been employed on the Irrigation canal at Huntley and whose name is believed to be A. Grehft, was yesterday picked up near the railroad track, where he was lying in an unconscious condition.

Examination showed that his nose is broken and his face badly battered, and it is thought his skull is fractured.

As he had received his pay check a day or two ago, it is thought he was murderously assaulted and robbed. He is unable to speak English and his story cannot be learned till an interpreter can be found.

COL. JAMES' WIDOW

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 25.—Mrs. Mary H. James, who has been acting postmaster since the death of her husband a few months ago, received official notice yesterday from Washington stating that she had been appointed postmistress of the local office to fill out the unexpired term which Col. James was to serve. The appointment was recommended by Congressman J. Adam Bede, who was in Virginia shortly after the death of Col. James, and the announcement is received with approval on the part of all the business interests and others of the city.

Company Must Show Cause.

Charles H. Mear & Co., an Ashland firm, has been ordered by Judge Ensign to show cause why a stay of proceedings for sixty days should not be granted in the company's suit against C. J. Petruschke, the Duluth box manufacturer. The company was recently given a verdict against Mr. Petruschke for lumber sold him. Mr. Petruschke claimed that the lumber was inferior in grade to what he ordered and was supposed to pay for. He asks the stay of proceedings to enable him to get a transcript of the testimony taken at the trial to use in appealing the case to the state supreme court.

GRAIN MEN ON GRILL

Nebraska Dealers Testify As to Trade and Past Methods.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 25.—When the hearing on grain trade conditions before Interstate Commerce Commissioners Clarke and Lane was resumed today, E. P. Peck, an Omaha grain dealer, told of the methods of arranging prices a year or two ago, during the life of the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association, but said no agreement of that kind now existed. He said he regarded "shovel houses," as unfair competition and used all means to drive them out of business.

C. C. Crittenden, of the Central Grain company, Lincoln, Neb., said his company operated elevators on the Burlington line. They received from that road an allowance of 1¼ cents a hundred pounds to cover elevator charges until last summer, when it was discontinued. He knew of no "shovel houses" in his territory.

F. M. Terrey, a general merchant of Little Sioux, Iowa, who operated a "shovel house," said he was formerly discriminated against by the Northwestern railway. For the last two years he had had no reason for complaining.

J. O. Phillippi, assistant general freight agent of the Missouri Pacific railway for this territory, declared that the Missouri Pacific had no elevators and paid no elevator charges. When asked about the contract mentioned by Mr. Merriam, he said that this was canceled July 8. He asserted that his company made no discrimination between elevators, but added that the man "whose office is in his hat is not entitled to the same consideration as the man who has his money invested in a place for handling grain."

"Presuming that the railroad company is not in the grain business," demanded Commissioner Lane, "what right have you to say who shall invest his money in the construction and operation of elevators and who shall not?"

After pondering on this conundrum for some minutes, the witness gave it up.

C. Vincent, manager of the Farmers' Grain company, composed of about 600 farmers along the line of the Union Pacific in Central Nebraska, said that, although his company had some difficulty in acquiring elevator sites on railway lines at first, it was treated with perfect fairness.

PEERS OPEN SCHOOL TALK

London, Oct. 25—The crucial point for the educational bill was reached today, when the measure came before the house of lords for detailed debate.

Unless the peers elect, after a preliminary skirmish, to postpone consideration of the bill until a judicial decision is rendered on the question of liability of local educational bodies for the expenses of religious education, the upper house is likely to be the scene for some time of the bitterest legislative fight in parliament in recent years.

The bill bristles with contentious points, but the main issue centers on the clauses relating to religious instruction. The general belief is that the controversy will ultimately end in some sort of a compromise. The debate is expected to last three weeks.

New Tailored Suits at $25 and $35.

It's hard to tell what makes these garments superior to others offered at the same price, but it's very easy to see that they are. There is that indefinable something in the cut and finish—that matching of materials to design that marks the line between the common-place and the smart. These garments (bought by us a couple of weeks ago, while in the market, and which ought regularly to bring $35.00 and $40.00) were chosen to give you these qualities of distinction. Don't take our word for it—let the suits themselves prove it.

More Beer,--Less Strong Drink

Temperance Workers See Signs of Progress in Increased Sales of Beer.

Active temperance workers say the greatly increased consumption of beer in this country is a good sign of progress toward real temperance. It shows that beer, a healthful beverage, is fast taking the place of strong alcoholic drinks.

Superintendent Williamson of the Anti-Saloon League, one of the best-known temperance workers, says the great increase in the consumption of beer does not show any falling off in temperance sentiment. Indeed, it is proof of more real temperance sentiment than ever before existed in this country. Interviewed by a Cleveland newspaper, Supt. Williamson said:

"It is doubtless true that there have been 160,000,000 more gallons of beer consumed during the past year than ever before. There is a steady decrease in the consumption of spirituous liquors, such as brandy, whiskey and wine, and a tendency to drink more malt liquors, such as beer. The decrease is doubtless as marked in the one as is the increase in the other. Never before has temperance sentiment had such a strong grip on the people. I do not think there is any cause for worry because the beer consumption has jumped.

Supt. Williamson takes the logical view, for statistics prove that when a community or state or a nation drinks more beer it drinks less liquor. This is important because beer is beneficial to the health, a nutritious and strengthening food drink. The small percentage of alcohol in beer, only a little over three per cent in Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer, aids the digestion and is stimulating but not intoxicating.

Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer is the most refreshing temperance drink. It is brewed from the best ingredients that money can buy or skill produce.—Pabst exclusively eight-day malt, choicest imported hops, pure water, and brewed in absolute cleanliness. It is the most wholesome beer because Pabst exclusive eight-day malt is produced from the best barley by a natural process of development, instead of by the quick, cheap process used in many breweries, and thus retains all the food value of the barley in predigested form.

Richest in food strength, best to the taste, most healthful and always pure and clean, Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer, is also lowest in percentage of alcohol,—the beer for the home.

JAPS OBJECT TO EXCLUSION

San Francisco to be Asked to Open All Schools Again.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Viscount Aoki, the Japanese ambassador, at a conference with Secretary Root at the state department today, made the request, in behalf of his government, that the United States see that Japanese subjects in California should be accorded their full rights under the treaty of 1894, including the right of children to freely attend the public schools of San Francisco.

Secretary Root will take up the matter with the president and it is likely that representations will be made to the authorities of California.

Tht ambassador said that the exclusion of Japanese children from San Francisco schools was the chief cause of the harsh criticisms of the United States. He was inclined to discount the other causes given for the sentiment against the United States, including the Alaska seal trouble.

Secretary Root has requested the Japanese government to cause the arrest and punishment of Japanese poachers who attempted to land on the seal islands of Alaska recently, and who escaped to Japan after some of their party had been killed. The state department regards the attempted landing as an invasion of United States territory.

SHOOTING IN ARMORY

Local Militia Companies to Do Much of It Now.

New Fangled Contrivances Make Inside Practice Worth While.

Officers and men of Companies A and C of the Third regiment, Minnesota National Guard, are making efforts to have considerable attention devoted to indoor target practice during the coming winter.

They dislike to give up the benefits of shooting, but have found that indoor practice is not practical with the ordinary facilities. However, Capt. Knowlton of Company C announced at the drill last evening that Adjt. Gen Wood had consented to furnish two contrivances for inside shooting.

For these affairs, 22-caliber cartridges are used and they are so perfected as to give the men almost as great benefits from the practice as if it was accomplished out of doors.

While only two men can shoot at a time, the guardsmen will get a great deal of use out of the new arrangements. During the winter months many of them spend considerable of their spare time at the Armory and now they can improve it. There is absolutely no danger.

The men of both companies are enthusiastic over the proposition. All of them enjoy the target practice and regret that the cold blasts and snow on the range keep them from it most of the winter months, so they loudly welcome arrangements which permit them to try their skill within a warm building.

In the opinion of experts, this indoor target practice is very much worth while and the militia of many states have already taken it up on a large scale. The Duluth Armory is admirably adapted for it.

The first quarterly inspection of the local batallion will take place at the Armory Nov. 8. Maj. Resche will be the officer in charge.

ROMANCE ENDS IN MARRIAGE

The wedding of Miss Annie Nelson and Oscar Johnson, which will take place this evening at the residence of Rev. Carl Regnell, on Forty-second avenue east, will bring to a close a very pretty little romance.

Miss Nelson and Mr. Johnson have been betrothed for nearly fifteen years, growing up together in their old home in Calmer, Sweden. Four years ago Mr. Johnson came to the United States, hoping to earn enough to make a home for himself and his bride. He was successful and finally found himself in a position to bring his fiancee to this country.

Preferring to be married under the laws of his new country, the ceremony was deferred until they reached this side of the Atlantic, and tonight they will be made man and wife.

They will live in Hibbing, where Mr. Johnson is a contractor.

Win a $30 to $325 prize. Read the W. W. Kimball Co.'s offer on page 4.

DES MOINES SUSTAINED.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 25.—In handing down the opinion that cities and towns are not liable for damages caused to abutting property owners for grading down streets below the original lot lines, the Iowa supreme court yesterday gave a ruling which is of great importance to all municipalities in the state. It is of especial interest to Des Moines, where a considerable amount of street grading is contemplated.

The court sustained the city of Des Moines in the suit for damages brought against the city by Talcott Bros. The plaintiffs claimed indemnity for loss sustained through the grading of the street on which their property abutted. In regard to the right of cities to bring streets to grade, the opinion of the court states: "There must be a cut here and a fill there. When municipal authority was granted to acquire land for and lay out streets there was annexed the general power to establish grades and to improve in accordance with such grades.

"The city had the right as we have seen to make the excavation and had the soil been such as that the earth wall would have remained standing there would have been no injury for which damages could be recovered."

BIG RECEPTION TO GOVERNOR

St. Peter, Minn., Oct. 25.—When Governor Johnson speaks at Mankato next Tuesday night he will be given a great reception by his old friends and neighbors in St. Peter. This will be their only opportunity to hear him, and arrangements are being made to run a special train to Mankato over the Omaha. The train will start at Henderson, and it is believed that between 1,000 and 1,200 persons will buy tickets from that place, Le Sueur, St. Peter and Kasota.

SALOON KEEPER ARRESTED

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Westly Miller, a saloonkeeper of Maple Ridge, Mich., has been arrested and remanded to jail for manslaughter. Timothy McNamara, bartender in the saloon, came to a mysterious death in the saloon some time ago, and it was believed not from natural causes. A party of men had been drinking in the back of the bar, when McNamara failed to respond to a call. Miller went out to see him, and the others following, found McNamara dying on the floor.

Miller claimed that he merely rubbed his hand roughly over the man's face, and that he fell down with heart failure. However, suspicious marks were found upon his head and breast, and in his mouth were fragments of teeth and jawbone. The jury gave a verdict that death was from unknown causes. Since then enough evidence has been found to warrant the arrest of Miller.

JAIL BREAK IS THWARTED

Trusted Prisoner Attacks Keepers and Mortally Wounds One.

New York, Oct. 25.—A daring attempt to liberate fifteen prisoners from Harlem jail was frustrated today, after Keeper Edward M. Cuskley, had been so severely beaten that he may die, and another sustained a broken arm and serious bruises.

Henry Curtin, a prisoner, who had gained the confidence of the prison officials and had been permitted unusual liberties, sprang from a dark corner and struck Cuskley over the head with a wrench. The keeper fell to the floor and Curtin ran to the cell of Albert Langer, another prisoner, and attempted to open the door. While he was struggling with the lock, Cuskley recovered consciousness and attacked Curtin from behind, trying to get the wrench, while the prisoners jeered at him and cheered Curtin on.

Cuskley gradually was getting the upper hand when Curtin drew back and whipping out a long knife drove it twice into the keeper's side and then pounded him on the head with the wrench. By this time John Ford, another keeper, had appeared, and he closed with Curtin. He was victor but his arm was broken in the struggle.

EVELETH COUNCIL IS IN TROUBLE

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Eveleth city council is in a complicated legal squabble over the question of awarding the contract for the construction of two residences for the waterworks employes at St. Mary's lake. Bids for the same were advertised some time ago, the specifications calling for figures both with and without stone foundations, to be accompanied by a certified check for $250. When the bids were opened at the council meeting last week, a difficulty arose. M. P. Finucan offered to build the cottages for $1,900 each, but nothing was said about the foundations, and no certified check was enclosed. Gust Anderson's bid was $1,077 for the two houses with stone foundations and about $3,700 without. Finucan then told the council that he would put in stone foundations without extra charge, thus virtually making two bids and bringing his bid below Anderson's.

The council, at their meeting Tuesday night, awarded the contract to Finucan. Mayor Jesmore was not present at the meeting, and it is not thought that he will execute the contract as City Attorney McGilvery calms that the transaction is illegal in that Finucan was given an unfair advantage over the other bidders and that his bid was not accompanied by the required certified check. This irregular way of doing business will no doubt make trouble for the council and the city in the future, to say nothing of the discomfort of the waterworks employes if the houses are not built until spring, as now seems probable.

INJURED BY A BLAST.

Two Men Severely Hurt in the West Vulcan Mine.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Thorson and Gust Stromquist were taken to the Norway hospital as the result of injuries received in the premature explosion of a blast in the West Vulcan mine. The men thought the blast was dead and Thorson was bending over a defective fuse cutting it with his knife when a blast just above his head exploded. He was uninjured, and was standing upright when his companion ran back. The two men then started out, when a second blast exploded, knocking them down and severely injuring both men. It is thought that they will recover.

LICKED THE PROPRIETOR

At least he thought he ran it until last Sunday night, when John Sonwick came in and asked for a room. John has a pair of shoulders and a chest like a halfback, and was known to be a "bad" man in a scrap.

Ross told his visitor he could have a room if he paid for it, whereupon John shoved a fist like a small ham under Carl's nose and began a rather intimate description of Carl's personality and relations.

Carl rose from his seat and offered to lead John from the room. That was where Carl made his mistake. John picked him up, bounced off the wall a couple of times, and then using him as a battering ram, drove his head through a pane of glass in the front window.

Carl showed up this morning in court, held together with sticking plaster, and gave testimony. Three other witnesses bore testimony to the attempt to spoil a perfectly good proprietor, and the evidence was too strong for John. Judge Windom gave him fifteen days on the hill at hard labor.

The Ransons are one of the oldest and best known families in Rockville, and for years it has been James Ranson's custom to spend his winters in this charming suburb. James Ranson in particular has shown his fondness for the society of Mr. Bates and the Rockville people, and even during the summer he takes short sojourns there, having but recently left after a month's delightful visit.

Mr. Ransom arrived at Mr. Baaes' residence this morning, driving up to the door in a closed carriage behind his spirited team of blacks.

Mr. Ranson arrived at Mr. Bates' of reserving apartments for Mr. Ranson, and he will have his own suite of rooms overlooking the lake, where he will get the morning sun. He expected to spend two months in Rockville on this occasion, but his stay will be limited to ten days.

BULL GORES A BOY.

Parkers Prairie, Minn., Oct. 25.—The 8-year-old son of P. A. Carlson, who resides three miles west of town, was gored by a bull yesterday afternoon. The lad was trying to drive the cattle out of a corn field with the aid of a dog. The bull became enraged, charged upon the boy, knocking him down, and gored him through the neck, nearly severing the windpipe. It is thought the boy will recover.

WEST DULUTH

WEDDINGS ARE MANY

West Duluth Young People in Favor of Marriage.

Three Couples Bound Together in Last Two Days.

Weddings are becoming very popular in the western end of the city during the last few weeks and there have been many young couples united by the binding ties in West Duluth. There was one wedding noted here this morning and two yesterday, while several took place earlier in the week.

Miss Lena Chevellier and Julius Howard, both West Duluth young people, were married at the St. James Catholic church, by Rev. Father Lynch, at 10 o'clock this morning. They afterward left for Atikin, where they will spend a few days visiting friends and relatives.

Rev. R. J. Mooney of the Holy Apostles' Episcopal church yesterday united in marriage Miss Caspire Strand and George Winston Ottley, the ceremony taking place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Holmwood, 5815 Wadena street. This young couple also left for a short wedding trip, after which they will return and make their home in the West end.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Carlson, 427 Fifty-eighth avenue west, was the scene of a very pretty wedding last evening, when Miss Hilda Lindgren and Frank Peterson were united in marriage by Rev. John A. Krantz, pastor of the Elim Swedish Evangelical church. Only the relatives and a number of intimate friends of the couple were present at the ceremony. A reception was afterwards held at the Carlson home. The couple will make their home at 319 North Fifty-eighth avenue.

Entertain at Dinner.

Mrs. Archie Ferguson entertained a number of friends at her home, 301 North Fifty-sixth avenue, at a delightful dinner party last evening. Mrs. Ferguson was presented with two beautiful pieces of cut glass by the members of the party. After the dinner the guests lingered during the evening and enjoyed a social hour during which Miss Bettin rendered several selections upon the piano.

Among those present were the following: Mrs. Loungton, Mrs. Drake, Miss Mquarrie, Miss Boyle, Miss Arnson, Miss Bettin, Miss McDonald, Miss Gasper and Miss Bowmen.

Seriously Injured by Fall.

In an accident at the American Carbolite works Tuesday afternoon, John Bethune sustained serious internal injuries by falling from a trestle to the ground, a distance of about twenty-five feet. In company with several other men he had been working on the trestle, when he lost his balance and fell over the side. He was immediately taken to his home, 103 North Fifty-eighth avenue, and attended by a physician who found no broken bones, but stated that Bethune had received internal injuries, the extent of which he could not at once determine.

Alumni Will Meet.

The members of the Irving Alumni will meet tomorrow night at the school and it is expected that some important business will come up. The plans for the entertainment which will be given by the club this winter will be considered and the report of the committee in charge will be heard. All members should be on hand and give their ideas on this matter.

West Duluth Briefs.

The funeral of Walter H. Dunn, who died Tuesday morning from paralysis, was held this afternoon from the Westminster Presbyterian church. Rev. W. J. Lowrie officiated at the service, and the remains were interred at Oneota cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Larus Goodmanson, Cody street and Sixty-fifth avenue west, are the parents of a son, born yesterday.

C. H. Shafer of Carlton spent yesterday in West Duluth on business.

Returning hunters state that there are plenty of ducks and geese flying south now, and that the shooting is good. To verify this statement P. Johnson and Oscar Johnson brought back a good bag of game from their trip up the river.

WATCH REPAIRING—HURST, 301 CENTRAL.

The meeting of Old Hickory camp, M. W. A., held in the Great Eastern hall, last evening, was very well attended, and a successful one. Several new members were initiated, and after the business of the evening was concluded, the members enjoyed a smoker and a lunch.

FORMER BEMIDJI MAN

Dies in North Dakota---Has Relatives in Ontario.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mayor Carter received a letter yesterday from the mayor of Fiaxton, N. D., stating that Andy Miller, a painter, who claimed to have lived in Bemidji for four years, had died there, and that if he had any friends or relatives living in Bemidji to write or wire as to what disposition to make of the remains.

Miller, who was about 38 years of age, has lived in Bemidji most of the time during the past five years. He came from Walkerton, Ont., where he has a father who is engaged in the mercantile business and who is an influential and wealthy citizen of that place. GALES ON ALL LAKES.

Vessels Taking Refuge But Severe Losses Are Feared Greatly.

Detroit Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gales are reported on all the great lakes today and vesselmen fear that loss of life and ships may result. Vessels are taking shelter in available places on all the lakes.

Lake Erie is being swept by a forty-mile gale and the steamer Western States from Buffalo arrived here two hours late today and reported a hard battle with the storm.

On Lake Huron the wind is blowing twenty to thirty miles an hour and the City of Mackinac, down bound, is reported to be nine hours late.

Schooner's Escape Narrow.

Two Rivers, Oct. 25.—While attempting to make this harbor during the storm yesterday, the schooner L. M. Mason struck the south pier and was partially wrecked. But for the prompt action of the life-saving crew, the vessel would have been thrown on the beach. It was brought into the harbor and is now at the dock, with the cabin gone and a big hole in the bow.

Grain Rate Lower.

The grain rate to Buffalo is now down to 2½ cents and is not very strong at that. A charter was made yesterday afternoon at 2¾ cents, but it was a special instance and the rate is not fixed at that figure. Shippers rather expect a further decline.

Adds to Winter Boats.

Muskegon, Oct. 25.—The Crosby Transportation company has bought the wooden steamer Conestoga, from the Great Lakes Engineering Works of Detroit, and it will be used with the Nyack and Naomi, to care for the heavy winter traffic across Lake Michigan. The Conestoga was formerly owned by the Anchor line, but was taken by the shipbuilding company in part payment for new steel ships.

Rough Weather On Lake.

Ashland, Oct. 25.—None but the largest vessels ventured out into Lake Superior yesterday, the high seas and thick weather making navigation exceedingly dangerous. A number of boats are sheltered among the Apostle islands and in Chequamagon bay.

Steamer Mueller Grounds.

Detour, Oct. 25.—The steamer Mueller is aground on Cherry island. It will be necessary to lighter part of the lumber cargo before the boat can be released.

Schoner Driven On Isle.

Alpena, Oct. 25.—The schooner Emma L. Nellson, loaded with cedar, was driven ashore on False Presque Isle yesterday afternoon. The vessel rests on a sandy bottom and is in no immediate danger. It can probably be released.

Sheltered at Harbor Beach.

RUMMAGE SALE!

ONE MORE CHANCE TO REGISTER

The polls will be open next Saturday from 7 a. m., until 9 p. m., and all who have hitherto neglected to get their names on the list must register then or lose their vote.

In case a voter is absent from the city, he can get his name on the list by proxy. Blanks may be secured from the city clerk. These must be filled out before a notary public and can then be left in the hands of some other person to deliver to the judges of election on Saturday. In this way a voter, who has failed to register on the first two days, and who finds it necessary to be out of the city on Saturday, may get his name on the list.

Deerwood, Minn., Oct. 25.—While two boys were examining a 22-caliber rifle which they believed to be unloaded, the gun was accidentally discharged, the bullet entering the hip of Swan Nelson, an elderly man who lived near by and who was passing along the street at the time of the discharge. Nelson was seriously wounded, but it is believed that unless complications set in he will recover.

MAINTAINS HIS RIGHT

Claims His Negotiations Are Not An Issue For Appraisers.

R. B. Knox Testifies Willingly On Matters Relating to Values.

Interest in the condemnation proceedings instituted by the Wisconsin Central Railway company was stimulated yesterday afternoon, when R. B. Knox, who represented the North Star Realty company, which purchased a considerable amount of the property between Sixth and Eighth avenues west, and afterward transferred it to the railroad company, was called to testify before the appraisers.

Mr. Harrison, representing J. J. Murphy who owns the 100-foot property under consideration by the appraisers, sought to draw out information from Mr. Knox relative to his negotiations with Athol M. Miller and Mr. Murphy, both of whom have claimed that they made prices on the understanding that Mr. Knox represented parties who were to erect a large department store.

Mr. Knox, declined to answer any question touching upon matters outside of values, claiming that was the only issue before the appraisers and he did not propose to uncover the defense he might use when the suit instituted by Mr. Miller in the district court is tried, or disclose what action might be taken, if any, toward compelling Mr. Murphy to live up to the contract whereby the latter offered his property for $80,000, but later refused to execute the papers.

In the matter of values Mr. Knox testified freely. He gave the names of the purchasers, the agents and the prices paid for all the lands acquired by the North Star Realty company. Testifying to specific instances of purchases he claimed that his clients paid more than the fee was actually worth, that he knew it at the time, but that under the urgent conditions, his clients instructed him to pay the prices asked.

Mr. Knox declined to say who were back of the North Star Realty company, or whether he was an officer. He declined to state the verbal communications that passed between himself and Mr. Murphy, but admitted that he wrote the letters to Mr. Murphy, which were produced and read before the appraisers yesterday.

W. C. Sargent and F. I. Salter testified concerning their opinion of the value of the property in the vicinity of the Murphy lots. They estimated the property to be worth from $900 to $1,000 per front foot, which is the value that Mr. Murphy has fixed.

This morning a little time was devoted to the matter of values on the buildings located on the Murphy lots, and two witnesses were called. Andrew Bergquist of the firm of Bergquist Bros., contractors, testified that the store building on lot 108 cost $8,301.88, and the barn at the rear cost $3,732.60. The figures on the store building do not include heating, plumbing, wiring, or the architect's commission. Mr. Bergquist estimated that it would cost about 45 per cent more to duplicate the store building, which was erected in 1902.

George Lounsberry, the contractor, testified that the building on lot 110 cost $5,240, exclusive of heating, plumbing, etc. He claimed it would cost about $2,050, or about 39 per cent more to erect a similar building now. The building in question was erected in 1900. The testimony of the two contractors showed quite a difference in opinion as to the increased cost of building. Mr. Bergquist figures it costs 45 per cent more to build now than four years ago, and Mr. Lounsberry estimates that it costs 39 per cent more to build now than six years ago.

There will be no more evidence offered the appraisers before next Monday, when they will listen to some evidence concerning the cost of the plumbing and heating of the Murphy buildings.

FRESHMAN CLASS MEETS.

The Freshman class of the high school held its first meeting last night for the purpose of electing officers. There was a large attendance and a great deal of excitement was displayed at certain times and a great deal of disorder at others.

As the members had no leader Principal Smith took charge of the meeting. Charles Arbrogast was elected chairman and Louis Fisher was appointed temporary secretary. The following officers were elected: President, Russell Mather; vice president, Ruth Erickson; secretary, Hazel Aske; treasurer, Harold Fetham. Ben Nelson was unanimously elected to captain the Freshman football team. Arthur Helmer was elected mascot.

It was decided that the president should appoint a committee to compose a yell for the class and another to select samples for class colors. The Zenith board will not be elected until the next meeting, as the members will be better acquainted then, and will know whom they want. They will also decide on the amount of the class dues then, and elect a sergant-at-arms.

Postmaster General Asks for Increase of Three Millions.

Says Service Shows Good Returns for Money Spent.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Postmaster General Cortelyou has submitted to the secretary of the treasury, for transmission to congress, estimates for the postoffice department and the postal service for the coming fiscal year. The amount asked for salaries of $1,528,920, —a net increase of $121,530, over the current year, while the amount asked for maintenance of postal service is $28,662,190,—a net increase of $15,000,000.

The estimates last year were about $12,000,000 in excess of the appropriations for the year before, so that the increase is about $3,000,000 more than the increase last year.

The apparently large increase in expenditures according to the department, represents but a normal advance over the expenditures of last year, made necessary by the constantly growing needs of the service and the public demand for improved facilities. The principal increases submitted are:

Compensation of postmasters, $1,500,000; compensation to clerks, first and second class postoffices, $3,000,000; clerk hire, third class postmasters, $150,000; letter carriers, $1,156,700; pneumatic tubes service, $350,000; railroad transportation, $4,660,000; railway mail clerks $978,360; foreign mail service, $268,000; manufacture of stamped envelopes, $227,000; rural delivery, $1,475,000.

A statement given out at the department says: "The postmaster general has recommended these increases only after the best calculations have shown them to be necessary to enable the department to keep pace with the growth of the postal business of the country and to maintain a proper standard of efficiency. They also find ample justification in the gratifying condition of the department's finances, especially with reference to the annual deficit, which, according to the advance statement recently given out, has been reduced this year over four millions of dollars. It is an interesting fact, as showing the relations between postal receipts and expenditures that for several years the receipts of one year have just about equalled the expenditures of the year before."

CROKER EXTOLS TAMMANY HALL

Dublin, Oct. 25.—In an interview yesterday, Richard Croker, referring to Tammany Hall and its bad reputation, said: "It is a case of giving a dog a bad name. If anyone connected with the organization, however, insignificant his position, does anything dishonorable, Tammany is blamed.

"The reformers neved did anything for New York. The great bridges, the elevated railroad, the public buildings, and everything, are the work of Tammany. If there was corruption why did not the district attorney prosecute somebody?

"Tammany Hall has succeeded entirely on its merits. It is the most Democratic institution in the world. If anything is wrong with it then something is wrong with the people themselves. It stands not only for the poor man, but also for the foreigners newly landed on American shores."

DYNAMITER NOT TRAPPED

Scheme to Catch Railroad Blackmailer is Fruitless.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Threatened by an anonymous letter writer with the blowing up of one of its passenger trains, unless it paid him $5,000, the Lake Shore road ran a "dummy" train, filled with armed men, out of Chicago, last night, and at a point in Indiana, designated by the bandit, the train was stopped. No one was found in the neighborhood.

Three posses are searching the Indiana marshes in the vicinity of Pine, Miller and Aetna. Two employes of the Aetna Powder works have been arrested because of the finding in their room of a bottle of nitro glycerine.

The bandit instructed the railroad company to carry the money to him on the limited express, which leaves Chicago at 5:30 in the evening. "I will be at the side of the tracks," he wrote, three times, "somewhere east or west of Pine. When the limited approaches I will fire two shots from my revolver. Have the money in a bag and drop it off the hind end of the train. If you don't do as I say, your train will be blown to atoms with dynamite."

SAY HEARST IS STRONG

Democratic Leaders Receive Roseate Up-State Reports.

Republican Managers Refuse to Make Any Statements.

New York, Oct. 25.—The first meeting of the newly appointed executive committee of the Democratic state committee was held at the Victorna hotel, the Democratic state headquarters, yesterday. William R. Hearst and Lewis S. Chanler also were present.

At the conclusion of the session, Arthur A. McLean, treasurer, said that the committee had received reports from various districts showing that the Hearst strength up the state was greater than had been expected.

Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican state committee and State Committeeman William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, talked with thirty-three of the sixty county chairmen on conditions in their home counties. Asked what the reports were Woodruff said: "I don't care to discuss them." He refused to discuss the political situation generally.

A special meeting of the county committee of the Independence league was held at the Gilsey house to take action on the alleged mutilation of the petitions of the league while in the possession of the board of election. After the meeting, the announcement was made that Mr. Hearst had offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest of and conviction of the culprit.

Big demonstrations greeted Mr. Hearst at meetings addressed in Manhattan and Brooklyn last night. The largest meeting was held by Italian-American voters at Cooper Union. He told of his work in fighting the coal, gas and ice trusts. In the course of one of his speeches, he cried with an energetic gesture:

"I am a Jefferson Democrat, and I want it understood that I don't want any Standard Oil Democrat or any hireling of the Standard Oil to declare for me, and I don't care for the support of any men of that stripe."

Manhattan and the Bronx—Total vote canvassed, 2,834; for Hearst, 1,560; for Hughes, 1,224. Hearst's plurality, 256.

Brooklyn—Total vote canvassed, 3,413; for Hearst, 1,947; for Hughes, 1,466. Hearst's plurality, 481.

Total test vote in these boroughs, 6,267; for Hearst, 3,507; for Hughes, 2,760. Hearst's plurality, 747.

With a profusion of red fire, with brass bands and with much cheering, Mr. Hughes was welcomed in Cortland last night, and made two addresses to audiences which tested the capacity of the halls and which constantly interrupted him with applause. He renewed the pledges to which he had given so much prominence in his speeches of late and declared he would be "the governor of all the people," adding, "I have promised nothing in this campaign which I cannot perform."

He again charged Mr. Hearst with being "a corporation himself, despite his denunciation of all corporations" and again declared his interest in labor and in labor legislation, saying no cause would receive greater attention at his hands if he were chosen chief executive of the state.

composed of splendid citizens, devoted to the people's interests, with the result that the valuation of properties held by large corporations—notably the steel trust—have been materially increased.

Governor Johnson is a young man, and has made this splendid record in his first term. I feel confident that if he is given a second term we will all have reason to congratulate ourselves.

Let me ask you to do what you can in your immediate enighborhood to insure his success. Cordially yours, JOHN LIND.

Dr. A. B. Cole made a number of statements at a Republican meeting last week at Fergus Falls which have since been challenged by no less a personage than Elmer E. Adams, Republican member of the legislature from Otter Tail county and editor of the Fergus Falls Daily Journal. Representative Adams presided at the meeting at which Dr. Cole made his statements, and Mr. Adams' prompt denial of them has created something of a political sensation throughout the state. Dr. Cole made a special plea for votes for his brother, A. L. Cole, the Republican nominee, and in the course of his remarks charged Governor Johnson with making certain statements regarding the increase of the value of the Steel corporation's holdings in St. Louis and Itasca counties. Dr. Cole charged that the state board of equalization had increased the value of Otter Tail county farm lands. Editor Adams, in calling the doctor to account, declares he does so simply to forestall some ardent Democrat in showing the wilful unfairness of Dr. Cole's statements. Under the caption, "Misstatements Corrected," the Fergus Falls editor says:

"Before our political enemies get a chance to criticize Dr. A. B. Cole for certain statements made by him at the meeting addressed by Mr. Jacobson at the courthouse, we want to say that he was wrong, believing that it is better for the Republican party to tell the exact truth rather than to make political capital by incorrect statements. Dr. Cole said that Governor Johnson claimed credit for raising the assessment on the ore lands in St. Louis county $60,000,000. Governor Johnson did not make any such claims. The governor said they were assessed for $70,000,000 now as against $30,000,000 two years ago, which would be a raise of $32,000,000.

"Dr. Cole also said that the governor forgot to tell the people that his board of equalization had raised the value of farm lands in Otter Tail county 50 per cent and that the people would have to pay very much higher taxes in consequence. Dr. Cole is wrong in this statement. The facts in regard to the assessment of Otter Tail county farm lands are these: When the Otter Tail county board of equalization had finished the work of equalization in 1904, they left the average value of Otter Tail county lands at $4.27 per acre. When the state board appointed by Governor Van Sant began to equalize the lands in the various counties, Otter Tail was found to be altogether too low and the state board raised Otter Tail 50 per cent, bringing the average value of Otter Tail county lands to $6.40. This was done by the Republican board appointed by Governor Van Sant.

"When the Otter Tail county board equalized in 1906, which is this year, they put the average value back down to $4.24, which was a useless thing to do in face of the fact that the state board had previously raised the figure to $6.40. The board appointed by Governor Johnson, finding that Otter Tail county lands were assessed at $4.24, per acre, raised them 45 per cent, which leaves the value now, ready for next year's taxes, at $6.15, which is 25 cents per acre less than they were two years ago, so it will follow that the taxes will be less unless the town and village school boards vote more money. We think it better from a Republican standpoint to do Governor Johnson justice and state things as they are, rather than to have the opposition papers put the party in a bad light for circulating untruths.

Both Republicans and Democrats are preparing to end the campaign in a blaze of glory next week. Both of the gubernatorial candidates are working around the edges of the Twin Cities and two days before election day they will close in and fight the last battle on that most doubtful of all political soil in Minnesota—the Twin Cities.

Governor Johnson's campaign managers have prepared for his triumphant march into the Twin Cities between the dates of Oct. 27 and Nov. 2, 3 and 5. He will speak in St. Paul on the evenings of Nov. 2 and 5. He will be in Minneapolis Oct. 27 and Nov. 3.

During the Twin City campaign, automobiles will be used to transport the speakers and some record breaking stunts will be performed. The automobile as a campaign medium has increased the capacity of the campaigners for making speeches. Some of the wards will combine on mass meetings so that nearly every part of the cities will be covered in a whirlwind campaign of four days.

The record of Governor Johnson as a campaigner was established in St. Paul two years ago, as that turbulent campaign was just about to close. He made more meetings in one night than any gubernatorial candidate made before in this state or has made since. The feat will be repeated again, and if Governor Johnson's strength lasts, every voter in the Twin Cities will have a chance to hear him.

The state is fairly alive this week with campaigners. Thomas R. Kane and Dr. A. J. Stone of St. Paul have started out. They will storm Jacobson's territory and during the week will make Redwood, Madison and Dawson. T. R. Kane is one of the best orators in St. Paul. Dr. Stone is a convincing speaker and has done some good work for the local Democratic organization.

T. D. O'Brien is also out this week. He is to make such towns as Morton, Fairfax, Hector, Olivia and Graceville. One of the latest acquisitions in the way of speakers is S. M. Owen, editor of the Northwest Farmer. He will have a full itinerary and will make during the week Henning, Vinning, Battle Lake, Underwood, Lake Park, Moorhead, Hendrum, Halstead, St. Vincent, Hallock and Warren.

The reports from the various meetings are most encouraging. The attendance has proved to be very good, and the enthusiasm is at its highest. The crucial work of the campaign is to be done within the next ten days, and not a stone is being left unturned to place before the public the excellent record of Governor Johnson.

A. D. Stephens of Crookston is having a fight on his hands. He is well known to favor the corporations, and the Crookston Daily Journal, Rep., has come out with a strong editorial denouncing him, in addition to a full-page write-up citing salient features in his record as a state senator. Stephens, it will be remembered, was in the ring which combined to defeat Jacobson and took a prominent part in the post mortem exercises which were later held at Boyle's and at the St. Louis. He was one of the harmony adjutants following the death throes of the anti-corporation candidate. The editorial reads in part:

"A. D. Stephens, the corporation senator from Polk county, and his official organ, the Crookston Times, are making a great fuss about the disloyalty of the Journal in failing to support A. L. Cole for governor and A. D. Stephens for the state senate and send up a mighty roar to the effect that the Journal has turned a political somersault. The Journal has not turned about face by any manner of means. It stands steadfast where it has always stood. It stands for clean politics, refusing now, and always will refuse, to support gang methods and palgn of four days.

NATURE TELLS YOU

As Many a Duluth Reader Knows Too Well.

When the kidneys are sick,
Nature tells you all about it.
The urine is nature's calendar.
Infrequent or too frequent action;
Any urinary trouble tells of kidney ills.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Duluth people testify to this.

H. G. Hibke, clerk in the Northern Pacific R. R. freight house and living at Hunter's Park, Duluth, Minn., says: "In a testimonial given by me in 1898, which has been published often in the Duluth papers, I told how Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of a severe attack of kidney complaint from which I had suffered for a long time. I believe that it was brought on in the first place by exposure to all kinds of weather and the jarring of driving. Backache set in and the pains and aches made stooping and lifting very painful. Whenever I took cold it settled in my back and aggravated the trouble. The kidney secretions became discolored, irregular and contained a sediment. I also had frequent attacks of headaches. However, as I have emphatically declared and will always affirm, Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of all those conditions and today not a symptom of my former trouble remains."

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN — Yankee Doodle Girls.

A FUNNY SKETCH.

Billy Hart and Anna Yale, assisted by Marie Jansen, have a very funny sketch at the Metropolitan this week. It is one of the features of the olio given by the Yankee Doodle Girls, and is called "The Plaything." Mr. Hart enacts the role of an automaton with rare skill, and after the novelty of this has worn off, he interpolates some good local hits in his songs. He might revive his burlesque mind-reading stunt of last season, too. That was very funny.

This is ladies' day at the Metropolitan, and no smoking is allowed at either performance. The girls will give another matinee Saturday, and conclude their engagement with a performance Saturday evening.

A GOOD CROWD DESPITE RAIN

Many Braved Elements to Attend Second Presbyterian Services.

Despite the disagreeable weather, a larger congregation was on hand at the revival services in the Second Presbyterian church last evening than any which have been held there before this week.

The music was much enjoyed. The chorus choir has developed wonderfully under the direction of Prof. Benjamin F. Butts, and it sang several numbers last evening. Prof. Butts sang two solos, "Scatter Seeds of Kindness" and "My Soul Is Happy in Jesus."

Rev. John A. McGaughey's topic was "Be Not Conformed to the World." He urged his hearers to resist the unhelpful influences of the world upon the church and the individual Christian life. Just as physical growth was dependent upon food and exercise, so was spiritual growth dependent upon the food of the bible, he said.

He said conformity to the world hindered efficient service to God and the church and that often the slight imperfections of imperfect lives were the greatest hindrance to the church. He pointed out that the church should be very zealous of its good name and see to those imperfections which were a menace to its membership.

Rev. S. A. Jameson, pastor at large of the Duluth Presbytery, will be the principal speaker at the services in the Second Presbyterian church this evening.

CAUGHT IN HAY PRESS.

Accident Which May Cost August Anderson His Life.

Little Falls, Minn., Oct. 25.—August Anderson, living near Darling, met with an accident which may cost him his life. He had gotten into the hay press for the purpose of tramping down the hay, but the team failed to stop at the word of command, as it has been trained to do. Before he could extricate his foot the press caught his limb in a vice-like grip and when he was removed from the press it was found that Anderson had sustained three compound fractures of the leg, with the bone protruding from the flesh in several places. He is under treatment at the hospital.

IS NOT A CITIZEN.

Peter Grigo, aged 32 years, who came to this country from Finland, a little over a year ago, has been adjudged insane and is being held in custody at the county jail, awaiting a disposition of his case by the state board of control. Grigo came to this country from Chicago several days ago and as he is not a citizen of Minnesota, he is not entitled to treatment in the state hospital. He was found lying unconscious near the railroad at Kelsey a few days ago, having been employed in the woods.

The state board of control has authority to order Grigo to the state hospital to be taken in charge by the government later.

PRISONER GETS AWAY

Beaudette, Minn., Oct. 25.—James Kibby was arrested for the larceny of $34 on complaint of Lime Catlin. He was tried before Justice Stem and bound over to the grand jury and committed to the county jail. He was being kept for the sheriff from Bemidji and escaped by assistance from the outside, and presumably is now on the Canadian side. No blame attaches to the sheriff, as the prisoner was in the hands of the village marshal.

Clogged Bowels Cause Serious Illness.

Intestinal Obstructions Are the Frequent Cause of Fatal Maladies.

If people were aware of the awful consequences of neglecting the bowels, nine-tenths of all sickness would be quickly remedied. Thousands disregard the warning symptoms, until disease holds them with a fatal clutch. Unless impurities find their natural outlet through the bowels, they are thrown back into the system, where they poison the blood and deposit germs that frequently end in serious illness.

Daily bowel movement is a matter of supreme importance. It is the great secret of good health. Disregard of this fundamental natural law wrecks thousands of lives every year. Constipation causes more deaths than consumption or typhoid. The body cannot remain healthy when the bowels are congested. They must move at regular intervals. If they do not, sickness is the certain penalty.

Every man and woman who values life and health should use Beecham's Pills. They are a positive cure for constipation, and expel all poisons from the system; keep the stomach sweet, and the bowels regular and healthy. This grand vegetable laxative relieves and cures Billousness, Sick Headache, Dizziness, Indigestion, Nervousness, Foul Breath, Chills, Insomnia, Blotches on the Skin, and all symptoms that indicate clogged bowels or deranged condition.

Did You Ever Know

How it feels to be perfectly well?

Perfectly well means a lot. Not an ache, ail or protest of any kind from body or mind.

The Heaven of perfect poise when the life forces drive rich, strong red blood through the veins and fill one with an indefinable joy, when nature and all the world seems to be sending caresses to you.

Then the sky is beautiful whether it be gray or a deep restful eternity-reaching blue or covered with softly moulded, round bosomed clouds lazily floating about and the breeze is kind and sweet whether it smooth your cheek with the soft touch of the woman who loves you or energetically fills your lungs with the strong tonic of life.

Trees nod, the fallen leaves frisk about in fairy grace, flowers smile and send their fragrance and every friend you meet seems a warm hearted brother reaching out for companionship. Perhaps an open fire beckons, beside which tabby purrs out her soft song of peace. Harmony from every side greets the harmony within and there steals over one from head to foot the subtle, sensuous tingle of warm new blood, the perfect poise of a well-fed nervous system.

All this is absolute evidence that the possessor has been fed right and should stick to that kind of food and habits which have produced the result. The facts stand forth and the conclusions are certain. If trouble, distress and inharmony fill the days and blot out the rightful peace every human being has a right to, change the food.

If your present method of feeding makes imperfect cells and fails to build the soft gray matter in brain and nerve centres scattered over the body, look alive, quit the old diet, and take on a new and better one. That's plain common sense. Right then is the exact time to quit coffee absolutely and select meals wisely. Suppose you try for breakfast,

A little fruit,
A dish of Grape-Nuts and cream,
Two soft-boiled eggs,
A cup of Postum Food Coffee.

Stop at that, it will carry you and easily until the midday meal, which can be either a lunch of the same things (if a dinner is expected at night) or the heavy meal can be taken at midday. Take only one heavy meal in a day in addition to the two light ones.

At the heavy meal have one good meat course, with one or two vegetables, and a rich, sweet Grape-Nuts pudding. After a few days on these meals a change for the better will come where the disease has not become too firmly fixed and chronic.

Remember health is a matter of wisely selected food and a harmonious mind. It will be a tremendous help to read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," found in pkgs. of Postum and Grape-Nuts.

"There's a Reason" and a profound one.

REGISTER SATURDAY.

Duluth, with a population of over 70,000 people, must have 12,000 qualified voters, eliminating those of legal age who have not yet become citizens.

At the close of the second registration day for the general election, but 7,619 voters had registered themselves, leaving over 4,000 citizns that had yet failed to make themselves eligible to cast a vote at the election Nov. 6.

This is not very encouraging to those that see security for the future only in an alert, vigilant citizenship.

You have been amazed at the revelations of public corruption that have stained the last few years. You have been indignant at the treachery of public officials, who have sold the public for the benefit of selfish interests. Doubtless you have wished you could do something to stem the tide of corruption and bring about clean and just government of, by and for the people.

Yet these things have been made possible only by the neglect of the voters to attend to their individual duty. That duty is to go to the polls every election day and cast your ballot for the best interests of the people. The ballot is a priceless privilege, and those who neglect it are placing a premium on corruption and misgovernment.

The size of the vote in a community is often used as an index not only of the population, but of its character. A city in which every voter does his duty is a city in which corruption will never dare thrust its head, because the voters are on watch. A city where the citizenship leaves voting to those directly interested is a city with a soil peculiarly adapted to the growth of government abuses.

If you are one of the 4,000 voters that have not yet registered, you are, without intent, a traitor to your state and your community. You are a friend to the corrupt interests that always profit through neglectful citizenship.

Two years ago, in a presidential election, Duluth registered 9,668 votes, which was many hundreds less than a full vote. Unless more than 2,000 people register Saturday, however, the registration this time will be less than that of two years ago. In that year the third day's registration was only 1,500, so that unless extraordinary efforts are made to get the voters out Saturday the total will be much less than it was two years ago.

It makes no difference what your political affiliations are, or what candidates you believe should be elected. It is your duty to go to the polls Saturday and register, so that you may cast your ballot a week from next Tuesday.

Saturday is your last chance.

There will be no more registration days after that day. The polls will be open from 6 o'clock a. m. to 9 o'clock p. m., so that you will have every possible chance to do your duty.

Register Saturday.

A DIALOGUE.

Political Worker: "There is no reason why any Republican should not vote for Candidate Cole."

Plain Citizen: "Wasn't he nominated in order to defeat the choice of the people at the Republican state convention, and wasn't it the timber and other large interests that turned the trick?"

Plain Citizen: "Was he the choice of the rank and file of the party at all, since the interests nominated him?"

"Political Worker: "He has the Republican nomination, and therefore Republicans ought to vote for him. Governor Johnson has made a good governor, but he is not a Republican, and the interests of the party demand that Cole be elected."

Plain Citizen: "What about the interests of the people?"

Political Worker: "The Republican party will take care of them."

Plain Citizen: "Can it take any better care of them than Johnson is doing, with a candidate nominated in this shameful manner?"

Political Worker: "Well, larger interests than those of the people of Minnesota are at stake. We must elect a Republican governor to strengthen the party in the nation, and to uphold the hands of President Roosevelt."

"Plain Citizen: "Is it upholding the hands of Roosevelt to elect a man nominated by interests such as those he is fighting and that are fighting him? Won't it be upholding his hands to vote for a candidate that stands for the things he does, and whom he has given the unprecedented honor of commendation in a message to congress?"

Political Worker: "You must remember that in order to make the party strong in the nation we must vote for every candidate on the ticket, from top to bottom, in order that the offices may be filled with men that will aid it in its fights."

Plain Citizen: "Don't you think it will be better if the party in the nation strengthens itself by its acomplishments for the people, rather than by providing jobs for politicians? Don't you believe that if it serves the people they will elect its federal candidates, regardless of who may occupy local offices in Minnesota, which have to do solely with local affairs?"

Political Worker: "I never figured it that way."

Plain Citizen: "Well, it's time you did. You mistake a political party for an employment agency. And while we are talking, suppose the Republican convention had nominated Shevlin himself, instead of the man dictated by Shevlin. Would you talk the same way about it?"

Political Worker: "Certainly."

Plain Citizen: "You are consistent, at any rate, even if you are not patriotic enough to make the interests of the people a greater consideration than the interests of a party machine."

A HUMOROUS ARGUMENT.

In the "boiler plate" service furnished Republican newspapers of the state by the Cole state committee, prominent place is given to a discussion of the fact that the state tax has been reduced this year from 3.03 mills to 2.78 mills.

Of course, with the present governor, under whose administration this reduction was made, a candidate for re-election, this was rather an embarrassing occurrence for the Cole managers, so they take it up and discuss it in their campaign arguments through the "boiler plate" route.

Their frenzied attempts to conceal any possibility that Governor Johnson's administration could have anything to do with this reduction are highly amusing. They have scattered the credit for it over so wide an area that they no doubt complacently reasoned that there wasn't a bit of it left to be given to the governor. This is as logical and plausible as the attempt of an ostrich to conceal itself from its pursuers by hiding its head in the sand.

How can they possibly scatter credit for this reduction in taxes all over the state, and expect the voters to believe that none of it belongs to the responsible head of the state government? If a business enterprise, with varying branches all under one responsible head, reduced its running expenses and increased its dividends to the stockholders, would anybody attempt to show that the bookkeeper, the bill clerk, the janitor and the stenographer were entitled to all of the credit, and the president of the company to none? Of course the bookkeeper and the bill clerk and the janitor and the stenographer have done their part, but they would be greatly amazed at any attempt to prove that they should have all the credit.

Surely the president of the company, under whose careful direction the company's business had been conducted, would get some small share of the praise. He would not get it all; he could have done nothing without the help of his subordinates and the growth of the company's business; but he certainly would have been given a little, even by his business competitors.

Minnesota is a great business concern. Every voter is a stockholder, the officers are directors, and the governor is president. Here in the last year the stockholders have been benfited by a decrease in taxes, which is practically the same thing as a dividend. And the Cole partisans would try to make the people believe that the president of the company should not have the slightest bit of credit for it!

A SHAME.

You remember the story of the poor foreign leper whose sad situation caused a thrill of pity to go over the country a little while ago? He was badgered by the authorities of several states, driven out of every community he sought, chased into the swamps and left to suffer alone and in deprivation.

Well, you will be glad to know that his sufferings have been ended, and that he will never feel the sting of a pathetic ostracism again.

Oh, no! He is dead.

Death was kinder to him than humanity. Death was also kind to the blundering and stupid authorities that shot at him, assaulted him, and pursued him from pillar to post, for it solved their problem of what to do with him, and relieved them from the painful necessity of persecuting him any more.

The case of this poor Syrian leper, George Raschid, is a blot upon humanity. For six months he had been bandied about from one county to another and from one state to another, and Maryland and West Virginia, the two states that treated him most harshly, should hang their heads in disgrace.

Leprosy is a horrid ailment, one of the most terrible that can afflict mankind. Besides, there is as much ignorance about it, even among physicians, as there is about any disease among all the "ills that flesh is heir to." Most people believe it to be contagious, though many sensible medical authorities have said that it is not, and that the danger of infection is very small indeed. Yet the ignorance and stupid fear of the authorities heaped additional affliction upon a man who was already suffering as few men ever suffer, and made death a welcome relief to him.

Minnesota has had a few cases of leprosy, but her fair name has never been stained with dishonor by the manner in which she handled them. They are embarrassing, always. Nobody wants to be near a leper, for aside from the possibility of contagion, the ailment is most unpleasant. But the unfortunates that have been so afflicted have been cared for gently and humanely. St. Louis county, some years ago, took care of a leper for several years, but its care of him did not add to his sufferings.

There is no excuse for the deplorable treatment of George Raschid, and the authorities who are responsible for his persecution will be getting off lightly if nothing but conscience bothers them.

THE PASSING SHOW.

Are you one of the 4,000 voters that have not registered yet? Do it Saturday, and be a good citizen.

Prove your good citizenship by going to the polls Saturday and registering, so that you can vote at the election.

A list of polling places will be published in The Herald tomorrow night, so you may find out where you can register Saturday.

The American Civic Federation has declared war against billboards, and will recommend taxing them out of existence. This is a proper fight.

A town in which every voter voted would be a good town, because there could be no trifling with public affairs by the designing bosses who profit by the people's sloth.

Murphy of Tammany, questioned by a grand jury as to his occupation, replied with some hesitation that he was a speculator. He is a speculator in the negligence of citizenship.

Senator Gjertsen claims now that he did not accuse Candidate Cole of lobbying in the senate against the reciprocal demurrage bill. As he said it before an audience, and afterwards gave out an authorized version of his charge which The Herald used at the time, the denial will not go far. Candidate Cole has yet to deny that the charge is true.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"San Francisco has the largest car ferry in the world," said J. H. Chester of San Francisco, Cal., at the St. Louis. "It carries freight and pasenger cars across the bay, and is owned by the Southern Pacific railroad. It has been in use for a number of years. The channel is too deep and wide for bridging, and, besides, a bridge would seriously interfere with navigation. If it were not for the ferry, the trains would have to run a long distance to two points.

"The method of transferring the cars from land to the boat and vice versa is an ingenious one. The rising and falling of the tide is a difficulty that has to be contended with. The boat runs into a slip where it fits so snugly that the rails on board and those on shore come together, similar to the arrangement where cars run over a swinging bridge. But on account of the tides, the boats are not always on the same level, and to meet this difficulty that part of the docking which first receives the cars from the boat is arranged so that it can be raised and lowered by hydraulic power. Thus the boat and the docking can be put on the same level, no matter whether the tide is in or out. The boat itself is 400 feet long, and trains of five cars are run on board without being uncoupled. The boat is a side-wheeler, propelled by twin engines of 600-horse power."

"The complaint is being heard again that heavy draft horses are becoming scarce," said W. L. Rankin of Prentice, Wis., at the Lenox. "On account of the small number of horses on the market, people are compelled to pay from $475 to $600 for a team, and the better class of horses cost as high as $800 a team.

"The scarcity is attributed to the fact that the bottom fell out of the market for horses in 1893. Since then the animals have not been raised so extensively, and the farmers have been doing little in this line. In the State of Wisconsin especially the farmers have confined their attention to the raising of stock of the kind that will be apt to bring them in more money. Dairying is taking up the attention of men who formerly went in strongly for stock-raising.

"The people who most keenly feel the shortage of horses are the loggers. A good team of horses does not last for more than two seasons in the woods, on account of the hard work, and the loggers have a large number to buy each year. They are paying much more now than for many years past."

"The flight of ducks and geese in the Dakotas is heavier this fall than for many years past," said E. D. Patton of Grand Forks, N. D., at the McKay. "The reports from all over the two states are to the effect that thousands of the birds are flying over, night and day, and that hunters have no difficulty in bagging all they desire. I was out after geese myself last week, and had excellent sport.

"We had teams to assist us in our hunt. The methods were a little different from any I ever had adopted before. We selected fields where the birds were accustomed to light. Other shooters and myself hid behind a hill off a little to one side of the main fields, and then drivers in two rigs came toward us from the opposite direction. They were quite a distance apart, so as to keep the birds from flying back in the wrong direction.

"Their object was to drive the geese toward us, and they were very successful. The geese, sitting around on the field, would rise into the air when they saw the teams coming, and would naturally fly directly away from them, which would bring them over our heads and give us a good shot at them. I never had better sport in my life. We shot several dozen geese in this manner.

"We did not spend any time on the ducks, but could have killed hundreds of them. They seemed so very small in comparison with the larger birds that it seemed no fun to kill them."

It's pretty dangerous for a man to have money if he doesn't want to get married.

A married man is mighty selfish to want to spend any of his own money on himself.

A very annoying thing about getting married is the way the thing sticks to you afterward.

Louisville Post: As if being in jail was not enough trouble, a Chicago man's two wives announce that they will stick to him.

THE WEATHER.

The northeaster ended last night, as the weather man said it would. In the evening the rain continued to pelt the city, driven by a northeast wind, but in the night the wind switched to the southwest, also according to program, and the weather grew drier and warmer. It was cloudy this morning, and it will be partly cloudy tonight and tomorrow, according to the weather man, but it will be warmer. Last night's lowest temperature was 28 degs. and yesterday's highest was 38 degs. A year ago today the first snow of the year came, followed by a drizzling rain.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The disturbances central Wednesday morning over Wisconsin and Alberta have advanced to the northwestern lake region and Manitoba, respectively. The easterly movement of the former caused high easterly to westerly winds in the lake region, and rain or snow in that district, the upper Mississippi and Ohio valleys and North Atlantic states. The Western Canada low pressure has caused higher temperatures throughout the entire West and most of the Northwest and some rain over Western Canada. Pressure continues high in the Southwest. The easterly movement of the Manitoba low and southwestern high barometer areas will doubtless be attended in this locality by partly cloudy and warmer weather with fresh southwesterly winds tonight and Friday."

A NON-PARTISAN VIEW.

Argyle Banner (Rep.): A Democratic governor with a Republican legislature and the rest of the state officers Republicans can do nothing for the state or Roseau county. Governor Johnson is a Democrat, he has nothing in common with Republicans or Republican principles. He is not even in a position to thank a Republican for his vote. Let Roseau county keep in line.—Roseau County Times.

Brother Bell, we have been disappointed in you. We really felt kindly towards you in your candidacy, but if you expressed your true sentiments in the above paragraph, we cannot but feel that it is well that you came out fifth in the legislative race. Johnson is a Democrat, to be sure, but he is a conservative one and stands squarely on a platform that is almost identical with the Republican platform. Johnson is neither a dangerous man nor an inactive one. He has advocated only measures for the common good. He has been assisted in his work by no less a Republican than Attorney General Young. Is this not conclusive evidence that he has the co-operation of Republicans. Governor Johnson and the legislature were not much at variance, as you would lead your readers to believe, Brother Bell. As a good American citizen rather than a Democrat, Johnson advocated just measures and as good American citizens rather than Republicans, the legislature agreed with him. Yes, Brother Bell, it is well you were unsuccessful if you feel that you would be obliged to oppose all legislation recommended by Governor Johnson.

The Bachelor Girl.

Yes, dear, you're married hard and fast,
While I am fancy free.
Just think of all the things you miss
That yet may come to me.

You have your husband and your home,
Alack, and none have I;
But still fair castles I may build
That almost reach the sky.

My husband may be dark or fair—
He changes every day;
Sometimes his hair is golden brown,
The next 'tis iron gray.

His eyes are black, as dark as night,
Or else are azure blue;
And for his living—let me think—
What shall I have him do?

At times he is a business man,
With but a month for play;
And then again, with gold galore,
All life a holiday.

My house, you know, is not like yours,
But can be moved at will;
And oft is on a mountain top,
Oft by a shady rill.

Or else perched up on a rugged cliff,
Where waves dash high and break,
Or yet upon a smiling plain,
Or by a sunny lake.

And how we travel, he and I:
We visit many lands,
While you to your real fireside
Are chained by iron bands.

Then ask me not to change my lot,
Contentedly I roam,
Imagination's fairy realm,
The universe—my home.

—BESSIE ANDREWS DANN in Designer.

About so Far.

Harper's Weekly: A senator from a Central Western state sought an interview with the president, asking him to appoint to a foreign consulate an applicant to whom the senator was in some way bound, but who was heartily disliked by reason of his offensive persistence in seeking favors.

"Where do you want him sent?" the senator was asked.

At this the senator took a step or two to the center of the room, where stood a large globe. Putting one arm around it as far as he could reach, the senator said:

"I don't know what locality my finger touches, but please send him there!"

An Auto-Biography.

An autocrat in an autocart
Wailed: "Oh, this vehicle auto start!
My autotype of the guarantee
Reads 'automatic,' I plainly see.
And if autographs of the makers, here,
Have auto do with the running gear
I'd not be wasting an autumn day
In such a non-autonomous way."
But he sat and sat in the frosty fall,
Till an autopsy was the end of all.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

J. A. Payne of the firm of Payne & Heimbaugh, was married on Oct. 21 in Wisconsin.

A gentlemar came in yesterday from Saunders' lumber camp, on the Cloquet river, bringing the scalps of two wolves. These animals are very numerous there. Wild game is also more plentiful than for many seasons, especially moose, deer and mink. What is believed to be the largest moose that ever roamed the Northwestern forests was killed up there by an Indian a few days ago. His horns measured two yards from tip to tip, and his weight is estimated at 1,000 pounds. It is only about twenty miles from Duluth to the point where all this game is to be found.

W. S. McGraw and Ben Grumm have been in the woods, in the Vermilion country, for nine days, with four days' provisions. Fears are entertained for their safety, they being inexperienced in "roughing it."

Daniel McRae has returned from an extended visit to Nova Scotia.

Michael Davitt, the distinguished Irish patriot, is in the West, and arrangements are being made to have him visit Duluth and deliver a lecture.

The case of the Standard Oil company vs. Winston Bros. and the St. Paul & Duluth railroad, was settled yesterday by the payment of $6,000. The suit was brought to recover the value of the Standard Oil company's warehouse and contents, alleged to have been burned by the negligence of the defendants.

The Methodist social at Rice's Point, last evening, was a success. Miss Estella Candee gracefully presided over a guess cake. T. B. Perry was the lucky guesser, striking the exact weight, nine pounds and a half. The committee on arrangements was composed of Mesdames Ball, Reikie, Hall, McBeth and Vincent.

Senator S. J. R. McMillan addressed the Republican rally at the Grand Opera house last night. By actual count there were just 152 persons present. The stage was filled with chairs, and S. D. Allen, R. S. Munger and James T. Hale looked mighty lonesome as they sat there in that vast area of space, endeavoring to fill it all.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Little Falls Herald: Frank Eddy is having a hard time convincing Republicans that they must swallow every bitter dose prepared for them. That's an aged doctrine. It was men who voted a split ticket that made Eddy a congressman, and he used to praise their independence.

Rochester Post and Record: Wyoming's recent call for marriageable women has been so eagerly answered by the ancient bachelor girls of Massachusetts that some of the woebe benedicts out there are headed for the tall sage brush on fast bronchos. They hope to be able to escape.

Owatonna Journal-Chronicle: Another newspaper consolidation, the Wells Forum and the Wells Advocate this time. It is the order of the age. The people want better newspapers and they can't get them when the field is all sliced up by a lot of little one-horse affairs. There is only so much business for newspapers and printing offices and the more it is divided up the smaller and weaker the concerns doing the dividing, and the more limited their capacity for giving good service.

Warren Sheaf: A California man has invented a universal language in which there are no cuss words. Such a language will not be indorsed by the defeated candidate after election.

Moorhead Independent: The man who cannot tell a deer from a man in the woods should be put under lock and key—he is a dangerous animal to be allowed to roam—he might even take a shot at himself if he saw his reflection suddenly in a mirror.

St. Cloud Times: The book trust is opposed to Governor Johnson. Its representative, R. W. Cranston, is going about the state fighting the governor. Cranston was one of "Shevlin's men" at the Duluth convention. That should be enough.

Walker Pilot: There are lots of girls who look good enough to eat who couldn't pass the inspection of the pure food commission.

Hallock Enterprise: A prominent man once said: "The only difference between a rut and a grave is the width and the depth." So don't get into a rut, but learn how other men do business.

McIntosh Times: The present primary election law in this state is a bungling botch and could and should be improved and extended, but it is way ahead of the old caucus system and should not be repealed.

Walker Pilot: Some states have such poor state representatives and senators that they can get most anything they want, provided their wants are of the kind they ought not to have.

Ortonville Herald-Star: Our Prohibition friends are cutting a wide swath, chasing about the country in a gaily decorated tally-ho with bugles calling and prancing horses. It's glorious, but it's not politics.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: Rockefeller says that "if we limit opportunity, we will have to put the brake on national prosperity." It wouldn't prove a very serious setback to the prosperity of the people if Rockefeller's opportunities could be limited somewhat.

Anoka Herald: Good old fashioned "spanking" has been introduced in the St. Paul schools. This "spanking" in moderation has long been considered a good thing for a youngster, for it appears to be the only way the fiend of pent-up deviltry may be kept within bounds.

FLASHES OF FUN.

Baltimore American: Visitor—What are you doing here, my poor man?
Convict—Time, mum.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Oh, George," sighed the lovelick maiden, "I'm sure I'm not worthy to be your wife."
"Well," replied George, wearily, "I'm not worthy to be your husband, so we're just about evenly matched."

Chicago Tribune: "You're not the man I thought you were when I married you," exclaimed Mrs. Vick-Senn.
"No, my dear," he meekly answered, "and I'm not the man I thought I was, either."

Puck: Uncle Hayrick—What were his terms?
Uncle Cornerib—Ef I'm cured I get my picture in the papers, an' ef I ain't I get the negative.

Tess—Golden wedding? Why, she just got married.

Washington Star: "Do you read the fashion magazines?" asked the visitor.
"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "They often give such valuable hints on what not to wear."

That Cold of Yours.

Chicago Tribune: Still, the best way to treat incipient pneumonia is to send for a good doctor at once.

Come to this store and we will show you a "Stewart" "Base Burner" that has been in actual use in Duluth for 20 years. A bank, a trust company or, in fact, any institution is judged by what it HAS done—by its record in the past, and NOT by what it PROMISES to do. While other dealers make desperate claims and promises as to what their stoves will do, we show you what the "Grand Old Stewarts" HAVE done—CAN do—and ARE doing, right today, in Duluth! Over 8,000 "Stewart Stoves sold at the Head of the Lakes by this store alone—and over 20,000 sold in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin in the past 15 years. We have the facts and figures to substantiate this, as every other claim we make for these wonderful stoves.

Mr. J. H. Moork of 6211 Lavaque street, West Duluth, who used a "Stewart" Stove for 20 years, has this to say about the cost of fuel and repairs of his stove: Size of house heated, six good-sized rooms; average amount of coal used, ONLY 3 TONS PER YEAR; cost of all repairs in 20 years, only $2.50.

CHOPPED LEG TO RESCUE MAN

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 25.—That the members of the Canadian Northern train wrecked Sunday near Ely, Minn., were forced to chop off the right leg of Barnard F. Unger, the engineer, in an attempt to save his life, was developed at the inquest yesterday.

Unger was held beneath the engine by his right leg. Steam was escaping from the shattered boiler and he was being slowly scalded to death. He shouted to the other men to cut his leg off above the knee, where it was pinned to the ground. Seeing that this was the only possible way in which to save his life, they did so, first tying a cord above the place where the cut was to be made. The limb was severed by a blow of an ax. A handsaw was put into requisition and he was brought here, but died.

HARD ON BURGOMASTER.

Koepenick Official Has Sympathy of the Village Washerwomen.

Berlin, Oct. 24.—Fresh proofs have come to light of the amazing powers of bluff of the pseudo-army captain who recently held up and robbed the mayor and municipal authorities of Koepenick.

A porter at the railroad station at Rixdorf told the police today that the captain appeared at the station late last Tuesday afternoon when nobody was about. He said he wanted to make a little pleasure trip to Berlin, but as it was impossible for one of his rank to do so in uniform he asked permission to use the waiting-room to change his uniform for civilian clothes which he carried in a bandbox. The porter allowed him to do so. When he was leaving the captain patted the porter on the shoulder and said, with evident good humor: "I promise to be of use to you in your after career," at the same time giving him three marks.

All supposed clues to the robber have up to the present proved misleading and the captain is still at large. Meetings which were held today at Koepenick, at which resolutions were adopted expressing sympathy with the burgomaster who had been robbed, calling for his reinstatement and protesting against the sneering leaflets and cards in the comic papers of Berlin, which have been poking all kinds of fun at the burgomaster and town officials for the way in which they allowed themselves to be held up.

The washerwomen of Koepenick held special meetings for the same purpose. They do a great deal of washing in Berlin and are afraid that the ridicule of their town will interfere.

OHIO MAYOR DROWNED.

Port Arthur, Ont., Oct. 25.—Charles A. Snyder, for three terms Democratic mayor of Dayton, Ohio, was drowned yesterday, while duck shooting on the lake in the Whitefish district, his boat having been overturned accidentally. A special train has been sent to the place to try to recover the body. He was 38 years old, was married and leaves a family.

THROW ARMS INTO SEA.

Havana, Oct. 25.—Secretary of War Taft's declaration on the eve of his departure from Cuba that he would put all the arms surrendered by the insurgents where they would do no harm was carried out yesterday, when a company of Cuban artillery spent the afternoon throwing thousands of rifles and carbines into the sea from the outer bastion of Morro castle.

Some unrest continues to prevail in the provinces of Puerto Principe and Santa Clara, where small bands are committing minor depredations. The residents of Holguin requested protection against a considerable body of ex-rebels, and a battalion of the Eleventh infantry reached Holguin yesterday afternoon.

Sometimes it may be as important to one man to find a quick purchaser for a second-hand desk as it is for another man to find a purchaser for a carload of perishable freight. In either case it usually happens that a Herald want ad. is "the best broker."

NEW PYTHIAN INSURANCE.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS

OUTLOOK IS BRIGHTER

Hockey Situation in the United States Shows More Promise.

Copper Country Enthusiasts Say That Duluth Is Slow.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The hockey situation in the United States is brightening up and it now looks as if matters in the International Hockey league might soon be put into tangible shape. All of the managers of the teams already in the league, Portage Lake, Calumet, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Pittsburg, are getting their teams lined up for the coming season. All of the teams, with the exception of Portage Lake, which took the championship pennant last year, will have to sign several new players for the coming season, as many of the old men will either not play hockey again or have gone to some of the teams in the new Canadian professional league.

Capt. Bruce Stuart of last year's Portage Lake champions, has signed a contract to captain that team during the coming season and has started to get lines on his men. For some time it was feared by the fans that the Portage Lake management would release Stuart, at his own request, and allow him to go to the Calumet team. It seems that Bruce would prefer to play with the Calumet team, as his home is in that city and all of his business interests are centered there. Manager McNamara of the Portage Lakes said, however, that he does not feel that he can afford to furnish an opposing team with good material for use against the Portage Lakes and that if Bruce should play hockey during the coming season it would be with the Portage Lake team. Under these circumstances Stuart was induced to sign his contract.

It is expected that all of the old Portage Lake men will be back, with the exception of J. "Grindy" Forrester, who came here last year from Thessalen, Ont., and made good at once at right wing. Forrest of one of the Western Canada teams playing point at the beginning of the season. Later Forrest was released, as he did not show up so well as was expected on account of an injured ankle, and Forrester took his place at point. Joe Hall, one of the fastest men of Western Canada, going from rover to right wing and a Listowel, Ont., man, Freddie Taylor, being signed for the rover position. "Grindy" suffered a smashed right knee a short time ago while playing football and will be unable to play hockey during the coming season. It has not been decided who will be signed for his position, but it is understood that the Portage Lake management has lines on two or three good men for point. It is a possibility that Forrest will be given another trial in that position.

It is expected that William "Riley" Hern, the goal tender for the Portage Lakers during the past several years, will be back again and Barney Holden is expected back from Winnipeg to play cover point. Bruce Stuart will be in his old position at center, Fred Taylor will be here for rover and Fred Lake and Joe Hall are expected to play left and right wings, respectively. Harry Bright, who did good work with the team last year and two years ago, will again be signed as substitute. He is in Houghton at the present time. Lake is expected soon and Hern will probably be here in the near future. The men will all report for duty by Dec. 1.

Just how the other teams are fixed for men at the present time is not definitely known here, although it is probable that they are signing men as fast as they can be secured. It is understood that Henry McRoble of Brockville, Ont., has signed to play cover point with the Canadian Soo team. Roy Brown, who has been appointed manager and captain of the team and who is scouring Ontario for good men, will play point. This makes a good combination, as Brown has played in the International league before and showed himself to be an exceptionally good point man. McRoble is one of the best cover point players in Canada. It is now deemed as being not at all improbable that Regan, who filled the net for the Canucks last season, will mind the goal again during the 1906-07 season. In him the Canadians will have a good man, as, although he is a young player, he is as good as the best and promises to be even better. There was some talk about him being signed to play with the Portage Lakes, but this has not been given much credit.

The Michigan Soo loses two good men when Pitre and Laviolette go to their old team, the Nationals of Montreal. It is reported that these two men, who were among the best in the International league last year, have signed with the Montreal team, although the report has not been confirmed. It is also said that the Michiganders will lose Pud Hamilton, who will go to the Wanderers at Montreal in the Canadian professional league. Hamilton is in Eastern Canada at the present time. Jones, who tended goal for the Michigan Soo last year, has been signed again. McDonald will probably never play in the International league again on account of his dirty work at the end of last season, when he played in the last game of the season with Calumet and is alleged to have attempted to put Barney Holden out of the business.

Calumet fans mourn the fact that Bruce Stuart is to play with Portage Lake instead of with their team but say that Bill Nicholson, their goal man of last year, will captain the team during the coming season. A report from Montreal, however, says that Nicholson, Strike, Gardner, Kenneth Mallen and "Doc" Scott will all be seen with Canadian professionals this year, Nicholson being in the net for the Wanderers.

Bobbie Rowe, once of the Portage Lakes, and Steve Vair, both of whom were disqualified by the great Ontario Hockey association last year as being professionalized, have gone to Port Arthur to play with a professional team.

It is said that "Bouse" Hutton, the Ottawa hockey and lacrosse man, will be in the net with Hod Stuart's team at Pittsburg and that Billy Baird, probably the cleverest point player in the league last year, will again play in the Smoky City. This will give Pittsburg a great defense, one which might be said to be invincible, Hutton in the net, Baird at point and Stuart at cover point. Lorne Campbell is expected to be again at center. Eddie Roberts will probably be at right wing, leaving the rover and left wing positions yet to be accounted for.

The magnates of the International league think that Duluth hockey enthusiasts are rather slow, inasmuch as they have done little or nothing towards getting a rink built or even in getting capital interested in the plan to build one and to enter a team into the league this year. There has been much talk in the Zenith City during the past few seasons of entering a team in the league race but nothing has yet come of it. One of the Michigan magnates visited Duluth last week and said that the situation there looks to be hopeless and that it is improbable that anything will be done there this season anyway.

"What Duluth needs," said this man to the writer yesterday, "is someone to get out and hustle for the coin. There is lots of it at the Head of the Lakes and the men holding it could very easily be induced to go into the thing. It seems, however, that no one has taken a hold of the matter in the right way and of course those who put up the money want it handled by people who can and will tell what they are going to do and men who will produce the goods."

Nothing further has been heard here from the people at Columbus, Cleveland or Detroit. It is fully expected, however, that a Columbus team will be entered shortly after the opening of the season but that the other two towns will not attempt to get in this year. Minneapolis and St. Paul will probably enter a team in the league this season, although the local authorities on hockey will say nothing concerning the situation in the Twin Cities. Michigan people want a St. Paul-Minneapolis team in the league and it is understood that Copper country people have offered to put up part of the capital for the building of a suitable rink and home for the team, although this is merely a rumor. The circuit during the coming season will be composed of at least six cities with a possibility of eight. Marquette is not considered as a factor during the coming season, although it is expected that Manager Thompson of the old Calumet team, who is now at Marquette, will get a rink built and a team into the league in 1907-08.

LOGAN SQUARES BEAT CHAMPIONS

Cubs and White Sox Both Lose to Independant Team.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—It's a case of hand it to Jimmy Callahan and his Logan Square independent team this week. The discarded hero of the American league whom Ban Johnson, current report has it, did not want Comiskey to have in the world's series for fear that he might help land the world's pennant. He not only handed the White Sox theirs Saturday, but to make it good he threw a gruel of black doom into the hearts of those loyal West side fans who are still willing to wage 3 to 1 that the Cubs can beat the Sox in another series, and who knew that the Cubs would not lose to Callanan even if the world's champions had dropped a game the day before.

Callahan is now something like the champion of the world, moon, sun and stars, not alone having beaten the world's champions, but their chief opponents, and it now looks as though he has only one more proposition open to him—to take the clubs of both the American and National leagues individually and beat them in a row to get all the honors left to mortal baseball managers.

WILL TAKE ON HERMAN.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 25.—Joe Gans, lightweight champion of the world, who is showing at one of the local theaters, today stated the terms under which he would meet Battling Nelson again, and declared that should the Dane refuse to accept he will sign articles for a fight with Kid Herman.

Several good purses have been offered by the different fight clubs for these two boys, and Gans declares that since he is a fighter for all there is in the game he will take on the best men in his division one after the other.

CASS LAKE TEAM

Cass Lake, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The football teams representing the Cass Lake and Grand Rapids high schools will meet on the local gridiron next Saturday, and the game promises to be a good one. Although the defeat administered to the local boys at Park Rapids last Saturday is an indication that the chance of victory Saturday is decidedly against them, the boys say they will fight the battle of their lives. At Park Rapids they were outweighed over twenty-five pounds to the man, and but two of the Park Rapids players were attending school. Thus their defeat was no more than could be expected. The team has been hard at work this week getting into trim, and a good game may be looked for.

Murphy Now Owns Cubs.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 25.—President Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago National league baseball club, became the owner of the controlling interest in the new National league champions yesterday. The club changed hands Nov. 1, 1905, when Charles P. Taft secured control of the team. Murphy, who was formerly assistant city editor of the Times-Star, of which Mr. Taft is proprietor, invested his own savings in the club and it has prospered under his direction. As a reward for the manner in which the club has been conducted, Mr. Murphy has been allowed to assume control of the Chicago club again and in the future he goes into National league meetings on an even footing with the other club owners. He now owns more than one-half of the stock of the club.

Knockout at Colma.

GREAT MISSION MEETING.

Bishop J. D. Morrison has returned from Minneapolis, where he attended the Episcopal missionary conference and expresses the opinion that the meeting was one of the most successful of its kind. There were fourteen bishops present, which is perhaps the greatest number ever assembled in the Flour City. Over 100 rectors were at the gathering and a large number of Indians from surrounding reservations also attended.

The service in the Sioux language held in the Gethsemane church in Minneapolis was the feature of the conference and attracted much attention. Rev. Benjamin Brigham, a full blooded Chippewa, afterwards delivered an address in English. The missionary mass meeting held in the Minneapolis Auditorium and presided over by Bishop Tuttle of Missouri, was one of the most magnificent religious services ever held in the state. The reports of the different dioceses showed that the Episcopal church is growing faster than ever before.

LAYING FOR MINNESOTA

Ames College Eleven Hopes to Down the Gophers, Saturday.

Ames, Iowa, Oct. 25.—All Ames is jubilant over the victory of its football team over the university of Nebraska last Saturday. Everything at Lincoln was Ames'. The 200 rooters and band from Ames drowned out anything they had at Lincoln. Lincoln had never heard such rooting before. It only shows what Ames can do when it has a winning team.

All of the men came out of the game in good shape with the exception of Biller, who sprained his ankle, and Reppert, whose knee was slightly wrenched. The good condition of the men after their hard fight speaks well for Trainer Watson and his methods. At present Ames has not a man on the sick list, and with Henninger's split thumb coming on as well as it is, Ames will visit Minneapolis with a well-conditioned squad of men.

The playing of the team was a revelation to even the most optimistic Ames man. Nebraska never made consistent gains, the most of their gains being on short end runs. Never once did they get loose with the ball, and when it came to touching any part of the line they couldn't make a gain. It is a fairly good record that not a man has reached the fullback this season. The lone score of the corn huskers came more on account of the poor playing of the Ames team rather than the good playing of the Nebraska team.

The back field of the team showed up well, and both Biller at half and Reppert at fullback proved their strength on defense. Jones carried the ball for consistent gains and the work of Jeanson scored eight of the fourteen points. The forward pass was used once for a fair gain, but at other times did not result in more than ordinary gains.

The playing under the new rules plainly shows that the quarterback run will be of no gain against a team playing the single line defense.

The addition of Johnson to the Nebraska team was well for Nebraska, for he proved the best ground gainer and caused the Ames ends the most worry. It is probable that Ames will send a bunch of rooters and a band to Minneapolis if a good rate can be secured.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—With the first big game an easy victory, the Maroons are now directing their attention toward the contest which is scheduled with Indiana next Saturday. There is evidence that the latter will prove a worthier foe than Purdue did last Saturday. "Jimmy" Sheldon has all "I" men on the team this year, and nine of these played against Chicago last fall on Marshall Field in the only game in which Chicago was scored upon that season. Sheldon has a high standing as a coach, and he has worked his material at Indiana up into a strong team. They say that they are going after the Western championship this fall—that is, as near the championship as it can be decided—by winning all of their games.

Sheldon was at the Purdue game and expressed considerable admiration for the Maroon team. But at the same time he had an expression of confidence which bodes no good for them when they meet his team Saturday. The "I" coach was not backward in declaring that his team would put up an entirely different game from what the Boilermakers did.

Coach Stagg has mapped out a hard schedule for his men this week. They were not forced to use any of their fancy plays against Purdue, which was fortunate for them, owing to the fact that they did not have the new plays well under control. But this week these plays will be worked to a finish, for Stagg expects to have to use the best he has in store to defeat the Indiana bunch.

A good deal of time this week will be spent in drilling the "subs," so that they can get into the game with the same spirit and skill as the regulars, if they are called upon. The substitutes are scarce this fall, and Stagg realizes that he will have to develop those which he has all the better to make up for the lack in numbers from which to choose.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 25.—Coach Hutchins is not at all elated over the showing made by the Wisconsin team against North Dakota. "It took the men twenty minutes to get into the game. The entire first half was wasted. This week they will be put through a course of training which will teach them to be on their mettle all the time. They need more ginger, and they'll get it." These are the words which the Badger coach used in talking over the game.

Today the Wisconsin men are badly used up. They all still hold the opinion the new style of play is harder on the participants than the old style. Soukup's injury, received in Saturday's game, is more serious than was at first supposed. It developed that the break is a compound fracture. When the bone broke, an end protruded through the flesh into his colored stocking.

It is feared infection may result seriously. He is confined to the Madison hospital.

Urbana, Ill., Oct. 25.—Fast performances by the Illinois regulars against the freshmen Saturday, and the low score of the Michigan-Ohio state game, have done a great deal to encourage the Illini to believe that they have more than a fighting chance against the Wolverines.

Jimmy Cook, the famous old-time end, has arrived and will have charge of the ends this week. Cook was one of the best ends that ever represented the Orange and Blue, and he is expected to do a lot of good. It is believed that if the Illini ends can be whipped into shape, the local eleven will be able to battle on almost even terms with Yost's team.

LANPHER FUR JACKETS

THE one thing, above all others, to look for in a fur jacket is the proper cut—the style. Mere richness of fur will not suffice; nor how carefully the garment is sewed nor how nicely it is trimmed. You don't want it if it looks as though it came out of Noah's ark. A fur garment that is right, gives pleasure and satisfaction—a joy we all recognize.

We publish a little book, called "Judging Furs" that tells just what you ought to know about fur styles—how fur garments are built; in fact, much more than you will anticipate. It is written from the view point of the purchaser—written for women as well as for men. (See below.)

THE ART OF THE FURRIER is the best thing about furs. He takes Seal and Mink and combines these two rich furs to get the best effect. Then he takes the less expensive skins, dyes them and produces a substitute that you can hardly tell from the original.

☞ Here is a case in point. The Seal and Mink effect is produced in Nearseal and Dipped Muskrat, very stylish and neat..... $31

This is only one of 75 varieties of Ladies' Fur Jackets—literally thousands of these garments of the popular and rarest furs—Lanpher Astrakhans are a feature ranging in price from $26.50 to $66; every one a jacket that any lady will feel comfortable in wearing. If it is a LANPHER FUR it is made to wear well.

LANPHER FURS are sold by the leading dealer in every community. Write to us for the book "Judging Furs" and we will also send you the address of our nearest dealer.

RAILROAD BUILDING

In United States, Canada and Mexico Exceeds All Estimates.

Next Year's New Mileage is Certain to be Enormous.

New York, Oct. 25.—Railway construction in the United States, Canada and Mexico exceeds all estimates of this year, and no one who can be classed as authority on such a matter would hazard an estimate as to the mileage of 1907. It will be enormous, as compared with previous years, running into tens of thousands of miles in the countries named in construction of steam roads alone, while additional tens of thousands of miles will be laid for electric railways. The demand upon the steel mills, furnaces and mines of the country for supplies of material readily can be perceived, in advance, to be of record-breaking proportions. Three or four of the large steam railroad systems in 1907 will exceed in new mileage the construction work of the entire United States in any year of the last decade.

There are no roads now being promoted in this country to have a population come to them in ten, twenty or thirty years after building such as was the case with so many of our important railroads built in the last forty years. The Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Northern Pacific were all built for the far future when they were constructed. Millions of people who now contribute to their earnings were then unborn, and other millions were residents of states and countries hundreds and thousands of miles distant from their sphere of operation.

The wise, far-seeing men who took the chances with their own brains and other people's money were right in their views of what the coming years would do for their railways and for the regions they traversed. Each of the roads named brought disaster and ruin to many of the early investors, and some of the original promoters, but once built they were to remain, not only as monuments of the earnest faith and hopes of those who created them, but also to the great pecuniary benefit, convenience and profit of the people who now and hereafter avail themselves of these ready and efficient methods of transportation. The orange groves of California, the mines of Idaho, Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Montana and Utah, the farms of Oregon and Washington, are all rendered more valuable, indeed could not profitably exist, if it were not for the systems developed by Stanford, Huntington, James J. Hill, Henry Villard and others, who gamely and stanchly fought out the battle for transportation lines through uninhabited wilderness and desolate desert, knowing that men and money, trade and fortune, would follow the track of the rails as fast as transportation could be furnished.

The subsidies and the promotions, the speculations and the stock manipulations made and unmade the fortunes of hundreds and thousands of men, and many pursue the same course with investors and speculators in the future, but the regions that need the roads have them, millions who reside along these systems avail themselves of their priceless advantages. This North American continent could not well do without them, and their usefulness extends all over the known world. Australia, India, China and Japan are benefitted by these great systems, which, however unprofitable in their early periods, are of inestimable value to their owners and to the people of the world today. The troubles and trials, the hopes, doubts and fears, the intense earnestness and unshaken faith of men like Huntington, Stanford and Villard, scarcely can be imagined by those who knew them not in their days and nights of combined anxiety, patience and ceaseless energy. They each and all were mental giants. They not only blazed the pathways to the Pacific, but they made the trails that modern railway men, financiers and promoters have broadened into highways of modern business and financial affairs.

Stanford, cool, collected always, with sound judgement on the broadest of fields of operation, great tact and skill of the accomplished diplomat; Stanford, the counsellor, and the greatest of executives, Huntington, he of the iron will, quick thought and instant action, were a rare and able pair, fitted exactly for the work they were to do and did so well. If they made millions of dollars for themselves, Stanford and Huntington's work has made it possible for thousands of others to make fortunes and for millions of people to live happily in the regions opened for the inhabitants of the world. One of the most striking changes of railway construction and financiering in the last forty years is in the methods of promotion, or perhaps is more definitely and correctly expressed by calling it the financial initiation of the project. In the sixties and seventies of the last century, when these great enterprises were inaugurated, government aid was invoked. Foreign bankers were made the underwriting agents, and their charges and commissions were generally very great.

It took months of preliminary negotiations, years of actual securing of funds, and halts, delays and financial extensions without limit as to the number. The men who gave the thought, direction and impulse to the scheme frequently were ousted by those who represented the money, and it was no unusual thing on the other hand that those who furnished the cash just as frequently found their money gone and the property in control of those who had invested only brain work in the enterprise.

Nowadays, in the United States, foreign capitalists, as a rule, are not called into original underwriting. American financiers are strong enough now to do their own underwriting through the formation of syndicates, or by their control of some financial institution of large capital and ample resources, either in their values or in the strong boxes of their clients. Railways from capitalization of $10,000,000 to $50,000,000 that are meritorious and do not invade some other railway's territory readily can be put in shape to do business by the union of six to a dozen prominent men in New York city.

Railways that do, or are expected to go into an enemy's country, are sometimes even more easily put into shape, for that has proven in the past to be a money-maker for those in the deal, provided the enemy is convinced they mean business and can do what they propose. In such cases whether the road is constructed or not, the men who organized to build generally retire with deposits in the banks to their credit, to repeat in some other form, or some other section, the process of organizing a competing road. I have heard some mtn who had to buy out these competing roads denounce such railway organizations as blackmailing schems, but i have known the same men to discuss earnestly similar propositions with a view of getting in on the "ground floor" themselves. From a close observation of the subject I am satisfied it is only those who try this method who do not succeeed, who are "blackmailers."

If they pull it through and make the established road buy them off, or buy them up, they are "Napoleons of finance," "shrewd men of affairs," "able financiers," blackmailers, no—not at all. It would surprise the public to know of the number of railways, steam and electric, that are being built by individuals, or by two or three or a half dozen individuals associated together and who have pooled their cash, and sometimes their credit as well, to construct and complete these lines of road.

Wealth has accumulated so in the hands of some individuals that they are able to furnish the total cash required for construction of roads, in some cases hundreds of miles in length. One man, I am informed, underwrote a bond issue of $20,000,000 on a road which he controls through its stock, and he furnished the cash, as agreed, to build the entire road. In other cases total issues of one, two, ten and twenty millions have been taken by one, two or half a dozen men. This speaks in the strongest possiblt terms for confidence in the profitable future of railways in the United States. These men control the stock and take all the bonds, furnishing all the money, believing that when these roads are in operation they will show such great earning power that their incomes will be great enough to pay all interest on bonds and good dividends on the stock.

How different this if from the days when the capitalists of England, Holland, Germany and France were coaxed and pleaded with to furnish the money to build our most important roads! American capitalists now freely put their cash into railways, knowing that honest management is sure to bring large returns. The United States will witness no cessation in railway construction for many years to come.

CAUSES OF LEPROSY.

London, Oct. 24.—Prof. Jonathan Hutchinson's theory that leprosy practically always originated in districts where the people ate badly cured fish, with the evidence he had collected in various parts of the world, was fully detailed in the Sun when the professor's publication in regard to this matter aroused so much interest.

The theory, naturally, has not passed without opposition, and a recent occurrence of leprosy in the Rhone valley was cited as a case where the theory did apply.

The veteran professor has just returned from a trip of inquiry to the Rhone valley, which resulted in a complete corroboration of his theory, till he reached a district where there was a case of leprosy, and where he was assured by everyone, including leading medical men and the highest officials of the city, that there was no fish eating by the Swiss peasantry, as they could not afford to buy the imported fish, while the fresh fish of their own streams was far too valuable for them to think of eating it. But when he reached the district of Leuk he found large quantities of cured fish of various kinds and poor quality which came by rail and was eaten by the peasants. It came only in winter and spring, as it would not keep in the summer. In short, he found on a small scale, exactly what he had found in inland places in India.

RAREST SPECIES

New York, Oct. 24.—Vying with the duke of Bedford, one of the greatest peers of England, whose great estate near London contains blue blooded stock as wtll as wild animals of rare species, Warner M. Van Norden, the banker, has bought for his fine stock farm at Rye, N. Y., five zebras representing the rarest specimens of the family.

Two zebras of the Bohimii class came from the South American mountain fastnesses just north of the Transvaal. Another came from the dark country of Abyssinia. This one is said to be the rarest specimen in captivity and cost Mr. Van Norden $5,000. The cost of the five zebras, including that of bringing them from their far-away homes, will be around $25,000. Three are already installed in Mr. Van Norden's stables. The other two will be delivered early next spring.

Duluth Wholesale Concerns Install Many Electrical Appliances.

Kelley-How-Thomson Hardware Company Has an Extensive System.

Inventive genius and the demands of industrial and commercial interests have resulted in a wonderful development of electricity as a working agent; so much so that this has been termed the age of electricity.

So rapidly have new and important discoveries for the use of electricity followed one another that people are wondering what the next step will be and whether the limit of the possibilities of electricity will ever be reached.

Probably the most important thing that has ever happened to open the way of future possibilities to the city of Duluth along industrial lines has been the harnessing of the mighty water power of the St. Louis river by the Great Northern Power company, for the purpose of distributing electric power.

That the future of eletricity in Duluth is assured, is shown by the new and varied uses of the electrical power furnished by the Duluth-Edison company, the development of whose plant has been favorably commented upon since the early days of electric lights in Duluth.

The part that electricity plays in the offices and throughout some of the large wholesale and jobbing nitstitutions is very interesting, and the extent to which its use is carried is probably little appreciated except by those whose duties bring them in daily contact with the many time-saving devices.

The large concerns are discovering that the electric devices for saving time save money and extra exertion as well.

It is of interest to note that the large business concerns of Duluth are fully up-to-date in the matter of electrical devices; that a number of local firms are now installing electrically-operated machines of various kinds, which are calculated to facilitate office work, or do more quickly and easily some of the work that formerly required manual labor or steam power.

The Kelley-How-Thomson company, a well known local wholesale hardware concern, is a good example of the modern wholesale house that has adopted time saving devices. Within the last few months, the company has installed a large number of the latest improved electrical contrivances, which will lighten labor of office work. Other corporations, such as F. A. Patrick & Co., and the Oliver Iron Mining company, are adopting similar improvements.

A reporter for The Herald, who visited the Kelley-How-Thomson company's building on Fifth avenue west, yesterday afternoon, was shown a number of the electrical features of the equipment, some of which was still a comparatively new thing in Duluth.

Among these was an electric time stamp, which is used on all orders and other papers passing through the office. The stamp gives the date, the hour and the minute of reception. By means of it, delay is often avoided in the handling of orders, as every person through whose hands it passes knows the exact time that it was received, and acts accordingly.

At the desks of the company officials and others are electrically operated graphaphones. A slight pressure of the foot on a bulb and the operator begins dictating into a combination receiver and mouth-piece. If there is an interruption, a slight adjustment with the hand causes the graphaphone to repeat what has already been said. The record, when completed, is placed on another electrically driven machine and the graphaphone talks into the ears of the stenographer, who strikes off the words on the typewriter. The graphaphone method of dictation, it is said, saves a great deal of valuable time at the busiest hours of the day, as the office man can dictate several leters rapidly, one after the other, and distribute the records for typewriting, while he attends to other business.

Another interesting device is the electric envelope-sealer. Into this machine the unsealed stamped envelopes are fed as fast as a boy can put them in and out they come, ready for mailing. To those who have had hundreds and even thousands of envelopes to seal every day the time and labor saved by this one device alone will be best appreciated.

The electric adding machine, which resembles in general appearance those seen in many of the banks and offices, is a great improvement over the old style in that the operator runs up his figures without loss of time in pulling a lever back and forth.

Among other important and no less interesting features of the Kelley-How-Thomson est..blishment are the electric clocks on all floors of the building, which ring bells at 7 a. m., 11:55 a. m., and at 5:55 p. m. The electric fire alarm system connects with fire headquarters, where the alarm is automatically given whenever the temperature of a room gets above a certain point. The electric sprinkler alarm is no less important, providing for the sprinkling of every room in case of fire and an alarm in case the water pipes freeze, or the system becomes disarranged.

Electric bells for messenger boys are found throughout the building. An electric pump furnishes the water supply for the entire structure, the storage tank being on the roof. Electric fans provide a fine ventilation system and electric elevators hoist and lower the loads of merchandise from floor to floor, as it is received or shipped. Electric lights are plentiful throughout the building; every room can be made as light as by day.

All these time-savers have been installed, it is said, without the trouble of extra wiring, and the expense of operation is said to be insignificant as compared with the valuable time saved.

NEW DIVORCE LAW PLANNED

Proposed Changes in Present State Systems Formulated.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—Judge Staake of this city, secretary of the divorce congress, has received from its committee on resolutions a proposed measure for bringing about uniformity in the present divorce laws of the United States. The proposed statute is the outcome of deep study by eminent lawyers and jurists and prominent churchmen.

Secret or star chamber sessions for hearing divorce cases before masters or other representatives of the courts are done away with, and all hearings and trials are to be in open court.

It also is provided that a decree dissolving the marriage tie so completely as to permit the remarriage of either party should not become operative until the lapse of a reasonable time after hearing or trial. The Wisconsin, Illinois and California rule of one year is recommended. Solicitation of a divorce case by advertisement, circular or otherwise is to be prohibited, under penalty of a fine of not more than $1,000, and imprisonment for not more than one year.

Annulment of the marriage contract, as distinguished from divorce, will be made for impotency, consanguinity, existing former marriages, fraud, force or coercion, insanity and illegal age.

Divorce, it is provided, shall be of two kinds—absolute or limited. Under the first classification the grounds shall be adultery, bigamy, conviction and sentence for crime, followed by two years' continual imprisonment, extreme cruelty, willful desertion and habitual drunkenness for two years. In the second class hopeless insanity of the husband is added.

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, a Star City, Ind., hardware merchant is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequaled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by all druggists.

MAY MOVE TALL SHAFT.

Beautiful Soldiers' Monument May Have to Be Moved.

Allentown, Pa., Oct. 24.—After years of effort and persistent agitation on the part of Grand Army posts and citizens in general, there was unveiled on Oct. 19, 1899, a most imposing monument to the memory of the soldiers and sailors of this city and county who offered themselves as a sacrifice on the altar of their country. This is said to be the second highest soldiers and sailors' monument in the country, and is 106 feet high. The shaft itself is surmounted by a heroic figure of Liberty, and at the base are four bronze figures representing the four branches of the national arms—the cavalry, the artillery, the infantry and the navy.

Now it may be removed, possibly almost intact, as tall houses of masonry are, but more probably piecemeal, for it is too fine a memorial to risk the marring of any part of it.

There is one peculiarity about this monument, which makes it unique. It is probably the only monument in the United States that was erected in the middle of the leading business street in the city, thus obstructing traffice and making it a source of considerable danger to teams and pedestrians, and more than once there have been narrow escapes from serious accidents. Several collisions have already occurred between teams and the monument, and only a few weeks ago a hose carriage driven to a fire came into collision with the base, knocking down one of the lamp-posts which adorn it and throwing off the driver. The tracks of the transit company encircle it, thus adding another element of danger.

The erection of this monument on its present site gave rise to considerable opposition from the beginning, but it gradually died out, for want of a more appropriate place to put the shaft.

Now that Allentown s going to get one of the finest parks in the state, there is a general desire that the monument be removed from its present location to the new park, and that the latter be named Monument Park.

Testing the Brew.

The monks of old were the original brewers---and the history of brewing was for years the history of the cathedral. Beer was rarely found outside the convents and monasteries. In 1146, A. D., a brewing charter was granted the Abbey of Weihenstephan in Bavaria, which was then, as now, famous as the home of the finest hops.

Seven hundred and thirty-three years later, in 1877, August Fitger graduated at the Weihenstephan Brewers School and came back to America and brewed as the famous old-world brewers had taught him. Since that time history shows that Fitger's Beer has been the leader, others have followed. Every one who loves good beer deserves a case at home.

BRYAN EXHORTS DEMOCRATS TO MAKE CONVERTS OF REPUBLICANS

Indianapolis, Oct. 25.—An open letter to the Democrats of Ohio, from W. J. Bryan was made public at the headquarters of the Democratic state committee this afternoon. It expresses appreciation of the endorsement of the state convention and adds:

"The election this year is important, not only as an indication of the trend of sentiment, but because a Democratic congress will enable us to send reform measures to the senate and either secure remedial legislation or expose the defense of the enemy. Let me urge, therefore, every Democrat to go to the polls as it is easier to bring a Democrat to the polls than it is to convert a Republican. Let the Democrats organize and poll every Democratic vote. If it is necessary to send for a voter, there ought to be enough enthusiastic Democrats in every precinct to supply the necessary conveyances.

"But we ought not to be content with polling the Democratic vote, we have a right to expect a large increase in our vote from Republicans, who are now convinced of the necessity for the reforms which the Democrats have been advocating. Let every Democrat pick out a Republican and supply him with literature. Converts are made more by the conversations between neighbors than by public speakers, and it is so easy to show how events have supported the Democratic position, that every Democrat ought to be able to gain a recruit."

DOES NOT LOOK REASONABLE

North Dakota Woman's Marriage Was Without Any Protest.

Elsewhere in The Herald today, appears a dispatch from Minot, N. D., which states that Margaret Cone has begun suit for a divorce from Walter C. Cone and charges him with using threats of death to coerce her into marriage at Duluth a year ago.

The marriage license records kept by J. P. Johnson, clerk of the district court, show that Oct. 10, 1905, a license was issued to Walter W. Cone of Erie, Pa., and Margaret McCarthy, of Taylor county, Wis. The return by the person performing the ceremony shows that Rev. John Callahan, formerly in charge of the Star of Hope mission, who left early this year for New York to carry on the same line of work, married the parties mentioned in the parlors of the First Methodist church of this city, the ceremony being witnessed by W. P. Wentworth and John Callahan. Mr. Wentworth was the janitor of the church.

While none of the facts alleged in the case are known here outside the telegraphic dispatches concerning the complaint, it is regarded as very peculiar that Mrs. Cone, who visited the clerk's office when the license was procured and where there were a number of people who could have interfered in her behalf, made no attempt to prevent the marriage. There is not the slightest suggestion that she even attempted to stop the ceremony at the time Mr. Callahan performed it in the presence of Mr. Wentworth, either of whom would have very quickly gone to her assistance had she made known the alleged peculiar circumstances by which she was compelled to marry Cone.

STRANGE EPIDEMIC.

Doctors Baffled by New Disease Prevalent on Staten Island.

New York, Oct. 25.—An epidemic of disease, which doctors have confessed themselves unable to diagnose, and which has assumed menacing proportions in the town of Mariners' Harbor, on Staten Island, has thrown residents of that place into a panic. Hundreds of persons have sold or closed their houses and moved to other parts of the island.

The disease already has brought two victims to the grave and there are at present under treatment in the town over 300 cases. Its victims are first attacked by a high fever, and soon red blotches cover their bodies. At its inception the malady confined itself to the ranks of Austrian laborers, nearly 3,000 of whom have been brought to the town from Buffalo, N. Y., recently, to construct new factory buildings.

Within the past week, however, the disease has spread to the town people.

* * *

Gay & Sturgis today received the following from Boston: A representative of the Boston News Bureau has recently completed an examination of the Butte Coalition properties brought out six months ago on the basis of $15,000,000. 1,000,000 shares at $15, now selling on a stock market basis of $38,000,000. The report says:

"There is a manifest disposition in some quarters to direct attention to the net earnings per share of the Butte Coalition, rather than to examine into its future. The earnings of the company could be enlarged at once if so desired, but this feature is but secondary, the main energies at the moment being bent in the direction of shaping its affairs for the hauling of an ore tonnage commensurate with the resources of its extensive tract. There is a lack of appreciation of the scale of development work in progress at the mines of the Butte Coalition. Never was such an extent of opening work conducted by any company in the Butte camp.

"The Butte oCalition is operating the former active possessions of the United Copper company and in addition is developing the Tramway, Snohomish and Nipper. The company owns the control of the Alice, upon which is located the rainbow lode, the strongest and largest in the camp, not excepting that of the Anaconda. This vein has paid millions in dividends and among other reasons strong hopes for the future are being built upon the fact that within the Alice boundary it forms a contact with a number of veins of established value, among them those of the North Butte.

"The Butte Coalition is extracting ore from the Corra, Rades, Minnie Healey, Nipper, Tramway, Snohomish and the Tuscett addition, either through its mine or the Boston & Montana, where its ground can be most advantageously developed. But as above indicated, the scale of development work is the overshadowing feature. Since the turning over of the extensive Heinze properties, the Corra shaft has been opened to an additional depth of 150 feet, with everything in readiness for the starting of a cross-cut at the new level. In the meantime, hundreds of feet of drifts have been extended in the upper levels. New deposits have been opened on these levels, which give promise of a large tonnage of good grade ore. The Rarus shaft has been sunk 125 feet to the 600-foot level, and the cross-cut from the level above carried forward to the ore bodies, which at this point have been developed to a considerable extent, with stopes and barely started.

"The new air shaft being opened for the purpose of affording a better system of ventilation in the Rarus will be completed to the 1,500-foot level with the opening of the new year. Sinking and raising are in progress. The Rarus lies between the Mountain View and Pennsylvania mines of the Boston & Montana. Its location is in the heart of the district in which the big values of the Boston & Montana have been developed. The 1,500-foot level of the Rarus exhibits a greater degree of productiveness than any thus far opened on the property. The full length of the drifts are in solid ore of smelting grade, with large bodies of concentrating ore on either side. The grade of ore from this mine is only excelled in the camp by that of the North Butte and Mountain View, the latter a possession of the Boston & Montana.

"The Tramway shaft designed for the joint operation of the Tramway and Minnie-Healey claims, was started July 1, since which sinking has progressed to a depth from surface of 525 feet. In addition to this 'raises' are being carried from the 900 and 600-foot levels of the Minnie Healey. This shaft should be supplying ore from both the Tramway and Minnie-Healey by next July, when a powerful Nordberg hoist contracted for three months ago, will have been installed. Production at the Minnie-Healey was recently suspended for a period of five weeks, during which its shaft underwent a system of much needed repairs, including its complete retimbering for a length of several hundred feet. Sinking is now in progress to the 1,200-foot level, with drifting and crosscuts being extended at a rapid pace at the levels above. Late developments have resulted in the disclosure of ore bodies of good proportions and grade, which have yet to become a producing factor. Operations so far on these deposits have been confined to drifting and raising, preparatory to the starting of stopes.

"The Minnie-Healey adjoins the great Leonard mine of the Boston & Montana, and the settlement of litigation between their owners on the basis of vertical boundary lines opens up broad possibilities for both. The Nipper group of the Butte Coalition, so long a bone of contention between Heinze and the Amalgamated, and closed by injunction for nearly seven years, is surrounded by the Anaconda, Parrott and Mountain View claims, and constitute practically a virgin tract of large proportions. The Nipper is now being developed from the 1,000-foot level of Parrott and can easily be reached from one of the bottom levels of the camp, namely, the 2,400 of the Neversweat, at a moderate cost. The Nipper has yet to become a material producing factor.

"In point of efficiency, the surface equipment of the Butte Coalition mines is second to that of none in the camp. The Butte Coalition output is being treated at the Washoe smelter, at practically the same costs, it is understood, as those for the output of the subsidiary companies of the Amalgamated."

Great Britain's Educational Bill.

There is a temporary suspension of hostilities in Great Britain over their educational bill, but which is sure to break out again when parliament meets this winter. The agitation has surpassed in duration, intensity and bitterness that of any other public question, dating back to 1870. It was in 1853 that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters was first compounded, and it succeeded because it contained true merit and deserved to succeed. It has been the standby in thousands of homes because of its efficacy in cases of dyspepsia, indigestion, nausea, headache, costiveness, biliousness, cramps, flatulency, bloating, poor appetite, colds, chills, female ills or general debility. We hope every sick man and woman will take the hint and try a bottle at once. You'll find it the best stomach medicine you've ever taken. Insist on Hostetter's.

The Lie Charitable.

By Harlan Eugene Read.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

When it came to the point of actually carrying out his intentions on that wonderful May afternoon, Mr. J. Spencer Parker seemed to accomplish no more than a hunting dog chasing a rabbit in the tall rye, continually jumping up and down and never getting anywhere. A dozen times he walked resolutely toward the brass door-knob of 1316, and as many times he concluded to saunter languidly past, as if he had no other reason than simply to sun himself. But finally he summoned up courage enough to pull the bell-knob, and an imitation cowbell tinkled in the back of the house.

"J. Spencer Parker, upon my word!" exclaimed the middle-aged woman who came to the door. "And pray what brings you here today?"

She spoke in a sweet, musical tone, in pleasing harmony with the diffident demeanor of her guest, whose every motion was quiet and respectable, and whose voice sounded strangely like hers, as he replied: "Just visiting, ma'am. I wished to pay you my regards, Mrs. Simpson, and to congratulate you unon Mr. Watkins, who is coming to board with you."

"Congratulate me!" cries Mrs. Simpson. "Why, I am indeed delighted to hear that. Do you know, I have never seen him yet?"

"Yes?" The look in Mr. Parker's eyes was far away as he replied, and his body bent forward attentively. "I have known Mr. Watkins—Jeremiah Watkins, ma'am—from a boy. I am glad he is coming to such a home as yours."

"Indeed, you please me, Mr. Parker," returned Mrs. Simpson. "I shall be especially happy to tell our boarders what sort of person they may expect."

Mr. Parker gave a sudden start, but carefully recovered himself. "Ah," he said, "that's what I came to tell you of."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, Mr. Watkins is a—a—a gentleman."

Again the courteous speaker leaned forward as he spoke, struggling awkwardly for the next word—"but I want you to know that he is a—a gentleman."

"Ah!" returned Mrs. Simpson, with ready intuition. "Then he is perhaps eccentric?"

"Not exactly," replied Mr. Parker, thoughtfully and sweetly, "but he looks, let me say, he looks rougher than he is."

"But he is—"

"Yes," said Mr. Parker. "He is a gentleman."

Half an hour later the door closed softly, and J. Spencer Parker came down the front steps of 1316, at first smiling, and then sadly, walking with slow, unsteady step. As he passed by the little corner grocery store, he paused and smote himself pathetically on the breast.

"Liar!" he said, groaning. "Liar!" And yet—it had to be done. God forgive me!"

Anyone who had happened to see Mr. Parker's friend, Mr. Jeremy Watkins, on the next day, when he came with his trunks to 1316, might have been excused for cherishing the suspicion that he was not exactly a Beau Brummel or a Lord Chesterfield. He cursed the baggage man for letting his trunk fall roughly to the ground, and quarreled with him over his fee; and, to further give vent to his feelings, he strode to the door and gave the bell knob a vicious jerk. There was not a look on his face nor a gesture of his body that did not reveal him a coarse, illmannered young man, proper of the stable, rather than the house. His square, rough face, with its loose mouth and broad nose, his burly shoulders and big hands, and his clothing, inviolate with respect to any previous contact with the whisk broom, bespoke a vulgarity of person that he did not attempt to conceal. It seemed almost impossible that he should be a friend or acquaintance of such a person as J. Spencer Parker.

Mrs. Simpson, radiant, sweet and fresh, appeared at the door and gazen at him for a moment. Then, seeing his trunks, she extended her hand and said:

"Mr. Watkins, I suppose?"

"Yes." J. Watkins was on the point of asking her who in h—l she thought he was, with two trunks right there before her eyes; but something in her ladylike manner, evidently different from what he had been accustomed to, checked him.

"I am so glad to know that we are to have you here. We are almost like a family here, and so you can imagine how much I was pleased to learn that our new lodger was a cultivated gentleman."

Watkins flushed angrily, supposing that she was making sport of him, but one glance at her frank, ingenuous face convinced him of her sincerity.

"Some one must have been here—" he stammered, uncomfortably, "telling you about me."

Again the surging suspicion that Mrs. Simpson was mocking him—and again the sweet and straightforward look from her.

"I have known him a number of years, ma'am," replied Watkins, in a subdued voice.

"So he said," returned Mrs. Simpson, "and it is indeed delightful that those who know one well can speak so well of him. But come—your trunks must be taken care of. I will call our man."

The man came—a wizened man, whose face was wrinkled into a constant smile; and as he bustled about, assisting Watkins with the trunks, he talked pleasantly and respectfully.

"You will be pleased here, sir," he said, as they stopped, panting, at the top of the stairs. "If I do say it myself, there are no more gentlemanly or ladylike people in the world, than at 1316."

Watkins, who had just been on the point of cursing the man roundly for dropping the trunk on his foot at the top landing, contented himself with blaspheming inwardly instead.

At dinner there was a general hush when he entered the room, and he was introduced to the lodgers, one by one. A sweet looking girl sat next him, who said:

"It will be so delightful to have you here, Mr. Watkins. Mr. Parker, who called here yesterday, tells us that you spent two summers in Europe."

Memories of rough debauches in London and Paris and feverish gambling at Monte Carlo came flooding to his brain. His only subjects of conversation, in regard to European travel, heretofore, had been coarse ones. But now, coloring, he spoke of Notre Dame and the Louvre; of St. Paul's and Windsor. The unaccountable influence of this slight creature beside him, brought to his memory scenes of beauty and interest that he had looked on only in passing, and had long forgotten. He talked without roughness, and even found himself thanking the waitress for things she passed him. He felt pleasantly uncomfortable.

He walked that evening with two of his fellow lodgers, for a little exercise before retiring. One of them was the young lady whom he had sat next to at dinner. The other was a young lawyer who occupied the room next to his in the hall. Their talk was wholesome and happy. They asked him about his home and his business, not as curiosity seekers or idlers, but as people sincerely interested in him. They never talked of themselves; but answered his questions frankly.

When he returned to his room there was a flower on his bureau. The gas was burning low. The windows were slightly open, and a fresh, pure air surrounded him. He found a pitcher of cool water at hand, and a glass stood near it. Presently, Mrs. Simpson knocked at his door. "It occurred to me," she said, sweetly, "that you might not yet have unpacked your books."

Watkins looked apprehensively at the cheap, trashy literature that adorned his shelves. "N—no," he said, slowly. "I haven't."

"If you would like to use any of our books, just go down into the library and help yourself. You need not bother to return them to their places. Just leave them here in your room."

Upon the following Sunday one of the neighbors met Mr. Watkins in front of 1316.

"I suppose this is Mr. Watkins," he said, cordially offering his hand. "I am indeed glad to meet you, for I have heard of you from your friends. Come up tomorrow to 1324, three doors up, and have dinner. We shall be glad to add another gentleman to our list of acquaintances."

And so time passed, until one bright day, three months later, there came again to 1316 Mr. J. Spencer Parker. He pulled the door knob with some trepidation, and heard again the faint tinkle of the imitation cowbell in the rear. He talked again to the middle-aged, delightfully beautiful woman who answered his call. He left again in about half an hour. But this time, as he passed the little grocery store on the corner, he was seen to slap himself enthusiastically on the leg and to smile radiantly.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Mrs. T. D. Merrill yesterday afternoon entertained the officers, directors and section presidents of the local branch of the Needlework Guild of this city, at her home. Mrs. Merrill is honorary president of the Duluth branch, and for many years has been actively interested in this broad and splendid charity, and as during past years, she entertained the active workers at an informal afternoon immediately before the annual round-up.

The outlook for another successful year in help and assistance to the less fortunate of the city is promised. The round-up will be held at 123 First avenue west, and the garments and contributions are to be sent there Tuesday of next week, Oct. 30. Upon Wednesday the exhibit will be held, and Thursday the distribution of the garments will take place. The charity organizations of the city will be assisted, the Children's Home, the hospitals, St. James' Orphange, being among the institutions helped and in many cases, private families whose needs are brought to the attention of the workers receive assistance. The work in its great helpfulness appeals to many people, and in few cases is the work or organized charity carried on with less exacting demands of time. The work of the guild is well established in Duluth and those interested in it are pleased to note a growing interest each year.

HOME WEDDING.

Duluth society was much interested in the beautiful home wedding service last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Duncan, when their daughter, Miss Julia Lucretia Duncan, became the bride of Ralph Norris Marble, Jr. The house was decorated in the fall flowers, chryanthemums appearing prominently in the decorations. In the parlor where the ceremony took place, white chrysanthemums with smilax and ferns were used, and in the music room roses were used. The library and dining room were brilliant in yellow chrysanthemums, the appointments in the latter room further carrying out the beautiful color scheme.

LaBrosse's orchestra played the wedding music, and at 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the rooms. The ribbon bearers were Russell Duncan, Louise Frick and Duncan Frick, and were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Mabel Duncan and Miss Helen Marble. The bride with her father was immediately preceded by her maid of honor, Miss Grace Duncan. They were met at the improvised altar by the groom with his best man, John Reigart, os Ishpeming. The service was read by Rev. Alexander Milne of Pilgrim Congregational church.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of princess lace over silk, and a bridal veil, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. The maid of honor was gowned in pink, and carried white chryanthemums, and the bridesmaids wore gowns of white, and carried pink chrysanthemums.

In the dining room at the informal reception which followed, Mrs. F. A. Brewer presided, and assisted were Misses Ella Rose Taylor, Katrina Richardson and Sadie Black. At the punch bowl, Miss Virginia Frick presided.

Mr. Marble and his bride left on the night train for a wedding trip and they will be at home after Jan. 1, at Ishpeming.

GLEN AVON WEDDING

First Church Wedding at Suburb is Charming Affair.

The first wedding at the little Glen Avon church, since its erection some fifteen years ago, took place last evening when Miss Mary Heath Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Miller, became the bride of Robert Blair Quigley. The affair was a most charming one, the little church being lavishly decorated, and making a delightful setting for the service. The altar was banked with palms and ground pine relieved at intervals with graceful clusters of white chrysanthemums and a row of gleaming white candles before the altar added to the beauty of the scene. White chrysanthemums and carnations marked the entrances to the pews.

At 8 o'clock the wedding music was played by Miss Myrtle Taber, at the organ, Miss Blanche Trufant, at the piano, and George Tupper, violin, and the wedding party entered the church. The little flower girls, Gertrude Miller and Patience Miller, in dainty gowns of flowered organdy, entered first, and were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Marion Sherwood and Miss Winnifred Quigley. The maid of nonor, Miss Lee Morrison came next, and last the bride with her father. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Wyman Miller. The service was read by Rev. J. C. Faries, of the Glen Avon church.

The bride wore a dainty gown of white mull, with a long tulle veil, and a shower boquet of roses. Her attendants wore white gowns over pink and carried white chrysanthemums tied with pink ribbons.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for the immediate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Quigley left on the evening train for a wedding trip and after Dec. 1, they will be at home at 1817 Jefferson street.

Among the out of town guests were, Mr. and Mrs. Heath, Mr. and Mrs. McNaught, and Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. T. H. Gray, all of Minneapolis, and Miss Bessie Brace of Ashland.

STATE FEDERATION.

Important Matters Come Before the Winona Meeting.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The State Federation of Women's clubs, in session here, went on record yesterday for a separate school for boys and girls at the training school at Red Wing, and voted to ask the legislature next winter to make appropriations for such separate schools.

The matter was brought up by a report of the legislative committee, presented by Mrs. C. G. Higbee of St. Paul, who urged that no other legislative measures be supported until this is accomplished. Mrs. Russell R. Dorr of St. Paul, L. A. Rosing, president of the board of control; Mrs. Anna Underwood, Lake county; Mrs. C. G. Higbee argued that such separate schools were necessary for the protection of society as well as the reformation of individuals.

Enforcement of the child labor and pure food laws were urged in the report on civil service reform, prepared by Mrs. Lapenotiere of Minneapolis.

The forestry committee reported through Miss Caroline Fairchild of St. Paul, asking the support of the federation for state forestry laws and the appointment of a city forester in each city to superintend trimming of trees. The Tawney Indian and forest reserve bill was endorsed.

The art committee report, submitted by Mrs. Martha C. Wells of Minneapolis, showed that the work was retarded by lack of material and urged the installation of traveling art galleries.

Mrs. Chorpnning read a paper on "moral Training of the Child," advocating c'oser co-operation between mother and teacher. Mrs. Marshall of Duluth urged high and definite ideals. Mrs. Atwood made a plea for better mental and physical food and exercise as aiding a strong moral fibre and deplored novel reading by young girls.

The principal address of the convention was given last evening by Judge R. S. Tuthill of Chicago on "Juvenile Courts." The aim of the Illinois law, he said, was to suppress the causes of crime, and so to work by reform and not punishment. He described the St. Charles school for boys, having 1,500 acres of land and six cottages. In its two years of operation, all the boys sent out from it, had remained reformed. He indorsed the work of probation and truant officers and declared that a love for boys was the keynote of success in the work.

Mrs. Robert M. Seymour of Duluth closed the session with an address on "Sidelights on the Biennial."

Pleasing Concert.

In spite of the disagreeable weather the French & Bassett concert hall was filled, yesterday afternoon, with interested guests of the company, and probably the most enjoyable concert of the series was presented. Tyler and Roy Prytz, who sang the quartet from "Rigoletto." Mrs. McAuliffe also sang "Die Lorelei." The duet by Verdi, "La Forza del Destino," was well given by Mr. Tyler and Mr. Prytz. The accompanist was Mrs. Fred G. Bradbury.

Chop Suey and Japanese Rice

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Mo Goe Chop Suey.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

I would like to have a recipe for chop suey, also the way of cooking rice. Can you aid me, and greatly oblige. Very truly yours, T. A.

To make enough Mo Goe Chop Suey, that is chop suey with mushrooms, for five persons, take one pound of young pig pork, cut into small slices, two chickens' livers, gizzards and hearts also sliced, two stalks of celery and a half-ounce green ginger root. Put four ounces olive oil in a frying pan over the fire, and when hot add the meat, celery and ginger. As soon as lightly colored, add two tablespoonfuls vinegar, half a cup boiling water, a teaspoonful Worchestershire sauce, a half teaspoonful salt, red and black pepper, cinnamon and cloves to taste. When the pork and giblets are nearly tender, add a small can mushrooms, a half cup bean sprouts, which you can get at any of the Chinese grocers. French green peas, string beans chopped fine or asparagus tips. If you use the bean sprouts they must not cook too long, as they are better when not more than half done. Drain off the superfluous liquor, add a teaspoonful of the brown see yu sauce, also obtainable at the Chinese grocers, and serve with bowls of boiled rice.

Japanese Rice.

A Japanese cook, famous for the light, snowy appearance of his rice, washes the uncooked grains through several waters until not a trace of milkiness is seen in the water. To two cupfuls of the rice he allows a quart of boling water, cooking slowly for an hour without stirring. From time to time he shakes the kettle, tipping it from side to side. When the water is all absorbed he lets it stand for a while on the back of the stove to steam and plump.

Crab Apple Marmalade.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly send me a recipe for crab appele marmalade jelly? I am just starting housekeeping and know nothing of preserving. Thanking you very much, I am respectfully,

Mrs. L. J. W.

Wash the apples, remove the blossom end and cut in small pieces. Do not peel or core, for skins and seeds improve the color and quality of the jelly. Cover with cold water and cook gently until soft. Keep closely covered so they will steam, but do not stir or mash more than necessary, if you wish your jelly clear. When very soft and the liquid red, turn into the jelly bag and let them hang to drain over night. In the morning, measure the liquid. Cook ten minutes, skim, then boil fifteen minutes longer. Add sugar, three-quarters of a pound to each pint of juice. Cook five minutes longer, or until a little poured in a cold saucer jellies around the edge, then skim and turn into glasses that have been rolled in hot water to avoid breakages. The sugar should be hot when added to the syrup. The best way is after measuring the amount required to spread it on shallow tins like pie tins and set in the oven, leaving the door open so that it will not get too hot. It must not be allowed to turn yellow, as it will do if overheated. It should be just hot enough to hiss when dropped into the hot syrup. When the jelly is quite cold, cover with melted paraffin or rounds of paper wet with white of egg or brandy. Then put on screw top or paste paper over the top. Label your various jellies and preserve legibly, so that you can tell at once what you are getting. If you like your crabapple jelly flavored, add a little lemon juice or pineapple juice while cooling. Rose geranium is nice also. Put a leaf in the bottom of each glass, and its flavor will pervade the whole.

Smart Modes in Fashionable Chinchilla

Chinchilla, which is to be one of the most popular furs of the season, lends itself peculiarly to special designs in coats and neck pieces. In the finer qualities it stands in the same class as ermine, and a piece of it is a most dressy adjunct to any gown. Never before this season has there been such a regal display of it, or have handsomer models been shown. In a short Eton, combined with lace and fancy braided trimming, it is most attractive and stunning. No less effective is the cape-like stole, which affords an ample protection about the shoulders, the broad ends reaching nearly to the hem of the garment. A three-quarter coat, with deep shawl collar and bell sleeves, is another handsome model to be worn. Muffs of chinchilla are all large and of the pillow variety.

What Retail Markets Offer

New York State cider.

Ripe California tomatoes, 25 cents a lb.

Last bushel of ripe Duluth tomatoes.

Crabs, 25 cents each.

Blue points, 25 cents a dozen.

Frogs' legs, 18 cents a dozen.

Jellied tongue, 30 cents a ¾.

All the good things of fall are fast arriving. When the pop corn season, and the period of shining red cheeked apples and lucious cider, has arrived, the return to primitive days of beautiful old fireplaces and draughty rooms, and shining pewter plates, and no conveniences, and much simplicity, and a bedroom in which portions of one's breath remained stiff frozen in the middle of the atmosphere, and simple tastes and simple things to satisfy them, is almost wished for. But with a bit of vivid imagination, and a contented spirit, one can enjoy the sweet cider and pop corn and eat the apples, play that the early colonial days are returned, and that Indian mauraders may sweep down at any moment.

Lots of fun that. Just renew the more than vivid imagination of your youth, and try it.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Dr. Conover of Crivitz, Wis., Shot Dead by Charivarier.

Menominee—Richard Hamilton was today bound over to the Marinette county circuit court on the charge of manslaughter, and will have to answer to the court for the killing of Dr. Conover at Crivitz, Wis., last week. Hamilton is a saloonkeeper at Crivitz, and with a crowd of companions had turned out to charivari a newly married couple. Just as Dr. Conover passed the crowd Hamilton's shot gun was discharged, and the doctor fell mortally wounded. He lived only a few minutes. The feeling against Hamilton is very strong.

While returning home from a logging camp, E. S. Moran, camp foreman for the Bird & Wells company, was set upon by Mike Mizensji, who was armed with a rifle, and narrowly escaped instant death. The cartridge stuck in the assailant's rifle, and the latter then tried to club Moran to death. The instant's respite, however, gave Moran time to jump from the railway velocipede on which he was riding and grapple his assailant. Mizensji was overpowered and taken to the lockup. The cause for the deadly assault is unknown.

Sault Ste. Marie—President Charles B. Warren of the Lake Superior corporation announced yesterday that plans for improvements to the Michigan powerhouse to aggregate $500,000 are now in the hands of contractors, and that the contract for the work will be let in a few days. It will take five months to complete the work, which will increase the efficiency of the plant by several thousand horsepower.

Marquette—At the forced sale of the Marquette County Gas Light & Traction company, conducted at Ishpeming yesterday by Master-in-Chancery Lawrence of Grand Rapids, the property was disposed of to Granger Farwell of Chicago, holder of the bonds, for $285,000. The company's holdings include a gas and an electric light system and a street railway, all three serving the cities of Ishpeming and Negaunee. The only other bidder was R. C. Cornish, representing a Milwaukee concern.

Ishpeming.—A telegram was received in the city Tuesday announcing the death of Otto W. Gothe, whose family resides in North Vine street. His demise was due to typhoid fever, with which he had been confined to a hospital at Buhl, Minn., for three or four weeks past. His daughter, Miss Sophie, left Sunday evening for Buhl, and was with him when he passed away. The deceased was well and favorably known here, where he resided a great many years. He was a machinist in the employ of the Oliver Iron Mining company for a long period, leaving there a few years ago to take a position on the Mesaba. He returned some months ago, taking his former place in the Oliver shop here, but some eight or nine weeks ago he accepted a position as foreman of the Consumers Ore company's shop at Buhl, Minn. Mr. Gothe was at Buhl but a short time when he was taken ill. He was between 45 and 50 years of age and is survived by his widow, who is in very delicate health, and six children. He held membership in Hematite camp of the Modern Woodmen of America, also the One Hundred Men's club of this city. The remains will be brought here for interment.

Hancock — Miss Catherine Brunick, daughter of Patrick Brunick of Quincy Hill, and John Roach were united in marriage at St. Patrick's church at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. T. J. Atfield. The bridal couple left for a trip to Duluth and on their return will make their home in this city, the groom being employed at the Hancock Consolidated.

Mrs. Caroline Lindvall, an old and respected resident of this city, died at the family residence on the side hill at about 5 o'clock Tuesday morning. Mrs. Lindvall was born in Sweden and was 68 years old. She was joined in marriage to Gustaf Lindvall in Guttenberg in 1862 and came to the United States in 1874 and joined her husband, who preceded her a couple of years. During the past thirty years she has lived in Hancock.

Calumet.—The committee appointed at the recent meeting of the Calumet Businessmen's association to circulate the petition to be presented to the Mineral Range and Copper Range railroads, will complete its work this week, and it is quite possible before many more days will have passed the signatures will be offered to the officials of the two companies making the request for the connecting spur between the tracks of the two companies in Calumet.

Andrew Themo, a well known local character, was found dead in the Kiverl saloon, Pine street, early Tuesday morning. Themo had been employed about the place cleaning up, and when last seen alive was apparently in the best of health. It was about 9 o'clock Sunday night that he went into the saloon, and this was the last seen of him alive. As near as can be ascertained Themo died from heart failure. He had not complained of any illness recently. He was about 40 years of age and is survived by a married daughter, who lives at the Mohawk.

Mrs. Inman, the mother of Mrs. Henry Ham, was found Tuesday morning dead in bed at the home of her daughter, Hecla street. Mrs. Inman had retired Monday night apparently in the best of health, and when her daughter went to awaken her in the morning found that life had departed. The decedent had lived in Calumet for about a year, having come her from Salem Ind., where she lived with another daughter, Mrs. Powell.

SUED AS HE REACHES HOME.

Charles W. Clark, Son of the Senator, Returns to Butte.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 25.—The return of Charles W. Clark, son of Senator W. A. Clark, to Butte, his former home, after an absence of about three years, was signalized yesterday by the filing of a suit for $2,500 by District Judge George M. Bourquin, who claims that amount for legal services alleged to have been given Mr. Clark in mining litigation from 1899 to 1904.

This is Mr. Clark's first visit to Montana since the famous Amalgamated-Heinze fight, in which the Judge E. W. Harney and Ada Brackett scandal was a feature. Mr. Clark was then accused of offering Judge Harney $250,000 to acknowledge that he had been bribed by the Brackett woman to give Heinze the Minnie Healy mine.

ROBERT EDESON

Will Appear Next Week in "Strongheart" at the Lyceum.

Robert Edeson, whose popularity in "Soldiers of Fortune" and "Ranson's Folly" has made his visits to every city an event of interest to theater-goers, will be seen here on Tuesday and Wednesday at the Lyceum in his latest success, "Strongheart," a new play of college life by William C. De Mille. As Strongheart, Mr. Edeson will be seen in a role unlike any in which he has previously appeared; in fact, this is the first instance in which a college-bred Indian has been selected as the dominant figure of a drama. The author has selected an equally unusual environment for his four acts, Coumbia university. He has pictured college life as we know it today, redolent of youth, bubbling over with breeziness, tender with sentiment. He has introduced as an exciting dramatic episode in the play a football game, the result of which forms an important part in the development of the story.

Mr. Edeson, with a carefully selected company and an elaborate scenic equipment, will present "Strongheart" precisely as given at the Hudson and Savoy theaters in New York and at the Park theater in Boston.

SKULL OF AN AUROCHS.

Bones of the Progenitor of the Buffalo Are Found.

Pierre, S. D., Oct. 25.—At a depth of more than twenty feet, the workers in caisson No. 1, on the new bridge, found a number of bones, and an immense skull of a buffalo. The skull was perfect, but the outside horn had disappeared, leaving it to measure thirty-four inches from stub to stub of the inside horn formation. The find was in a bed of gravel and boulders, and the bones must have lain there for years, as the river bank has long extended far out beyond where the sinking is going on. In years gone by, the channel of the stream was probably at that point, and the bones were swept to the bottom with the gravel and stones, remaining there to be covered by the accretion with a change in the channel. The skull is a peculiar one, showing a dome between the horns, while the average buffalo skull is almost straight. The specimen has been placed on exhibition where it is attracting a great deal of attention. It is claimed by some that on account of its size, and shape it is a skull of an aurochs, a larger animal, and a progenitor of the buffalo, instead of the buffalo itself, in which case it has been buried in the sands of the Missouri for many hundreds of years.

There may be someone advertising for employment today who would be worth to you as much as any two of your present employees.

"Away With Prejudice"

Let us reason about this.

You are not prejudiced against apple cider, are you? You don't consider it is an alcoholic drink?

Well, a glass of apple cider contains just about 50 per cent more alcohol than an equal sized glass of Moose Brand Beer.

There is only about 3 per cent of alcohol in our beer. It is about nineteen-twentieths pure, cold water, while there is plenty of Barley Malt in it to make it of food value and a dash of Hops for a tonic.

There is a Real Temperance in the Use of Moose Brand Beer.

RECRUITS WILL GET FINAL TEST

Lieut. Ivan Wettingel, United States navy, will arrive in Duluth tomorrow from Minneapolis to make the final test of the two naval recruits which were secured at the local recruiting station Monday. He will be accompanied by the medical officer from Minneapolis, who examines all recruits in this district and who will determine whether or not the two men in question can be accepted.

Lieut. Wettingel is the officer in charge of the naval recruiting station, No. 1 at Minneapolis, under which the Duluth station is operated. Included under his supervision are all the naval stations in Minnesota and the Dakotas situated in nearly all of the larger towns and cities. Officer Blenkhorn in charge of the local station received word today that the lieutenant would be here either tomorrow or Saturday.

The two recruits who will undergo the final examination are James E. Lynch and Olney Daniels. They are both 18 years old and are strong and healthy young men, well fitted for naval service. Mr. Blenkhorn has little doubt but that they will be declared fit for acceptance upon the examination of the medical officer. They have already been examined by a local physician and were found to be in excellent condition.

If they are found to be fit for the service the final papers will be signed by Lieut. Wettingel and the two men will be sent to one of the naval stations at once.

How to Cure a Cold.

The question of how to cure a cold without unnecessary loss of time is one in which we are all more or less interested, for the quicker a cold is gotten rid of the less the danger of pneumonia and other serious diseases. Mr. B. W. L. Hall of Waverly, Va., has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and says: "I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by all druggists.

SPOT IRON IN DEMAND

Prices Advancing and Large Contracts Made in Europe.

Rail and Bridge Orders in For Huge Lots of Steel.

New York, Oct. 25.—The Iron Age says: "There is urgency for spot pig iron all over the country, but it is probably most acute in New England, where smelters have been forced into the market to secure metal at close to $25 per ton in spite of the fact that they have unfilled contracts with furnace interests at very much lower prices. There has been an advance all along the line and in all sections of the country.

"Exactly what tonnage of foreign iron has been contracted for is very difficult to estimate. One cargo of the 5,000 tons of Middlesborough iron has just arrived, and is nearly all sold. Another interest has three cargoes afloat, while the fact that what available freight room there was for some time to come on the regular liners from Glasgow and Middlesborough has been taken, indicates that considerable quantities are to come forward. This foreign pig iron is selling at about $1 per ton below the prices at which domestic iron is selling for prompt delivery, but the foreign markets seems to keep pace with our advance so that the spread between foreign and domestic prices is not nearly as large as it was during the last import movement.

Steel is scarce all over the country and some Eastern billets have actually been sold in the Pittsburg district for $32 delivered. There have been some further large sales of steel rails, including 85,000 tons additional for the New York Central, thus nearly doubling the former purchase for 1907. The Texas & Pacific has contracted for 30,000 tons and the Northern Pacific for 10,000 tons additional. An order has been taken for 10,000 tons to go to Manila and there is pending a lot of 30,000 tons for the Guayaquil & Quito road. The Canadian Pacific is in the market for a large tonnage, while it is expected that the Delaware & Hudson and the New Haven roads will place their orders at an early date.

"Lake ship builders have ordered 30,000 tons of material from Chicago and Pittsburg mills. There has just been placed by the City Investment copmany of this city an order for 14,000 tons of shapes and a Pittsburg shop has taken 4,000 tons for the new plant of the Standard Steel Car company at Hammond, Ind. Bridge work is coming out quite freely. The Northern Pacific road has placed 8,000 tons and has 10,000 tons more to give out. The Rock Island wants from 4,000 to 5,000 tons and other Southern and Western roads about 20,000 tons of bridge material."

A STUFFED AUK

London, Oct. 25.—The record price for a stuffed bird is $2,100, which has just been paid for a specimen of the extinct Great Auk. It belonged to a collection of birds recently purchased by Mr. Beville Stainer, of Shropshire, who sold the Auk to another collector. The rara avis, once plentiful in the sub-Artic regions, has become extinct within the last 100 years; its eggs are much sought after as curios, and usually fetch about $500 at auction.

VALUABLE CHINA.

Once Owned by Jefferson Added to White House Collection.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Through the patriotic generosity of T. J. Coolidge, of Boston, a valued addition has been made to the White House collection of presidential china, consisting of four pieces of Jefferson ware.

These pieces belong to a blue and white dinner set which President Jefferson ordered in France. Owing to the tangled conditions of Jefferson's affairs at the time of his death, this set was sold and was purchased by a Mr. Jones, of Virginia, who, apart from the fact that it was owned by Jefferson, liked it especially because the letter "J" appeared in the crest.

Some thirty years ago Mr. Coolidge, Sr., learned of the whereabouts of the chian and purchased it from the Jones estate, subsequently presenting it to his son, who has now loaned four pieces of the set to the White House collection. The loan consists of a soup tureen, the top of a vegetable dish, the dish itself having been broken, a large platter and a plate.

Each piece is decorated with deep blue mottled borders outlined in gold. In the center of the platter and plate and on the sides of the tureen and covers are the shield-shaped Jefferson crest. The shield is outlined in deep blue bearing thirteen gold stars, and in the center is an elaborate scroll letter "J" in gold. These pieces were placed in the White House cabinets this morning.

Wake Up and Think.

To the Voters of the Fiftieth Legislative District:

Don't you think it is time to wake up and elect a representative to the state senate from the great city of Duluth, who makes some claim of being a real friend of the people?

Senator T. M. Pugh, who is seeking re-election in the Fiftieth legislative district, has had plenty of time to show to the voters of this city and county how he stands on questions which will give remedial relief to the people.

Said a very prominent citizen the other day: "I challenge any man to produce one single reason why Senator Pugh should be continued in office."

On the other hand, John T. Dow, who seeks the votes of the people for the position of senator in this district, is a man of positive character. He stands for political and economic reforms which are daily demanded by the people. He is a man of moral courage and will do things.

Mr. Dow has extensive property interests in St. Louis county. He has been a close student of our municipal and county government, and knows something of the local wants of our people.

He stands for legislative enactments which will give the people the full right to go into the public lighting business. He is a believer in home rule for local governments. He advocates the removal of every obstacle which now prevents the people from adopting the municipal ownership idea.

He is in favor of a 2-cent passenger rate, and lower freight rates and pledges himself to fight with all the strength that he possesses to secure legislation bearing upon these subjects. The people want these reforms and they have the opportunity to elect a man who promises to fight for them. His opponent has been in the legislature for eight years and he has never raised a finger to secure legislation of this nature.

What a difference there is between a positive and a negative man? He who pretends to be the friend of all is seldom the true friend of any. Indifferent friends are in the same class with hostile foes. Mr. Dow stands as an unflinching and aggressive advocate of every measure which will advance the interests of the people in every portion of the state.

Trusting that you will do what you can to boost the candidacy of Mr. Dow, we are, Very truly yours,

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY COMMITTEE.
W. E. McEwen, Chairman.

ROOSEVELT IN G. A. R.

Washington, Oct. 24.—President Roosevelt was today mustered in as an honorary member of the Associate Society of Farnsworth Post, Grand Army of the Republic of Mount Vernon, N. Y. The ceremony took place in the cabinet room of the executive offices and was conducted by Gen. Horace Porter. The president made a few remarks of a patriotic character.

Was it YOU who asked a friend the other day if he knew of a good boarding house? If you are the man there is something to interest you in the want ads. today.

TENDENCY IS WEAKER

Wheat's Tone Slightly Off In Most of American Markets.

Flax Trading Mot Very Brisk and Prices Little Off.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 25.—Wheat was stronger during the early part of today, on continued light receipts in the Northwest, but declined somewhat toward the close, which was irregular in the American markets. In Chicago and Minneapolis, it was unchanged to slightly higher, but in the other markets the tendency was weaker. Liverpool closed ⅛d to ¼d lower; Berlin, ⅜c lower, and Budapest, ⅝c higher.

The December option closed unchanged in Duluth and Minneapolis, ⅛c higher in Chicago, ⅛c lower in New York, a shade lower in St. Louis and Kansas City and ¼c lower in Winnipeg. The October option closed unchanged in Winnipeg. The May option closed ⅛c lower in Duluth and New York, unchanged in Chicago and St. Louis, a shade higher in Minneapolis and ⅛-¼c lower in Kansas City.

Corn was higher in Chicago, the December option closing ⅛-⅜c up. Corn closed unchanged in Liverpool. December oats closed unchanged in Chicago.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 25.—The flour market is easy. Prices are still held unchanged, but the undertone is easy. Buyers are inclined to look for lower prices and are barely ordering up to requirements. The situation is very unsatisfactory to millers and the flour market is in rather a demoralized state. Shipments, 57,621 barrels. First patents, $4.20@4.30; second patents, $4.05@4.15; first clears, $3.25@3.35; second clears, $2.40@2.60.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Firm On Small Receipts In the Northwest.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—The wheat market opened firm today despite lower prices at Liverpool. The chief bullish factor was the continued small movement in the Northwest. There was a good demand by commission houses, but offerings were light. December opened unchanged to a shade higher at 72¾c to 72¾@72⅞c and sold at 72⅞@73c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 549 cars against 700 cars last week and 794 cars a year ago.

The market continued firm all day on a good general demand. The high point for December was 73@⅜c. The close was firm with December ⅛c higher at 72⅞c.

The corn market was firm on good buying by pit traders. The local receipts were smaller than had been expected and this lent strength to the market. December corn was unchanged to ⅛c higher at 42½c to 42⅝c and sold at 42¾c. Local receipts were 173 cars with 97 of contract grade.

Prices continued firm until the close. The high point for December was 43c. The close was firm with December up ¼@⅜c at 42¾@&c.

A forecast of better weather in the Northwest, which it is believed, will facilitate the crop movement, caused a steady feeling in the oats market. Trading was small. December opened a shade lower at 33¼c and advanced to 33½c. Local receipts were 201 cars.

The provisions market was firm on a 5c advannce in the price of live hogs. Trading was very quiet. January pork opened 5c higher at $13.75. Lard was up 2½@5c at $8.32½@8.35. Ribs were 2½@5c higher at $7.45@7.47½.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was but ⅛ cent net gain in December and no gain for the May. What is more important than the matter of a fraction one way or the other, is the fact that there is a growing interest in the market. More of the local large interests were in the pit today. Northwest houses were trading here also. There is more of an interest in the cash market, which is growing stronger. It may be timely to ask what might be expected at Minneapolis if there was a big milling demand, considering that Minneapolis has increased stocks only 5,000 bushels this week, with the cash wheat premium advanced to 3½ cents over December.

Corn—The two things which are the most prominent in the corn trade is the fact that the movement to market is lighter than expected and the shipments from Chicago much heavier than looked for. Local stocks will be further reduced for the week. The market was strong early. Part of this gain was lost because of the setback in wheat. The fact that cash people have to advance their bids to get No. 3 corn for next month shipping sales helps the feeling in this market.

Oats—Realizing sales were felt on the advance. Moderate receipts, of which a large portion is of poor quality and the large shipping sales late yesterday helped buyers. Would look for a soft spot before buying.

Provisions—Think a temporary setback is due, after which January products may be bought. It looks as if the bull feeling has become a little too general.

* * *

Cincinnati Price Current: Corn husking and gathering is progressing favorably. Dry weather promoting merchandise condition of corn. Some complaint of rot in Illinois, elsewhere condition good. Growing wheat makes excellent appearance. Farm work restricting interior offerings. Bids for new corn unsatisfactory in Illinois and in some localities elsewhere.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Liquidation Followed Irregular Opening and Close Was Easy.

Prices Were Almost Immovable During the Final Hour.

New York, Oct. 25.—Opening prices of stocks here adapted themselves to the lower level of London, resulting in fractional declines throughout. Reading and National Lead were down nearly a point each, and Union Pacific, Smelting, Colorado Fuel and Pressed Steel Car large fractions. The market was dull.

Buying orders were distributed freely and the initial weakness was overcome, the market recovering fully. St. Paul was again a factor in stimulating the rally, the stock moving up vigorously to 171¾. Illinois Central also went up 1½. The market became weak again when a drive was made against the coalers and Hill stocks. Great Northern preferred fell 4; Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, 3; National Lead, 2; Pressed Steel Car, 1¾; Reading, 1⅜; Union Pacific, Wabash preferred, Colorado Fuel, Smelting, Locomotive, American Car preferred and Interborough-Metropolitan preferred, 1 to 1⅛. There was a rally at the end of the hour.

Some pressure on United States Steel unsettled the rally, but it was resumed later. By midday, Canadian Pacific had recovered 1¼ points decline and Reading and Great Northern preferred rallied a point each. Cleveland C. C. & St. Louis and National Railroad of Mexico preferred rose 1 each and Wells Fargo 5. Northwestern fell 3. Transactions were small. Bonds were irregular.

When the market showed no inclination to respond to the spasmodic efforts to lift prices by bidding up certain stocks buying ceased and the list worked gradually backwards to the lowest. The selling after midday was most effective in Union Pacific, Reading and Amalgamated Copper. Colorado & Southern and Amalgamated Copper gave way 1 each. Consolidated Gass 1¼ and Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha preferred 2, Pittsburg Coal preferred gained 1¾.

A series of slight advances and declines before 2 o'clock were without significance, the speculation being merely nominal. Pennsylvania ebbed away a point.

The market closed easy. Prices were almost immovable during the final hour. Chicago & Alton declined 4½; Reading, ⅜, and Northern Pacific and Smelting preferred, 1. Reading was thrown on the market in heavy volume as the market closed.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened irregular and liquidation followed. The entire list sagged, but declines were only fractional. London sold American issues moderately. A bad bank statement is looked for Saturday, and the bears are still harping on the money situation. The market is largely professional and of a featureless character as far as trading is concerned. We see nothing better than a scalping affair until after election.

* * *

Gay & Sturgis: While today's statement of the Bank of England shows the proportion of reserves to liabilities 36.64 per cent, against 37.70 per cent last week, and nearly four points lower than in the corresponding week of last year, yet this is probably the last bad statement which the bank will make for some time. It is on the whole a strong showing, in view of all that has taken place. The fact that the directors continued the rate of discount at 6 per cent is clear evidence that they consider that effective to protect its reserve.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 25.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 2@7 points and gradually increased the loss to a matter of 11@13 points under scattering liquidation and a little selling by room bears who were influenced by lower cables than expected, rumors that an English corn expert would issue a bearish crop estimate, and a better weather outlook. There was some support on a scale down, but the demand was not aggressive and prices were about at the low point during the middle of the morning.

Futures closed steady. Closing bids: October, 10.58; November, 10.54; December, 10.54; January, 10.62; February, 10.70; March, 10.78; April, 10.79; May, 10.86; June, 10.87; July, 10.96. Spot closed dull, 30 points decline. Middling uplands, 10.95; middling gulf, 11.20. Sales, 100 bales.

New York Money.

New York, Oct. 25.—Money on call, firm: 3@4½ per cent; ruling rate, 4½ per cent; offered at 3 per cent. Time loans very dull and strong; sixty days, 6@6¼ per cent; ninety days, 6 bid; si xmonths, 6 per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 6@6½ per cent. Sterling exchange steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.85.90@4.85.95 for demand and at $4.80.65@4.80.70 for sixty day bills; posted rates, $4.80½@4.81 and $4.86@4.85½; commercial bills, $4.80⅜@4.80½. Bar silver, 69⅜c. Mexican dollars, 54c. Government bonds steady. Railroad bonds irregular.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 25.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: There is a steady call for horses of certain grades, while others are at a standstill. Delivery horses have gone down in price. It is expected that there will be a decided increase in the demand and also prices of all grades of heavy horses as soon as lumbering operations begin. This snow may hasten operations in that line.

The Columbia River Lumber company of Golden, Canada, bought up a car of loggers yesterday.

Copper Gossip.

Gay & Sturgis: John Hays Hammond, the eminent mining expert, has, it is understood, recently made an examination of the Balaklala properties in the interests of the Guggenheimers, who are large owners of the company's stock. It is said that Mr. Hammond's report states distinctly that the Balaklala property has such a vast quantity of valuable ore blocked out that the company, if liquidated, would easily return to its shareholders $25 per share. There is enough ore now in sight and ready to be taken out to permit of the regular payment of substantial dividends for a long series of years. The company is going ahead steadily with the work of its smelter, and will finish the first unit, which will have a capacity of 1,000 tons a day, by April, 1907. Work on the second unit will be commenced in the near future.

It is rumored that interests in North Butte have recently been large buyers in Nippising.

Paine, Webber & Co.: Dee says: Copper market is dull and weak in sympathy with New York. Don't look for any runaway market between now and election day, but would be in a position to take advantage of any pronounced break to buy any of the good coppers for good rise between now and Jan. 1.

* * *

Gay & Sturgis: A dividend of 50 cents was declared on Shannon today. After the dividend was declared, the resignations of Charles F. Brooker of Ansonia and George C. Greill of Holyoke were accepted, and N. M. Amster and William Paine of Boston were elected to fill vacancies. Shannon dividend is payable Dec. 2., books close Dec. 3. It doesn't say whether it's quarterly or not. On Oct. 1, the Shannon company had available $250,000. As the dividend is not payable for two months hence, by the time it is paid the Shannon company will have the benefit of two months' additional earnings, which would add in the neighborhood of $150,000 to its surplus. A dividend of 50 cents per share calls for the payment of $150,000.

* * *

Gay & Sturgis: Work has been resumed on the Colusa mine of the Boston & Montana company, which has been shut down nearly two months. In a few days the mine will be yielding the usual large amount of ore, about 500 tons daily.

* * *

Paine, Webber & Co.: Further details re the Butte New York Mining company are furnished by the Anaconda Standard. From this publication it appears that the company named obtained a large part of its mining property from the Butte-Milwaukee Mining company, a company that has been in existence for some time. The Standard says:

"As near as we can learn, it is the intention of the Butte-New York company to make final paymenets on all of the claims not yet fully paid for by the Butte-Milwaukee company, and develop the ground on an extensive scale equipping it with large hoisting machinery, etc."

Paine, Webber & Co.: A Michigan mining official is of the opinion that this year's copper output from Lake Superior region will not show a material change from the 1905 production. The General Electric company has covered its copper requirements for the next six months, most of it on a basis of 18 cents a pound.

* * *

Gay & Sturgis: A report with reference to the Amalgamated Copper company says that Butte & Boston directors are in no hurry to resume dividends for the simple reason that dividends that are now being paid by other subsidiary companies are sufficient to meet dividend requirements of Amalgamated.

EX-PRINCESS SEES HER BOYS

Saxon Court Relents and People of Munich Cheer Louise.

Munich, Bavaria, Oct. 25.—The Countess Montignoso, formerly Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, after years of negotiations with the Saxon court, was permitted to see her two eldest boys at the Saxon legation here today. The countess, who was animated and youthful looking, came with her little daughter, Pia Monica, born since she left Saxony, and her mother, the Grand Duchess of Tuscany, and had two hours' talk with her boys, after which the latter left Munich for the Riviera, to join their father, who accompanied them on their way to Munich, as far as Nuremberg.

When the Countess Montignoso came out of the legation, the crowd cheered, the men took off their hats and the women waved their handkerchiefs. The Grand Duchess of Tuscany was so affected by the demonstration that she burst into tears.

SUES FOR SKIN DOCTORS TOOK

Cincinnati Man Seeks $10,000 for Too Much Grafting.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 25.—Alleging that they took more than the amount of cuticule bargained for under a skin grafting contract, William G. Doil today entered suit for $10,000 damages against J. S. Atkins, George A. Fackler and John C. Oliver, the latter two prominent Cincinnati physicians and surgeons.

The plaintiff says that he agreed that a strip of skin, one by six inches, should be taken from his leg, but, while under the influence of an anaesthetic, skin was cut from both legs to the extent of forty-two inches.

The case grows out of an automobile accident, in which Atkins was injured, and it was for his benefit the skin was taken.

MINNESOTA'S RUNS BEGIN

Four Hours' Endurance Trial and Then Horse Power Test.

Rockland, Me., Oct. 25.—The battleship Minnesota started on her four hour's endurance trial between Monhegan and Boston today. The weather was not favorable, fog and rain prevailing. After the trial, the battleship will proceed to Boston light, where the assistants to the board will be sent ashore. From there she will proceed to Newport News, being given a twenty-four hour's endurance test of horsepower on the trip. She must show an average speed of eighteen knots on the four hours' test and must maintain for twenty-four hours, 13,200 horsepower, in order to meet requirements.

WORKMEN GET AMMUNITION

Russian Gendarmes Are Routed and 8,000 Cartridges Seized.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 25.—A detachment of gendarmes, who, yesterday seized at Tashkend, a shipment of 238 revolvers and 16,000 cartridges, destined for the revolutionists, were later attacked and defeated by an armed party of workmen, who carried off the greater part of the revolvers and 8,000 cartridges.

At Lodez the police last night searched 143 houses, and arrested seventy doctors, lawyers and business men.

Wholesale arrests and domiciliary searches continue in Warsaw. The police, aided by troops, are vigorously running down all information obtained from former Terrorists, now serving the government as detectives.

WEDDING AT TOWER.

Miss Winnifred Campaigne and John M. Brown Are Married.

Tower, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A very pretty home wedding took place yesterday morning at the home of Mrs. W. H. Campaigne, when her daughter, Winnifred, was married to John M. Brown of Two Harbors. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Turner at 6 a. m. and the happy pair left on the 8:15 train for a wedding tour to Chicago. Only a few intimate friends were present. Out of town guests were Miss Ada Tippett of Two Harbors and Mrs. H. Trengrove of Elba.

The bride wore a very becoming gown of cream crepe de chine over silk and carried bride's roses. She was attended by Miss Ada Tippet, who was beautifully gowned in white taffeta silk. The groom was attended by Caspar C. Campaigne, brother of the bride. The young couple are well and favorably known here, the bride having been the chief operator at the telephone exchange for several years, and the groom having worked here several seasons as fireman for the Duluth & Iron Range. After a two weeks' trip, they will be at home at Two Harbors.

MATHER AND HIS PARTY.

Samuel Mather and other officials of the well known independent iron ore concern of Pickands, Mather & Co., are on the Mesaba range today, looking at the properties there in which the company is interested. The party arrived in Duluth late yesterday from Cleveland.

Besides Mr. Mather, in the party are H. G. Dalton, general manager; H. S. Hazelton, secretary of several companies controlled by the Pickands, Mather people, and C. H. Munger of Duluth, who is general manager of the company's interests on the Mesaba ranges.

EXONERATES GOVERNOR.

Charges Against Frantz of Oklahoma Are Found Baseless.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The president has received the report of a committee recently sent to Oklahoma to investigate charges preferred against Governor Frantz of that territory. The report completely exonerates the governor, and undoubtedly will be approved by the president.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Chippewa Falls, Oct. 25.—Wallace Hayes of Eleva had a narrow escape from being seriously injured while threshing on his farm. He reached over to throw the belt off the engine, when someone started it, and he was hurled around the flywheel with the belt and thrown a distance of twenty feet. He was badly shaken up and bruised.

WM. BURGESS IS MADE RECEIVER

Duluth Electric & Construction Bankruptcy Case Investigated.

William Burgess was yesterday appointed receiver by Referee Pealer, in the bankruptcy case of the Duluth Electric & Construction company, after a hot fight waged by the attorneys for the creditors of the company. Thirty-four of the creditors, representing liabilities of $4,100, favored the appointment of Wallace Wells, but opposed to them were fifteen creditors, who favored the appointment of Burgess. The latter represented claims amounting to $5,950, and they finally won out after an all day session.

Twenty-one lawyers are engaged in the case and as the schedule value of the assets, which at first amounted to $35,000, has now been scaled down to $18,000, the final accounting will probably divide up a very small sum for each of the creditors, outside of his attorneys' fees. In addition to the legal expenses, there will be a large amount spent in winding up the business.

During the course of the investigation is was shown that the company would have been better off at present, had its affairs been wound up a year ago, as few of the contracts entered into since that time have been profitable, as they were made at prices lower than the work could be done for. It is thought that the greatest good can now be accomplished by continuing the company for some time under the direction of the skilled officials, as otherwise the work now in progress would be a total loss.

The lawyers engaged on the case are: A. E. McManus, C. T. Towne and Charles A. Adams, for the creditors who won out in the fight for receiver; W. J. Stephenson and Henderson & Courtney, for those who lost; A. T. Parks, for the bankrupt; Sullivan & Grant, Reynolds & McLaren, Ross McKnight, J. Grettum, Davis & Hollister, Baldwin, Baldwin & Dancer and Alfred & Hunt, for individual creditors.

PERJURY PAY NOT RECEIVED

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 25.—The third day of the trial of Clifford Hooe, negro coachman of millionaire Hartje, for perjury, the allegation being that he had sworn falsely in a deposition against Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, in Hartje's application for a divorce, began with Edgar Ray, a private detective, under examination by Attorney Scott Ferguson. Ray testified to tracing Hooe to East Liverpool, Ohio, and to a sensational confession by Hooe after his arrest in Ohio. He said Hooe confessed he had been promised $5,000 for the statement and had received only $700.

In cross-examination Ray detailed Hooe's arrest and second confession, denying the had told the prisoner that a mob was waiting in Allegheny to lynch him and that he had promised to protect him, if he said his first statement was false.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Hartje denied emphatically allegations of intimacy made by Hooe in a deposition, and was corroborated by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Scott, and a number of former house servants of the family.

When Charles T. Fullwood, for thirteen years a court stenographer, who took the Hooe deposition, began to read it from the official notes, the courtroom was cleared, only those called on the case and reporters being permitted to remain.

Read the W. W. Kimball Co.'s offer on page 4 and win from $30 to $325 in prizes.

GLAD THEY DID NOT CHANGE

City's System of Keeping Books Approved at Washington.

Since the report of the bureau of labor and commerce that the system of accounting in use in the comptroller's office was a model one, the city officers and aldermen are congratulating themselves that they did not act on the recommendation of the Chicago accountants, who audited the books last year, and install a new system at an expense of $1,500.

At that time the auditors stated that the system was faulty and advocated a change, but City Treasurer Voss and some of the aldermen could not see it that way, and thought that the expense was a needless one. Since the statement from Washington they are well pleased with their decision to stick by the old system.

FORMER POSTOFFICE CLERK IS INDICTED.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 25.—Albert W. Bigham, a former clerk in the postoffice at Tracy, was indicted in the United States court Tuesday on a charge of embezzling $188 of money-order funds from the postoffice May 12 last. It is said that he skipped out at the time and was subsequently arrested, but released on $300 bail.

John P. Green of Albert Lea was the foreman of the grand jury. One of the members was Postmaster Simmons of Forest Lake. Mr. Simmons asked to be excused from serving on the ground that there have been no less than four postoffices robbed within twenty miles of Forest Lake the past month, and that he felt it his duty to remain at home. The other night a postoffice only four miles away was robbed and $700 taken. Judge Morris, who is presiding, coincided with Mr. Simmons and excused him, with the advice that he stand guard over his postoffice with a shotgun.

RAILROADS

HENRY HORN PRESIDENT

May Succeed Howard Elliott on the Northern Pacific.

I. P. Spining Says Florida Passenger Business is Increasing.

Although the report has not been confirmed, it seems to be generally believed that Howard Elliott really is going to resign as president of the Northern Pacific. The Minneapolis Journal figures that Henry J. Horn will succeed him in this position, with George T. Slade general superintendent; H. A. Kennedy becoming general superintendent of the Great Northern, and James E. Hood assistant.

H. A. Kennedy has been assistant general superintendent, with headquarters in Spokane for several years, and has been acting general superintendent for several weeks.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Eastern Passenger Men Say Traffic Will be Heavy This Winter.

Allen M. Nye of Chicago, northwestern passenger agent of the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, and I. P. Spining of Chicago, general northern agent of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis railway, two infrequent visitors in Duluth, are in the city today. They say passenger departments of Eastern roads are enjoying a good business, and that the indications for a heavy winter traffic are excellent.

"The Southern roads have been making a strong effort to divert the winter tourist business in the direction of Florida and Cuba," said Mr. Spining, "and the passenger traffic has been steadily increasing in consequence. Everything pointed to a record-breaking season this winter, but the troubles in Cuba, combined with the recent heavy storm, will probably interfere with this to a certain extent.

"While we of the East heartily sympathized with San Francisco at the time of the earthquake and fire, we are at the same time rather pleased to think that the disaster would result in an increase in business for us. At least this thought came later on, for there is naturally quite a rivalry between the Florida and the California roads for the winter tourist business. It now appears that the California lines are enjoying a good patronage, and they are looking forward to a good winter season. But these are prosperous times, and I guess there will be plenty of business for Southern and Western roads alike."

STOP BRIDGE WORK.

Wisconsin Central Gives No Reason for Order Affecting Chippewa Falls.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Oct. 25.—An order has been issued by the new officials of the Wisconsin Central stopping work on the crossings at High Bridge and White River until further notice.

The work was started under the old officials with the idea of doing away with the trestles at those two places, and the work is almost completed. All that is necessary is the filling in over the concrete arches which now span the river.

The work already has cost $100,000, and it is believed that no great sum would be required to carry it to completion. Local officials of the road are at a loss to account for the order stopping work.

HAPPENINGS IN NORTH DAKOTA

Forced Marriage in Duluth Claimed in Minot Divorce Suit.

Minot—Held up on a lonely road in Northern Wisconsin one afternoon and compelled under threats of being killed to drive to Duluth, Minn., and marry a man she had known only a week before, is the story told by Mrs. Margaret Cone, a Towner, N. D., school teacher, in the district court here yesterday. Mrs. Cone, by her attorney, made application to have her marriage to Walter Cone of Duluth set aside on the ground that she was forced into the wedding against her will. The ceremony was performed in a Methodist parsonage in Duluth on the evening of Nov. 10, 1905.

A prairie fire three miles north of Des Lacs swept everything clean from the farm of Hagebert Halverson, taking every building on the place, including the dwelling house. Several tons of hay were destroyed, and one team of horses perished. The loss is estimated at fully $5,000.

Portal—Engineer Bigger, representing the Canadian government, and Owen B. French of the United States coast and geodetic survey are here for the purpose of establishing and marking the boundary line between the United States and Canada at this point.

There have been numerous clashes between officials of the two governments over the boundary line between North and South Portal. It is the intention of the two governments to have a monument accurately mark the line.

At present there is no way to tell which is Canadian and which American soil, and at times prisoners have been taken away from officers on both sides, the stronger usually securing his man.

Grand Forks—Unless Erne Bailey can be located before Oct. 30, the date on which Martin Doyle is to be placed on trial at Modren, Man., for the killing of Vincent Weller, a Cavalier county settler, it is feared that the prosecution will be unable to convict Doyle of a crime for which it is believed he should be punished. Vincent Weller, living on a farm at Mount Carmel, Cavalier county, disappeared on Nov. 20 last, and his dead body was found near Snowflake, Man., in the early days of April last. Bailey appeared at the inquest as a witness and it was largely on his evidence that Doyle was held for trial on a charge of murder in the first degree. Bailey remained at the Snowflake livery barn until July 17 last, when he suddenly disappeared. To fellow workmen he had talked of the Doyle case, claiming that it would go hard with any witnesses who appeared against Doyle should he be cleared of the charge brought against him. This was about the only reference he made to the case while in Snowflake, and the last trace of him was when he drove from Snowflake to Hannah with a butcher from the latter place.

Patrick Theeron, as guardian of Ellen Theeron, has brought an action in the district court against Sophia Theeron for damages of $5,000, claiming that in the presence of witnesses the defendant accused the plaintiff of stealing $50 from a bedroom in Sophia Theeron's residence near East Grand Forks. The principals to the suit are relatives, and it has resulted in a merry row. East Grand Forks attorneys are engaged in the case, which will be tried at the December term of court.

If your children are smart and bright, parents should be proud. Let them try. Read the W. W. Kimball Co.'s offer on page 4.

YELLOW JACK CAUSES FEAR

Appearance of Disease at Several Cuban Points Held Bad.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Army medical officers who had much experience in Cuba are watching with some anxiety the progress of yellow fever in the island. The principal cause for apprehension is found in the fact that the appearance of the disease at several widely separated points is an evidence that it has gotten away from the medical department at Havana.

EVELETH WATERWORKS

On Paying Basis for First Time in City's History.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The report of the city superintendent of water works, S. C. Vandall, shows that the department is on a paying basis for the first time in the city's history. The water rate here is extremely low and on account of the limited number of consumers, the department has been unable to make expenses, heretofore. The last report, however, shows a balance of $734 for the city, the increased revenue being due to a more systematic method of making collections, to the practice of shutting of the water when a consumer is ten days' delinquent, and to the extension of mains to the Adams and Spruce mines, this increasing the income about $1,400. There is now talk of increasing the water rate sufficiently to make the new $50,000 plant at St. Mary's lake pay for itsself within a reasonable time.

EXPRESSED SURPRISE

At Nature and Value of Country They Passed Through.

Brainerd, Minn., Oct. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The party of members of the state legislature and others, who were taken up over the Minnesota & International railroad by that company and the Northern Pacific, were in this city for several hours yesterday. They came in from the North at 10:30 yesterday forenoon and spent some time looking over the Northern Pacific shops, coming down to the business district at about 11 o'clock. They were met by a committee of the Brainrd Commercial club and taken to their hall, where, after a brief social session, Prof. Thomas H. Shaw and Hon. C. J. Gunlerson of Alexandria spoke on the subject of the drainage and other possibilities of Northern Minnesota. Both expressed surprise at the nature and value of the country through which they passed and both are advocates of state drainage.

After these addresses, the party adjourned to the Rainsford hotel, where a banquet was tendered them by the Commercial club, after which the guests returned to their cars, which were attached to the afternoon train to St. Paul.

JEROME BEGINS PROBING OF COERCION AND PLOTS BY MUTUAL LIFE CHIEFS

Former New England Manager in Secret Conference.

High Insurance Officials May be Hit by the Inquiry.

Trusted Assistant Put in Charge of Gathering Evidence.

New York, Oct. 26.—District Attorney Jerome began an active investigation yesterday of recent coercion-conspiracy charges against the Mutual Life Insurance company.

E. C. Sutton, the company's ex-manager at Springfield, Mass., was the first witness, spending several hours closeted with Assistant Attorney Nathan A. Smyth, to whom for the present, it is understood Mr. Jerome has assigned the case.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY JEROME, Who Has Begun Mutual Life Probing.

MOORS WORRY DIPLOMATISTS

Tangier, Morocco, Oct. 26.—Owing to the disturbed state of the country, American Minister Gummere and Dr. Rosen, the German minister, are remaining at Fez. The Moorish officials, in answer to French representations regarding the disquieting situation, declare their ignorance of many facts called to their attention, and deny responsibility for others.

Some of the foreign diplomats are demanding the dismissal of Mohammad El Torres, the representative of the sultan here, on the ground that he is old, incapable and fanatical. The situation in Morocco City continues critical.

Herr Heinrich, a German merchant, who was captured by Moorish horsemen, near Rabat, has been rescued by his personal guard.

Paris, Oct. 26.—In view of the situation in Morocco, the French government has decided to send a warship to Tangier, while Spain will hold several vessels for emergencies.

BIG STRIKE IN RUSSIA

St Petersburg, Oct. 25.—Premier Stolypin has received a telegram from Gen. Kaulbars, governor general of Odessa, reporting that an extended strike broke out in Southern Russia yesterday at noon, over 10,000 workmen in the railroad shops at Yekatermoslav, Briansk and Dnieprovsk, quitting work and raising the black flag.

Lieut. Konovaloff, an artillery officer, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment at hard labor for having bombs in his possession.

A man named Sprongge, once a prominent revolutionary leader in the Baltic provinces, was killed at Mitau yesterday, while on his way to America, because he had betrayed his party. He has just recovered from a wound inflicted by revolutionists.

FUGITIVE NOT ON BOAT.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—In the hopes of capturing Leonard Leopold, wanted in connection with the murder of Mrs. Leslie, the actress, in a hotel here, a squad of detectives met the passenger boat, City of Chicago, when it arrived early today from St. Joseph, Mich., a message having been received from the police of St. Joseph that Leopold had boarded the boat at that point last night. No trace of him could, however, be found.

Hopkinton, Iowa, Oct. 26.—While feeding a corn shredder on a farm about three miles south of town yesterday morning, William Weith got his left arm caught between the rollers and so badly crushed that amputation above the elbow was necessary.

PUSH FIGHT ON CHURCH

Schisms in Parishes May Result From Stern Ruling.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The cabinet has reached a decision regarding the application of the law providing for the separation of church and state, by which the property and revenues of the churches, in the event of the clergy persisting in their present rebellious attitude, will be sequestrated Dec. 11, but the churches themselves will remain open for public worship, under the law of assembly of 1881, during the ensuing year, before the law goes finally into effect.

In the meantime, should the clergy refuse to yield, a ministerial declaration will be issued, indicating clearly the intention of the cabinet to ask parliament for special legislation to meet the situation. The nature of the measures contemplated, however, will not be disclosed, although it is announced that they have been agreed upon.

Some of the newspapers declare that the council of state, after consideration of the question of what constitutes a legal association under the law, is prepared to render a decision that only associations formed with the consent of the former church wardens and parish priests are legally entitled to take over church property; those formed by outsiders having no previous connection with the church wardens or parish priests being irregular. If this proves correct, the decision will give an impetus to schisms, as of all the associations thus far constituted, but two have the concurrence of both the parish priests and church wardens, and these have been formally interdicted by the bishops.

HIGH HONORS TO AMERICAN

Washington, Oct. 26.—With pomp and ceremony probably surpassing that ever before connected with an American mission, Minister Gummere last month presented to the sultan of Morocco a personal letter from President Roosevelt. His account of the mission received today shows that his party numbered nearly 300 and nearly 100 draft animals.

The march from Tangier to Fez was made a triumphal procession, the way being led by a mounted bearer of the sultan's flags with a guard on either side. At the border of each district the caravan was received with salutes and military honors by the native chiefs. The journey occupied twelve days.

Minister Gummere says he was received by the sultan with the most agreeable cordiality and the regular court etiquette was relaxed to accommodate him in several important instances.

SUES ROAD FOR LOSSES

Rank Discrimination to Rivals in Shipping is Charged.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 26.—The Agar Packing company of Des Moines, asserting that is rivals were given a free haul to Des Moines of hogs destined for Chicago, yesterday filed a sensational suit against the Rock Island railway for $450,000 damages.

In the petition it is asserted that from May, 1901, to July 7, 1906, the Agar company brought 7,736 cars of hogs into Iowa on the Rock Island lines, for which it paid $116,943 in freight to Des Moines. In the same period, it is alleged, J. S. Compton, Frank Dodson and Compton & McRae, by a secret agreement with the Rock Island traffic officials, shipped hogs from Central Iowa to Des Moines without freight charges, on the understanding that the hogs were to be re-shipped over the Rock Island to points East.

The Agar company makes the claim that it was unable to buy hogs under such conditions, and that its business suffered in consequence to the extent of $450,000. It is further alleged that Compton acted as the agent of John P. Squires & Co., which it is said, is a subsidiary corporation of Swift & Co.

CLOSE CALL FOR SCORES

Hundred People Shaken Up But No One is Injured.

Slippery Rails Blamed for Failure of the Air Brakes.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—One hundred passengers had the narrowest of escapes from serious injury or death, when the Northern Pacific passenger train leaving White Bear at 7:20 o'clock today ran into a freight train at Gladstone crossing.

The engine of the passenger train was overturned and ditched and practically demolished. Engineer Brown and Fireman Haas jumped and escaped injury. The passengers were all shaken up, but none were injured.

The passenger train was eight minutes late in leaving White Bear and was traveling at good speed to make up lost time. At Gladstone a freight train that had left White Bear at 7 o'clock was backing onto a side track when the passenger train came up and half the freight train was on the main track and the rest on the side track.

Two cars of freight, loaded with wood, were smashed up and the passenger engine was deflected into the ditch.

The accident was due to the fact that the air brakes on the passenger train did not work on the slippery rails, but the train was moving slowly at the time and this saved many persons from injury or death.

Another train was sent out from St. Paul to bring in the passengers, who reached this city at 9:30 o'clock. Conductor Collinson, of the passenger train, was thrown to the floor of the car he was in, and sustained slight bruises.

In national politics, Kinkade is a Republican.

JAP SEEKS COURT AID

San Francisco School Board Cited Before Federal Judge.

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—Judge Wolverton of the United States circuit court, yesterday, issued an order to the board of education of San Francisco, citing that body to show cause, Nov. 5, why an injunction compelling the reinstatement of I. Yasuhara, a Japanese pupil recently excluded from the Pacific Heights grammar school, should not be issued.

This order was issued, following an application for an injunction, presented to the judge with the intention of making this a test case. The application was made on the grounds that the present resolution of the board of education, excluding Japanese pupils from the city schools, was in violation of the constitution of the United States, and of a treaty now existing between the United States and the empire of Japan.

A mass meeting, held here by the Japanese, last evening, discussed the present situation regarding these children's exclusion, and expressed much indignation.

Cable messages from Japan report that the people of that country are inclined to attribute the exclusion to American labor unions, and are not becoming excited over the matter.

Special Prober Heney Dismissed by Temporary Successor.

Grand Jury Action Will be Pressed, Despite Schemers.

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—In order to check, if possible, the investigation into the charges of gross grafting by politicians, Acting Mayor Gallagher suspended District Attorney Langdon from office yesterday afternoon, and the board of supervisors approved his action. Langdon was notified to appear before the board next Tuesday and show cause why he should not be removed.

The board then appointed Abraham Ruef, acting district attorney, and he removed Special Investigator Heney.

The suspension of Langdon follows his appointment of Francis J. Heney, of Oregon land frauds prosecution fame, as assistant district attorney for the purpose of securing indictments of officials alleged to be guilty of grafting and malfeasance. It has been openly announced that Heney and Secret Service Burns, have been investigating matters with which Mayor Schmitz, Acting Mayor Gallagher, Abraham Ruef, and the board of supervisors were connected. Langdon is the Independence league candidate for governor.

"The course of Acting Mayor Gallagher and the board of supervisors in suspending District Attorney Langdon from office and appointing Abraham Ruef, acting district attorney, followed by Ruef's removal of myself as assistant district attorney, is not only illegal, but is revolutionary in character," said Mr. Heney last night.

"The only purpose of Langdon's suspension on trumped up charges, ridiculously and notoriously false, is to bring to a halt the proceedings now under way in Judge Graham's court, to impanel a new grand jury before which District Attorney Langdon, assisted by myself, propose to present evidence, which, in my opinion, will justify the indictment of leading officials of the city administration and Abraham Ruef. I have the evidence to prove these allegations and at the proper time and place as the law prescribes, District Attorney Langdon and myself as his assistant, will lay it before the new grand jury. It is to prevent such exposure that this utterly illegal step has been taken."

SEARCH FOR FIRE DEAD

Eight Still Missing in Kansas City, Kan., Conflagration.

Story of Hero Who Gave His Life to Save a Woman.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 26.—A systematic search for victims was begun today in the ruins of the Chamber of Commerce building, in Kansas City, Kas., destroyed by fire yesterday. First the walls were pulled down, and then a large force of men were put to work to remove the debris. Eight persons were still unaccounted for this morning, and only one body has been recovered. At the hospitals two of the injured were in a serious condition, but it is believed all the others will recover.

Four bodies were removed this morning from the ruins, and though badly charred, were identified as:

EDWARD WINSLOW, aged 42 years, city solicitor for Nelson, Morris Packing company.

MRS. EDWARD WINSLOW, his wife.

MABEL WINSLOW, aged 9.

MAY WINSLOW, aged 5.

A railroad man, standing near the burning building, heard a man in a second story window giving the Brotherhood of Railway Firemen's distress signal. Finding a rope, he threw it to his brother fireman, who, instead of saving himself, passed it to a woman in the window above him. The woman saved herself, but the man was lost. His name is not known.

The loss of life is attributed in part to the lack of fire fighting apparatus, and a movement has been begun through the city council to remedy the defect as soon as possible.

Three 10-per-cent-a-month money lenders, who had offices in the destroyed building, lost much of their paper, including hundreds of dollars' worth of notes. One money lender had placed his possessions in the building vault, which is buried beneath tons of wreckage.

TWO SHOT BY ODD PROWLER

Mysterious Man Found Loitering at House Makes Fight.

Fremont, Ohio, Oct. 26.—As a result of a running fight with a mysterious man, last night, Louis Johnson of this city is suffering from a bullet wound in the leg, and Frank Keeler may die from the effects of a wound in the groin.

The mysterious man had been seen repeatedly loitering around the house of Johnson and his brother-in-law, John Weber, who lives next door. Last night Keeler, who lives at the Weber home, saw the man peering through Johnson's window, and went to the Johnson home and informed the latter.

The two started after the man, who drew a revolver and fired. One of the bullets struck Keeler in the left side, just below the kidney, and the other passed through Johnson's leg. Both men continued the chase, until they fell exhausted from loss of blood, and their assailant escaped.

BOLD ROBBER A SHOEMAKER

Bogus German Army Officer Who Looted Town, is Caught.

Berlin, Oct. 26.—The pretended captain of grenadiers of the guard who, on Oct. 16, forged an order to lead a detachment of twelve men from this city to Coepenick, arrested the burgomaster and the treasurer and took possession of the cash, amounting to about $1,000, turns out to be a shoemaker of Tilsit, named William Voigt. He was arrested today by four commissaries of police, at his lodging place, in a quiet, respectable quarter of Berlin. Although working at the trade of shoemaker, he has committed a long series of felonies, principally robberies, by means of forged documents. He has served five terms in prison, finishing a fifteen-years' sentence in February, and is nearly 60 years old.

MOORS WORRY DIPLOMATISTS

Tangier Morocco, Oct. 26.—Owing to the disturbed state of the country, American Minister Gummere and Dr. Rosen, the German minister, are remaining at Fez. The Moorish officials in answer to French representations regarding the disquieting situation declare their ignorance of many facts called to their attention, and deny responsibility for others.

Some of the foreign diplomats are demanding the dismissal of Mohammed El Torres, the representative of the sultan here, on the ground that he is old, incapable and fanatical. The situation in Morocco City continues critical.

Ion Heinrich, a German merchant, who was captured by Moorish horsemen, near Rabat, has been rescued by his personal guard.

Paris, Oct. 26.—In view of the situation in Morocco, the French government has decided to send a warship to Tangier, while Spain will hold several vessels for emergencies.

BIG STRIKE IN RUSSIA

St Petersburg, Oct. 25—Premier Stolypin has received a telegram from Gen. Kaulbars, governor general of Odessa, reporting that an extended strike broke out in Southern Russia yesterday at noon, over 10,000 workmen in the railroad shops at Yekaterinoslav, Briensk and Dnieprovsk, quitting work and raising the black flag.

Lieut. Romovaloff, an artillery officer, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment at hard labor for having bombs in his possession.

A man named Sprongge, once a prominent revolutionary leader in the Baltic provinces, was killed at Mitau yesterday, while on his way to America, because he had betrayed his party. He has just recovered from a wound inflicted by revolutionists.

FUGITIVE NOT ON BOAT.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—In the hopes of capturing Leonard Leopold, wanted in connection with the murder of Mrs. Leslie, the actress, in a hotel here, a squad of detectives met the passenger boat, City of Chicago, when it arrived early today from St. Joseph, Mich., a message having been received from the police of St. Joseph that Leopold had boarded the boat at that point last night. No trace of him could, however, be found.

PUSH FIGHT ON CHURCH

Schisms in Parishes May Result From Stern Ruling.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The cabinet has reached a decision regarding the application of the law providing for the separation of church and state, by which the property and revenues of the churches, in the event of the clergy persisting in their present rebellious attitude, will be sequestrated Dec. 11, but the churches themselves will remain open for public worship, under the law of assembly of 1881, during the ensuing year, before the law goes finally into effect.

In the meantime, should the clergy refuse to yield, a ministerial declaration will be issued, indicating clearly the intention of the cabinet to ask parliament for special legislation to meet the situation. The nature of the measures contemplated, however, will not be disclosed, although it is announced that they have been agreed upon.

Some of the newspapers declare that the council of state, after consideration of the question of what constitutes a legal association under the law, is prepared to render a decision that only associations formed with the consent of the former church wardens and parish priests are legally entitled to take over church property; those formed by outsiders having no previous connection with the church wardens or parish priests being irregular. If this proves correct, the decision will give an impetus to schisms, as of all the associations thus far constituted, but two have the concurrence of both the parish priests and church wardens, and these have been formally interdicted by the bishops.

HIGH HONORS TO AMERICAN

Washington, Oct. 26.—With pomp and ceremony probably surpassing that ever before connected with an American mission, Minister Gummere last month presented to the sultan of Morocco a personal letter from President Roosevelt. His account of the mission received today shows that his party numbered nearly 300 and nearly 100 draft animals.

The march from Tangier to Fez was made a triumphal procession, the way being led by a mounted bearer of the sultan's flags with a guard on either side. At the border of each district the caravan was received with salutes and military honors by the native chiefs. The journey occupied twelve days.

Minister Gummere says he was received by the sultan with the most agreeable cordiality and the regular court etiquette was relaxed to accommodate him in several important instances.

SUES ROAD FOR LOSSES

Rank Discrimination to Rivals in Shipping is Charged.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 26.—The Agar Packing company of Des Moines, asserting that is rivals were given a free haul to Des Moines of hogs destined for Chicago, yesterday filed a sensational suit against the Rock Island railway for $450,000 damages.

In the petition it is asserted that from May, 1901, to July 7, 1906, the Agar company brought 7,736 cars of hogs into Iowa on the Rock Island lines, for which it paid $116,943 in freight to Des Moines. In the same period, it is alleged, J. S. Compton, Frank Dodson and Compton & McRae, by a secret agreement with the Rock Island traffic officials, shipped hogs from Central Iowa to Des Moines without freight charges, on the understanding that the hogs were to be re-shipped over the Rock Island to points East.

The Agar company makes the claim that it was unable to buy hogs under such conditions, and that its business suffered in consequence to the extent of $450,000. It is further alleged that Compton acted as the agent of John P. Squires & Co., which it is said, is a subsidiary corporation of Swift & Co.

CLOSE CALL FOR SCORES

Slippery Rails Blamed for Failure of the Air Brakes.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—One hundred passengers had the narrowest of escapes from serious injury or death, when the Northern Pacific passenger train leaving White Bear at 7:20 o'clock today ran into a freight train at Gladstone crossing.

The engine of the passenger train was overturned and ditched and practically demolished. Engineer Brown and Fireman Haas jumped and escaped injury. The passengers were all shaken up, but none were injured.

The passenger train was eight minutes late in leaving White Bear and was traveling at good speed to make up lost time. At Gladstone a freight train that had left White Bear at 7 o'clock, was backing onto a side track when the passenger train came up and half the freight train was on the main track and the rest on the side track.

Two cars of freight, loaded with wood, were smashed up and the passenger engine was deflected into the ditch.

The accident was due to the fact that the air brakes on the passenger train did not work on the slippery rails, but the train was moving slowly at the time and this saved many persons from injury or death.

Another train was sent out from St. Paul to bring in the passengers, who reached this city at 9:30 o'clock. Conductor Collinson, of the passenger train, was thrown to the floor of the car he was in, and sustained slight bruises.

JAP SEEKS COURT AID

San Francisco School Board Cited Before Federal Judge.

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—Judge Wolverton of the United States circuit court, yesterday, issued an order to the board of education of San Francisco, citing that body to show cause, Nov. 5, why an injunction compelling the reinstatement of I. Yasuhara, a Japanese pupil recently excluded from the Pacific Heights grammar school, should not be issued.

This order was issued, following an application for an injunction, presented to the judge with the intention of making this a test case. The application was made on the grounds that the present resolution of the board of education, excluding Japanese pupils from the city schools, was in violation of the constitution of the United States, and of a treaty now existing between the United States and the empire of Japan.

A mass meeting, held here by the Japanese, last evening, discussed the present situation regarding these children's exclusion, and expressed much indignation.

Cable messages from Japan report that the people of that country are inclined to attribute the exclusion to American labor unions, and are not becoming excited over the matter.

BUY LARGE COAL FIELD

A. M. Chisholm and John Williams Interested in Big Deal.

Property They Get Comprises 355,000 Acres in Eastern Kentucky.

An Associated Press dispatch from Parkersburg, W. Va., last evening states that A. M. Chisholm and John G. Williams of Duluth, and associates, have purchased an immense tract of coal lands in Kentucky from the Northern Coal & Coke company, the consideration running up into the millions.

Neither Mr. Chisholm nor Mr. Williams can be seen in connection with this report, as they are both in the East on business. Information relative to the reported deal seems to be lacking among other large mining interests here that might be supposed to be associated with Messrs. Chisholm and Williams. The dispatch follows:

'Ex-United States Senator J. N. Camden of this city arrived here tonight from Chicago, where he attended a meeting on Tuesday of stockholders and directors of the Northern Coal & Coke company of Eastern Kentucky, of which he is president, and gave out information that action was taken disposing of the company's property, comprising 355,000 acres of coal land in the famous Elkhorn coal fields of Eastern Kentucky to a Western syndicate, composed of A. M. Chisholm and John G. Williams, wealthy iron ore operators of Duluth, and associates.

"Senator Camden did not disclose the price paid, but intimated that the consideration reached well into the millions."

JAMESON'S TALK GOOD

Gives Interesting Sermon in Second Presbyterian Church.

Rev. S. A. Jameson, pastor at large of the Duluth Presbytery, was the principal speaker at the evangelistic services held last evening at the Second Presbyterian church in the West end. His topic was, "Dangers of Delay in Religious Life."

He illustrated his theme by reciting examples of the follies of delay in business and in everything else. He deplored the fact that so many people died in sin, when heaven was before them and might have been attained had they not been thoughtless.

The meeting was opened with a song service, led by Prof. Benjamin F. Butts and the chorus choir. The congregation joined in. During the evening, Prof. Butts sang several solos. He will sing at every service this week.

At the services this evening, W. J. Lowrie, pastor of Westminster church in West Duluth, will be the principal speak.

If he can be induced to remain in Duluth until tomorrow, Dr. Zartman, general secretary of the evangelistic work of the Presbyterian church in the United States, will probably talk. Dr. Zartman is attending the session of the Duluth Presbytery this afternoon.

HEARST MEN IN A RIOT

Labor Unions Make Big Demonstration for Democrats.

New York, Oct. 26.—Several hundred men who participated in the labor union demonstration in Madison Square Garden in honor of William R. Hearst last night, attacked a banner picture of Charles E. Hughes, Republican gubernatorial nominee, and a stereopticon showing views unfavorable to Mr. Hearst, in front of the Independence Democratic Municipal Ownership league headquarters at the Hotel Bartholdi, and after a fight with four policemen especially detailed to guard the apparatus, completely wrecked the campaign exhibits and smashed a large plate-glass window of the cafe of the hotel. One policeman was badly cut, reserves were hurried to the scene and soon cleared the street. Several arrests were made. The Independence Democratic Municipal Ownership league is an organization claiming to have supported Mr. Hearst for mayor last year, but now opposed to him.

Before this, thousands of workingmen of Greater New York rallied for Hearst under the auspices of local labor unions in Madison Square Garden. Hearst addressed not only the gathering which filled the big meeting place, but made two other speeches outside to overflow meetings. A parade in four divisions helped heighten the enthusiasm for the nominee. The divisions of paraders kept step for blocks to the refrain, "Hearst, Hearst, Hearst," while red fire was burned at frequent intervals, and transparencies bearing such legends as "Labor's tribute to William R. Hearst," "Hearst has helped us; we are for him," were held aloft.

Mr. Hughes began his speechmaking at Binghamton, where he delivered two talks to large crowds and traveled thence to Ithaca, where he spoke twice last night. He was a lecturer on law at Cornell university from 1891 to 1893, and the Cornell students turned out in great numbers to hear and cheer him. The presiding officer at the Lyceum was Dean Huffcutt of the Cornell law school and legal adviser to Governor Higgins. In his speech Mr. Hughes again took up the judicial situation in New York county and denounced what he termed "A deal of the bosses to try to gain control of the bench."

Chairman Conners of the Democratic state committee said last night he thought there would be a "landslide for Mr. Hearst." The tide had turned towards the Independence league and Democratic candidate during the last forty-eight hours, he declared, and in his opinion Hearst would have a plurality of from 150,000 to 200,000 in the state. He said he had reports from twenty counties up the state which would go surely for Hearst, but he declined to specify where these counties were, on the ground that such publicity might tend to stir the Republicans to greater activity. Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, said that the reports Mr. Conners had made to him of the conditions up the state were most encouraging.

BANQUET OF Y. M. C. A. USHERS

U. H. Lippold Entertains Assistants at Association Building.

At the Y. M. C. A. building last evening, Assistant Secretary W. H. Lippold, who has charge of the religious work of the association, entertained a number of young men at a luncheon, the guests of the evening being those who will act as ushers and ticket takers at the Lyceum theater at the big meetings, which will be conducted for men every Sunday.

Mr. Lippold, who has had considerable experience in this work, explained the importance of the duties of the ushers in meetings of the kind. A. G. Strong will have entire charge of the ushering and he picked out the men who will do this work at the luncheon last evening.

The ushers will be Clem Thompson, George Wilson, W. A. Anderson, James McKay, Fred Green, M. H. Potter, Ray Kindey, John S. Fergusson, Bert Nichols, F. G. Callen, George W. Stiles, A. W. Taylor, E. W. Mirick, R. B. Kramer and Lyle S. Meader. The ticket takers will be Joseph Horak and N. E. Olson.

SHAW CLAIMS ALL BIG LAWS

Secretary Answers Bryan Assertions as to Democracy.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, was the chief speaker at a Republican rally last night in the suburb of Oak Park. He claimed that the Democratic party had no share in any of the measures passed recently for the public good, except the rate bill, and he accorded them only a small share of credit in connection with that. He spoke in part as follows:

"Col. Bryan has been most eloquent this season in claiming that the popularity of the present congress and the present administration is due to the adoption by them of Democratic policies. He has said that if the Democratic party could have secured patents upon its recommendations, the present administration would have long since been compelled to go into liquidation. As usual, the eloquent orator contents himself with rhetoric and waives proof.

"Among the many achievements of the last congress to which the Republican campaign book and the president's letter to Congressman Watson make special mention, are the pure food bill; the meat inspection bill; the denatured alcohol bill; the re-organization of the consular service; quarantine against yellow fever; the bill to safeguard naturalization of immigrants; more rigid steamboat inspection; the employers' liability act; and the limitation of immunity to witnesses in criminal cases. None of these is of Democratic origin, and none of them was ever suggested in a Democratic platform."

Mr. Shaw quoted from past Democratic and Republican platforms, to show that Republicans and not Democrats were alone responsible for railroad legislation, and closed: "The Democratic party can usually be relied upon to arrive in port in a decade or so from the time of the unloading of Republican cargoes. It also seems to enjoy macadamized roads, but as a path finder it is a complete failure."

REBURIAL FOR A TRAMP WHO WAS WORTH $10,000.

York, Pa., Oct. 26.—The body of a man, apparently an outcast and tramp, found dead of alcoholism in a country barn and interred in a pauper's grave as that of Jim Harrington, has been dug up, and will be reinterred this week in manner befitting the corpse of William H. Clark, once private secretary to ex-Senator Chandler, for it has been discovered that Harrington was really Clark. Undertaker H. A. Kendall, of Concord, N. H., made a positive identification, and he will remove the body to Concord.

"Harrington" had traveled all over the country. He was 63 years of age. Although Clark squandered most of his fortune, $10,000 is still held in trust for him. But thenceforth a great marble shaft will mark the grave where another of the Clarks reposes amid pleasant surroundings.

GIRL OF 13 MARRIES WITH FATHER'S CONSENT.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—With the consent of the bride's fiery old father, Antonio Razzano obtained a license yesterday to marry Assunto Tucci, an Italian girl, who is 13 years old.

For several months Antonio had been paying court to the child, but her father wouldn't hear of her marriage. Despite this prohibition, Razzano persuaded the child to elope with him to Washington.

They couldn't find a minister who would marry them, and they were afraid to go back and face the irate Tucci without a marriage certificate. In this predicament an uncle of the girl came to their relief.

He reasoned with Tucci and persuaded him to renounce his vow to kill Assunto and Antonio on sight.

The old man had previously been so enraged that a daughter, Josephine, had her right hand cut in an effort to take a knife away from him, but he listened to his brother's arguments and agreed to forgive the runaways.

So they came back to Philadelphia, were married, and will live with the fierce Tucci, now as docile as a lamb, at the Tucci home in Dalkeith street.

Many a man of humane impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. Overdriven, overworked, when what it needs is something that will digest the food eaten and help the stomach to recuperate. Something like Kodol For Dyspepsia that is sold by all druggists.

M. & ST. L. ROAD PUT ON GRILL

Federal Grand Jury Hears Officials of Freight Division.

Minneapolis, Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The federal grand jury, inquiring into alleged rebating by railroads centering in St. Paul and Minneapolis, had before it, yesterday afternoon, officials of the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad, and it is surmised that the freight department of that line is now being inquired into. Among the witnesses were John M. MacAuley of Minneapolis, chief clerk of the claim department; S. W. Patton, a clerk in the same department; Paul B. Seevers, general claim agent; Joseph Gaskell, secretary and assistant treasurer, and E. O. Ockhart, local freight agent.

A NEW MONTE CARLO ON THE BELGIAN COAST.

London, Oct. 26.—To create another Monte Carlo on the Belgian coast is the scheme of a group of London financiers, who have adopted the idea of the late Col. North, the "Nitrate king." The promoters command immediate capital with which they intend to lease a large area of land and to build thereon a seaside resort which shall be entirely devoted to gambling.

There is, of course, the Casino, at Ostend, not far away, but the syndicate thinks that a gambling "hell," pure and simple, on the lines of Monte Carlo, would be a success.

The profits they expect to make will be enormous, and these they will share with the Belgian government, so that no difficulties will be put in their way by official powers. King Leopold himself may take shares in the venture. He is the "man higher" who will have to be propitiated.

MACHINE IS INVENTED TO CUT TOPS OFF BEETS.

Fort Collins, Colo., Oct. 26.—One of the most expensive and difficult features of the beet raising business has been solved by S. R. Giddings and D. T. Belvins, beet farmers living seven miles east of this place.

These men have in operation on their farms a machine that chops the tops from the beets as neatly as if done by a razor.

The hand labor required to remove the beet tops is not only expensive, workmen being required to take one beet at a time and strike the top off, but carelessness in cutting off too much of the beet, while the cutting of too little was the cause of constant complaint by the factory people.

In addition to this, the fact that 75,000 acres of beets are grown in this part of the state means that labor is generally scarce when most needed.

The newly invented beet topper is drawn by two horses, and with it one man can easily cut three acres per day. The machinery is simply arranged, and successfully cuts the tops where beets are growing as much as four inches above the ground, and goes into the ground for three or more inches for beets that have been partly covered through cultivation.

It is expected that this machine will come into general use in the beet fields all over the state.

If the device proves successful it will mean that beet raising to a greater degree will become a mechanical operation and will be free from much of the drudgery now connected with it.

KING EDWARD APPROVES GERMAN WEDDING HABIT.

London Oct.. 26.—King Edward has Anglicized the German fashion of wedding rings for men. His majesty now wears a plain gold ring on the third finger of his left hand, but the amusing part of the story is how he was induced to introduce the custom.

Certain society ladies with advanced views, it is said, agreed among themselves that married men should be made to wear wedding rings, believing that members of the "deceitful" sex should be so distinguished when they became Benedicts in order to safeguard the interests of the too-trusting women.

These ladies thought the best way to bring about the reform would be to approach the king on the subject. They therefore deputed one of their number to interview his majesty and try and induce him to give it his support.

When the spokeswoman broached the subject to his majesty he listened to her very patiently, was most sympathetic and promised to consider the matter. The women are now wondering whether it is as a mere joke that the king sports a wedding ring or whether he has taken up the idea seriously. Probably the former view is correct, as King Edward has a rare sense of humor.

SOFT SOAP TOO MUCH FOR YOUNG FRESHMAN.

Atlantic City, Oct. 26.—Soft soap poked down his throat until every breath brought bubbles through his nose and mouth, Samuel Dickor, an Atlantic high school graduate, found life at Swarthmore college too strenuous after a trial of one day and is back at his home here, nursing bruises by the dozen and a painfully bruised mouth and throat as the result of a clash with "soph" hazers.

Young Dickor went to Swarthmore last week, having successfully passed his entrance examinations. He had scarcely alighted from the train when a crowd of sophomores swooped down upon him, relieved him of his baggage and began to put him through the first stunts of a first-year man.

Dickor, it is said, took the antics in good part until a young giant stuffed his mouth with soap and then made him drink water. As he sputtered and blew bubbles, the sophomores executed a war dance about him.

RAILROADS

BRANCH TO BEAR RIVER

Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake Road to Build There.

Railroad Switchmen Demand Better Pay and Shorter Hours.

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—A branch of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road is expected soon to tap the Bear river country north of Hibbing. Owing to the excellent character of the land in that region it may become a permanent fixture and bring the agricultural products of the Bear and Sturgeon river valleys to Virginia.

Travelers on the country road near Sturgeon lake may now be greeted with the unusual sound of a locomotive in the woods to the north—not running wild, but bustling along on the new logging branch. The survey line has been run across the country road just south of the big green swamp in 61-21, and in the heaviest of the Norway pine located there. The work is being rushed along and it is probable that before many days the right-of-way will be cut and graded to that point.

It is evidently the intention of the company to run this road northwest a few miles each year and it is only eight miles distant from bear river now. The settlers in that section would certainly prosper could they have the market which this road would afford, for popular and other small timber.

This road would also provide a means of shipping the immense amount of fine hay cut there every year.

INTERESTING PAPERS.

Large Attendance Expected at Meeting of Northern Railway Club.

The Northern Railway club will hold a meeting this evening at the Commercial club. Special trains will be run from Two Harbors and Proctor for the accommodation of members, and a large attendance is expected.

MORE PAY WANTED.

Switchmen Ask Railroads for Increase and Shorter Hours.

Head of the Lakes switchmen are taking part in the general movement extending over the country for a higher scale of wages and shorter hours. With Twin City men delegates from the Head of the Lakes were in conference at St. Paul with head officials of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads.

At the national meeting held recently in Chicago, it was decided that more agreeable working conditions should be asked for, and the union as a whole is now asking for better wages and shorter hours. In some of the larger cities the switchmen have notified the officials that they will strike, unless their demands are granted on a certain day. A general strike is not expected, however. It is believed some agreement will be reached whereby the trouble will be amicably adjusted.

Switchmen in charge at night at present are paid 33 cents an hour; helpers, 29 cents an hour; men in charge during the day, 30 cents and hour, and day helpers, 28 cents an hour, with a ten hour day and double time for all overtime.

The new scale provides for 42 cents an hour for men in charge at night, and 38 cents an hour for day men, helpers being raised in the same proportion. An eight-hour day also is asked for.

BALTIMORE & OHIO

Annual Report Shows Satisfactory Increase in the Earnings.

Baltimore, Oct. 26.—The eighth annual report of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company was sent to the stockholders yesterday, and in it President Oscar G. Murray significantly says that the fiscal year ended June 30 last was marked by a continuance of satisfactory business conditions throughout the country, as reflected in the company's increased earnings. The record is a good one and it was by far the best year in the history of the road. The report tells in a complete and comprehensive form just what the company did.

For the year the statement gives gross earnings over the entire system amounting to $82,508,719.28, being an increase of $9,969,273.12 over 1905 and $13,118,444.79 over 1904, each banner years in their turn; expenses, $53,341,919.43; net earnings, $29,166,799.85. This includes the operation of all controlled or affiliated lines. The Baltimore & Ohio railroad, including the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern and the controlled or affiliated lines, has a total of 4,485.71 miles.

The company ha d38,881,520.81 cash in hand and in banks June 30, 1906. The total value of the company's assets was $491,307,100.24, being an increase of $24,062,503.61.

All previous records were broken in the number of tons of freight carried over the road during the year, which aggregated 55,335,102, being an increase of 8,049,919 tons over 1905, which had the record up to that time, and 11,987,509 tons over 1904. The average earnings per ton per mile was .569 as against .568 for the preceding year. Of the total tonnage 29.77 per cent was soft coal, of which 22,066,181 tons were carried over the road. This was an increase of 1,880,667 tons in comparison with the figures of 1905. There were 5,564,696 tons of coke carried, being an increase of 1,715,361 tons; 927,421 tons of anthracite coal, a decrease of 139,889 tons, and 2,736,811 tons of ores, an increase of 402,216 tons. These products of the mines furnished 56.45 per cent of the total freight tonnage handled by the road. Other notable freight tonnage increases were in grain, 487,182 tons; in stone, sand etc., 686,506; in products of the forest, 359,021 tons; in cement, brick, lime, etc., 421,876 tons; in iron and steel products, including machinery, 1,546,007 tons. The decreases were confined to but few commodities and were of a limited character, according to the tabulated statement of commodities carried.

COAL MINES AFFECTED.

Several Are Closed on Account of the Car Shortage.

"The car shortage is felt in the coal fields of Illinois, Ohio and Iowa, even more than it is up in this part of the country," said E. E. Hickok of Chicago today. Mr. Hickok, who is a guest at the Spalding, represents the A. Leschen & Sons Rope company, manufacturers of wire rope, etc., and his duties take him into all the mining districts of the Middle West.

"The shortage is so pronounced down in Iowa that the owners have been compelled to close down their mines in several instances, and those still in operation are unable to get enough cars to haul away the product as fast as the occasion demands. The road says it is impossible to get enough cars to the mines."

FOREIGN OFFICE TURNED OVER.

STUDYING THE TRADE

Canadian Royal Commission Here to Investigate Grain Trade.

Making Exhaustive Inquiry Into Conditions in Entire Business.

W. L. McNair of Keyes, Manitoba, and G. E. Goldie of Ayr, Ontario, members of a royal commission of Canada, which is investigating the grain trade, were in the city today, looking over matters connected with the business in Duluth. Two members of the commission are not here, John Miller of Indian Head, Saskatchewan, who is chairman and J. R. Boyle of Edmonton, secretary, are not here. Accompanying the members of the commission who are here is R. C. Dunbar of the Hansard staff, house of parliament, Ottawa, who is official reporter.

Mr. Goldie stated this morning that the commission was authorized by the Dominion government to make an investigation of the grain business, being prompted to do this by the growing interest and importance of the grain growing and grain handling trade of the country. In accordance with this they are making an exhaustive inquiry into it, tracing it from the farmer to the consumer, through the elevators, at the marketing and terminal points, on the transportation lines, the method of handling in the terminal markets and on the exchanges, and in fact every phase of the business. They are carrying their investigation further than to confine it to Canada, and are making a study of methods on this side of the line to learn whether their own country has advantages or disadvantages as compared with the American system. Before they complete their work they will go to England to make a study of the export trade into which so much of the Canadian wheat enters.

The commission began its work on Aug. 23, of this year, and will be at it for several months. The members have been at Chicago recently, looking into conditions there, and from there will go to Winnipeg. Before it concludes its American investigations it will cover almost the entire West.

AFRICAN SLAVE MARKET.

Human Beings Are Bought and Sold In Morocco.

Slavery has been almost rooted out of Africa, but the Arabs remain slave traders at heart, and there is more buying and selling even in this year of grace than most people imagine.

Many of Morocco's crumbling cities owe their walls and battlements to the unremitting labor of Christian slaves. There are men still living and working who can remember the days when slaves were openly bought and sold in all Morocco's coast towns.

Thanks chiefly to the intercession of Queen Victoria this traffic was stopped in the latter part of the last century, and today the slave markets of Morocco are held either in the great capital cities or at some of the big country fairs. In Marrakesh, the Sultan's southern capital, you can count slaves by the hundred; and during the two hours of the daily sale the transactions include scores of human beings.

I may also mention a fact that is perhaps quite unknown in this country and seems to be a jealously guarded secret in Morocco, says S. L. Bensusan in the Wide World magazine. It is that there are white women slaves in several parts of the country; not Circassians, but seemingly women from Western Europe!

When the market is about to begin, a dozen men file through the entrance. They are the auctioneers, the dilals; who have been occupied with the representative of the government, giving him a list and description of all who are to be offered for sale.

This preliminary work done, they are now coming to the serious business of the afternoon. They move in line to a point where there is some shade, and then they turn toward the east, the sloping sun behind them. The chief auctioneer now offers up an opening prayer.

He praises Allah who made the world and gave the True Faith. He curses Satan who has sought vainly, but without ceasing, to destroy mankind. He praises the patron saint of the city of Marrakesh and calls upon him to intercede with Allah in order that all who buy and sell in the slave market may have health, prosperity and length in days.

Such are his appeals, delivered slowly, solemnly and with a certain measure of dignified gesture; and to one and all of them the dilals on either hand and the buyers sitting at their ease along the central arcade or by the walls respond with a pious "Amen." They hold it is no more than a seemly thing that business should commence with prayer, and the fact that the business happens to obviate the necessity.

Prayers over, the dilals break up and proceed each to his pen, or pens, to summon the occupants to range themselves in line. For a few moments the confusion is indescribable. The dilals rush hither and thither, arranging their human chattels in groups. Then, having placed themselves at the head of their respective groups, they promenade slowly around the market.

We cannot watch them all, so we select an average one containing a boy and a girl, brother and sister, who have been brought in by a caravan and are facing a slave market for the first time in their lives. Beside them are two vigorous men, two able women, two young children and a very old and very black man. There is no sign of great excitement or unrest among the slaves. Only the boy and girl who are already grown up seem to feel their position acutely.

The children are obviously unconcerned, and if they take an interest at all in the proceedings it is associated with their own bright garments, which, by the way, have been lent to them by the auctioneers in charge, in order that they may present a more attractive figure. When they have been purchased their new owners must pay for these gaudy rags or return them.

As he goes for the first and second time in a wide circle around the central arcade our auctioneer proclaims the merits of his wares in general terms, and then a purchaser demands the price of these two middle aged men, who seem to have years of considerable activity before them. The dilal pauses, and presents the two slaves, who reply to various questions that the intending purchaser puts to them.

The dilal himself talks very volubly and the result must be satisfactory, for his patron names a price, and the dilal, with a pious "Praise be to Allah, who made the world," gathers his company around him once again and moves off, proclaiming that the price of the two men is so many dollars, and urging the assembled buyers to do better still. Apparently they are not inclined to take advantage of their chances, for after the circle has been completed twice more the dilal pauses again and hands the two slaves over to their new master.

By this time he has a bid for the grown boy and girl, and summoning one of his companions to complete the negotiations and sign the papers relating to the purchase just concluded, he hurries off again, extolling the merits of the pair he hopes to sell next. In this case there is some short, sharp competition.

The price rises by five and even ten dollars at a time, and then—ominous sign—there is separate bidding for the boy and the girl, bidding that hints at separation. However, in the end, a great country kaid, who has traveled from Tarudant, secures the pair, and they pass out of the promenading circle into the care of one of his stewards—himself a slave. I watched carefully for some expression of emotion on the faces of these two young people who had been stolen and sold as though they were chattels, but it was perfectly impossible to note anything more than bewilderment.

Presently there was a sudden interruption in the market place from a little group in front of me. Here we saw the one dramatic incident of the afternoon. Since the market opened a woman, who was approaching the middle age, had been tramping round and round without interesting the buyers. Now at last there had been some small bid for her.

It had been accompanied by the usual queries that all buyers make. There had been no hesitation about reply, but at the very last moment, when the sale was completed, the woman raised her voice and cried aloud that she was of the true faith and had been stolen.

Instantly there was an outcry, and the concern of the auctioneer was very genuine indeed. If the woman's protest was correct, and she would have hardly made it otherwise, here was a scandal of some dimensions, for it is no small matter, even in Morocco, to sell a free Moslem woman into slavery.

After her story had been heard, the sale of the woman was held to be invalid. Notice was sent to her owner, and by the time this little matter was settled the muezin was calling from the nearest minaret that the hour of evening prayer had come.

ABSENT MINDED.

Chicago Inter Ocean: An absent minded woman one Sunday morning walked into church, took a front seat and joined in the service vigorously. Then the collection basket was passed to her, and, putting a coin into it, she looked about.

She cast glances in every direction, her mind cleared and an expression of amazement overspread her face. She got up. She hurried down the aisle. She overlook the man with the collection basket. "I'm in the wrong church," she whispered, and taking out the coin she had put in she hurried forth.

We have yet to hear that it does not fit.

Smokers of clear Havanas of the highest grade will find this size in this famous brand an ideal cigar. It is beautifully modelled, and as skilfully made as a cigar can be, coming from the hands of Cuban workmen in the best of the Tampa factories. No tobacco ever gets into the HAVANA-AMERICAN brand that does not grow on the Vuelta Abajo plantations of Cuba and from the precious crops of that district is the very pick of the bales. At our price the HAVANA-AMERICAN Universal is a matchless value. The HAVANA-AMERICAN brand is made in a dozen popular sizes, ranging in price from the dainty Matinee size, at 25 cents for a package of ten, to the generous Perfecto at 3 for 50 cents.

WILL TALK FOR Y. M. C. A.

Dr. Sears of Chicago Will be the Speaker Sunday.

Delivers Address at First Meeting of Season at Lyceum.

The first of the big meetings for men under the auspices of the Duluth Young Men's Christian association to be held this season in the Lyceum theater, will be addressed Sunday afternoon by Dr. H. W. Sears of Decatur, Ill., upon the subject, "Brotherhood of Men." There have been three of these meetings so far this fall but they have all been held in the First Methodist church and the one Sunday is expected to be the best attended of them all.

Dr. Sears' subject has been chosen from a number of lectures which he has given and it is known to be especially interesting and instructive. Dr. Sears is a man who has found his mission in the world and is said to be one of the greatest entertainers on the lecture platform in the whole country. With his word pictures, sound logic and true philosophy, which are embodied in all his lectures, he is able to make men think and to keep them thinking long after he has finished talking.

Dr. Sears has lectured in many of the middle and Western states, and has always been well received. In the states of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, during the month of April, 1905, he received ten consecutive return dates as a result of twelve dates filled in the month of February.

Leading lecturers of the country who have heard Dr. Sears praise him highly as being a great man on the platform, as well as in the general walks of life. Col. George W. Bain says that Dr. Sears seems to have a remedy for every human fault with a medicine as palatable as ever a mortal swallowed. Dr. Sears is highly commended by Capt. Richond P. Hobson, who says that as a humorist he has no superior.

W. H. Lippold, who is in charge of the religious department of the local Y. M. C. A., has been in communication with Dr. Sears and has given him the situation in Duluth just as it is. In reply Dr. Sears expressed great interest in the work here and especially in the work being done for the young men and boys.

Aside from Dr. Sears address, there will be special music at the meeting, consisting of an orchestra concert and several selections by a male quartet composed of Messrs. Maxwell, Fenstermacher, Hancock and Dorwarth.

The doors of the theater will open at 3 o'clock, there will be orchestra music at 3:15 and the meeting will begin at 3:30 sharp. Admission will be by ticket only and this rule will be strictly enforced from this time on. Tickets can be obtained free at the Y. M. C. A. headquarters, Smith & Smith's drug store or at the Lyceum box office Sunday afternoon.

No boys will be allowed to enter the meeting as special meetings are held for them at the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A.

Two weeks from Sunday, Dr. Cyrus Northrop, president of the state university, will be in Duluth to address the young men and on that occasion the Y. M. C. A. looks for a crowded house. Other speakers who have been added to the list of those who will speak in Duluth this season are Dr. John A. Earle of Chicago, Judge W. S. Kenyon of Iowa, and Miss Eva Marshall Shontz of Chicago. These three will all be heard during the month of December.

Commerce Commission Decides Papers Must Pay Cash to Roads.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Under a ruling of the interstate commerce commission, transportation over railroad lines no longer may be given to newspaper publishers or editors in exchange for advertising space, but must be paid for in money. This decision was rendered in answer to a protest from the Massachusetts Press assaciation through William J. Hefferman, its secretary, in which he said "that the payment for railroad transportation at full rates in advertising shall be treated on any other basis than that of transportation paid for in cash."

"The right," says Commissioner Knapp, "to travel or have property carried by rail, like the right to the common highways, is not a contract right, but a political right, the very essence of which is equality. Conceding that the advertising arrangements in question are ordinarily made and carried out in good faith, it seems plain to me that these arrangements must as a practical matter involve some measure of discrimination and it is not easy for me to see how an honest newspaper can seriously object to a ruling of the commission which appears to be in obvious accord with the provisions and the purposes of the regulating statute."

BIG SHIPS THE ORDER

Probable Construction of 20,000-Ton Vessel Will be Authorized.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The coming short session is expected to see something like a definite settlement of the big battleship problem which has been harassing the naval experts for months. Last session the advocates of the great navy and the huge battleships were defeated to the extent that no appropriation or authorization was made for the American Dreadnought. Advocates of a conservative naval policy prevented this, but congress did not provide for the preparation of plans for a vessel intended to outstrip any war craft on the seas or under construction. The construction bureau has been busy for months in the preparation of plans and will have them ready for submission to congress when it meets in December. Then will arise the question whether congress is to commit itself to the big battleship policy and to authorize construction of a 20,000-ton leviathan calculated to overshadow any man-of-war afloat.

It is expected the whole naval policy of the country will be threshed out once more when this question arises before congress. There will be strong opposition to entering on the plan of building war vessels of the Dreadnought size. It is pretty well understood that if the construction of the big battleship is entered upon, the advocates of the greater navy will not be satisfied with one such fighting monster. It will be urged on congress that one great battleship alone fails to meet the requirements of the most effective formation of squadrons, which call for a grouping of vessels of about equal fighting capacity. This means an expensive naval building program, and consequently there will be strong opposition from a considerable element in congress on the score of economy. Already the naval experts are talking about the construction of four vessels of the 20,000-ton class, thus making possible a formidable squadron of Dreadnoughts. Of course, the expense of a quartet of such powerful sea fighters would be enormous and would approximate $40,000,000. More than this, once the navy begins building big battleships, the tendency will be eventually to build all battleships of the larger class.

All the indications now, however, are that President Roosevelt and the believers in the big battleships will have their way and that congress will authorize a 20,000 ton vessel constructed. The supporters of such a program think their cause is a good deal stronger than it was last winter. In the first place, the cry for economy on the part of the house does not seem likely to be so insistent. There will be no election immediately coming on. Then, too, it will be effectively urged that Great Britain has committed herself to the big battleship, and that her naval experts are evidently convinced the vessel of heavy displacement equipped with guns of the heaviest calibre is to be the reliance of the navies engaging in future wars. It can be urged, too, that Germany, Japan and Italy are giving more and more attention to the monster battleship. It was only recently that the foremost naval constructor of Italy was exploited as the advocate of a battleship far in advance of the Dreadnought in fighting power. Aside from the examples set by the naval programs of England and other foreign nations, something was done to advance the cause of the greater navy when the president reviewed Admiral Evan's magnificent fleet of warships at Oyster Bay this fall. The sudden need of a large force of vessels in Cuba called attention, too, to the advantages of having a powerful sea force where it could be put into immediate active service in case of need.

There is every reason to believe that the navy department will make a report to congress in favor of plans calling for a warship far more formidable than the Dreadnought. The Dreadnought has a displacement of 17,900 tons, with a primary battery of ten 12-inch guns, the remaining guns being of light calibre. Its speed is about twenty-one knots an hour. The displacement of the vessel for which the naval constructors are making plans, will be 20,000 tons, its speed will be quite as high as that of the Dreadnought and its primary battery will be in all probability more powerful and so arranged as to give it a greater broadside power. Indications now are that the plans will call for a vessel equipped with turbines. Nearly a year ago, the naval experts opposed turbines for the proposed big battleship, but the constructors have been learning more of the turbine equipment of the Dreadnought and they have come to look favorably on the use of turbines instead of reciprocating engines.

As the general board of the navy is understood to have reported to Secretary Bonaparte in its annual report for this year in favor of the great battleship, Mr. Bonaparte is expected to favor that type in his report. That the president favors building an American Dreadnought is well understood. There is little doubt the naval constructors will put into the hands of congress plans for a floating fortress that will not only call for a vessel much superior to the Dreadnought, but which is an expression of all the most advanced and experienced ideas of modern naval warfare as to displacement, speed, battery power, battery arrangement and the like. The merits of the plans will doubtless contribute not a little to gaining support in congress for authorization and money to build the most powerful warship the world has even seen, a vessel much more able to cope with the British Dreadnought or either of the three powerful armored cruisers of 17,250 tons each which the British government is building.

MARRIAGES NOT LEGAL

A St. Louis County Notary Public Exceeds His Authority.

Double Wedding Was Illegal and Couples Had to Remarry.

If one were to make a search of the old records that are filed away in the vaults at the county courthouse, he would find, no doubt, among the musty and uninteresting archives, many things of interest. In fact, such features have from time to time cropped out concerning the records filed away, and not so very ancient. There are probably few people outside of official circles who are aware that a notary public in St. Louis county, within the past year, assumed duties not accredited to him by the state law and performed the ceremony at a double wedding in one of the new towns on the range.

The ceremony occurred in a family where two sisters were joined in wedlock to young men of their choice, but the knot tied was so faulty that it came very near causing legal trouble for the officious notary.

The marriage license records of last year, which are now filed away in the vaults under the county jail, give a complete official history of the whole transaction, but there are probably chapters of inside history in which the parties themselves figured that do not appear on the records and nobody but themselves will ever know.

The records show that some time last spring a deputy clerk of the district court with an office on the range, issued marriage licenses to two young men to wed sisters in a family in an adjoining town. The returns made to that deputy clerk show that a newly appointed notary public, taking to himself the functions of a regularly ordained minister of the gospel or magistrate, married the two couples and certified the ceremony back to the deputy clerk of court.

That official, astounded and puzzled as to what to do in the matter, finally forwarded the papers to the clerk of the district court here and he in turn brought the matter to the attention of the county attorney. The brief memorandum, "No good," in the county attorney's handwriting on the backs of the marriage returns shows plainly enough what that official thought about it.

Attached to the other papers is a communication from the county attorney to the deputy clerk of the district court in which an opinion is expressed in decided terms that the marriages were void and that the best thing the parties to the ceremony could do was to secure new licenses and be remarried by a legally authorized person.

Although the records do not show it, it is said that another communication was addressed by the county attorney to the offending notary, in which the latter was "read the riot act" and given to understand that if he ever made such a blunder again there would be a grand jury investigation that would cause him to worry.

Later records show that the second licenses were procured and that the parties, anxious to have the knot tied hard and fast, had the second ceremony performed by the judge of the municipal court in a prominent range town.

HOUSEKEEPING IN LAND OF MANANA

American Woman's Experience—Butter, Fresh of This Year.

Taxco, Mex., Oct. 26.—If the American women who complain of the trials and tribulations of housekeeping in the United States could live in Mexico a while, they would complain no more.

This is a very old Spanish town, tucked up against the side of a huge mountain. The wonderfully beautiful, ever changing colors of the sky, the resplendent verdure of the towering mountains, the red tile roofed, pink, white and blue houses are equally fascinating with the quaint picturesque old churches, with their ever clanging bells.

And these Mexicans certainly do revel in the ear-splitting din of bells. In this town of 5,000 persons there are some thirty bells, and when they are all going, with echoes sounding from the mountains, one wants to run and hide.

In the early days of my sojourn here I was hailed by a man with a basket strapped to his back:

"Do you wish some nice butter?"

"Is it fresh?" I asked, and he replied in all earnestness:

"Si, senora, it is of this year."

And that was in November.

My washerwoman uses very strong soap and rubs the clothes on large, flat stones at the public fountain. The combined soft water and strong sun renders all clothes most beautifully white, colored garments as well as white ones. One may arrive with colors quite bright, but one remains all clothed in white.

We boil, then filter, our drinking water. Pending the arrival of a regular filter, we procured a sugar mold, such as the large cones of sugar are molded in, at the haciendas. It is a large, hollow, cone-shaped clay affair through which water will percolate, and we placed it on a frame in the hallway, where the draught would keep it cool.

After having boiled and cooled some water, I filled the cone, and, after due time, I asked our maid to bring some filtered water. She vanished, soon to appear with a pitcher of dark, oozy water. I exclaimed:

"Why, what ails the water; is it from the filter?"

"Si, si, I dipped it right out of the cone, and that cone leaks water all day long, senora, causing me much bother to be emptying the pitcher and filling the cone."

But then they do most things backward here. When they wish to beckon one to come, they motion one away.

The natives bring to our doors freshly laid eggs, still warm, one at a time, at 3 cents apiece. Of course these are values in Mexican currency, which is worth half as much as ours. Live chickens are brought also, for 25 cents. All of the fruit and vegetables are cheap and plentiful the year round in this locality; figs, dates and peanuts, also.

But our greatest problem is the meat. As we get no ice, we must eat freshly slaughtered meat. This is tough, but cheap. Any part of a beef costs twenty cents a pound, and we don't get steaks and roasts, but any part the butcher is down to when we arrive.

Our milk is brought in an earthen jar, right from the cow, and, in spite of the presence of a stray spider or straw or two, is good milk.

LORD ROSEBERY TAKES ISSUE

With President Roosevelt on the Simplified Spelling Fad.

London, Oct. 26.—The Earl of Rosebery was one of the principal guests at a banquet held in Hawick town hall the other night, in celebration of the jubilee of the Hawick Archaeological society, of which Dr. James A. H. Murray, the editor of the "Oxford New English Dictionary," is president, and one of the original members.

Rising at 11 o'clock to respond to the toast of "Kindred Societies," Lord Roseberry, who was received with enthusiasm, said that when he came there he knew that he should hear a great deal that would interest him. In that he had not been disappointed, but he came to hear one thing fall from Dr. Murray's lips, and that had not fallen. He wanted particularly to know—and it was worth coming some sixty miles in a motor car at the legal rate of speed—and under all the moral and legal obligations laid down in an Act of Parliament to hear it—what was Dr. Murray's opinion of President Roosevelt.

Might he offer one observation with regard to the controversy, and it was this, that the blow struck at the recognized spelling of the English race was a blow struck at morality itself. As a well known statesman said on a famous occasion, he heard a smile.

But he thought he could prove his case.

Who was it, who were hampered by the laws of spelling? It was only the conscientious and the virtuous.

The unscrupulous and intrepid spelled ahead according to phonetic rules of their own and produced a result full of acceptation to themselves and sometimes understood by others. But the man of conscience puzzled over his spelling, and he was not at all sure that our archaic rules of spelling, laid down strictly as they were from tradition and as stereotyped by dictionaries, had not filled half the lunatic asylums of the country. The unscrupulous man spelled ahead, but the conscientious man pondered until his brain got addled; tried the word on paper in half a dozen different forms before he ventured to commit it to his final manuscript, and in that way his intelligence reeled.

Think of those words that were spelt "believe" and "conceive," and those analagous words—what miseries had men and women and children undergone in studying to spell those words aright! It was strictly true, as they would be told, that there was a very simple rule for spelling those words, and that they could be guided by their derivation from the Latin or the reverse. But if you know no Latin, what was the use of the rule. And so he might claim that it was the man who tried conscientiously to write those words aright, who was apt to fail, to be distressed in his conscience and to be relegated to a lunatic's scene of repose, no conscience, no vowels, spelled on without regard to correctness and preserved his intelligence, such as it was, intact, and might in the last moments of his life be honored by the homage of the president of the United States.

ARMY REFORMS IN INDIA.

Number of Commands Lessened---Power and Responsibility Centralized.

London, Oct. 26.—An important reorganization scheme, involving drastic changes in the Indian army, drawn up by Lord Kitchener, comes into force this month. The chief effects of the scheme will be the reduction of the number of generals and the centralization of power and responsibility. It has been found also that there are too many commands and commanders, and that the evil is widespread, from the chief appointments down to the minor ones. Hitherto every little civil district has had troops who were not really necessary for military requirements, and were only there to dignify the station. Many of these will now lose their garrison.

The three chief commands, the Northern, Western and Eastern, are considered to embrace too much territory, and to be unwieldy for administrative purposes. In future there will be nine commanders, with full powers, instead of three. The nine generals who will fill the new appointments are now commanders of the divisions into which the three important commands are subdivided. The three supreme generals are Sir Bindon Blood, Sir Archibald Hunter and Sir Alfred Gaselee. Sir Bindon Blood retires from the service next week under the age limit. A complete revision of the scheme of military education and training in India will be made soon. An officer who will fulfill the functions of an inspector general will visit all the stations periodically, and co-ordinate the methods of instruction, as well as keep them up to date. The general staff scheme for India is ready, but its application is delayed owing to the home plans not being sufficiently forward.

Pagosa Springs, Colo., Oct. 26.—G. C. Rose and Mrs. Winnie Wheeler, leaders of the Brotherhood of Light, a new religious order that has a home for poor children on a farm near Arbotes were arraigned before County Judge E. J. Caldwell here yesterday, on charges of manslaughter in connection with the deaths of six babies on the place. An agent of the state humane society alleges that the children were fed almost exclusively on a vegetable diet, and were practically starved to death.

NIGERIA FACES BRIGHT FUTURE, SAYS LUGARD.

London, Oct. 26.—Sir Frederick Lugard, who has resigned the post of high commissioner of Northern Nigeria, in an interview, said:

"The future of Nigeria should be a bright one. It is a country capable of wonderful development, and its commercial prospects are excellent.

"For 1,000 years the natives have grown cotton, and experts report that it would be possible to produce enough to keep the Lancashire mills going without help from America. The quality is good."

SLATES AND SPONGES PLACED UNDER A BAN.

Cleveland, Oct. 26.—The use of slates and sponges in the primary grades of the public schools has been forbidden by Health Officer Friedrich.

"About two years ago I forbade the use of sponges," said he; "but I learn from the district physicians that they are again used. The slate, too, is a nuisance, and it is only because of the extreme conservatism of the school board that it has not been done away with long ago."

BAD MEAT FROM ARGENTINE.

London, Oct. 26.—Replying to a question in the house of commons, President of the Local Government Board Burns said that 6 418 tons of meat seized and condemned at the Smithfield meat market, between July 19 and Sept. 13, twenty-four tons came from the United States and about 232 tons from Argentine.

LARGER ADVANCE IN ORE PRICES

Are at Highest Figures Which Have Prevailed Since 1900.

Cleveland, Oct. 26.—The Iron Trade Review says: There have been some important developments in regard to the iron ore market during the past few days. It was expected that there would be an advance of about 25 cents per ton on non-Bessemer ores and 50 cents on Bessemer ores for next year, but sales have already been made at an advance of 50 cents on non-Bessemer and 75 cents on Bessemer. These sales were made by a large independent interest which last year came into the market early and sold its ores about 25 cents less than other interests. This firm in entering the market so early this year at such stiff advances, is therefore making up for not charging quite so much last year. Although other selling interests doubt the wisdom of this heavy advance, which places prices at the highest figure which has prevailed since 1900, they will in all probability follow the precedent which has been established.

The price of ore is based on a supposititious ore containing 63 per cent metallic iron, 0.045 phosphorous and 10 per cent moisture for Bessemer ores, and 60 per cent iron and 12 per cent moisture and no phosphorus guarantee for non-Bessemer ores. The buying movement is now expected shortly. It will be exceedingly brief, amounting to little more than the apportionment of ores in accordance with applications already on file. The Bessemer supply, it is admitted, has been under option for some time.

STATE HEALTH INSPECTOR

Is Now at Virginia Looking Into the Sanitary Conditions.

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 26.—The state health officer, Dr. Bracken, has sent one of his staff to look into the sanitary conditions here. He has accompanied members of the city health board on visits to several different parts of the town.

With Alderman Mesberg he inspected the large drainage ditch in the south side addition. It is the general opinion that this ditch should be replaced by a sanitary sewer, as it is considered a menace to the public health. The mayor recently vetoed a resolution which called for plans for the sewer on the ground that it was now too late to begin the work. The state's man has not yet given out any statement as to his ideas about the ditch.

There are still many cases of typhoid in the city, and it is probable that the doctor was sent to ascertain the cause of the spread of the disease.

LUCKY FELLOW.

Falls 400 Feet Down Coal Shaft, Without Serious Injury.

New York, Oct. 26.—While hunting on a mountain side near Pottsville, Pa., Joseph Schroeder fell 400 feet into the air shaft of an abandoned coal working. A companion, William Kalback, went for help, but it was many hours before Schroeder could be brought to the surface.

Schroeder was found to be little the worse for his tumble. Though bruised from falling from ledge to ledge in his descent, not a bone was broken. He was saved by the crooked character of the shaft. Schroeder's escape is said to have been the most extraordinary in the history of the anthracite region.

GIFTS FROM MRS. SAGE.

Russel Sage's Widow Has Not Forgotten Faithful Servants.

New York, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Russell Sage has made several cash gifts to servants of the Sage household, out of the fortune of almost $100,000,000, left to her by her late husband, who did not make them any bequests.

Charles Boss, the coachman, who has served the family for forty years, received a cash present of $2,000. William Boss, his son, also received $2,000.

Three female servants of the household, all of whom have records of long service, each received $2,000, and the caretaker of the Sage downtown house on Fifth avenue was given $1,000.

Mrs. Sage is building a $4,000 cottage for Charles Boss near the stables at Cedar Cross.

SOLAR TIME GOVERNS.

Court Run by the Sun; Not by Railroad Clocks.

Austin, Texas, Oct. 26.—The state supreme court has rendered a decision that solar time and not railroad or standard time must govern legal proceedings. The case was one involving a valuable tract of land. The jury had brought in a verdict three minutes past midnight, as measured by standard time, or fifteen minutes before midnight by solar time. The trial judge held that the term of court expired at midnight, standard time, and refused to enter judgment. The supreme court ordered the entering of the verdict on the ground that solar time governs the courts.

CASH FOR BEST STUDENTS.

Financial Prizes for High Standing New Columbia Scheme.

New York, Oct. 26.—The newest educational scheme at Columbia is one of financial reward for high standing and loss on a similar scale for poor work. By the terms of a statement issued by the university, to become operative at the beginning of the next academic year, a student can win $60 or more of the university's money if he is smart. He stands to lose that and more if he isn't.

The announcement is in the academia years of 1907-08, the tuition will be paid for on the basis of $5 a point. A "point," according to the catalogue, is counted for the successful completion of work one hour a week for the half year.

The regular rate used to be $150 flat a year in the college department. This netted $999 for the course. The new plan is designed to bring in $620.

EDITOR-SLEUTH IS WARNED

Alleged Murderers of Fond du Lac Want Him to Quit Trail.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Oct. 26.—That the murderers of Policeman Prinslow are still in Fond du Lac is indicated by the warning given to a local newspaper to drop the investigation of the case. William Prinslow was murdered eight years ago by three men who escaped. The hunt was lukewarm while it lasted and was soon dropped. It was charged then that the trail was too close to some one prominent in politics or business circles or both, and that the officials were headed off.

The newspaper has taken up the case and demands that the grand jury investigate it, promising to furnish evidence which will lead to the capture of the murderers if properly handled.

The following branches have sent out new missionaries during the year: New England, 1; New York, 4; Philadelphia, 5; Cincinnati, 1; Northwestern, 2; Des Moines, 2; Minneapolis, 4; Topeka, 6; Pacific, 2.

The introduction of four young women candidates for the foreign mission field supplemented the report of the branch secretaries. NEW PAPER FOR WOODSMEN

"Lumber Jack" About to be Started at Fergus Falls.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 26.—A new paper, to be known as the Lumber Jack, is about to be established in this city in connection with the mission work that is being carried on in Northern Minnesota. The Presbyterian church here has taken a deep interest in this work, and Rev. Mr. Whittles, the local pastor, has worked with Rev. Frank Higgins, who is widely known as "the lumberjack and sky pilot," and who now has a large corps of assistants in this field of mission work. The paper is being established by Mr. Higgins, and will be edited by Rev. Mr. Whittles. It will be semi-religious in character and will be published bi-weekly. It will aim to publish news of the lumber camps and will carry on a crusade against drinking and gambling.

Mrs. Charles Wright of the town of Woodside was granted a divorce from her husband in the district court here yesterday, on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. The complaint makes some shocking allegations. Two other divorces were also granted, Lloyd Mathewson being given a decree from his wife, Annie Mathewson, and C. H. Yates securing a similar decree in a suit against his wife, Lettice Yates, both granted on the ground of desertion.

Deputy Marshal Tuff, who came down from the Red Lake Indian agency, says the Indian whose throat was slashed by Big Bird it not likely to recover. Should he die, Big Bird will be indicted for murder by the November term of the federal grand jury and probably will be tried at the spring term. It is alleged this is his third offense of a similar kind.

GOOD CATCH BY SHERIFF.

When Taking Forger Home for Trial, Ran Upon Another.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Oct. 26.—Coming to the city to secure Charles Deltour, a forger, who had served his sentence in the county jail in this city and was released yesterday, Sheriff Anderson of Green county bagged another forger for whom he had been looking for some time, taking him by surprise and clamping the handcuffs on him before the man realized what had taken place.

Deltour forged checks and secured cash upon them for over $100 from the local merchants. From here he went to Green county and executed the same trick there. The local authorities secured him first, and Anderson was merely waiting for his sentence to expire before taking him for trial in Green county.

Anderson came yesterday morning. Just as he stepped out of the west door of the courthouse with his prisoner, in great haste to make his train, he ran into Charles Redden, for whom he had been searching. Before Redden could recover from the collision, Anderson had him handcuffed to Deltour and took them to the central station.

THREE STORY BUILDING

To be Erected at Eau Claire for Training School.

Eau Claire, Wis., Oct. 26.—The building committee of the county board, which has in charge the plans for a new building for the county training school, yesterday decided on a three-story building. The first story will contain a gymnasium, lecture room and laboratory. The second floor will contain the recitations rooms and office, and the third floor will be made into an auditorium. Letters will now be written to architects asking them to submit prices and plans. The training school was established here last year by the state, under the able management of Prof. Clark, and is proving a great success.

Eau Claire is making a strong effort to have a state normal school established here. An attempt will be made to have the state cut down the proposed $200,000 appropriation for the new normal school at La Crosse and secure a portion of that sum for a normal in this city. Eau Claire's location and beautiful environments make it an ideal place for a state school.

MACHINE SHOP DAMAGED.

Upper Part of Port Arthur Dredge Company's Building Burns.

Port Arthur, Ont., Oct. 26.—The machine shop of the Great Lakes Dredging company caught fire in the upper floor during the noon hour yesterday and spread rapidly. The first floor was saved, but the second, with the supplies for dredges and tugs and the patterns, were destroyed. Repairs will begin at once, and the shop will be repaired in about two weeks. The loss is covered by insurance.

POPE GREETS GERMANS.

Foreign Secretary and Wife and Prussian Minister Cordially Received.

Rome, Oct. 26.—The pope today received the German foreign secretary, Herr Von Tschirsky, and Frau. Von Tschirsky, and the Prussian minister to the Vatican, Baron Von Rotenham, in the papal library, the pope meeting them at the door and bidding them rise when they knelt to kiss his hand. A cordial conversation of half an hour followed. Herr Von Tschirsky conveyed to the pope Emperor William's best wishes, and the pontiff in return sent his majesty his warmest greetings.

APPEALS TO ROOSEVELT TO SETTLE RACE ISSUE.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 26.—In a toast "The President," at the annual banquet of the Alumni association of St. Mary's seminary of the West, Cincinnati, yesterday afternoon, Rev. Father Thomas V. Tobin of Chattanooga, Tenn., made an impassioned appeal that President Roosevelt do something definite, before the end of his term, to help settle the race question in the South, and stop the rioting and bloodshed which, he declared, had become menacing in recent years.

Close of Fishing Season.

Two of A. Booth & Co.'s tugs, the Emba, station at Grand Marais, Mich., and the Endress, from Whitefish Point, have pulled out their nets and gone into winter quarters. The law does not close the season on Lake Superior until Nov. 1, but the amount of fish being caught did not warrant keeping the tugs out any longer. The season at Grand Marais, as at many other fishing points, was one of the poorest in years. The Buckeye Fish company's tugs have gone to the Beaver Islands, Lake Michigan, to engage in fishing until the first of the year.

HOARDS DUMPED

Into Financiers' Hands Bring No Interest to Government.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A Washington special to the Chicago Tribune says: Secretary Shaw has "come to the relief of the street" again. Much interest is being manifested in certain quarters in these periodic relief expeditions, which are becoming so frequent that they might almost be classed as chronic.

Again and again and again the secretary of the treasury has poured his millions into the ample lap of "the street," to be deposited in national banks for "relief" without payment of a dollar of interest to the treasury.

It is quite possible that Secretary Shaw is better informed than most people and that he has yielded to the pressure for government funds only when he believed it was his duty to yield, and only when he thought he was doing something for legitimate business rather than for the stock gamblers and the check-kiters of the New York financial district.

The serious question which is being propounded is whether all these periodical relief expeditions really do any good, or whether, on the contrary, Secretary Shaw has not been engaged industriously for a number of years in pouring water into a rat hole and with the usual results.

Most people who have not studied the situation, perhaps, will be surprised to learn that the national banks of the country now hold, as loans from the United States without interest, enough money to pay all probable expenditures on the Panama canal for the next five or ten years, at least, and yet a bond issue to pay the expenses of the canal is in contemplation in face of this vast hoard of government money, which is really doing no good whatsoever to anybody except to bankers.

FAMOUS ART BIBLE,

Two Hundred Years Old, Bought by J. Pierpont Morgan.

New York, Oct. 26.—In competition with King Edward of England, who sought it as a memorial to his mother, the late Queen Victoria, J. Pierpont Morgan has secured the original Cluny Bible, in illuminated text, on parchment, the work of the Cluny monks, in France, and more than 200 years old. With it he also has obtained an illuminated copy of the original order of arrest for John Bunyan, on a charge of heresy.

The Bible was considered one of the finest works of art in France.

Mr. Morgan is said to have paid $20,000 for the Bible and manuscript. They were assessed here at $25,000, and duty placed at $4,000. Mr. Morgan's brokers paid the duty.

FREIMUTH'S

SPEECH BY BOB DUNN

In Which He Defends His Record as State Auditor.

Attacks Statements by Governor Johnson and Praises A. L. Cole.

Milaca, Minn., Oct. 26.—A good-sized audience listened last night to a speech by Robert C. Dunn, former state auditor, which while ostensibly in favor of A. L. Cole's candidacy for governor, was largely a defense of his own record and incidentally an attack on Governor Johnson, his successful opponent two years ago. Mr. Dunn said, in part:

"Two years ago John A. Johnson was elected governor of this state under false pretenses. He owed his victory in a measure to the campaign of misrepresentation and villification that was waged against me by subsidized newspapers and hireling orators. As constant dripping wears the stone, so oft repeated calumnies had their effect. But that is ancient history. It is the campaign of 1906 we have to deal with. This year Governor Johnson rests his claims for re-election on what he has accomplished as governor. Now, I have no personal ill-feeling against Mr. Johnson on account of his having defeated me two years ago. It was not the Democratic party that elected Mr. Johnson governor. It was disgruntled Republicans that made his victory possible. Under the circumstances those renegades would have supported any other candidate the Democrats might have placed in nomination.

"Mr. Johnson rests his claims for re-election on what he has accomplished for the state since he became governor in January, 1905, and those claims are based largely on alleged sins of omission and commission by myself and my successor in office, State Auditor Iverson, and for that reason I must, to a certain extent, obtrude my personality into this talk.

"Now I propose to show that there is really nothing to Mr. Johnson's pretentious claims. If he tells the truth, the State of Minnesota has been defrauded our of hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars by thieving lumber barons. Right here let me remark that Mr. Johnson is unkind and uncomplimentary to say the least, for most of these lumber barons were his ardent supporters two years ago, and, I presume, are today.

"I propose to show you by the records that Mr. Johnson, to put it mildly, has been guilty of an exaggeration.

"The state has not been robbed of its pine timber either under my administration or under that of the present state auditor. The state may recover some of the trespass suits instituted by the attorney general, but I have no hesitation in saying that in the bulk of the trespass cases referred to by the governor in his keynote speech the equities are on the side of the lumbermen.

"I charge and propose to prove to you that the state board of equalization, appointed by Governor Johnson, has been guilty of some crude work—has done a gross injustice to many small taxpayers on the ranges in St. Louis county, has shown favoritism to the jobbers of Minneapolis at the expense of the retailers and at the same time has acted without authority of law. And I will prove to you that Governor Johnson has, contrary to law, approved of the sale of a vast amount of thrifty green pine timber at an immense loss to the state. In other words, Governor Johnson has violated the law he so glibly prates of enforcing, and violated it to accommodate those rascally lumbermen! I will not make any unsupported assertions. I will give names, dates, figures and will quote from the statutes to sustain my contentions.

"In the minds of many people of the state a deep-seated prejudice exists against lumbermen, and demagogues are not slow to take advantage of this prejudice. In his speech at Red Wing, Governor Johnson made some ridiculous assertions in connection with timber trespass on state lands. He reasoned, I presume, that no matter how absurd his allegations or how pretentious his claims, owing to the feeling referred to, his every utterance on the subject would be accepted as gospel truth. I am not here to defend or apologize for any lumberman.

Mr. Dunn then proceeded to dispute Governor Johnson's statements about the amounts recovered for timber trespass and claimed there was not a single dollar paid into the state treasury for trespass committed during his (Dunn's) administration as state auditor, save $2,819. In cases of trespass now pending, Mr. Dunn asserted that not one of the lumber firms is guilty of committing wilful trespass and that the state did not lose a dollar. He denied that Governor Johnson put a stop to trespassing on state lands, but claimed that there is less trespass than formerly because there is less timber to trespass upon. He refued to give credit to the governor for increasing the valuation of iron properties, street car companies and other corporations, and insinuated a reduction was made in the assessment of the wholesalers at Minneapolis for political services to Mr. Johnson two years ago. Mr. Dunn closed with an appeal to vote for A. L. Cole on the ground that he is just, able, upright and honest.

MAKING INDIANS SKILLED WORKMEN

The Government is Improving the South Dakota "Reds."

Rapid City, S. D., Oct. 26.—Emulating the example of Booker T. Washington, the United States government, this year, begins here the experiment of teaching Indian boys manual training. It is part of the program of the government for putting the Indian to work. Very satisfactory results have been reached among even the high-spirited Sioux Indians, on the Pine Ridge reservation alone, some 1,100 Indians supporting themselves and families except during winter. But these reds perform only unskilled labor. They are in demand on the railroad extensions of South Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming, and hundreds of them have worked on government and private wagon roads, while a limited number have helped the farmers harvest their small grain and corn crops. But their wages are low.

The government has the belief that the Indian of tomorrow will be found in such professions as electrical, mechanical and mining engineering, and even in the government schools of South Dakota, among them is Supt. House of Rapid City.

To this end the government is beginning with the trades. A new industrial building has just been erected here at a cost of $8,000. In this building the boys will be given practical instruction in blacksmithing, cobbling, harnessmaking and carpentering.

The boys devote half of each day to their studies in the school room and the other half to practical work in the trades. At the Santee and Flandreau schools, also, industrial departments have been installed with promise.

The Indian boys show great interest in this work, and it is hoped it will solve the problem of breaking up reservation life and its idleness and temptations.

While the boys are being equipped to draw good wages, the Indian girls are being made into housekeepers. They are learning to sew, cook, wash, iron and clean and keep house. The Indian girls call keeping house "making it new," and their phrase is expressive of the care they usually take.

CITY MUST SHOW CAUSE

Mrs. Dodge Secures Writ of Mandamus Against Council.

Mrs. Mamie Dodge, who was refused permission by the city council to remove a small store building from lot 16, block 111 Portland, to the corner of Fifth street and Ninth avenue east, has caused to be issued a writ of mandamus, requiring the city to show cause why she should not be granted her permit. The writ was issued yesterday afternoon by Judge Ensign.

M. H. McMahon, who represents Mrs. Dodge, claims that the permit was refused because a number of residents on Ninth avenue east prefer to have a handsome flat building on the corner owned by Mrs. Dodge, rather than a small store building. It is alleged that no housemover in the city will undertake to move the structure without a permit from the council for fear of arrest.

When the request for the permit was brought before the council last Monday evening, it was turned down, there being a tie vote.

Lumber Company Appeals.

The Whiteface Lumber company has appealed to the district court from the default judgement given Laura Dion against it in the municipal court.

The action was brought to recover $246, claimed as wages due for services as cook in the camps, and judgement was rendered in that amount after failure of the company to make answer.

"I have been a sufferer of Bright's disease for about 15 years and have been growing worse and worse, until about six weeks ago I commenced taking Warner's Safe Cure, and I am now able to do my own housework. The doctor who had been attending me for several years previous told my husband that I would die within a week and that there was nothing that could restore my health, as I was in the worst stages of Bright's Disease. My husband talked with me and said he believed he knew of a remedy that might help cure me, and so he went and got a bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, and I noticed after taking one bottle a very decided change for the better. I have now taken six bottles, and can't say enough words of praise for your wonderful remedy. It is certainly the only remedy that ever helped me. YOUNG WOMAN IS KIDNAPED

Oakland Wife is Held as Captive for Three Weeks.

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 26.—Closely gaurded by a desperate man armed with a pair of revolvers, which he swore to use on the first person attempting a rescue, Mrs. Iona Herrington, the wife of T. M. Herrington, a contractor of this city, whose home is on Thirty-second street near Broadway, was kept imprisoned in a room at the Santa Fe hotel in Emeryville, for nearly three weeks.

Such is the account Mrs. Herrington, who is young and pretty, gave her husband, when he rescued her, after days of patient search, at the point of a pistol, which he fired once at the retreating form of her abductor.

Just three weeks ago, while shopping on Broadway, Mrs. Herrington was accosted, so she says, by Harry Waite, an expressman residing on Thirty-seventh street near San Pablo avenue, whom she has known for several years.

She declares that, after conversing with her for a moment, Waite placed his hand on a revolver and, after exhibiting the weapon to her, told her that if she did not accompany him without an outcry he would end her life and his own. Mrs. Herrington, too frightened to cry out, did as Waite had commanded her.

Waite first took her to a rooming house on San Pable avenue, according to her story, where for three days he kept her a close prisoner, and then took her to the Santa Fe hotel, where he kept her constantly under guard for more than three weeks, threatening to kill her if she made any attempt to escape. Several times, so she alleges, Mrs. Herrington tried to communicate with her husband, but in each instance Waite intercepted her letters.

Herrington discovered the disappearance of his wife on the evening of the day on which she met Waite when, on returning home, at 1028 Second avenue, where he was then living, he found nearly all his wife's belongings gone. He at once started to search for her.

Mrs. Herrington said that after Waite had imprisoned her in the room in the San Pablo avenue rooming house he went to her home in East Oakland, and, unlocking her door with her key, which he had taken from her, packed a part of her clothing into a telescope basket and brought it to her on his wagon. It was through this wagon which was seen by neighbors, that Herrington traced Waite to his home and later to the Santa Fe hotel.

On reaching the hotel, Herrington asked for the room occupied by Waite and knocked at the door, pistol in hand. As Waite opened the door, Herrington demanded his wife, and Waite recognizing the husband, dodged past him and ran down the stairs. As Waite fled Herrington fired at him, but the bullet failed to find its mark.

Herrington took his wife to the Vendome hotel, at Ninth and Washington street, and, as she was almost prostrated by excitement and terror, called a physician to attend her. He has not yet reported the abduction of his wife to the police, but he is now searching for Waite, whom he swears to kill on sight.

"The reason I was so afraid of Waite," says Mrs. Herrington, "was that, two years ago, while I was going with him, he repeatedly threatened to kill me, and finally fired a shot at me. I hope now that they will catch him, so that he will be forced to let me alone."

The average young woman of today is busy. Beauty is only another name for health, and it comes to 99 out of every 100 who take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

HUSBAND DECEIVED,

But Thanked His Wife Afterwards.

A man ought not to complain if his wife puts up a little job on him, when he finds out later that it was all on account of her love for him. Mighty few men would.

Sometimes a fellow gets so set in his habits that some sort of a ruse must be employed to get him to change, and if the habit, like excessive coffee drinking, is harmful, the end justifies the means—if not too severe. An Illinois woman says:

"My husband used coffee for twenty-five years, and almost every day.

"He had a sour stomach (dyspepsia) and a terrible pain across his kidneys a good deal of the time. This would often be so severe he could not straighten up. His complexion was a yellowish-brown color; the doctors said he had liver trouble.

"An awful headache would follow if he did not have his coffee at every meal, because he missed the drug.

"I tried to coax him to quit coffee, but he thought he could not do without it. Our little girl, 3 years old, sat by him at table, and used to reach over and drink coffee from papa's cup. She got like her father—her kidneys began to trouble her.

"On account of the baby, I coaxed my husband to get a package of Postum. After the first time he drank it he had a headache and wanted his coffee. We had some coffee in the house, but I hid it and made Postum as strong as I could, and he thought he was having his coffee and had no headaches.

"In one week after using Postum his color began to improve, his stomach got right, and the little girl's kidney trouble was soon all gone. My husband works hard, eats hearty and has no stomach or kidney trouble any more. After he had used Postum a month, without knowing it, I brought out the coffee. He told me to throw it away." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

PENNSYLVANIA VETERAN MAKES A CRAZY QUILT.

Cherrytree, Pa., Oct. 2.—H. B. Hawes of this city, an old veteran of 61 years of age, writes to the National Tribune that he thinks his claim to distinction beats that of the oldest, youngest or bravest soldier.

He is an invalid, unable to dress or undress himself, although he has the use of his hands. As he sits in his invalid chair, he puts in the time by doing fancy work, and has made a G. A. R. "crazy" quilt, six feet long by five wide, of six pieces, with the G. A. R. badge in the center, three feet long by sixteen inches wide. On the star are the letters, "G. A. R.," and dates, "1861-'65."

In each corner is a star, one red, one white, one blue and the other yellow. He has also used other designs, such as the rising sun, etc.

The silk is all new and the pieces are of different colored embroidery silks. There are over 50,000 different stitches in it, and all as even as if made by machinery. He is going to send it to the Indiana and Lancaster fairs.

If any other comrade has anything like this quilt he would like to hear from him.

THREE DUELISTS HURT.

Havana Fire-Eaters Play With Swords to Their Own Sorrow.

Havana, Oct. 26.—Two duels, in which three of the combatants received disabling injuries, were fought in Havana yesterday. City Councilman Ramon Mendoza, who acted as aide de camp to Gen. Leonard Wood during the first period of American intervention, and Eduardo Alonzo, an editorial writer on El Mundo, fought with broadswords, and each sustained a severe cut in the arm. Dr. Manuel Secades, a former insurgent officer, and Capt. Poey, at one time aide de camp to ex-President Palma, fought over an alleged personal insult during a political discussion. Poey was badly wounded by a sword thrust in the leg.

Pier Contract Well Under Way.

E. P. Tims of Harbor Beach, Mich., who has been in the city on business for the past few days, says that work on the pier contract, held by Hugo & Tims, is progressing rapidly. The contract calls for a $400,000 improvement at the harbor in the way of new concrete piers and runs for five years. The firm has been working on it for three years. The pleasant weather had during the past summer has permitted the contractors to push the construction with very little delay.

Each tablet is a working dose of Cascarets, which acts like Exercise on the Bowels and Liver.

It will not purge, sicken, nor upset the stomach.

Because it is not a "Bile-driver," like Salts, Sodium, Calomel, Jalap, Senna, nor Aperient Waters.

Neither is it like Castor Oil, Glycerine, or other Oily Laxatives that simply lubricate the Intestines for transit of the food stopped up in them at that particular time.

* * *

Cascarets are practically to the Bowel Muscles what a Massage and Cold Bath are to the Athletic Muscles.

They stimulate the Bowel Muscles to contract, expand, and squeeze the Digestive Juices out of food eaten.

They don't help the Bowels and Liver in such a way as to make them lean upon similar assistance for the future.

This is why, with Cascarets, the dose may be lessened each succeeding time instead of increased, as it must be with all other Cathartics and Laxatives.

* * *

If carried in your vest pocket, (or carried in My Lady's Purse,) and eaten just when you suspect you need one, you will never know a sick day from the ordinary ills of life.

Because these ills begin in the Bowels, and pave the way for all other diseases.

"Vest Pocket" box 10 cents. 787

Be sure you get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company, and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

TO BREAK UP A COLD IN 24 HOURS AND CURE ANY COUGH THAT IS CURABLE

Mix one-half ounce of the Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) with two ounces of Glycerine and half a pint of good Whisky. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

Dr. Leach, the famous throat and lung specialist, who established a camp for consumptives in the Pine Woods of Maine, and whose wonderful cures there have attracted the attention of the civilized world, declares that the above formula will strengthen weak lungs, relieve the cough, heal the bronchial tubes, and cure any case of lung trouble that is not too far advanced, providing the patient will assist by taking plenty of outdoor exercise, inhaling long deep breaths every few minutes.

It is said the mixture will break up an ordinary cold in twenty-four hours, and, being free from opiates and drugs, is far preferable for use among children to the ordinary cough mixtures.

The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost and easily prepared in your own home.

Inquiry at the prescription department of one of our leading druggists elicited the information that Virgin Oil of Pine Pure is put up only in half-ounce vials securely sealed in a round wooden case, with engraved wrapper, showing the name "Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure)" plainly printed thereon. There are many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), which are being put out under various names, such as Concentrated Oil of Pine, Pine Balsam, etc. Never accept these as a substitute for the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine, as they will invariably produce nausea, and never effect the desired results.

A local physician who is familiar with the treatment used by Dr. Leach in his camp in the Pine Woods, says it is undoubtedly the most effective known to medical science at the present time and save for the open air life in the forest would prove just as effective if used in the home. He says the formula given above is the one used by Dr. Leach and that it has the unqualified endorsement of the leading physicians of the country.

The physician added, if this formula was known and used generally by the people, throat, lung and bronchial affections would rarely reach an acute stage.

The Pure Virgin Oil of Pine is also a perfect neutralizing agent for uric acid. A few drops taken on sugar night and morning will heal and regulate the kidneys and relieve the most obstinate case of rheumatism if caused by uric acid in the system.

ROMANTIC LIFE STORY

Of Immigrant Who Accumulated $250,000 in Ten Years.

Filing of His Will in Pittsburg Reveals Unusual Facts.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 26.—Emilio B. F. Sposato, the Italian banker, who amassed a fortune estimated at over $250,000 in this city in ten years' time, had a romantic life story, which develops in the settlement of his estate. He died Sept. 4 of this year, and the filing of his will disclosed the fact that he was probably the wealthiest Italian in Pittsburg, with the exception of his father-in-law, although when he came to America, ten years ago, he had but $6,000, inherited from his father's estate, and which was remaining from the sale of his patent of nobility.

Sposato was American in his tastes and ideas, and often told his family and nearest friends that, while he was in a position to buy back this patent of nobility, which his father was compelled to mortgage because of his impoverished estates, yet he found every man equal in this country and had no use for a title. He was known as "Count," however, among his countrymen, and all of the lower classes always took off their hats to him when they met him on the street.

He was full six feet in height, with a noble bearing and distinguished appearance, a born leader of his people. Their trust in him made him a custodian of their funds, and this trust was never violated. Like his father-in-law, Frank Torchia, he was known among all Italians as a square, honest man, and when anything of a financial nature was being undertaken by others of their countrymen, the reputation of Sposato and Torchia for honesty and knowledge of affairs was such that none feared to have them handle their interests.

Sposato was born in 1867 at Nocera, Terinese, Italy, of noble parents, educated in a high-class Italian college, near Mount Vesuvius, and after graduating, took what spare money he had and disappeared from his parents' home. That was twenty years ago.

He had determined to visit America, and during his wanderings came to Pittsburg, where he accidentally me the young daughter of Frank Torchia, then a beautiful Italian girl. He left shortly afterwards and returned to his home in Italy, where he took a position as a clerk. For ten years this girl's face haunted him, and she, it seems, had been likewise impressed with the tall and handsome Italian nobleman. Sposato often said he was drawn back to America by this love affair and one week after he landed in Pittsburg he made the Italian banker's daughter, then grown to womanhood, his wife.

Sposato was employed in his father-in-law's banking house on Webster avenue, and remained in that position for four years, when six years ago he opened a banking house of his own on the opposite side of the street from Torchia's bank. He prospered from the first, and by judicious investments in property on the hill made himself considerable money. He was always on the most friendly terms with Torchia, who helped him start his business.

Five children were born to the couple, and these with his wife, inherit the estate through a will filed in the register's office by Attorney Walter J. O'Donnell, who represents the family.

Sposato always looked after the welfare of his people in this city, went to the front to help them when in trouble. When they wanted to send money back to Italy or make any other arrangements in a financial way they turned to him. He was a great church worker, belonging to the Christopher Colombo organization of the Roman Catholic church.

When he died, the Italians turned out in great numbers at his funeral, and the costly and expensive flowers sent to the family as tokens of love and affection for the man completely filled several carriages.

Hundreds of his fellow-countrymen turned out and marched with the body to its last resting place, showing in how great esteem Sposato was held.

MINNESOTA PROVES FLYER

Contract Speed Exceeded in Run in Heavy Head Seas.

Boston, Oct. 26.—The new battleship Minnesota, a product of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock company, had a successful four-hour endurance trial off the New England coast yesterday, maintaining an average speed of 18.851 knots an hour. Her contract speed is 18 knots an hour.

The trial was made under particularly adverse conditions, the big battleship plunging into a very heavy head sea all the way from Monhegan Island, off which the start was made, to the finish, some distance off Cape Anne.

The engines worked smoothly throughout the trial, developing 23,000 horsepower and the propellors maintaining an average revolution of 122.93 a minute.

SEASON AT ITS HEIGHT

Apples Are Chief Feature of Michigan Street Trade.

Butter, Egg and Cheese Prices Are Very High.

Apples are still the principal feature of the Michigan street business, and the trade is now at its height. The receipts will continue very heavy for several weeks to come. Nearly every commission firm on the street has its buyers in the South and in New York state, who purchase the output of entire orchards, and superintend the packing and shipping of the fruit. Most of the shipments from the East come by boat.

From the South will come the Ben Davis, Missouri Pippins and Winesaps. The Jonathans are also quite plentiful, and there is no finer eating apple grown than these.

The reports of storms in apple growing districts, which were received last week, have had the effect of strengthening the market, and the prices are a little firmer than they were. The apple growing districts are so extensive, however, and the crop is such a large one, that the apple buyers are moving very cautiously, and are waiting to see what the trend of prices is likely to be before plunging very extensively. This tends to prevent any sudden fluctuation in prices at this season of the year.

* * *

Next to apples, grapes probably occupy the center of the stage at the present time. Tokay grapes are now about the only fruit that is coming from California and the West. Peaches are cleaned up for the season, and the few that are left on the market, are far from being choice stock. Plums are also out of the market, and the grapes are about the only California fruit left. The supply of Tokay grapes is large and the quality is good. There are also Concord grapes on the market.

York state pears are taking the place of the Western fruit, and are being received in barrel shipments.

While the shipping season for California oranges is over, there is still a small stock of them on hand, and the Florida oranges are beginning to come in. There will be no break in the season.

Some of the finest grape fruit ever seen on the Duluth market has been received during the week. It comes from Florida.

* * *

There has been a little flurry in the potato market during the last week or ten days, and the prices are very firm. Potatoes are reported to be scarce in some sections of the country, and these districts are drawing heavily on the supplies of those regions where they are more plentiful. The result is a firm market, and the outlook is for advancing prices. There is little or no change in the prices of vegetables.

* * *

Butter and eggs are a cause of no little worry to the thrifty housewife. The market is very firm and the prices are soaring far above the usual mark, even for this time of the year. Creamery butter has been moving slowly up, advancing each week from ½ to 1 cent a pound and there seems to be no immediate prospect of it stopping. The reports are all bullish in tone and indicate a shortage in the supply of creamery butter. The stocks are apparently being held for the advance and it is hard to guess just how high the market will go before the first of the year. Creamery prints are at present selling for 27 and 28 cents on Michigan street.

The same story can be told of the egg market. Receipts have beeen running very light for the last two or three weeks, and the market has a very firm tone. Reports from the country indicate a scarcity of fresh eggs, and the outlook is for a still further advance. The prices quoted on Michigan street at present are from 23 to 24 cents.

The cheese market is keeping pace with the butter and egg markets, and the prices are very firm with a tendency toward a higher level.

RETIREMENT IS EFFECTIVE

Dr. T. H. Cleland Severs His Official Relations With Church.

Dr. Thomas H. Cleland, who has been pastor of the First Presbyterian church in this city for the past thirteen years, will officially disolve his relations with the church today, to begin his duties as field secretary for the American Tract society.

A meeting of the Duluth Presbytery was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon and the formal act then took place.

Dr. Cleland preached his farewell sermon last Sunday, having previously announced his resignation. His new duties, it is understood, will be in the nature of a rest for him and he may re-enter active ministry within a year or two.

For a time at least, Dr. Cleland will remain in Duluth, but will not make a permanent residence here, as his work will take him about the country.

CHILD'S NOTE BRINGS FATHER TO HER SIDE.

Kansas City, Oct. 26.—A childish, pathetic little note, containing between its tear-stained lines a great longing for home and its kindred comforts, sped from this city from a lonesome little 13-year-old girl to her father in St. Louis.

And the same lonesome little girl, pressing her thin, wan face eagerly against a frost-bitten window pane, cried with delight as the messenger of appeal was answered and her father bounded up the walk to take her to the home she craved.

The little girl was Emma Bowman. Twelve years ago her father and mother separated, the father divorcing the wife and taking the infant girl. Three years ago the mother, now in the lowest strata of society, stole the child and brought her to Kansas City. Here the humane agent rescued the little girl, and found her a home with a well-to-do family.

But the little heart craved home and the father it loved so dearly. The girl remembered her father's last address, and with the aid of a daughter of the family which was harboring her, wrote the pathetic appeal for her father to come and get her. The father received the letter three days after it was mailed.

FELL FROM FOURTEENTH STORY; CRAWLED BACK.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 26.—A workman fell from the fourteenth story of the new Long building the other afternoon, and was back at work in five minutes, without an injury of any kind save two blistered hands. There was nothing between him and the stone walk, 200 feet below, when he started for it headforemost, but fifteen or twenty feet down he managed to catch a rope used for hoisting purposes, turned a complete samersault while a crowd of spectators stood paralyzed with horror, slid a dozen feet further before he got the better of his momentum, and then climbed back, hand over hand, to the top of the building, picked up his trowel and resumed work.

The man was John A. Michaelson, and his family lives in Chicago. He is a bricklayer and terra-cotta worker, is 40 years old and weighs 140 pounds.

"I used to be an acrobat," said Michaelsan, "and I guess that is what saved me. It happened this way," he went on. "I was getting a piece of terra-cotta in place, when it got the better of me, and I could feel that it was about to go over the edge. It weighed 200 pounds, and the first thing I thought of was the people on the sidewalk below. I thought if the piece was to fall, the only thing for me to do was to push it far enough so it would clear the sidewalk when it struck. But I was too close to the edge myself, and when the piece went over, I followed head first.

"Scared? I didn't have time to be scared. I just grabbed. I don't know whether I even knew the rope was there. But I felt my hands strike something, grasped it as a drowning man would grasp a straw, flopped over in the air until I was right side up, and, after a short slide downward, stopped. You know I couldn't very well stay suspended there in the air, so up the rope I went, hand over hand."

HARRIMAN'S NEW MOVE.

Magnate May Give Up Pacific Roads' Presidency to Plan Big Deals.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—The report is in circulation here that E. H. Harriman is to retire from the presidency of Union and Southern Pacific railroads, and J. G. Stubbs, now traffic director of the Harriman lines, is to be made president in addition to his present position. Mr. Harriman is, however, to remain chairman of the executive committee of the system, that he can keep his hand at the helm. His reason for retiring from the presidency is said to be a desire to devote more of his time to the task which he is supposed to have undertaken of securing a line of railroads from New York to the Pacific coast, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

DROWNED IN TROUT LAKE.

Bovey, Minn., Oct. 26.—John Hansen, the caretaker at Hartley's sugar farm, on Trout lake, was drowned from a rowboat, while going home from Bovey Monday night. A hunting party is now engaged in looking for the body.

SWITCHMEN STAND PAT.

Compromise Advance of Two Cents an Hour Rejected Positively.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A compromise of 2 cents an hour increase in wages, offered by the railroads, was rejected yesterday by committees representing the switchmen's union of the entire country. The men are holding out for the original demands submitted a month ago, calling for a minimum scale of 42 cents an hour for firemen, 38 cents for helpers and eight hours. Despite the failure of negotiations, both sides expressed the belief last night that there would be no strike.

The railroad managers are in a conciliatory mood and are willing to make reasonable concessions, they say, in the way of increased wages, but they will not consider the question of reducing working hours at this time.

FRENCHMAN TAKES BABE

That Was Deserted by Mother, Though He Lives Alone.

Man Spends the Evenings Singing to the Little Fellow.

Burlington, N. J., Oct. 26.—A deep attachment for a 7-weeks-old baby boy, which was abandoned at his farmhouse three weeks ago, has caused Francis Droll, a farmer, living alone in an isolated little farmhouse, to attempt the peculiar task of caring for the child rather than lose it by turning it over to some society for the care of children.

Droll tried to place the little stranger in the almshouse, two days after it had been forsaken at his threshold by a woman who had come here from New York late in September, thinking Droll, who had been seeking a wife, would marry her.

When he learned from the poorhouse authorities that in order to leave the baby there he must relinquish all claims to it, he took the little mite from the arms of a nurse at the institution and returned to his farm.

Droll is a happy little Frenchman, about 35 years old. His little home is in a wilderness of bushes and weeds in a lonely spot, along the bank of the Assissunk creek, about a mile from the city. Here Droll has lived alone during the summer months.

His only companions have been a horse and two maltese cats.

Droll was lonely, and looked around for a companion, but without success. Then the mother and child turned up at his house. The woman remained only a short time and departed, leaving the youngster behind.

Droll never had much to do with babies and he was rather puzzled what to do. Baby settled the question by beginning to cry. He picked it up and tossed it gently as his rough, toil-worn hands would permit, until it went to sleep. Droll then laid the child on the bed, and went to consult his neighbors.

The mother had left enough clothes to dress the little fellow only scantily, but the Frenchman drove to town, and there purchased a little dress and other needed articles. There is also a little bonnet, which the foster father is carefully keeping until baby gets big enough to wear it. And then, most important of all, there was a rubber nipple. Droll fastened this on an old wine bottle which he found about the house, and baby has since been flourishing on cow's milk.

The arrival of the baby just in the harvest time, when Droll was busy with his crops, compelled him to leave the little fellow alone in the house for hours at a time. When the farmer now wishes to drive to market to be gone for several hours he trundles the baby off to bed, places a well-filled milk bottle within easy reach, and baby rests content until he returns.

Baby was safely stored away in a bed in an upper story of the house and Droll was off to market when a reporter visited the little farmhouse a few days ago. It was two or three hours before the farmer returned, and there was not a neighbor within a mile of the house.

"He's zzez znizczez zizittle fellow," said Droll, smiling, when asked about the baby upon his return from the market. He went to the house, dressed the baby, and then brought him out for the visitor's inspection. The boy has dark hair and blue eyes, and a ravenous appetite.

"He grow up and be ze big, strong man and keep me ze company," said the Frenchman, as he carried the infant back to the house and returned to the barn to finish the chores.

Droll cooks his own meals, washes and dresses the baby, feeds it and washes its clothes, besides doing his other work on the farm. He is as happy with it all, however, for he is rewarded after the day's labors are over by sitting at his fireside at night and humming in his native tongue the snatches of childhood ditties which he remembers from his youth, while the baby coos in his lap or its chubby fists revel in Droll's thick black hair or tugs at his mustache.

His only fear is to leave the baby alone in the cold during the coming winter, and he will endeavor to get some kindly woman to board and care for the little fellow during the cold months.

LUXURIOUS GAMBLING CLUB IS RAIDED BY POLICE.

Amsterdam, Oct. 26.—After repeated inroads on minor gambling dens, the police raided the luxuriously appointed Club de Biefaisance, which, under the mask of philanthropy, admits strangers to play roulette, baccarat and other forms of gambling.

All the books and gambling apparatus were seized, and players, numbering thirty, including some English and several women, were arrested.

The subsequent prosecution will be based on the allegation of membership of an illegal society, for which the maximum penalty is six months' imprisonment. It is understood that the arrested players will seek the support of their ministers against what they call the arbitrary conduct of the authorities.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Tuesday and Wednesday, Robert Edeson in "Strongheart."

COLLEGE FUN IN "STRONGHEART."

"Strongheart," the play of Columbia varsity life, in which Henry B. Harris will present Robert Edeson at the Lyceum Tuesday and Wednesday, is a four-act comedy drama by William C. de Mille, a former Columbia boy. While the dramatic interest is serious, as it concerns the problem of the educated Indian and his love for a woman not of his race, there is abundant comedy to relieve the emotional tension. Much amusement has been derived by the picturing of episodes in college life. The first act is laid in the rooms of two classmates. They are giving a tea in honor of their girl friends at Barnard. Their attempts at catering, their endeavors to provide polite entertainment suitable to their guests and to make the apartment presentable and to remove all evidences of an incriminating nature, furnish the liveliest sort of fun.

Mr. Edeson's company has been carefully selected by Mr. Harris with a view to presenting college men as they are, and the Barnard contingent is represented by an unusually attractive set of femininity.

YANKEE DOODLE GIRLS.

The Yankee Doodle Girls will give three more performances at the Metropolitan, before flitting away to Minneapolis. There will be a matinee tomorrow afternoon. Next week, the High School Girls will be the attraction.

LA FOLLETTE ON STUMPING TOUR

Wisconsin Junior Senator is Speaking on His "Own Hook."

Milwaukee, Oct. 26.—Senator La Follette began an independent stumping tour yesterday afternoon in several small villages of Dane county. Senator Spooner will speak under the state central committee's jurisdiction next week. Politicians are waiting anxiously to see how far the two will agree or disagree in their addresses. It is not believed there can be an evasion of the question as to whether or not the Republican party in Wisconsin is still split, or whether or not the old breach is healed.

At no time in Wisconsin political history has the state been so puzzled as now concerning the stalwart and half-breed fight. Senator La Follette, having stumped the state against Governor Davidson and for Speaker Lenroot of Superior, recently wrote to the governor and told him he would speak in the state before election. The letter has never been made public.

Isaac Stephenson, backer of Senator La Follette when the latter ran for governor six, four and two years ago, escorted State Chairman Connor from a Marinette hotel to a hall where Connor spoke later. The Marshfield man is credited with having done up La Follette. There is another puzzle for politicians, in a sense, although Stephenson said he would support the party nominee. The only time Stephenson has ever thrust such honors upon any one as he did on Connor, was when Speaker Cannon and Senator La Follette spoke there.

An incident at Delavan may be told by way of diversion. Governor Davidson, coming through the town in his automobile with which he is stumping the state, arrived at the state school for the deaf and mute in the afternoon. He was greeted by the students, who waved flags and otherwise told in their mute fashion how pleased they were to be hosts of the state executive. Then the governor was conducted into the school hall, where he made an address. His words were rapidly interpreted by a teacher. Governor Davidson was visibly affected by the tribute paid him by the children.

PASTER HIT HIM

And the Choirmaster Staggered From the Athletic Blow.

Great Barrington, Mass., Oct. 26.—"You are a dirty little cad," is the epithet N. H. Athoe, chairmaster of St. James Episcopal church, says Rev. Howard Murry Dumbell, pastor of the church, applied to him on the street before the postoffice. Then the pastor hit him. It was an athletic hook to jaw, and Athoe staggered, for Pastor Dumbell is a powerful athlete. Then they separated and went their ways.

Athoe was professor of music at the university of Alabama. Dumbell, his friend, got him his present job. Athoe, it is alleged, grew careless, and Dumbell admonished him to do better. Then the fight. "He called me a d—d scoundrel and I hit him. That's all," says the pastor, who came from St. Paul's, New York, and startled staid parishioners by declaring that after a man had attended church Sunday he might play baseball or indulge in other sports.

JILTED GIRL SUES DOCTOR

Breach of Promise Case Thrills Dubuque's Society Circles.

Dubuque, Iowa, Oct. 26.—A great sensation in local society circles was caused yesterday by the announcement that papers would be filed in time for the December term of the United States district court in this city in a $20,000 breach of promise suit in which Miss Maybelle Arnold of Hanover, Ill., will be the plaintiff and Dr. George Allen Staples the defendant.

Miss Arnold is a school teacher at Elizabeth, Ill., a few miles east of this city, and Dr. Staples is one of the most prominent physicians and surgeons in Eastern Iowa. Dr. Staples' marriage on Aug. 2 last was his fourth marital venture. His divorce from his third wife, a member of one of Dubuque's most prominent families, in which sensational charges and counter charges were made, caused great surprise.

Miss Arnold says that Dr. Staples began his attention to her a year ago, and until he went East last May, ostensibly to take a post graduate course in an Eastern college, was a most ardent wooer, making frequent visits to Elizabeth. The latter part of July Miss Arnold received a letter from Dr. Staples, stating that he had been called home and would arrive here on a certain date. Miss Arnold came to Dubuque and went to the home of a friend. This was the very day that Dr. Staples was married to Miss Brownie Wadley, a young society girl of this city.

When Miss Arnold saw the announcement of the marriage in the local papers she collapsed and was seriously ill for several days. Miss Arnold says that Dr. Staples offered to make a settlement with her after she had put the case in the hands of attorneys, but the sum offered was too insignificant and she refused. It is said the offer was $2,000.

In an interview, Miss Arnold said: "I dread the notoriety, but I would live on year after year with the knowledge that the man who wronged me was never brought to justice. If more women would take similar action there would be fewer broken hearts and fewer scoundrels trifling with unprotected women."

NO ONE WANTS THIS LITTLE JAPANESE BABE.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Thousands of babies are adopted in Chicago every year, and there are plenty of homes generally for good healthy youngsters, but a new problem has arisen.

A home is wanted for a bright little Japanese boy. Before he was born, his mother was left a widow in a strange land.

She was compelled to work for a living, and finally put the baby into the care of a Chicago doctor, who advertises the baby for adoption.

Up to date, the demand for Japanese babies does not amount to anything worthy of notice.

CONCERNING WOMEN

One of the most interesting visitors at the Young Women's Christian association this week was Mrs. James Lyman of Chicago, who was a guest at the Ministers' supper, which was served at the rooms Tuesday evening. Mrs. Lyman is a member of the American committee of which the local Young Women's Christian association is a part and those interested in the work here were delighted at having her as their guest for a few hours the first of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Lyman were in the city on a business trip.

The necessity for a new building for the association was dwelt upon by the speakers at the informal program of toasts which was presented, and in speaking of it Mrs. Lyman said, "There is no reason it seems to me why Duluth should not get her building. Throughout the country twenty or thirty associations are occupied in the erection of new homes, and in the majority of cases no work has been undertaken until all the money is provided, which is of course the wisest way of proceeding.

"The spirit of helpfulness and sympathy which you receive from the ministers of your city, is a delight, and an invaluable help in the work. I shall watch with interest the progress of the association during the next few years."

* * *

A Halloween party is being planned by the association members for Wednesday evening of next week. This is to be one of the most delightful of the social affairs given at the association, and any number of weird and interesting features are being arranged for the party Wednesday evening. The members and their girl friends are invited.

* * *

The speaker at the Sunday afternoon devotional service will be Rev. Thomas Grice, of Asbury Methodist church.

* * *

If the weather permits the members of the Outing club of the association will leave the rooms tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and go for a walk, the course to be taken, not having yet been decided upon. Any one interested is invited to attend and go with the members.

CHARMING MUSICAL.

Miss Josephine Carey is Heard in Piano Numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Barnes entertained at a musicale last evening, at their home in honor of their sister, Miss Josephine Carey, who recently returned from Berlin. Receiving with the hosts and guest of honor were Mrs. Harriet L. Carey and Mrs. Louis Heitman of St. Paul. In the reception rooms decorations of pink roses were used, and in the dining room red roses were the decorations.

Miss Carey played formally for the first time since her return, and in the varied and pleasing program she was heard with delight. A Beethoven Sonata, Op. 27, No. I, was played in all its movements with charm and delicacy.

A Chopin waltz in G flat, a Gluck-Brahms "Gavotte," and an octave study by Cark Krebs were the other numbers of the program, with a Schumann selection, "Carnival from Vienna," that was an exquisite number.

Miss Grace Heitman of St. Paul gave two readings during the evening and was heard with much pleasure. The second of the series of two musicales will be given this evening.

Husking Bee.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome E. Cooley entertained at cards and a husking bee, last evening at their home at 313 East Fourth street. The affair, unique in its details, was delightful. The rooms were decorated in ears of corn and gourds, and after the husking, five hundred was played. The favors were won by Mrs. J. L. Crawford, Mrs. Sands Van Wagner and the men's prizes went to A. H. Gibson and G. H. Feetham. Those present were:

Wed at Winnipeg.

The following clipping from the Winnipeg Free Press will be of interest to many in Duluth:

"A quiet but pretty wedding took place Monday morning in the archbishop's chapel, St. Boniface, when Rose Aurelia, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs Joseph Bourgeault, was married to Albert A. Prefontaine, of Duluth, Minn. The ceremony was performed by Monseigneur Ducas. After the ceremony dejeuner was served at the residence of the bride's parents.

Th bride looked charming in a tailor-made suit of reseda chiffon trimmed with chiffon velvet and gold, with soutache braid, and pretty blouse of duchesse lace over white taffeta silk chiffon, and wore a large picture hat of white chiffon velvet trimmed with white ostrich plumes and satin ribbon. A mink muff and stole completed the costume. Mr. and Mrs. Prefontaine left on the flyer for the East, where they will spend a few weeks traveling, after which they will reside in Duluth."

Saturday Club.

At the meeting of the Saturday club, tomorrow afternoon, the speaker will be Prof. James A. Merrill of Superior normal school, who will speak on "Russian Literature." An invitation is extended any interested to attend the meeting.

TO THE FEDERATION.

Mrs. J. L. Washburn's Annual President's Address.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 26.—The Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs will meet next year in Faribault, and the midwinter breakfast will be held in Minneapolis. Mrs. H. A. Tomlinson, of St. Peter, will entertain the officers of the federation at a week end party, after these meetings. The officers who will serve the federation during the year will be:

President, Mrs. J. L. Washburn, Duluth; vice president at large, Mrs. G. O. Welch, Fergus Falls; recording secretary, Mrs. C. E. Conant, Wells; historian, Mrs. H. N. McKusick, Stillwater; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. Ely, Duluth; treasurer, Mrs. E. J. Lewis, Sauk City; custodian, Mrs. A. H. Snow, Winona, the vice president at large and the three last named officers being elected at today's session.

The morning topic was "Household Economics," different phases being discussed by Mrs. Carolyn M. Smith, of St. Paul; and Mrs. J. M. Blair, of the State Agricultural college. Miss Linn gave a practical illustration of spinning of flax, and in connection there was a large exhibit. Mrs. W. B. Mitchell of St. Cloud, discussed "the college girl at home," paying special tribute to the fathers.

Mrs. Brimhall of St. Paul, offered resolutions declaring for the establishment of forest reserves on various Indian reservations in the state, and putting the convention on record as favoring the Morris bill, which were unanimously adopted.

The convention also favored putting drainage of swamp land under the reclamation service, and swamp lands of Chippewa reservation under the forest service.

The members attended a lecture at normal hall by Harrington Board of Minneapolis, on "Mural Art in America." The convention closed last night with an artists' recital by Mrs. H. M. Lamberton, Prof. Errico Sansome and Mrs. Sansome.

The annual address of the president was delivered, and in detail will be of interest to the women of this city:

"Women of the Federation: A year has passed since our last meeting, a year in which your new captain has used her best endeavor to steer the Federation ship through those channels of usefulness to which its construction is best adapted. No dangers have menaced our vessel; it has not been necessary to guard against mutiny from within or pirates without. The place of the Federation ship on the ocean of Endeavor has been recognized by other craft sailing thereon. Not only so, but many of these older ships, seeing what a sturdy, well-built vessel is ours, with sails that can be spread to catch every breeze, have besought us to assist them in their efforts to land valuable cargo. This we have been glad to do. For was it not for this purpose that we ventured out into the open ocean? The unbounded horizon of its possibilities luring us from the quiet bay where we had been leisurely cruising. We have found our vessel most seaworthy, even in these deeper and less well known waters.

"No longer is it necessary to direct all of our energies toward the care of the ship and the welfare of the passengers; thus leisure is left for the real things, the things that are worth while.

"It is surprising to find how well adapted is our ship to this larger work, as it formed no part of the original purpose for which it was constructed. It has, of course, been necessary from time to time to take on new machinery and equipment, as well as to enlarge her crew. The addition most needed at present, her captain thinks, is a set of strong grappling hooks to bind us more closely to the vessel which we are for the time assisting. The combined effort would thus be made more effective, as the force from both would be exerted in the same direction. We cannot afford to waste energy by pulling in different directions, even though the divergence be but slight. The captain feels, too, that a more extended use of the 'log' might be made and prove beneficial both to present sailors and those to follow. She feels that therein should be recorded the lessons learned from the exprince of different crews sent out for some special line of work, whether initiated by the Federation ship or by some other craft on the great ocean.

"But the figure has been carried far enough. You cannot expect a figure to go on 'all fours,' as some one has expressed it. It has served its purpose of picturing to you in imagery the place and influence of the Federation in the great world of usefulness.

"I will tell you what I mean by new equipment. I do not believe in tinkering away at the machinery of an organization just for the sake of doing something. When clubs and federations spend much time in that way, I feel that they lay themselves open to the criticism of a friend of mine who pleasantly assumed that the chief work of a women's organization is to amend its by-laws. 'It makes no difference what you adopt for your by-laws in the first place,' she cheerfully announced, when asked to assist the committee on constitution and by-laws, 'just as well take the ten commandments or the blue laws of Connecticut, as anything else; the main thing is to get something to amend, for, of course, you will have to amend them every year anyway in order to have something to do.' Our machinery is all right. It is built on the best and most scientific modern principles. The wheels keep well in place and usually turn when they are expected to. If they fail to do so, we know that we have neglected to oil them properly or that we are using the wrong kind of lubricator. But it would be strange, when we consider the different lines of work which our Federation has now taken on and which were never dreamed of at the time of its organization, it would be strange indeed should we never have to add to its working gear.

"We have in our federation numerous committees which are pursuing the same aims as are certain national organizations whose interest and activity are centered on the one special purpose held by each. My 'grappling hook' theory is that these committees, through their chairmen, should have a vital connection with their corresponding national organizations. Thus the civic committee, through its chairman, should be a member of the American Civic association; the art committee, of the State Art society; the mothers' club committee, of the National Congress of Mothers; the education committee, of the State—or, possibly, of the National—Educational association; the music committee, of the National Music association, and so on. The committees would then receive the literature put out by these organizations and would be able to co-operate with them more intelligently and effectively. Whenever possible, a member of each committee should be sent to the annual meeting of the organization with which it is affiliated. Can you not see what an immense stimulus this would be to our committees?

"Take, for instance, the civic committee. It is a little difficult to know just what would be the best line of work for such a committee in a state federation. The work is of necessity very different from that of a local civic association working for a betterment of conditions in the city or town in which it is located. The purpose of a civic committee of the federation is to stimulate activity for civic betterment in every town and village in the state. How shall this be done? The literature put out by the American Civic association, working for this end and this alone, and the inspiration to be gained from attendance on their meetings, would go far toward answering the question.

"The annual meeting of the American Civic association is now in session in Milwaukee. It was inexcusably careless on the part of your president to allow the date of this meeting of the federation to conflict with theirs. She wished to attend the meeting of the civic association herself, and hoped that a member of the civic committee might also attend it.

"A few weeks ago there came in the president's mail a letter from the secretary of the American Free Art association, asking the help of our federation in the work which they are trying to do, viz., to get the duty removed from works of art imported into this country. One thing which we were asked to do was to circulate petitions to congress, headed by slips found in this circular, requesting that such duty be removed. We have a dozen of these petitions circulating in different towns in the state, through the medium of different officers. It was not much to do, and you may say that petitions do no good; but it is what they asked us to do, and we must assume that they have given careful thought to the matter and that they deem it worth while. Any way, it is a good work to do for art, and one which has long been in the minds of some of our members as something which the federation might well take up; but the method was not quite clear or the time ripe, and now comes along this organization whose sole purpose it is to get this duty on art removed. Shall we not assist them in every way possible? And first of all, do the thing which they, as an organization, have asked us to do? Your part is to see that these petitions grow to heroic size.

"One of the good and practical things accomplished by the Minnesota Federation was securing the passage of the bill which gave to us our State Art society. But our work was not finished when we procured the passage of the bill. The society needs our continued assistance, that its work may be made as effective and far-reaching as possible. They want a knowledge of its annual exhibits spread through every town and village in the remotest parts of the state; and everyone with any skill in arts or handicraft, urged to send exhibits. We believe that the chairman of the art committee of the federation should be an active member of this State Art society and should in every way possible further the efforts of that society for wider interest in art and a better knowledge of its principles.

"Last winter a state anti-tuberculosis society was established in Minnesota through the efforts of the secretary of the state board of health and others interested in the matter. Its object is to prevent the spread of the dread disease and to educate people in proper methods of caring for those affected by the same. Their work will necessarily be an educational one; to spread the propaganda that the disease can be cured and how to do it; to teach people that unless the patint is properly cared for, that his disease is just as contagious as and far more deadly than is smallpox; to teach them in details what this proper care of a consumptive patient is, that will make it possible for him to remain among his friends with no menace to their health and safety. This newly formed society has asked the state federation to assist in this work and has made your president one of its directors; and what better organization than the federation could one possibly desire for disseminating information? We have nearly two hundred clubs scattered all through the state, in every little nook and hamlet. Suppose each one of these clubs should take a half hour from its program once or twice a year to discuss the matters to be considered in the literature which will be sent out by the anti-tuberculosis society. Can you begin to estimate the far-reaching results of such effort? And is not this white plague an evil so serious, so menacing to the life and health of the nation, that we should be willing to assist in its suppression? Is it not also a matter so intimately connected with the home and its welfare that women may well be interested in it and ready to work for it? Can anyone justly accuse us of stepping out of our sphere and meddling with things which do not belong to us, if we undertake to assist this society in the work which it wishes to do? Who should know about these things—about the prevention and cure of such dread diseases—if not the mothers of the land? It is the desire of your president, if it meets with your approval, that we should add a new committee to those already in the year book, a committee on health and hygiene, whose present duty should be to co-operate with the Anti-Tuberculosis association. It is our belief and desire also that the chairman of that committee should be an active member of the Anti-Tuberculosis society.

"The reform committee of the federation, which now happens to be a committee on a state industrial school for girls, has, I think, always kept in quite close touch with the state board of corrections and charities, and the chairman has been in the habit of attending its meetings. This, I believe, must meet with your hearty approval. Much good can be accomplished and much strength attained by close affiliation with that body which makes the study of methods of reform and charity its main work.

"What has been said about the different committees mentioned and their relation to kindred organizations would apply to nearly every committee in the federation.

"This large co-operation, then, for the purpose of getting something done that is worth doing, is the key note of this little talk today.

"The time has passed when there should be any jealous feeling for the federation lest it should not receive its due share of honors and glory for work done. What matters it who does this thing or that thing, or who gets the credit for doing it? The main concern is that the work should be done if it is worth doing.

"A few years back it was necessary, perhaps, to take a little different attitude in this matter. We were fighting for the right to remain as an individual craft on the great ocean. In order to justify our claim to such a position, we were often obliged to answer the question: 'What have you done?' But that time having happily passed, it would now be a waste of energy to argue in behalf of an admitted fact.

"How can we make a more extended use of our 'log?' The Courant is our log. It goes to every place in the state where there is a club. If you have something you want to say to women of the state, something that is going to be helpful to them in the work which they are trying to do, why not say it through the Courant? Women in many places would like to start village improvement associations if they only knew how. Why not tell them the experience in that line of some other town? Perhaps others would like to start an arts and crafts society. Many such societies have been organized in recent years. Why not have some interesting articles on the subject in the Courant by members of the art committee? Are there not some things gained from experience that the educational committee would like to say to the women of the state? Or the mothers' club committee? Or the forestry? Or the music committee? Use the 'log.'

"You doubtless all know that the Federation Bulletin has been adopted as the official organ of the general federation. It is a valuable publication, and members of the federation will find it very helpful. But we know that it would be utterly impossible for us to use its columns as I am urging you to use the Courant. The Courant is the official organ, as you know, of four states. To it we must look for news of work in local clubs, and through its pages can we reach women throughout the state.

"I want to urge upon you the importance of taking this magazine, in order to keep in vital touch with the work of the federation. Take the Bulletin also if you can, but don't fail to take and read the Courant. The Bulletin will keep you posted on the larger work of the parent organization, and this is most important. It helps to keep out sectional prejudice—too often a besetting sin of earnest local workers.

"There has never been an industrial or child labor committee in the Minnesota federation. The president would recommend that the attention of members of the federation be turned in this direction, to see if we ought not to be getting in line with other states and assisting them in their efforts to alleviate the condition of working women and children. The evils in this state are not so serious nor so general as in some of the older manufacturing states, but that they do exist we can not deny, and that they are growing each year more serious and more widespread is likewise true. Can we help in this work? The juvenile court system and its needs appeals to many of us as a most practical kind of work to do and one of particular interest to women. We have emphasized its importance on our program, but are making no systematic effort as a federation in that line. Work for an extension of the juvenile court system and to make the present law more effective would not be out of harmony with the purposes for which the educational committee was established.

"The work of most importance in the federation for the coming year and the one on which we mean, to a certain extent, to concentrate our effort, is the securing of a state industrial school for delinquent girls. There is great need of this, as many of you know. The school at Red Wing is crowded beyond its capacity. There is but one building for the accommodation of matron, teachers and students, except that a small cottage a short distance from the main building has recently been rented and is occupied by some honor girls. There is no possibility, under present conditions, for suitable classification; the result is that girls sent there are seldom reformed and made useful members of society. Our juvenile court judge told me a few weeks ago that he never sent a child to Red Wing if he could possibly avoid it. When asked why, he replied: 'Because the classification is so poor and it cannot be any better under existing conditions.' The herding of children together—bad, worse and indifferent—as is unavoidable with present facilities—is not conducive to the reform of any portion of them. There is no adequate provision for teaching them household economics. To be sure, most of the work of the institution is done by the girls, under the direction of different heads of departments; and the girl's school clothes, as well as some for the boys, are made by the inmates of the institution. But that is not giving them proper and systematic instruction in different lines of household work and sewing that would make them skilled in the same and able to go out and take positions in one line or another of such work. We believe, too, that the girls' and boys' schools are too near together for the best good of the inmates of either institution. We are asking that they be separated and that a new industrial school for girls, remote from the boys' school, be established on the cottage plan. This would make it possible to classify the girls according to the extent of their delinquency, and would give them something of the advantages of family life. We are asking that the superintendent of this new institution may be a woman fitted for her position, both by study and experience in the most modern and scientific methods of treating delinquents. We are asking that there may be a resident woman physician who shall have no duties save the care of these girls. Many of them are diseased, and diseased in such a way as to threaten the health and well being of those with whom they associate. It will not be possible to reform the minds and morals of these girls while their bodies are in this condition. This is reason we desire the constant attention of a competent woman physician. We are asking for a board of women visitors, as is customary in such institutions where a careful study has been made of these matters. These visitors would receive no salary and they should be women who have made a study of the best of such institutions and the principles underlying them. We want everyone present at this meeting to feel a personal responsibility for the success of the work of this committee. Visit the institution at Red Wing. You will find it immaculately neat and shiny, and the discipline excellent. We are not criticising the management of the Red Wing institution. We believe that officials and teachers are doing the best that can be done under the circumstances. But examine into the points which have been mentioned, the capacity of the school and the number present; the dormitories with their neat iron beds, but with anywhere from fifteen to thirty girls—perhaps more in one room; the kind of instruction which they are getting in household economics and the like, and see if you want the child of any of your friends or a girl in whom you have a personal interest sent there, if by any chance she should be incorrigible. Talk of the subject to your friends—not in season and out, just in season. Good enterprises are often thwarted by ill-advised advocacy. We should always try to know when we have said enough and when it is best to say nothing at all.

"The president of our university and the governor of our state have told us in almost identical, that our federation can do anything we set out to do, if we make a united effort. Now is the time to prove their words true; so let us make a united effort to obtain this school; not for the credit of the committee, the honor and glory of the federation or any member of it, but simply to get it done, because it is worth while and is demanded by every law of humanity.

"Do we not frequently lose sight of the main object for which we should strive? both as individuals and as organizations? This is true even in some branches of government. We observe communities or states finding fault with their representatives in legislative halls, because they have not shaken a sufficient number of plums from the government tree into the baskets of their constituents. Is the main object of government that of dispensing plums? Not what we can get, but what we can give for the service of our country would be the better attitude.

"Minnesota may well be proud of giving to the nation's service several men who justly attained position as statesmen, but it is a poor kind of pride that glories in the number of petty offices—plums as they are called in politics—which have been secured for citizens of the state through the efforts of politicians who hold the mistaken opinion that their highest duty is to serve themselves and reward their constituents rather than to labor for the national good.

"The Minnesota federation likewise may well be proud that she has given of her best for the service of the general federation. But she had even more reason to be proud when she proved last spring that it was not plums that she was seeking, but merely that she might be of service to the body as a whole. If we had been seeking to put our federation high in rank in the opinion of other states and of the officers of the general federation, we could not have taken a step that would so surely have accomplished our end as did the unanimous decision of our state delegation not to accept any office for Minnesota at that biennial meeting. But I am sure that not one person had that object in mind. Give and you will surely get. But not if you give for that purpose.

"I tell you the idea of federation is subverted when any part of it glories in what it has received from the whole, in the way of petty offices or honors. Have we not all common interest, common purposes? Let us then give of our best gladly, looking for nothing in return; lending a hand whenever needed; rejoicing at success, sympathizing with failure. And so, a well disciplined crew on the good Ship Federation, shall it be given to us to land many a valuable cargo which shall add to the wealth of the world and to the well being of humanity."

THANKS CUTICURA FOR COMPLETE CURE

"Some time ago I wrote you for a book on the Cuticura Remedies and received it O. K. and went and bought the Soap, Ointment, and Pills. They did me more good than any medicine I ever used. They cured me of my skin disease, and I am very thankful to you. My trouble was eruption of the skin, which broke out in spots all over my body, and caused a continual itching which nearly drove me wild at times. I got medicine of a doctor, but it did not cure me, and when I saw in a paper your ad., I sent to you for the Cuticura book and I studied my case in it. I then went to the drug store and bought one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura Ointment, and one vial of Cuticura Pills. From the first application I received relief. I used the first set and two extra cakes of Cuticura Soap, and was completely cured. I had suffered for two years, and I again thank Cuticura for my cure. If you wish, you may publish this. Your friend forever, Claude N. Johnson, Maple Grove Farm, R. F. D. 2, Walnut, Kan., June 15, 1905."

The Wooing of Woman

Began in the Garden of Eden and has been going on with all its delicious consequences ever since. It is the starting point of a woman's life, the hour in which the sun really begins to shine.

Be she savage or civilized it is the dawning of the great light for which every woman longs. The story of how the world in every clime has done its wooing is the most fascinating that can be told the children of men and women.

Suckling pigs.

The time of the year when the slaughter of the innocents is paraded before the gaze of an outraged public is again here, and poor, pink, pampered but to be killed, little pigs, adorn a cake of ice, and in spite of one's tender heart, they do suggest rich, brown gravy, apple sauce, baked potatoes and other accompaniments and delicacies. "Pigs is pigs," of course, as a noted express agent has previously remarked to a large audience, but they don't work on one's feelings to see them dead, after they have attained their full growth. But little pigs! They do look so pink and helpless, and kind of sorry they're dead, and they bear almost an uncanny likeness to your friend's youngest baby, so kind of plump and dependable.

The choice in grapes and grape fruits will please everybody and other portions of the market are quite delightful.

The EVENING STORY.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN

By H. F. Gethen.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The rail from Bayonne was not then laid, but the drive by diligence was sufficiently enjoyable. My aunt (Lady Jane) and I reached St. Jean Pied de Port late one evening, and that little town seemed wrapped in slumber. On the following morning—"I am going to take you over the Pyrenees in Spain," asserted my aunt.

"Really and truly?" I remember exclaiming.

"Yes; I know all about it; we've only to get to Bourgette, and then it's quite easy," she said, confidently.

A carriage was secured, the morning was lovely, and the French frontier was soon passed, for we had very little luggage, and nothing on which to pay duty. A few miles further, at a lonely kind of an inn, the coachman insisted on our descending from the carriage and paying his fee. Having no choice, we consented, and then entered the lonely little inn in search of breakfast. After eating with good appetites some well-cooked food, we discovered that the carriage had been replaced by a couple of rough ponies, with even rougher attendants of the boy tribe. The road beyond was considered too steep for vehicles, so we mounted in silence.

"Please, our bags," pleaded I, feeling disturbed by our landlord's smiling detention of our light baggage.

"He says they must be sent on by the mule train," exclaimed Lady Jane.

The straps of her pony's saddle broke before we had gone a mile and had to be mended with a fragment of string, and a good deal of "language," which we fortunately could not comprehend, was leveled at the four-legged members of our party. Then our little cavalcade proceeded onward and upward, passing by many wayside crosses, and encountering wild-looking harmless peasants with trains of mules, and then again we noticed more of the rough crosses.

"What in the world makes the people put up so many wooden crosses?" asked Lady Jane at last, looking rather nervous. You must know that, although she was our own aunt, we generally called her Lady Jane. She was very kind, but rather odd.

The boy managed to make us understand that the crosses were erected to mark spots where murders had been committed, but, of course, we didn't know if this was true.

"Don't you think we had better go back?" remarked Lady Jane, on hearing this explanation.

"Perhaps it isn't true; at any rate, don't let us look frightened," was my valiant reply, for turning back was easier said than done on such a difficult path.

Higher and higher we wound, zigzagging through the glorious forest, and steeper and steeper grew the road. The boys walked on silent and sullen, and the sun began to quite scorch our skins. Suddenly the ponies stopped at the summit of the mountain, and the boys pointed to some far distant buildings. Without a word they lifted us from our saddles, demanded the promised fees, which Lady Jane at once gave, and set forth on their return journey before we had gathered courage to protest. The houses were there certainly, across a wide plain, and it was a weary walk.

At last we arrived at the village, which appeared to possess but one street. We were courteously welcomed by the innkeeper. A Spanish dinner was shortly served, and we were glad to retire to rest soon afterwards.

"I wish we were safe at home," ejaculated Lady Jane. "There is no bolt to the door," she cried, when we found ourselves in a bedroom containing two beds. So she insisted on piling the somewhat scanty furniture against the door, "in case anyone should try to rob us," she said, fearfully. The heavy bedsteads were immovable, but the other things made a formidable barricade. Wearied and feverish from the unusual heat, we soon got into our beds.

"I've put the water jug ready to throw at any intruder," said Lady Jane, who appeared brave now she was under the bedclothes, "and I've hidden my purse in the toe of my shoe."

At last we both slept, and the last sound we heard was the wind wailing round the thick stone walls.

A knock at the door disturbed but failed to arouse us. Then, to the accompaniment of a muttered exclamation, the latch was lifted softly and the door pushed gently. With an awful clatter the barricade gave way and out of the darkness ejaculations loud and deep reached our ears.

"I've got the jug," said my aunt, and, feeling no doubt that her courage equaled that of Nelson, at least, she sprang up and, in the dark, cast her pitcher in the direction of the voice.

Oh, what a crash there was! Then hurried footsteps came along the passage, and a lantern showed the innkeeper fully dressed and his wife in a wondrous deshabille. The worthy couple, scolding and questioning in turn, soon rescued from amidst scattered chair legs and fragments of pottery, a poor half-drowned, wholly frightened young man.

It was the honest Boots of the establishment, the general factotum, who, according to orders, had come to warn us that the omnibus, which was known as the Mail, would arrive in half an hour, and the driver would wait for nobody. Oh, guess how foolish we felt! Lady Jane gave Boots a handsome present, and he said he hadn't been hurt, only his clothes were drenched through, and he had a great fright. I expect he thought we were crazy, and really at the time he wasn't far wrong.

ELECTIONS NO HOLIDAY.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—State Superintendent Cary today gave a decision that, in accordance with a new law, general election days are no longer legal holidays for schools. He also decided that a teacher must stay in the schoolhouse during noon hours and take care of the furniture, if so directed by the board. Primary election days, he holds, are legal holidays because there is no statute to the contrary.

TO BUILD ELEVATOR

Cargill Elevator Company Buys Site on Rice's Point.

May Build Half Million Dollar Plant During Winter.

The Cargill Elevator company has bought a site for an elevator on Rice's Point, the seller being George C. Howe. The property lies between the Peavey elevator system and the old Imperial mill, and is one of the prettiest elevator sites to be found in Duluth. It is easily accessible by water and by the railroads, being located so that switching charges are no burden.

The property is, of course, bought for the purpose of being improved by the erection of an elevator for the handling of grain, but at just what time this will be done has not yet been determined. It is known, however, that plans are now being considered, and the plant may be under way before the winter is over. This is a possibility, but not a certainty.

If the elevator is built, it will be one of the finest at the Head of the Lakes, costing at least $500,000. It will be built of steel, tile and cement, not a stick of timber entering into its construction. The working house will be one of the fastest at the Head of the Lakes. The storage houses will be apart from the working house, and in every way the plant will be a modern and finely equipped one.

MOTION TO APPEAL DENIED

State Supreme Court Files Decision in Viaduct Case.

St Paul, Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state supreme court today denied the motion to dismiss the appeal in the case of the City of Duluth vs. the Northern Pacific railroad, brought to compel the defendant to repair the viaduct at Lake avenue and to repair the street and rebuild sidewalks and approaches to the viaduct. The sylabus says:

"Where the plaintiff recovers judgment in his favor but not for all of the relief claimed and his adversary appeals from the judgment and assigns errors only as part of the judgment unfavorable to him, and judgment is affirmed on his appeal, plaintiff, thereafter and within the time limited for taking appeal, may appeal from that part of the judgment which is to his disadvantage. Motion to dismiss appeal denied."

CITY BRIEFS

Something Worth Seeing.

Tomorrow evening F. P. Frisch, an artist who has won high laurels in Europe and America, will paint in pastel his masterpiece, the awakening of Mt. Vevuius from slumber to rage, in the window of Decker's art store, 16 Second avenue west. This picture has won the unstinted praise of critics in every city Mr. Frisch has visited, and is said to be marvelously realistic.

Now Runs a Mill.

Henry C. Meining of Little Falls, Minn., is in the city. Mr. Meining is a former Duluth young man, who is prospering, being now president and manager of a flour milling company which operates a 600-barrel mill at Little Falls.

Owns Mineral Lands.

C. A. Gilman of St. Cloud, a former lieutenant governor of Minnesota and at one time one of the best known politicians of the state, was in the city yesterday on business. In the early days of the Mesaba range, he had some mining interests in this region and at the present time owns some lands in the Hunter's island district.

Unauthorized Solicitor.

S. B. Moore, pastor of the A. M. E. church, complains that some unknown person is going about soliciting funds for the aid of his church. He says that all persons authorized to collect for the African M. E. church are provided with the church seal on their books.

Bishop Olmstead Here.

Bishop Charles S. Olmstead of Denver and Mrs. Olmsted are the guests of Bishop and Mrs. Morrison for a few days. Bishop Olmsted is considered one of the most brilliant men in the Episcopal church, and is the author of several well known books. He will preach at Trinity chapel Sunday morning and at St. Paul's church in the evening.

Elks Plan Stag Social.

The members of the Duluth lodge of Elks will hold a stag social in their hall on the evening of Wednesday, Oct. 31. It is in the nature of a Halloween party, and a "hot time" is promised.

Gund-Stockman.

The wedding of Miss Susan E. Gund and Arthur H. Stockman took place last evening at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stockman, of 823 East Third street. The attendants were Miss Mamie Hanson and Lawrence Stockman. The bride was given away by her brother, William Gund, and the wedding service was read by Rev. R. J. Mooney. Mr. and Mrs. Stockman left for a short wedding trip and after their return will be at home at 208 East Fourth street.

Install Ejector.

The sewer ejector, which is to be used on lower Lake avenue, is being installed today, and it is hoped that all will be in readiness for the test within a week or ten days.

Reaching Higher Figure.

The hunting license list is slowly creeping up to higher figures. Up to this noon 545 licenses had been issued by the county auditor. The outside deputies have issued many licenses, the exact number of which will not be known until they submit their reports at the end of the season for big game.

REPUBLICAN TESTIMONY.

The New Tribune, commenting upon what this newspaper said a few days ago about the source of Cole's nomination, wherein it was shown that it was given to him by the corporate interests in order to defeat J. F. Jacobson, marvels that this was kept for so late in the campaign. "Such a fine bit of Democratic news should have been discovered when the convention was in session," it adds.

It was not Democratic news. It was common news, news that affronted the Republicans of the state, and the News Tribune is about the only Republican paper in the state that was scooped on it.

Before the convention the Republican St. Cloud Journal-Press said, truly:

> The only way in which Jacobson can be prevented from receiving the nomination is by the use of corporation money. If the corporations and the politicians keep their hands off he will be nominated by acclamation. He is the choice of the people.

How well that prophecy was fulfilled was shown by the famous Shevlin orgie that followed the nomination of Cole, and by the comments of Republican papers upon this disgraceful manipulation of a state convention to defeat the people's will. Said the Republican St. Paul Dispatch, after the convention:

> The "interests" arranged the deal by which Jacobson was defeated. It was a matter of generalship, finesse, of strategy, or whatever one pleases to call it.

Said the Republican St. Cloud Journal-Press:

> When a great county like Hennepin sends to the convention ninety-nine delegates, seventy of whom are forced to vote as the bosses of the great timber interests dictate, and against their own judgment and conviction—it is certainly a most dangerous and pernicious state of affairs.

> Marshall News-Messenger: Tom Shevlin recognized a well-played piece of political work by dining and champagning the Hennepin delegation at the close of the convention. He lost Block, but he defeated Jacobson, the uncompromising foe of overreaching corporate interests.

> St. Peter Free Press: Jacobson might have landed the nomination, but the combined opposition of the Twin City tax dodgers was too strong to run against.

> Preston Times: The truth might as well be admitted—the free, unhampered choice of a majority of the delegates was Jacobson.

> Wadena Pioneer Journal: As this paper has frequently stated, the corporations and the railroads were bitterly hostile to Jacobson, and the interests controlled the delegations from St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. At a critical time in the convention these delegations were thrown to Cole.

> Morris Sun: It is a well-known fact that corporate interests were at the bottom of Jacobson's defeat.

> Redwood Reveille: The state convention, at the behest of corporate interests, disregarded the will of the people in a most flagrant manner. The turning down of Jacobson was one of the most disreputable acts ever committed in this state by a political gathering. Jacobson's defeat stands pre-eminent as a barefaced political outrage.

> Foley Independent: It is a deplorable fact, but nevertheless it is true, that Cole received the nomination at the hands of the corporations.

> Redwood Reveille: Jacobson, the people's choice, who would have been nominated hands down had the primary election law included the state officers, was unceremoniously slaughtered at the behest of corporate interests working through Millionaire Tom Shevlin, the Minneapolis lumber baron. The Hennepin county delegation, which did the business at Shevlin's instigation, reaped its reward in the form of the biggest champagne drunk ever seen in Duluth. Contemplation of this disgraceful act is enough to make every decent Republican in Minnesota hang his head in shame.

Is it a late discovery that "corrupt interests stalked unchallenged, openly and boldly in the convention?"

FAIR TAXATION.

If the people approve the proposed amendment to the taxation provisions of the constitution, one of the principal matters that will engross the attention of the legislature next winter will be that of devising a new tax system for Minnesota.

What that system will be nobody knows at this time. That it will be better than the one we have now goes without saying, for it is not possible to devise a worse one.

One thing that is pretty likely to happen is the abolition of the personal property tax. The legislature may be too conservative to accept this reform, but it is needed, and if this legislature does not do it some other one will.

The great trouble with the personal property tax is that it forces the burden upon those that can least afford it. The very things that ought to escape taxation if anything does are the very ones that are taxed heaviest, while the things that ought to bear the greater part of the burden almost invariably escape.

A witness before a Massachusetts legislative committee that is investigating taxation put it compactly when he said that he might invest his money in a useless diamond and escape taxation, while if he invested in such a useful article as a cow, he was sure to be taxed. Diamonds, under the personal property tax law, are subject to taxation just as much as cows, but you can hide a diamond from the assessor and lie about it in your sworn return, while you can't hide a cow. So the cow is taxed and the diamond goes free.

This is merely as an illustration. Working tools, stocks of merchandise, manufacturing machinery and the like are all visible, and are always taxed. Stocks, bonds and similar securities that yield large returns can be locked up in safety deposit vaults and wholly escape taxation. The poor family with a very little property, but all of it visible, like cooking stoves, furniture, etc., pays more taxes in proportion than the wealthy man whose property is mostly in invisible securities.

Fair taxation is taxation distributed among the citizens in proportion to their ability to bear it. The present tax system does just the opposite, and lets off lightly those that can afford to pay the most, while shifting the whole burden upon those that can ill afford to pay even their own share.

The first move toward bringing about this most desirable equality of taxation is to repeal the personal property tax. What shall take its place has yet to be seen. An income tax would do it, though even that is rather difficult of enforcement. Taxation of franchises will help, and this depends largely upon the aggressiveness and devotion to the public of the officers charged with the enforcement of taxation.

BOB DUNN'S SPEECH.

Robert C. Dunn, the defeated Republican candidate for governor in 1904, made his long-expected speech at Milaca last night. He has been pushed and prodded by the state committee to make it, and primed with points on which he should touch. It will be his only speech of the campaign, according to Mr. Dunn himself.

Naturally, Mr. Dunn cannot look with kindness upon the man that beat him two years ago, and while he does not bitterly attack him, he tries to damn him with faint praise. Most of his talk, however, is devoted to a defense of Mr. Dunn himself, against the reflections that circumstances have apparently cast upon his conduct of the state auditor's office. This is perfectly proper, of course, and Mr. Dunn is quite within his rights in rising to his own defense, since none of the other Republican orators seem to have thought it necessary.

In one part of the speech, perhaps without intention, Mr. Dunn seems to make it appear that all the talk about Governor Johnson's prosecution of timber trespassers amounts to nothing, because only $20,000 has been collected in his term. The prosecutions about which Governor Johnson and his friends have talked are still pending. The supreme court has decided them in favor of the state, and judgments amounting to nearly $500,000 will shortly be entered.

Mr. Dunn is manifestly unfair, too, in his charges that the state board of equalization has shown favoritism to Hennepin county interests. This has been exploded again and again, but is repeatedly brought up again by Cole campaigners who see in a possible method of hurting Mr. Johnson, and who care little about how dishonest it is to use it.

INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.

Louis D. Brandeis, a Boston lawyer who has been giving careful study to the matter of industrial life insurance, has presented some conclusions that furnish food for thought.

In a recent speech in Boston before the Twentieth Century club of that city, he made a striking comparison between the benefits to be derived from industrial insurance, and those to be derived from the patronage of savings banks.

He showed that the average expectancy of life in the United States of a man 21 years old is, according to Meech's table of mortality, 40.25 years. In other words, the average man 21 years of age may hope to reach the age of 61¼ years. If such a man, beginning with his twenty-first birthday, pays throughout his life 50 cents a week into a savings institution, and allows the deposits to accumulate for the benefit of his family, the survivors will, in case of his death at this average age of 61¼ years, inherit $2,265.90 if an interest of 3½ per cent is maintained.

If this same man should, at the age of 21, begin paying the 50 cents a week to an industrial insurance company as premiums on a so-called "industrial life policy" for the benefit of his family, the survivors would be legally entitled to receive, upon his death at the age of 61¼ years, only $820, or a little more than a third of what his savings fund would reach.

The reason of this difference, Mr. Brandeis pointed out, is that the industrial companies consume nearly 50 per cent of the premium receipts in expenses and dividends, which are heavier than they ought to be, he believes. The expenses of the savings banks, on the other hand, amount to less than 1½ per cent of the deposit receipts.

The presidents of savings banks do not, like the presidents of life insurance companies, draw from $50,000 to $100,000 in salaries out of the funds of their concerns. The savings bank does not spend large sums of money in getting new business. The savings bank does not contribute large amounts to campaign funds, and does not maintain "yellow dog" branches at the capitol to debauch legislatures and corrupt the source of the people's laws.

Of course the head of every family should have life insurance. He owes it to those dependent upon him to do that. But he should be careful what kind of insurance he gets, and in making preparations for the comfort of his family he should not neglect the opportunities offered by the savings banks.

THE PASSING SHOW.

Don't forget to register tomorrow morning before you go to work. It is your last chance.

* * *

Did the Cole sponsors imagine that Minnesota was going to forget the manner in which his nomination was brought about?

* * *

The Fergus Falls Free Press has become a semi-weekly, which will give Otter Tail county a double dose of live news matter.

* * *

The Washington Star urges us not to judge to Cuba by her office-seeking politicians. Save the mark! What if anybody judged us by ours?

* * *

Jacobson's defense of Cole's nomination shows what blind partisanship will sometimes do to a good man. It is a horrible example. Beware of blind partisanship!

* * *

Governor Johnson's friends say he has stopped timber stealing in Minnesota. Bob Dunn says there wasn't any, to amount to anything. Can you guess which is right?

* * *

Republican papers say that Johnson's claims amount to nothing and are not worth consideration, but you will notice, just the same, that they are using an awful lot of space trying to prove it.

* * *

Says Quentin in the Minneapolis Tribune: "There would be a lot more fatalities than there are if a girl shot at a man every time she thought he was a dear." In that case there are men that would dodge every time they saw a woman looking in their direction.

* * *

The Pine City Pioneer recently said that Governor Johnson, when he was state senator, cast the only vote against a bill prohibiting desecration of Memorial day. The Pioneer, having looked up the record, which it should have done before making such a charge, now says that it is untrue. Will the papers that gave it circulation give its denial equal publicity?

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"I have heard it said that wedding rings are going out of fashion and they are not worn nearly so generally as they once were," said A. J. Steinberg of New York, at the Spalding, representing a wholesale jewelry house. "This is not the case. On the contrary, wedding rings are worn just about twice as much as they were in the old days. Where they used to be worn only by the woman, the man is now following her in this respect, and has taken to wearing the wedding ring himself.

"The heavy solid band ring that our mothers and grandmothers wore is slowly going out of fashion and in a few years the rings will have disappeared completely. Its place is being taken by a narrow, light article, pretty enough, but not the matronly treasure that used to be worn. That men should take to wearing wedding rings is nothing decidedly new or novel in many parts of the world, but in America it is quite an innovation, although it has hardly become a general custom. A French couple always buys two rings, one for the man and one for the woman.

"We sell about twice as many rings now as we used to sell, and I think I can say there are twice as many worn as there used to be. The great difference in the size of the rings makes them less conspicuous, and often the rings are worn so small that one has to look at a woman's hand the second time before making sure that she is wearing a wedding ring."

"Much has been said and written about the life of the chorus girl during the last year or two, and most of the discussions on this point are intended to convince one that the chorus girl leads a hard and generally disagreeable life," said J. E. Graham of New York, at the Lenox. "As a matter of fact, the average chorus girl, if she is a Bohemian in her ways, has the best time of any player on the stage.

"In the first place, she is chosen for her looks. If she can sing a little and dance a little, so much the better, but she must be good looking. Good looks begets good times, and she doesn't have to be immoral to have them, either. What harm is there in going out to supper with a party after the show? No more than for the society girl living at home to do the same thing. The chances for both going wrong are equally good."

"Trees to the number of 2,000 are distributed gratuitously each year by the city of Boston for planting along the sidewalks," said M. P. Baker of Boston, Mass., at the Spalding. "The result of all this missionary work has been that the city, even in its crowded districts and all through the suburbs, has taken on a characteristic garden effect that impresses even the casual visitor.

"From shade-tree planting to shrubbery planting for ornamental effect in the front yards is but a short step of progress. While the streets have thus been planted, which otherwise would have remained treeless for years to come. The stock used in this way is purchased by the cities from the large nurseries as opportunity offers, and comprises maple, elm, ash, beech, poplar and linden. The cost of the trees, landed at the city nurseries ,including freight and cartage, is about 70 cents each.

"The trees are grown in the nursery for from two to three years before they are given out, and at the time of delivery they usually are excellent specimens. With each tree is given a circular emphasizing the necessity of good loam and careful planting. When several trees are taken a reliable man is sent to superintend the work of planting.

"In order to see that the results are satisfactory to the city, there is an annual stocktaking in the fall, and from these it has developed that most of the trees which died after planting owed their end to too deep planting. A large percentage of the requests for trees come from districts where one would hardly think people would take the trouble to plant and look after the trees. Great interest in the work has been shown by many civic improvement associations and tree clubs.

"Notice of the distributions is given in the daily papers. Applications are made in writing to the superintendent of public grounds, and if, after an inspection of the proposed place of planting, the conditions are found favorable, an order is mailed to the applicant, who can then get the trees on application to the nursery."

THE WEATHER.

A warm, summer rain was the surprising feature that greeted Duluth people as they looked into the out-of-doors through sleepy eyelids this morning. It wasn't a northeaster, because the wind was in the westerly quadrant, though the clouds and the drenched streets looked like it. The weather man is of the opinion that there may be light rains tonight and tomorrow, and that it will be colder. Yesterday's highest temperature was 42 degs. and last night's lowest was 38 degs.

A year ago today it was unsettled, cold and damp.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The Manitoba disturbance has moved its center to Lake Superior, causing light rains Thursday or last night in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Southern Alberta and higher temperatures over the Mississippi and Lower Missouri valleys and the Southwest. A rise in pressure in the extreme Northwest is causing lower temperatures throughout the Northwest as far east as Manitoba and including the northern portions of North Dakota and Montana. The barometer continues high in the far West and South.

"The eastern movement of the disturbance now over Lake Superior may cause further light rains in this locality this afternoon and tonight and possibly Saturday, attended by strong westerly winds."

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Lippincott's Magazine: A trolley collided with a milk wagon and sent the milk splashing on the pavement. Soon a crowd gathered. "Goodness", exclaimed a man. "What an awful waste!" A stout lady turned and glared at him. "Just mind your own business," she snapped.

Philadelphia Press: "Did you know that politicians have a particular kind of sweets to which they are partial?"

"I didn't know it about politicians especially. What is the kind?"

"Candied dates, of course."

Harper's Weekly: "It's dreadful queer," said the housewife, "that the potatoes you bring me should be so much bigger at the top of the sack than they are at the bottom."

"Not at all, mem," said the honest farmer; "it's jest this a-way. Potatoes is growin' so fast jest now that by the time I dig a sackful the last ones dug is ever so much bigger'n the fust ones."

Chicago Record-Herald: "My dear," said the candidate, who had arrived home after the returns from 627 precincts had been reported, "I have won a great moral victory."

"Oh," she replied, "then the other man must have received most of the votes."

Cleveland Leader: "This," exclaimed the guide, as they stood at last on the summit of the majestic Himalayas, "is the roof of the world."

"It is, hey," panted the American traveler. "Well, it's a blamed rough job of shinglin'."

Philadelphia Press: "Were you ever really glad to hang a man?"

"Only once," answered the sheriff. "I had prepared him a hearty breakfast of steak, eggs, potatoes, waffles and coffee."

"Yes?"

"And the infernal ingrate demanded stewed oats instead."

History, on the Stump.

William Allen White in Emporia Gazette: The story is told of an ardent politician who is making speeches for Col. Harris out in the short-grass region, struck a flowery period the other night, and said:

"In the words of Daniel Webster, who wrote the dictionary, 'Give me liberty or give me death!'"

One of his colleagues pulled at his coat and whispered:

"Daniel Webster did not write the dictionary; it was Noah."

All for Love.

Boston Herald: The upper crust in Europe are exhibiting a romantic sentiment almost American. No sooner has the fabulously rich Fraulein Krupp taken to her bosom a mere lieutenant than King Edward consents to the betrothal of Prince Arthur of Connaught to the pretty daughter of an impecunious duke not of the royal line. Cupid is learning to shoot around corners.

Trouble Piling Up.

Washington Post: The politician catches it coming and going. Railroad passes have been abolished, and now there has been an increase in the price of shoes.

Another Merger.

A little bit of April
An' a little bit o' June;
A little bit of August
When the day approaches noon;
A little bit o' winter
As the sky gets cold and gray;
A little bit of everything
In one October day.

Laughin' with the sunshine
And a-tremblin' with the storm,
Complainin' because it's chilly now,
And then because it's warm;
It keeps us all a-livin' in
A most uncertain state
An' makes a feller feel jes' like
A weather syndicate!

Watterson's Choice.

Louisville Courier-Journal: And so, we shall continue to stand pat on Bryan. He may not be as smooth as Roosevelt, nor as rich as Hearst, but he has worn very well, all things considered, in spite of a rent or two in his coat. These may be mended in time for 1908, and in any event, as the monkey said, when he painted the cat's tail with a brush made out of the eagle's wing, "What's the good of having a cat that ain't sky-blue?"

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Moorhead Independent: The anarchist in New York who has just inherited a fortune will now assume the position of bomb dodger instead of thrower.

Walker Pilot: Pure sugar should have the color of a Hearst newspaper, says the pure food commisston. Please pass the adulterated sugar.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: The Redwing Republican remarks that "We get out of this world just about what each of us puts into it." We do, unless some thrifty and forchanded individual gets it first.

Northfield News: Before the Republican party will be fully entitled to public confidence it must take the management of its affairs out of the hands of bosses and machine politicians who have been accustomed to manipulate them to their own advantage. The people can have no confidence in a campaign against corporate aggression and for more perfect control of corporate power in the interests of the people, officered by men who in the past have managed the corporations' battles for them. Among these unfortunately will be found perhaps a majority of the men who have posed at the state capitol as Republican leaders.

St. Cloud Times: Down in New York Hughes, Republican candidate for governor, is appealing to Democrats to ignore party lines, and vote for the best interests of the state. Up here in Minnesota Cole and his orators are beseeching Republicans to stand by the party regardless of the interests of the state.

Austin Register: Lawson has now announced his intention of taking up writing short stories and novels. Society may now look out for a raking, both fore and aft.

Stillwater Gazette: Somebody please remove General Apathy. As a leader and an enthuser, he is a dead 'un.

Austin Transcript: How much of a real patriot is a man who will not take a little time once in two years to go to the polls and vote for those who stand for his political views?

New Ulm Review: Under the Ohio anti-trust law, an offending corporation can be proceeded against on its general reputation for wrongdoing. The regulation will make it a little harder for Mr. Rockefeller to pettifog himself out of court.

Eveleth News: Fame seldom comes to a man until after the undertaker has got through with him. It's a case of getting what you want after you have ceased to want it.

Buffalo Journal: Pennsylvania has been priding itself on the construction of a new capitol building within the amount of the appropriation, four million dollars. The new treasures has recently discovered that the interior decorations and furnishings have cost about nine million dollars, making the whole bill thirteen millions. Minnesota has reason to be proud of its capitol record.

North Branch Review: Who can fail to believe in future punishment when you read that a boy is sent to the reformatory for stealing eggs and Rockefeller is lauded for giving his stolen millions for educational purposes.

TRIED AND FOUND TRUE.

Argyle Banner (Rep.): The Duluth convention was not up to our expectations. The delegates assembled there did their work admirably with a single exception. That exception concerned the head of the ticket. They turned down Jacobson, the people's choice, and took up with a Shevlin protege. Cole's only recommend is that he is a Northern Minnesota man, and that sinks into insignificance when his Shevlin preferences are brought to light. His opponent, John A. Johnson, on the other hand, has been tried and found true to the people. He is a man of the coramon people, and every one of his official acts has demonstrated the fact that his sentiments are still with them. No corporate influence could be brought to bear upon John A. Johnson. He stood for the square deal advocated by Roosevelt. The campaign cry that Governor Johnson has been inactive will not be heeded by the people of Minnesota who have seen the good that he has done, although handicapped in many respects. Governor Johnson has done his duty as the executive of the commonwealth. His connection with the insurance investigation; the suits he instigated against timber thieves, and the part he took in the reduction and equalization of freight rates in Minnesota are alone sufficient to recommend him to the people of this state. Governor Johnson, in his message to the legislature in 1905, recommended "state development," which is now being used as a Cole slogan. In short, we see no reason why voters should turn down a man who has made good for one who is untried, and even regarded with suspicion.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago Daily News: Quickly made friendships are quickly ended.

Love may bubble over, but hate is apt to slop over.

Sorrows of life enable us to appreciate the joys thereof.

Better a penny given with a smile than a dollar given with a frown.

If you are looking for trouble, all you have to do is rub any man the wrong way.

An Up-to-Date Navy.

Harper's Weekly: The assumption that the biggest battleship can whip one a few hundred tons smaller leaves out of account the matter of seamanship, brains, courage, marksmanship and relative efficiency. American warships may not be as big as the biggest, but in personnel and equipment they equal anything afloat.

Our newest warships have a steaming radius of 5,000 miles, much greater than that of any other battleships afloat. This is a very important element in the fighting efficiency of all war vessels, and one in which the large English and Italian battleships are likely to fail.

"OUR NEXT GOVERNOR."

Anoka Free Press: The only ground that the Cole supporters have to stand on is the claim that their man is a Republican and the Republican nominee—which claim is practically false. It is not so very long since Mr. Cole declared in a public speech that he hoped God would strike him dead if he ever should become so degenerate as to join the Republican party. And as for his nomination—it is the nomination intended for Jacobson that he is strutting about in, stolen for him by the lumber trust's representative, Tom Shevlin of Minneapolis.

Do you suppose Governor Johnson would have the slightest thing to do politically with Tom Shevlin?

Can you possibly conceive of Governor Johnson being nominated by a gang which, in celebration of the nomination, throws open a large house of ill-repute for the free entertainment of the delegates who helped nominate?

This gives you a slight idea of the wide difference between Johnson and Cole. Partisan politics is a small matter when manhood, decency and common honesty are at stake.

Long Prairie Argus (Rep.): It occurs to us that some of the stuff used in this state campaign by the Republican papers would be better left unsaid. Governor Johnson is a good man and has done some things for the people that would not have been done if his opponent had been elected and to say he hasn't done anything will not tend to increase the faith of the people in the veracity of the papers. Governor Johnson is a good man and Cole is a good man.

Moorhead Citizen: John A. Johnson is the third so-called Scandinavian governor of Minnesota. If the Scandinavian people can always give to the people of this commonwealth, a governor, as good, pure and noble as John A. Johnson, the Citizen hopes they will continue to elect governors for a century to come, and elect them regardless of party politics, too.

Winona Independent: Despite the herculean efforts of the Republican state central committee to stem the tide of Johnson's growing popularity, the governor is making friends wherever he appears in the state, and he is appearing rather too frequently to suit the opposition. His election this year is much more certain than it was two years ago. Minnesota knows that in its present governor it has an executive who is the champion of the people's rights.

Red Wing News: Moses Clapp complains on the stump that Johnson "poses as a friend of Roosevelt." Well, Roosevelt poses as a friend of Johnson, also.

Argyle Banner (Rep.): The adage that there is a black sheep in every flock would apply well to the Republican state ticket. With the exception of Cole it is one of the strongest tickets ever placed in nomination in our state.

Little Falls Herald: John A. Johnson's rise under tremendous obstacles to be governor of Minnesota is a better advertisement of the state than A. L. Cole's depreciation of Minnesota.

St. Cloud Times: The speech of Governor Johnson, delivered at the Opera house Saturday evening was, without doubt, the most convincing argument, of a political nature, ever heard in St. Cloud. No voter listening to it, unless he be one who places party allegiance above loyalty to the state, could deny Governor Johnson's claim to a re-election. The clear, logical, unanswerable manner in which he presented the work of his administration and discharge of the duties of the office, together with facts and figures proving how he had redeemed his pledges of two years ago, carried conviction to every unbiased mind.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The reason a girl doesn't scream when a man tries to kiss her is somebody might hear.

A useful way for a woman to keep from being scolded by her husband is to do all the scolding herself.

You don't have to be married very long to have your honeymoon seem several centuries back in history.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS

HAVE HARD SCHEDULE

Minnesota Team Has Three Gruelling Contests in Prospect.

Ames, Chicago and Carlisle Have All Showed Strength.

Minneapolis, Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the Ames game scheduled for next Saturday is a critical one is now well settled. Ames neatly turned the trick on Nebraska, defeating the Cornhuskers 14 to 2; the first time Nebraska has been beaten on their home field in six years.

The followers of the Gopher team are worried over the outcome, as the Iowa giants showed great form, and a superior knowledge of the new rules. Capt. Jeanson of Ames showed himself to be a daring and dangerous player. He scored two goals from the field by splendid kicks, and he is looked upon for more spectacular work in the game Saturday.

Dr. Williams, who witnessed the Chicago-Purdue game in Chicago, brings news of warning to the Gophers, having the following to say about the Maroons: "It is a mistake to think that the Chicago line is weak. On the contrary, the line is heavy and strong, and the new rules make the game peculiarly fitted for men like Eckersall, Steffens and Eddings. Eckersall's kicking and the speed and dodging qualities of the trio give the Maroons a formidable back-field."

With the words of warning from Ames and Chicago, and the splendid showing made by Carlisle against Penn. State, the work for the Gopher squad is laid out, and if victorious there is no question as to the standing of Minnesota in the collegiate athletic world.

BASEBALL LEAGUE ON MESABA RANGE

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—From present indications it seems uncertain that the cities of the Mesaba range will form a semi-professional baseball league in the near future, which will play a regular series of games next year. The clubs from Eveleth, Virginia, Biwabik and Hibbing, have already signified their willingness to join such a league, and it is also hoped to include clubs from Chisholm and Grand Rapids. Even a four-club league, however, could be made a paying proposition, as all of the cities have proven themselves first class baseball towns.

Hibbing already has a first class team and enclosed grounds. A diamond was put in shape and enclosed in Eveleth last spring, and the city has shown by the large attendance at the games this summer that it is capable of supporting a winning team. Biwabik also has good grounds and seems to be baseball crazy, claiming it will put a team in the field that will defeat Hibbing. Virginia seems to be in the poorest condition, as they have no enclosed grounds, but it is thought that sufficient money can be raised during the winter to build a fence around the diamond in the early spring.

The greatest difficulty in the way of operating such a league is the matter of transportation, which would probably have to be by means of carriages.

When the proposed trolley line is built there is no apparent reason why this league should not be just as successful and play just as fast ball as the Northern leauge. Some enthusiastic fans are even suggesting a post season series of games next fall between the pennant winners of the Northern and Mesaba leagues.

ARE READY FOR ST. PAUL GAME

High School Players Hold Their Last Hard Practice.

Members of the St. Paul Mechanics Art high school football team are expected to arrive in the city this evening for the game tomorrow with the Duluth Central high school.

Yesterday afternoon there was a good response to Capt. McDevitt's appeal for more scrubs, and the senior team had plenty of material to work against. The result was a good practice.

No hard work will be indulged in this evening, but only a light signal practice will be held, so that the men will be in good shape for tomorrow's game.

The senior class will tender a reception and dance to the visiting players after the game tomorrow evening.

Will Meet Attell.

San Diego, Cal., Oct. 26.—Articles have been signed for a match between Abe Attell and Billy De Coursey to take place here Nov. 16 before the National Athletic club. They are to weigh in at 124 pounds at 3 o'clock on the date of the match.

BOWLERS WIN FIFTH CONTEST

Duluth Men Defeat Superior Team on Alleys of Latter.

The Duluth bowlers captured the fifth game of the series with Superior last evening, winning on the Supeiror club's alleys. This gives three victories to Duluth and two to Superior, and a sixth game will be played on Duluth alleys.

Sam Olson made the best showing last evening, piling up a total of 222 points in his first game. The Duluth men won all three games, giving them a total of 211 points for the evening.

SIR THOMAS WILL TRY AGAIN

Will Make Another Effort to Lift America Cup.

New York, Oct. 26.—At a dinner last night in his honor given by the Brooklyn Yacht club, Sir Thomas Lipton made the first formal announcement since his arrival in America, of what he intends to do towards making another effort to "lift" the America's cup. He declared he "hoped" he might be privileged to challenge for the international trophy and intimated that he would issue a challenge next year for a race, possibly in 1908 or 1909.

WONDERFUL SKILL OF TRAINED SEALS

Perform Difficult Task With Ease and Seldom Make Error.

New York, Oct. 26.—Visitors to the Aquarium and Zoological park have always watched with keen interest the various antics of the seals in their tanks and pools. Charles H. Townsend, director of the Aquarium, has made a study of the education of seals for the use of showmen. He has gained much information on this head from an interview which he had lately with a man who exhibited a troupe of trained seals in the city last spring.

"Their performances were as charming as they were wonderful," Mr. Townesend said. "The animals exhibited were of two kinds—the rather small spotted or harbor seals and the decidedly larger California sea lions.

The former have short hair-covered flippers, and were not capable of much activity on land, while the latter have long flippers, on which they can readily stand, and are among the most active of the seal tribe when out of water.

Half a dozen clown caps tossed in rapid succession are deftly caught by one animal on its nose, each pointed cap crown forming the peg on which to catch the next, until all are caught and stacked on the sharp nose of a single sea lion. Misses seldom occur. They bark in chorus or keep silent, as directed, and remain on their pedestals until called forward.

In view of the fact that seals are aquatic animals, without real legs to stand upon, their performances as a whole may be considered a triump of the art of training animals.

When questioned as to his methods of control, the trainer said that good results could be secured only through a constant appeal to the appetite of the animal. Each success it scores in performing is at once rewarded with a piece of fish.

In teaching, for instance, the balancing and bouncing of the large air-filled ball, the latter is first thrown at the seal's head with the idea of inducing it to toss it up with the nose.

This is tried repeatedly until the animal happens by accident to do what the trainer wishes, when it is promptly fed. The effort to make the creature understand what is wanted are continued patiently until the ideas of ball and food are associated in its mind. After that progress is more rapid.

"It requires," said Mr. Townsend, "about three months' steady training to make seals comprehend what is wanted of them, and a year's training is necessary in the best manner. The period of training varies according to the ability of the individual, some animals being much brighter than others.

"The seals are trained, however, without being entirely tamed, as the trainer desires that they shall remain active and spirited; the best results cannot be secured with an animal that has been made timid or bad tempered. The temper of even a well trained seal may continue a trifle uncertain, and the trainer himself is likely to be bitten if he gets too close."

The appetite of the seal is enormous. The nine animals in question eat about 150 pounds of fish daily, which is cleaned and dressed before being given to them.

It is maintained that trained seals live decidely longer in captivity than those kept without training. One of the sea lions in the troupe has been on duty for nine years, and, judging from its size when captured, it is now thirteen years old. Several of them have been at work for six or seven years. The small harbor seals, when trained, live apparently as long as the sea lions.

The necessity for activity in captive seals is fully appreciated at the Aquarium, where several naturally live individuals lived many years, while the lazy, sleepy kinds did not last long.

THIS WOMAN BELIEVES SHE IS A KISSING BUG.

Portland, Or., Oct. 26.—Possessed by the hallucination that she was a kissing bug, Mary Payne, an East side woman of Portland, started out in her night clothes from her home Wednesday morning, on a kissing crusade. Mrs. Payne suffers from a strange mental hallucination, and only a few days ago she created a sensation by running down Union avenue flourishing a revolver.

Wednesday morning, attired in nothing but her robe de nuit, she appeared upon the street and found her way to Neustadter's overall factory, at Union avenue and Salmon street. Rushing into the office with the announcement that she was a kissing bug, and was looking for a pair of wings, she made for the manager, the bookkeeper, clerks and men employes, vainly endeavoring to kiss them.

The girl employes roared with laughter as the woman flitted about the shop, trying to catch and kiss some of the men, all of whom had stampeded to places of safety. From upper shelves, behind posts, in vaults, they peered out at the kissing bug and dodged out of sight every time she came their way.

Patrolman Robinson was not quick enough. He suddenly found himself in the embrace of the woman.

After being got into the patrol wagon, Mrs. Payne declared that all she lacked to make her a perfect kissing bug was a pair of wings, and she beseeched the officers to provide her with those gauzy appendages. She was landed in jail, and probably will be examined as to her sanity.

McKibbin Furs

ASKS $200 A MINUTE FOR MANY STOLEN HUGS.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 26.—Two hundred dollars a minute is the sum Mrs. Minnie Mackey of Randall, a pretty telegrap operator, who is in the employ of tht Erie railroad, wants for the embrace she says she received from Louis Fetzer, a married man, of Warrenville.

She filed suit against him in common pleas court and declares that Fetzer, in spite of her protestations, put his arms around her and hugged her. She says that he held her in that position for ten minutes, and that she could not free herself.

She also avers that, while in this compromising and to her uncomfortable position, he stole several sundry kisses.

She suggests that all this was done in a manner that was highly improper for a married woman to endure, and consequently wants $200 a minute for the time she was forced to accept his attentions.

OFFER FORTUNE FOR LIVES OF CZAR AND CHILD.

Geneva, Oct. 26.—Thousands of pamphlets have been secretly printed in Zurich and Geneva, offering $25,000 for the life of the czar, and half that sum for that of his son. The pamphlets have been smuggled across the frontier into Russia.

The notice, which does not state how or by whom the money will be paid, ends as follows: "Rest assured that the sum mentioned above will be paid to you, or, if you die in doing the glorious and heroic work, to your relations, within three days of the accomplished act. Free us from czardom and slavery, and Russia will bless you."

MORE YOU CHEW THE LESS YOU EAT

Is Shown by Experiments Made on the Yale Students.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 26.—Prof. Irving Fisher, professor of political economy in Yale university, has been conducting experiments to discover whether attention to slow eating and the enjoyment of food would affect the working powers of individuals, and announcement was made in the Yale Alumni Weekly of some of the results obtained. The report says:

"These experiments were made with nine Yale students, based on previous experimtnts by Director Russell H. Chittenden of the Sheffield Scientific school.

"Prof. Fisher said the experiments began in January and lasted four and a half months. The men improved 50 per cent in endurance during the first half of the experiments.

"He now states the second half showed as marked improvement as the first, and that at the end of the experiment the men were able to do double the amount of physical work, as shown by gymnasium contests, that they were capable of in January. This increase in working power is ascribed by Prof. Fisher entirely to dietic causes.

"The first endurance tests, taken in January, followed the Christmas vacation, when the men had been resting, and were in especially good condition, while the final test was made at the end of a long term of college work.

"The men led sedentary lives and took no more exercise than they had been accustomed to before the experiment began. Prof. Fisher says the change in diet was not brought about by any prescription, but was entirely natural, the changes being due merely to the fact that the men masticated their food more thoroughly than previously.

"During the first half there was a thorough mastication of food, with attention to taste and enjoyment of food, and not to the mere mechanical obedience to appetite.

"The men ate nothing which they did not choose of their own free will. Nothing was set before them except as ordered by them. In order to enable them to choose properly a wide range of choice was provided. Meats were available three times a day, but it was found by thorough mastication the men gradually lost their desire for meat and substituted cereals, fruits and nuts, so at the end of the first half of the experiment their daily consumption of meat was little more than half its original amount.

"During the second part of the experiment the men continued the two dietic rules mentioned, and added a third—namely, when the appetite is in doubt as to its choice of foods the benefit of the doubt was given to non-flesh foods and other foods low in 'proteid.'

"In June it was found the men had decreased their consumption of flesh foods to one-sixth of the original amount of their 'proteid' brought down to the level advocated by Prof. Chittenden. One of the nine men failed to improve in endurance. He was the least faithful of the lot in following out the dietic rules."

WEAK-MINDED PERIOD IN THE LIFE OF MAN.

London, Oct. 26.—A curious theory about a weak-willed period in man's life is put forward by Dr. Dabbs, a literary medical man of some reputation.

Apropos of the recent railroad disasters at Salisbury and Grantham, Dr. Dabbs suggests that in each case the failure of the engineer's judgment, which was the cause of the accidents, may be explained by his age being between 55 and 62, during which period, Dr. Dabbs asserts, a man suffers a temporary failure in will power.

The lapse occurs at some time between the ages marking the change between middle life and age, when the declining years have fully set in and the judgment becomes more reliable, the temper more tractable and the man wiser in council.

Dr. Dabbs, who says he has collected data to support his theory, attributes some of the costly mistakes made by the British generals in the Boer war to this temporary loss of will power. He declares that no man between the ages of 55 and 62 should be allowed to have charge of any exacting enterprise, because he is not "master of that unclouded will which makes the greatest emergency his obedient slave."

CITY BURIED CENTURIES AGO WILL BE UNEARTHED.

Vienna, Oct. 26.—To reveal the buried treasures of Herculaneum, the civilized world is to combine in a gigantic work of excavation, and the classic city, which, like Pompeii, was overwhelmed by a Vesuvian eruption, is to be dug from its bed of ancient leva by an international body of savants.

This great scheme is described by Herr Sigmund Muntz, a well known writer. Prof. Waldsein is the leading spirit in the enterprise. He has obtained the support of the United States, England, France, Germany and Italy.

Prof. Waldstein has been received by Kaiser Wilhelm, who promised that if the international committee is formed, a German prince would be appointed as president. The professor also has had interviews with President Roosevelt, ex-President Loubet and King Victor of Italy.

Until the international committee is formed no details can be decided upon, but it is proposed to raise subscriptions in all the countries concerned toward the enormous cost of the undertaking, which promises to add greatly to the world's treasures of antiquity.

SEAMEN CONSULTED.

Great Britain Asks Their Views on Food and Canteen.

London, Oct. 26.—A remarkable departure from methods of red tape and autocracy has been made by the British admiralty. In order to ascertain the real views of the men, the committee appointed to inquire into the canteen and victualling arrangements are taking what amounts to a vote of the whole navy. The men at the principal naval stations in England were asked recently to elect representatives of each rating in every ship and establishment at the station. These representatives met and elected from their number one representative of each rating to place the views of the whole station before the committee. The men seem to be unanimous in the demand for better cooking, but they are divided on the canteen question. "The contractors can manage better than we could," said a sailor. "The beer is better than could be bought outside, and the prices are moderate; but contractors should not be allowed to put up prices on foreign stations, as is often done at present."

NEGRO RETELLS FOUL STORY

Millionaire's Coachman Again Seeks to Blacken Mrs. Hartje.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 26.—Clifford Hooe, the negro coachman formerly employed by Augustus Hartje, millionaire paper manufacturer, went on the stand, in criminal court today, to defend himself from the charge of perjury. He reiterated his first statements damaging to the reputation of Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, went into revolting details of the alleged meetings, and also swore that the confession and retraction, secured from him by the detective agency, was made under compulsion and while intoxicated.

John F. Scott, the father of Mrs. Hartje, listened to the recital and glared at the negro, who hung his head and looked straight at the jury.

MERCHANTS SATISFIED

West End Bnsiness Men Say Fall Trade is Big.

Conditions Better Right Now Than They Ever Have Been.

"I do not remember a year when business has been better that it is right now," said J. J. Moe, of Johnson & Moe, yesterday, in speaking of business conditions in the West end.

Other merchants say the same thing. The stores are well filled with customers no matter what time you go into them. The people seem to have lots of money and they are spending a good deal of it with their neighbors.

If you want to see a West end merchant on business these days, you have to stand around in his crowded store and wait until he gets a chance to turn aside from his customers long enough to talk to you for a moment.

The industries of the city are in full blast and most of the workers have employment.

Merchants in every line in the West end report good business.

"Business has been very satisfactory indeed this fall," said S. Morterud, the clothier. "The fall trade began early and there has been no let-up yet, I notice that other West end dealers can say the same thing."

Here and there is a vacant store building but for the present at least it means more for the prosperity of the neighborhood to have them vacant as the establishment of more business houses just now would overcrowd some lines.

But despite the occasional vacant store buildings—there are not half a dozen all told—the West end is exuding an air of decided prosperity.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Mrs. N. O. Narveson Hit by Rock, Which Crashes Through House.

Mrs. N. O. Narveson narrowly escaped death at her home, at Twenty-second avenue west and Fourth street, yesterday, when a large rock crashed through the side of her house and struck her, injuring her slightly. Had her position been slightly altered at the time, she would have been instantly killed.

An explosion of dynamite on Twenty-second avenue was responsible for the accident. C. R. Walquist and O. Nordquist, contractors, were blasting, to put in water mains.

One charge hurled the rock ninety-five feet and crashed through the side of the Narveson home. A ragged hole was torn in the side of the building, which was repaired by the contractors before nightfall. All the windows in that side of the house were shattered.

FROM COLD COUNTRY.

Ernest Olson Comes From North of the Arctic Circle.

Ernest Olson of Kiruna, Sweden, said to be one of the most northerly towns in the world, arrived in Duluth this week, and has accepted a position with the Duluth bakery, that being his trade.

Kiruna is located 104 miles north of the Arctic Circle, and Mr. Olson says that sleighing usually begins about the first of September and lasts until June. This year the snow did not come until as late as the 4th day of September.

Mr. Olson will make his home in Duluth, and his family is expected to arrive in the spring.

SATURDAY LAST DAY.

Voters Must Register Some Time Between 6 A. M. and 9 P. M.

Tomorrow is the last day of grace allowed those who have not registered. Citizens of the West end, and any other part of the city, who have not registered, and would like to vote at this election, must appear at the registration places in their respective precincts and register.

The polls will be open for registration, from 6 a. m. until 9 p. m. This gives all of the voters plenty of opportunity. Those who have no time to register during the day can do so in the evening, and the night-workers can go to the proper places at any time during the day.

A QUIET WEDDING.

Miss Gena Helm and John Dahlberg United in Marriage.

After the ceremony, the wedding party repaired to 2618 Cortlandt street, where the happy couple will make their home. There, a number of friends and relatives were waiting.

Bazaar a Success.

The bazar held last week by the Polish Catholic parish, in the West end, netted the church $2,800. This is very gratifying to the members and to the pastor, Rev. Father Leon M. Laskowski, who worked very hard to make the affair a success in every way. Last year the church derived a profit of $1,900 from the bazar.

Elected by Team.

Members of the Charles Mork baseball team of the West end held a meeting last evening and elected officers for the coming year. Robert Nelson was elected manager, Al Johnson captain and Al Swanstrom treasurer.

Arrangements have been made with Mr. Mork for the team to play under his banner for another season. The club has arranged for a skating carnival, to be held at Lincoln park roller rink in the near future.

Yanger Was Here.

With his departure this week for San Francisco, it develops that the obliging young man who has been behind the bar at the Esmond hotel for the past three months was no other than Benny Yanger, the prize fighter. Some of the wise ones knew it all along, but it is something of a surprise to many West enders.

Yanger has gone to Frisco to go into training for a fight to take place in the West. He would not say who his opponent was going to be. While he was in the West end Yanger was carrying on negotiations for fights with Joe Cherry and Jimmie Gardner, but both deals fell through.

EX-CONVICT CANNOT THRIVE.

New York, Oct. 26.—William F. Miller, who is remembered in connection with the Franklin syndicate, and who was released from Sing Sing, after he had offered evidence that led to the conviction of Robert A. Ammon, has not made a living out of a small restaurant he opened recently at 160 Montague street, Brooklyn. At first the business seemed to be prosperous, but when the customers learned that the man who took their money was Miller, his trade fell off.

BY RAIL ACROSS BAY OF HAVANA

Trains Will Pass Over Long Viaducts, It is Said.

Key West, Fla., Oct. 26.—The conversion of the City of Key West into the "Honolulu of Havana," with its docks thronged with great double-decked ferryboats, the construction of a railway line that goes to sea, leaping from island to island with long viaducts and bridges, on which the passenger bound for New York to Cuba will see from the car windows nothing but the blue waters of the Atlantic on the one side and the blue waters of the Gulf of Mexico on the other, an engineering feat involving problems now solved for the first time—all this is involved in the extension now in progress of the Florida East Coast railroad south of Miami, its present southern terminus, to the tip of the long, sickle-shaped series of the coral islets which the peninsula of Florida has thrown out of the tropic sea.

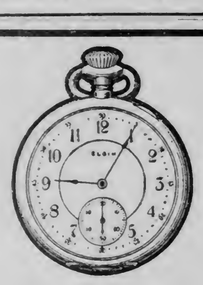

Within three years, unless some unexpected interruption occurs, the tourist may take an ocean voyage in a pullman, conveying in highest comfort along the line of the Florida keys, and thence in a huge car ferry nearly 100 miles across the straits, and out of sight of land, to Havana.

A thousand picturesque undertakings have marked the building of American railroads, yet none more picturesque than this work. Light-draft vessels can secure admittance at this point, and the distance to Havana is only twenty miles greater than from the city at the end of the crescent of keys, where ultimately a very great seaport will be constructed with terminals, wharves and docks. From the harbor of Key West the car floats, each capable of conveying a train of thirty cars, will ply to the Cuban capital.

Nature has assisted in the project. The little coral insects whose secretions have been petrified so plentifully all along the Florida peninsula have prepared a broad, flat surface to meet the needs of the engineers, some of it appears just above the water in the form of keys, some of it submerged a few feet beneath the waves that tumble in fom the deeper tracts of the sea. The coral rock provides a natural ballast—one that may be dug out in chunks large and small and used for filling where the line crosses one of the swampy tracts of the region.

The work is well under way. For a railroad thus to go to sea is something new in the history of engineering, but inventive genius is proving itself equal to the task. The greater expense is to be explained not only in the large mileage of bridges and viaducts, but in the exposed character of the line, for the cost exceeds that of average railroad construction—about $5,000 a mile, which is, perhaps, three times greater than in ordinary flat country where no long bridges have to be built. The total involved is from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000.

The construction work began in 1905 on the basis of surveys which had been made previously. All the grading of the section of the road on the mainland has now been finished and part of the viaduct work completed. Over nearly all the distance, fortunately, there is foundation of coral, which allows the concrete, reinforced with steel, to be firmly moored with steel supports. No roadway in the world, anywhere, experts say, will be safer than this, and none more beautiful, as it lies gleaming white in the tropic sun.

WILL USE PUMPKINS IN THE MAKING OF SUGAR.

Webster City, Iowa, Oct. 2.—The Iowa experiment station is doing some original work in breeding pumpkins in order to raise their sugar contents.

Prof. A. S. Beach of the horticultural department has selected ninety pumpkins of the different varieties, has planted them, and upon their attaining maturity, has submitted samples of each to Prof. L. G. Michael, chemist of the station, who analyzed them.

He found that their sugar contents varied from almost nothing to as high as 4 per cent.

This highest grade is one-third as much as the average amount of sugar found in sugar beets. Another interesting fact disclosed was that for weight pumpkins have less solid matter than milk.

The great variation in saccharine substances opens up a new field for breeding investigations. The object now is to pick the seed from the varieties giving the best chemical analysis, and to breed crosses of the different varieties.

WILD GAME DECREASING

Ducks, Geese and Swan Are Rapidly Being Exterminated.

Breeding Places Have Been Turned Into Farming Lands.

Washington, Oct. 26.—To the man with the blunderbuss and the man with the hoe, the department of agriculture ascribes the early extinction of the wild geese, ducks and swans in the United States. The astounding rapidity with which these wild fowls are disappearing from the American continent has led Prof. Wells W. Cooke, an expert of the biological survey of the department of agriculture, to make an investigation into this subject.

A remedy is at hand for the protection of the birds against the man with the gun, namely, prohibition of market hunting and spring shooting, but while Prof. Cooke goes exhaustively into the subject of destruction of breeding grounds through the progress of the man with the hoe, he offers no solution for this source of destruction, but holds out the consoling information that a few isolated breeding places will continue to exist for soem time to come, and that as long as they do exist there will be some wild fowl left. On this very interesting subject of destruction of wild fowl breeding places, Prof. Cooke has much to say.

He points out that the principal causes of the diminished number of waterfowl have been market hunting, spring shooting and the destruction of the breeding grounds for farming purposes. Previous to twenty years ago, market hunting was the principal factor in the steady diminution of the waterfowl. Since 1885, however, the problem of duck preservation in North America has entirely changed, according to Prof. Cooke. The prairie districts of Central Canada, comprising large portions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, are the "ducks' paradise." Within the United States this favored region extends to the northeastern part of Montana, the northern half of North Dakota and the northwestern corner of Minnesota. The whole vast region is dotted with lakes, ponds, sloughs and marshes that furnish ideal nesting conditions and unlimited food. Forty years ago every available nook was crowded with waterfowl, and the whole region, 200 miles wide by 400 miles in length, was a great breeding colony, and numbered its inhabitants by the hundreds of thousands. To the northward the forests formed a partial boundary; to the southward the general absence of suitable breeding grounds was the controlling factor, restricting the breeding waterfowl to the lakes and marshes within the territory named.

The number of breeding ducks decreased rapidly from Central North Dakota southward, until the outposts were reached in the lake region of Southern Wisconsin, the Kankakee marshes of Illinois and Indiana, a few favored spots in Southwestern Minnesota and the lakes of North Central Iowa.

In Southern Wisconsin in 1864 every pond, hole and damp depression has its brood of young ducks. During the next fifteen years the farming of the region changed from grain raising to dairying, the marshes were drained, the former duck nurseries became grazing grounds, and duck hunting there was a sport of the past.

An article written in 1877 on the birds of Northeastern Illinois enumerated twelve species of ducks as breeding commonly in the vicinity and three others as found there occasionally in the summer. At present a young brood of ducks in this region is rare. In 1885 some fourteen species bred near Clear lake, Iowa, and sixteen species at Heron lake, Minnesota. Now scarcely any ducks breed at either lake.

But the places just mentioned were merely the outskirts of "ducks' paradise." As great a change has taken place in the very heart of the breeding grounds. The Northern Pacific railroad cut across its southern border in Minnesota and North Dakota and this was soon followed by a north and south line to Winnipeg. Other short branches were built later, but the final doom of the ducks was apparent when the Canadian Pacific railroad crossed between Winnipeg and the Rocky mountains, the finest duck-breeding grounds on the continent. During the past decade the last stronghold of the waterfowl has been invaded, and soon the great breeding colonies of Alberta and Saskatchewan will be of the past. The population of North Dakota increased many fold from 1880 to 1900, and during this same period the vast prairies of Central Canada were changed to wheat fields.

It is evident, therefore, that in the United States and Southern Canada, in a few years there will be no great breeding colonies of the ducks most valued for sport and for the table. The future supply must come from isolated pairs and small colonies scattered in favorable localities over Canada and the northern quarter of the United States. Fortunately, such favorable places exist and will continue to exist for many years.

Prof. Cooke suggests that the open season for ducks be during the fall migration, and the game be not permitted to be harrassed all winter through. While protection during the breeding season should be the very least that sportsmen and naturalists should demand for the duck, it is pointed out that nothing short of absolute prohibition of spring shooting will check the rapid diminution of water fowl. Many species of ducks pair before they reach the breeding grounds. It is found, for instance, that blue wing teals, pintails, shovelers, mallards and other species begin mating at Currituck Sound, North Carolina, as early as Feb. 15.

Some interesting instances of what effective protection will do are cited in the report of Prof. Cooke's investigation. In San Luis valley, Colorado, protection afforded ducks within an inclosure about an artificial pond has caused to birds to resort to the pond in increasing numbers each winter. At Palm Beach, Fla., where no hunting is allowed within a mile of the town, ducks have become so tame that they will come within a few feet for food, while outside the mile limit the same birds are so wild that it is difficult to approach them within gunshot. In Jefferson county, New York, the enactment of a local law prohibiting spring shooting has resulted in several species remaining to breed, which formerly went much farther north to lay their eggs. These and other illustrations show that if properly protected many species of water fowl that formerly reared their young in the United States but were driven away by unrestricted hunting, would return and hunt up old breeding grounds.

One of the most interesting chapters in Prof. Cooke's report is that devoted to the migratory habits and peculiarities of ducks, geese and swans. While many breed under the torrid suns of the tropics, others migrate to the most distant parts of the globe for the purpose of nesting. As far into the frozen North as land extends, geese summer and successfully rear their young. A few species are non-migratory, but most of the ducks and geese are strictly migratory, and some perform extensive journeys. The brant of Northern Greenland, for instance, spends its winters along the South Atlantic coast of the United States. Some of the blue-winged teal that nest in Southern Canada desert North America in fall and cross the equator to spend the winter in Central and South America.

Some of the pintail ducks of Alaska and Northeastern Asia cross the equator to the islands of the South Pacific, some 4,000 miles from their breeding grounds.

The Atlantic coast from Chesapeake bay to South Carolina is especially favorable as a winter home for ducks, and until recent years countless flocks swarmed throughout this district. The ducks that winter on the Gulf of Mexico and along the South Atlantic states summer in the marshes and lakes of Hudson bay. These birds always follow the same course in their migrations. They breed and live east of the Rocky mountains. West of the Rockies, however, there is another great army of ducks. These breed in the Far Northwest in the summer and spend their winters in California. Thus it will be seen the wild waterfowl are the original, inveterate tourists, spending their summers among the glaciers of Alaska, or the Northern lakes, and passing their winters at Palm Beach, Fla., the Texas coast and California duck resorts.

There is no such thing as a census of the migratory aggregation, but it is known that the family of ducks, geese and swans is represented in the United States by sixty-four species and subspecies. Prof. Cooke discusses these sixty-four forms of waterfowl in detail, giving their breeding range, their winter range, and the interesting story of their fall and spring migrations. The report is known as biological survey bulletin No. 28, and the story that it tells comes right home to sportsman and naturalist.

Catarrh of the Stomach

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. R. S. Workman, Chicago, Ill., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom passing backward into the throat reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of indigestion, catarrh of stomach, billiousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

THE standard of excellence once vested in the exclusive tailor's products is now shared—and shared creditably—by these best of all ready-to-wear garments. The undisputed value of being able to try on a completed garment, to observe its effect, its style, and fit, without being called upon to pay for it unless acceptable, at once secures an advantage over made-to-order garments that appeals to every thinking man.

But add to that advantage the quality, style and fit of the best tailored products at about half the tailor's charges, and the argument becomes unanswerable.

ENGINE RAN AWAY AND ALMOST CAUSED WRECK.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Oct. 26.—A wreck on the Wisconsin Central was averted because the limited passenger train happened to be ten minutes late.

A switching crew at Abbotsford temporarily abandoned an engine, leaving it on the main track. For some reason, not now known, the engine started off up the track. Consternation prevailed when it was realized that the limited was coming from the opposite direction.

In desperation, Stanley, the only station where the train was scheduled to stop before reaching Abbotsford, was called, but the limited was supposed to have left Stanley when the runaway engine started on its journey. Rejoicing was great when the message came back that the limited was ten minutes late.

The runaway engine ran for ten miles, when it encountered a steep grade, which it could not climb because of failing steam. It was captured after the traffic on the line had been blocked several hours.

LATE DOINGS IN UPPER MICHIGAN

Loggers Offer $45 a Month and Unable to Get Men.

Calumet—Labor is the serious problem which confronts Northern Michigan lumber companies, and because of the scarcity of men there may be a reduced cut of timber in the camps this season.

From nearly every section come complaints. In Baraga county bids of $45 a month recently did not secure all the men needed in logging operations. The scale throughout the north country woods seems to range from $35 to $45. One contractor says he would rather let his timber remain standing than pay such wages. Unless labor conditions improve, he says he will not cut any logs this season.

There will be a few camps operated in the neighborhood of Negaunee and Michigamme, but the pine in that section has been pretty well cleaned out.

Thomas L. Carey and A. M. La Court of Sagoka, Dickinson county, have taken a contract from the Spies Lumber & Cedar company to cut and haul 1,000,000 feet of pine, hemlock, basswood and elm logs. A camp is being established and a crew of twenty men and three teams will be employed. John Coughlin, a well-known landlooker and woodsman of Houghton county, is in Louisiana looking over a large tract of pine land which Houghton parties have an option on.

Anton Hanson of Ishpeming is engaging men for the Oliver Iron Mining company's logging operations four miles north of Michigamme. A temporary camp will be established at Beauford, Marquette county, and permanent headquarters will be established later two miles from there. About 100 men will be employed. All grades of timber will be cut, the pine being shipped to the company's mill at Champion.

Alex McCormack of Ontonagon has been engaged by the Nester estate of Baraga to operate a logging camp at Alston, Houghton county. A force of sixty men will be employed, and the logs shipped by rail to the mills at Baraga.

One of the choicest tracts of virgin white pine remaining in the upper peninsula is at Browns Spur, where the Sawyer-Goodman company of Marinette has a large camp in operation. The company's cut will be larger than that of any of the Menominee river concerns this season. Three regular camps are now in operation, one at Mass City, Ontonagon county; one at Amberg, and the other at Browns Spur. Contracts will also be taken by jobbers. Andrew Bjorkman of Iron Mountain will put in 3,000,000 feet for the concern.

About sixty men will be employed in the camp which the Diamond Lumber Company of Green Bay, Wis., will establish two miles south of the C. V. McMillan company's No. 5 camp, near Ontonagon, this fall.

The Ontonagon Stave & Veneer company plans to resume operations at its plant shortly. H. M. Bell recently visited Minneapolis, where the company is assured a market for all the staves it can manufacture. As soon as sufficient logs can be obtained the plant will be placed in commission.

R. E. Schneider of Grand Marais has purchased from the Marais Lumber company the old Colwell shingle mill, tram and wharf. It is likely the shingle mill will be repaired and operated.

Ishpeming—Alex Nelson, who has been ill for three or four weeks past, died Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. His condition had been critical for two or three days, so that his demise was not unexpected. Mr. Nelson was one of Ishpeming's oldest Scandinavian residents, he having settled here about thirty-five years ago.

Hubbell—A telegram was received here this week to the effect that another of Hubbell's young men has passed away in the West. Thomas F. Scanlon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Scanlon of Hubbell, died in a hospital in Spokane, Wash., last Saturday.

Huggard received injuries which resulted in complete paralysis of the lower part of his body. The judgment is the largest ever affirmed in a personal-injury case in Iowa.

YOUTHS WORKING THEIR WAY AROUND THE WORLD

Two Newark High School Boys Taking Interesting Trip.

Pay Their Fare Up the Lakes by Shoveling Coal.

With the intention of working their way around the world, two young high school graduates from Newark, N. J., arrived in the city yesterday, coming up the lakes on a freighter.

The young men made their appearance in the city hall this morning to request the city attorney to help them recover $2, which they had paid an employment agent. They paid for two jobs, expecting to be shipped to Mankato, but when the agent found they had no baggage to keep as a guaranty that they would work out their transportation, he refused to ship them and also refused to give them their money. The young men sought redress.

Attired in gray slouch hats, black sweaters, and the conventional peg top trousers with the cuffs at the bottom, they excited more than ordinary interest, when they informed the city attorney and Judge Windom of the nature of their errand.

"It isn't the money," said one of the young men. "We have money enough to pay our way to the coast, if necessary, but I hate to be beaten out of it. I would rather pay $5 than lose the $2 that way."

The city attorney telephoned the employment agent and the latter consented to return them their money.

The young men were then drawn into conversation with the municipal court officials. They are residents of Newark, and have just graduated from the high schools of that city. Their parents are in good circumstances, but the young men were anxious to see something of the world, and started out to work their way around it. They got to Buffalo in some manner, best known to themselves, and shipped as coal shovelers on a freight boat.

"How do you like shoveling coal?" asked Judge Windom.

"It's a swell job, that," responded one of the young men gazing ruefully at his calloused hands.

From Duluth they expected to ship west as railroad laborers, but were disappointed.

"If we just had one of these fancy coats, and couldn't talk English, we could get a job in a minute," said one of them.

"What do you mean, a mackinaw?" asked the court.

"I guess that's what you call them," replied the young man. "But I wouldn't wear one of those things."

"Well, wait until the cold weather comes and you'll swear by them," said the judge.

"We won't be here when the cold weather comes," replied the youth.

They saw the chance to ship to Mankato, and thought that they might as well go there as any place else, but the employment agent sized them up as two young men who were anxious to beat their way at his expense.

"We weren't going to throw the hooks into him," said one of the youths. "We would have worked out our fare all right. We don't want to beat anybody, but we don't want to get stung ourselves."

From Duluth their course is doubtful. They will probably ship to Dakota as railroad laborers, work out their fare, and then go on to the coast in whatever way they can.

The court advised them to stay right in Duluth.

"There is all kinds of work here," said Judge Windom. "Why don't you get out and hustle for a job for yourselves, and stick to it?"

The young men said they would be willing to do that, if they found something to their liking, with any future ahead of it.

"We are going to keep moving until we find something that suits us," said one of them. "If we don't find it we will keep on going, and see as much of the country as we can."

If they don't strike anything before they get to the coast, they expect to ship on a vessel for either South America or Australia.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Two of Sawyer Bandits Confess and Others Breaking Down.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Two of the bandits who looted the Sawyer State bank of $4,500—Bert Conroy and Jack Hayes—yesterday admitted guilt, and the other three—Charles Sullivan, M. H. Duff and Ed Robinson—are weakening under the cross examinations of the state and county authorities. They will be charged with burglary in the third degree, for which the maximum penalty is ten years.

The robbers have been identified as the gang that was in Minot Friday night. Conroy was arrested on a charge of vagrancy and was released Sunday night. It is thought there is a sixth man who has not been caught. This is indicated by the fact that there were six men in the Minot gang, and also by the fact that about $1,000 of the bank's money has not been recovered.

Special Agent Delaney of the Great Northern railroad has been detailed to assist the state authorities. He conversed with the men in the yeggmen's language and say they are professional yeggmen.

Robinson, who was shot in the leg, is in a precarious condition. He has been placed in the hospital with a deputy sheriff at his side.

Grand Forks—J. H. Pifer, a prominent farmer, living at Larimore, has made a little fortune this year out of a crop of potatoes, and he has taken pains to keep an expense account that cannot help but be valuable to farmers who have for years neglected to turn their attention to anything but wheat. These figures show further that this section of the state is well adapted to the growing of potatoes. Mr. Pifer made a profit of $41.93 per acre on an eighth of an acre less than fifty-three acres of land, or a total net profit on the tract of $2,206.25.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Terry—"Sage Brush Bill," one of the old timers on Bald Mountain, died after a brief illness with pneumonia. He came to this country in the early days from Texas, where he had been prominent in the frontier life of that wild country. He came from a wealthy and distinguished family, but hd cut off all ties, so that but little was known of him here. He had been a prospector and miner and had acquired possession of quite an acreage of mining ground.

Custer—Vaid Robinsen, who lived on a ranch about two miles from this place, was killed by the accidental discharge of a rifle Wednesday evening. Bert Heuman, a neighbor, who was returning from a hunt, stopped at Mr. Robinson' home. The two engaged in a friendly scuffle in which Heuman's rifle was discharged, the bullet passing through Robinson's hip. Before a surgeon could reach the place he had bled to death. Robinson came to this place from Nebraska last spring and was married last June. His wife is now visiting her relatives in Nebraska.

Rapid City—William Gardo, working on the Pierre extension of the Northwestern railroad, was killed by being run down by a gravel train about twenty-five miles east of here. He was working in the gravel pit and was struck by a gravel train which was backing into the pit. He lived a few hours after the accident. He came to this county a short time ago from Chicago and was about 40 years of age.

Sioux Falls—Coroner L. D. Miller, after carefully investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of Wendell Obert, who on Monday afternoon was found dead sitting in a chair in his home, with the burner of a gas stove fully turned on, but not lighted, decided that death was purely accidental and that it was not necessary to hold an inquest.

Chamberlain—Pysicians of this place, Oacoma, Presho, Murdo and other towns in the western portion of South Dakota, report that erythema is prevalent throughout that section and that hundreds of cases have come to them for treatment. They are somewhat perplexed as the disease is said not to be contagious and they are unable to account for its widespread prevalence.

ABOUT THE MOON.

Latest Ideas of Science as to Lunar Conditions.

Millions of years ago the earth was not the land bound, sea swept globe so familiar to us, but a liquid mass on which floated crust some thirty-five miles thick.

At that period, says the Strand Magazine, it turned on its axis at a constantly increasing speed that finally shortened the day to three hours. When that terrific velocity was obtained 5,000 cubic million miles of matter were hurled off by the enormous centrifugal force and our moon was born.

The cleaving of so large a body must have left some scar on the earth's surface. It has accordingly been suggested that the great basin now occupied by the Pacific ocean was once filled by what is now the moon.

Our moon has the distinction of being the largest of all planetary satellites; so large, indeed, that to the inhabitants of Mars it must appear with the earth as a wonderfully beautiful twin planet.

Because the moon rotates on its axis in exactly the same time that it revolves around the earth we are destined to see little more than one hemisphere. So slow is this rotation that the lunar day is equal to fifteen of our days. For half a month the moon is exposed to the fierce heat of the sun; for half a month it spins through space in the densest gloom.

Smaller in mass than the earth is, the moon's attraction for bodies must be correspondingly less. A good terrestial athlete could cover about 120 feet on the moon in a running broad jump and leaping over a barn would be a very commonplace feat. A man in the moon could carry six times as much and run six times as fast as he could on the earth.

Although separated from us by a distance that at times reaches 253,000 miles, and is never less than 222,000 miles, we know more of the physical formation of the single pallid face that the moon ever turns toward us than we know of certain parts of Asia and the heart of Africa. Powerful telescopes have brought our satellite within a distance of forty miles of the earth. Physicists have mathematically weighed it and fixed its mass at one-eightieth of the earth or 73,000,000,000,000 tons.

The moon presents aspects without any terrestial parallel. Rent by fires long since dead, its honeycombed crust seems like a great globe of chilled slag. Craters are not uncommon on the earth, but in number, size, and structure they bear, for the most part, little resemblance to those of the moon.

A lunar crater is not the mouth of a volcano having a diameter of a few hundred feet, but a great circular plain twenty, fifty, even one hundred miles in diameter, surrounded by a precipice rising to a height of five thousand or ten thousand feet, with a central hill or two about half as high.

Water cannot possibly exist as a liquid; for the temperature of the moon's surface during the long lunar night is probably not far from 400 degrees below the zero mark of a Fahrenheit thermometer, and the atmospheric pressure is so low that a gas under pressure would solidify as it escaped. Ice and snow are the forms, then, which lunar water must assume.

Because of the present paucity of water the moon's atmosphere is so exceedingly rare that startling effects are produced. Perhaps the most striking is that of the sunrise. Dawn and the soft golden glow that usher in terrestrial day there cannot be. The sun leaps from the horizon a flaming sickle, and the loftier peaks immediately flash into light.

There is no azure sky to relieve the monotonous effect of inky black shadows and dazzling white expanse. The sun gleams in fierce splendor, with no clouds to diffuse its blinding light. All day long it is accompanied by the weird zodiacal light that we behold at rare intervals. Even in midday the heavens are pitch black, so that, despite the sunlight, the stars and planets gleam with a brightness that they never exhibit to us even on the clearest of moonless nights at sea. They shine steadily, too; for it is the earth's atmosphere that causes them to twinkle to our eyes.

In the line of sight it is impossible to estimate distances, for there is no such phenomenon as aerial perspective. Objects are seen only when the rays of the sun strike them.

At times there may be observed spots which darken after sunrise and gradually disappear toward sunset. They cannot be caused by shadows; for shadows would be least visible when the sun is directly overhead.

They appear most quickly at the equator, and invade the higher altitudes after a lapse of a few days. In the polar regions they have never been seen. What are they? Organic life resembling vegetation, answers Prof. Pickering of Harvard university; vegetation that flourishes luxuriantly while the sun shines and withers at night.

A single day, it may be urged, is not sufficiently long for the development and decay of vegetation; but sixteen hours on the moon is little more than half an hour on the earth; a day lasts half a month, and may be regarded as a miniature season.

A STEADILY INCREASING

Share of Imports Formed by Articles in Natural State.

Increase in Exports of Articles Which Were Manufactured.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Articles in a natural state form a steadily increasing share of our imports and a steadily decreasing share of our exports. Articles upon which labor has been expended in preparation for consumption form a steadily decreasing share of our imports and a steadily increasing share of our exports.

An application of the new analysis recently adopted by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor to the trade of the United States from 1870 to 1906 shows that articles in the natural state formed but 25.72 per cent of the imports in 1870 and 45.62 per cent in 1906; while of the exports, articles in the natural state formed 67.85 per cent in 1870 and but 39.88 per cent in 1906.

The bureau of statistics, at the beginning of the present fiscal year, adopted a new classification of both imports and exports. The old classification of exports, adopted thirty-six years ago when the exports of the United States consisted chiefly of the natural products, grouped the exports according to the source of production rather than according to the condition in which they were exported, while the grouping of imports adopted twenty years ago also required certain changes to adapt it to present conditions.

The new grouping as applied to both imports and exports divides the articles into six great classes: Foodstuffs in the natural state and food animals; crude materials for manufacturing; foodstuffs partly or wholly prepared for consumption; manufactures for further use in manufacturing; and manufactures ready for consumption, while a miscellaneous group includes draft animals, seeds, and a few articles not falling naturally into any of the five great classes.

This new grouping has been applied by the bureau of statistics to the imports and exports of each year, extending back to and including 1870. Every article imported or exported in each of those years has been subjected to an examination as to the proper class in which it should be included and the entire list readjusted to the new grouping in each of the thirty-seven years.

The analysis of the commerce of the United States during the period from 1870 to 1906 made possible by this new grouping is interesting. A combination of the three groups, "foodstuffs in the natural state," "crude materials for use in manufacturing," and "miscellaneous," brings into one great group all articles imported or exported in the natural state as taken from the mine, forest or farm; and a combination of the other three groups, "manufactures ready for use," "manufactures for further use in manufacturing," and "foodstuffs partly or wholly prepared," forms one great group of articles which have been advanced from their natural state through the application of labor.

The final analysis of condition as well as class of articles imported or exported, which is rendered possible by this grouping and regrouping, shows that articles in the natural state form a steadily increasing share of the imports and a steadily decreasing share of the exports; while articles upon which labor has been expended in their preparation for consumption form a steadily decreasing share of the imports and a steadily increasing share of the exports.

In 1870 about three-fourths of the imports were articles upon which labor had been expended before their importation in putting them into condition for use in the United States. By 1880 the share had fallen to 64 per cent; in 1890 to 61 per cent; in 1900, 55 per cent, and in 1906 but 54 per cent, while the share of the imports which came in in the natural state grew from 26 per cent in 1870 to 36 per cent in 1880, 39 per cent in 1890, 45 per cent in 1900, and practically 46 per cent in 1906.

On the export side, the share of the domestic merchandise passing out of the United States in the natural state grew steadily less during the period, being in 1870 practically 68 per cent of the total, in 1880 62 per cent, in 1890 52 per cent, in 1900 42½ per cent, and in 1906 less than 40 per cent; while the share which articles manufactured or otherwise advanced by the application of labor formed of the total exports was in 1870 32 per cent, in 1880 38 per cent, in 1890 48 per cent, in 1900 58½ per cent, and in 1906 a little more than 60 per cent.

The tables as prepared by the bureau of statistics show also the share which each of the five great groups forms of the total imports or exports in each year from 1870 to 1906. On the import side, the group foodstuffs in the natural state, which is composed chiefly of coffee, tea, cocoa, rice, fruits and nuts, fresh fish, and spices, formed, in 1870, 12.38 per cent of the total imports and in 1906 11.07 per cent. The group crude articles for use in manufacturing, made up chiefly of India rubber, silk, wool, fibers, unmanufactured tobacco, chemicals, hides and skins, and uncut diamonds, formed in 1870 but 12.18 per cent of the total imports and in 1906 33.70 per cent. The group foodstuffs partly or wholly prepared, which includes chiefly sugar, dried or preserved fruits, cured or preserved fish, breadstuffs, wines and liquors, formed 22.08 per cent of the total imports in 1870 and but 11.54 per cent in 1906. The group manufactures for further use in manufacturing, composed chiefly of chemicals, iron and steel in a partially advanced state, lumber, diamonds cut but not set, and copper, lead, tin, and zinc in pigs, blocks, or ingots formed 12.51 per cent of the imports in 1870 and 18.07 per cent in 1906. Manufactures ready for consumption formed 39.69 per cent of the total imports in 1870 and but 24.77 per cent in 1906.

On the export side the group foodstuffs in the natural state and food animals, composed chiefly of wheat, corn, oats, fruits, and food animals, formed 11.12 per cent of the total exports in 1870 and 10.37 per cent in 1906. Crude materials for use in manufacturing, composed chiefly, on the export side, of cotton, coal, unmanufactured tobacco, crude mineral oil, and copper, lead and zinc in ore, formed 56.64 per cent of the exports in 1870 and 29.12 per cent in 1906. Foodstuffs partly or wholly prepared, which include chiefly flour, meat and dairy products, dried or prepared fruits, canned salmon, cottonseed oil for food purposes, oil cake, and spirit, wines and liquors, formed 13.53 per cent of the total evports in 1870 and 20.16 per cent in 1906. Manufactures for further use in manufacturing, consisting chiefly of furs and fur skins, copper, zinc, and lead in pigs, bars, etc., leather, tin plate, certain grades of iron and steel manufactures and lumber, formed but 3.66 per cent of the total exports in 1870 and 13.22 per cent in 1906. The group manufactures ready for consumption, which includes all forms of manufactures not included in the group manufactures for further use in manufacturing, formed, in 1870, 14.96 of the total exports, and in 1906, 26.74 per cent.

HIGH RATE

For Sword and Bayonet Wounds in Russo-Japanese War.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Surgeon Raymond Spear, U. S. N., states that of the wounds received by the Russian troops in the late war, about 1.75 per cent were inflicted with bayonets or sabers. "The Russian Cossacks," he adds, "were very adept in using their swords, also, according to the Russian officers, were more proficient than the Japanese in the use of their bayonets. That there should have been any such percentage of sword and bayonet wounds is a remarkable feature of the war. Both sides were armed with modern rifles, machine guns, field pieces, etc., all intended to render the approach of an enemy impossible, but as a matter of fact—night, the character of the country, protecting fields of grain, and, not least, the courage and roused fighting spirits of both sides, made this character of fighting possible. Men were stabbed over and over again in these charges; many died. Stab wounds by the Japanese broad bayonet through the chest and abdomen were very fatal. The blade was large enough to sever the blood vessels. The narrower Russian blade, unless it reached a vital spot, comparatively did not do the same amount of damage, but nevertheless was a very efficient instrument of death. Most of the bayonet wounds treated were of the extremities, and usually healed without any trouble, as bones were rarely involved. The sword wounds involved, as a rule, the upper extremities and the head. A number of the head cases presented fractures of the skull. If they were clean-cut and did not become infected, they did well."

S.S.S. CURES BLOOD POISON

The first outward sign of Contagious Blood Poison is a small sore or blister. As the poisonous virus becomes more firmly entrenched in the blood a red eruption appears on the body, the mouth and throat ulcerate, the hair begins to come out, glands in the neck and groin swell, copper colored spots appear on the breast, back, etc., and the unfortunate victim finds himself diseased from head to foot. Mercury and potash do not cure Contagious Blood Poison; they shut the disease up in the system and remove the outward symptoms for awhile, but when the treatment is left off the trouble returns. Then the system being weakened from the action of these strong minerals the disease makes more rapid headway than before. S. S. S. is the antidote for Contagious Blood Poison. It cures permanently and certainly by going down into the blood and removing every vestige of the virus. It is free from all minerals, and while purifying the blood it builds up the entire system by its fine tonic effects. S. S. S. destroys every particle of the poison and removes all danger of transmitting it to others. S. S. S. cures Contagious Blood Poison because it is a perfect blood purifier. CONFUSION RELIEVED

By Renumbering All Cars of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Gigantic Task Will Take Fully a Year to Complete.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 26.—As one big facility in moving and taking care of its nearly a quarter of a million freight and passenger cars, the Pennsylvania railroad is having them all renumbered. It is a gigantic task, one that will take fully a year to complete, but when the work is done there will be none of the confusion which has brought grief to the Pennsylvania's car record office and car accountants of other roads.

Troubles arose from the fact that every one of the individual companies which go to make up the Pennsylvania system has its own car numbers. In addition to that, the similarity of the legends, "Pennsylvania" and "Pennsylvania company," often caused one name to be reported when the other should have been. In the system there might be eight or ten cars with the same number, and if the small initials of individual ownership were left out of a report there was no way of telling what car was really meant.

For example, take the number 2,015. It was a gondola car on the Northern Central, the Buffalo & Allegheny Valley, the West Jersey & Seashore; it was a box car on the Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington, the P., C., C. & St. L., and the Erie & Pittsburg, and it was a coke car on the Pennsylvania railroad proper. If some agent sent in a report on "Pennsylvania, 2,015," neglecting to mention the smaller initials, he might be reporting on any one of the seven.

When a Pennsylvania railroad car was reported as a Pennsylvania company car, or when any car was not reported with all the lesser details, it caused a vast deal of trouble and expense. As a matter of fact, the small initials of individual ownership were overlooked and not reported in a majority of cases.

To do away with the confusion, it was decided to renumber the entire car equipment, both East and West, assigning to each lesser company included in the system a certain series of consecutive numbers, this series being further divided so as to indicate kind, class and capacity. The result is that the number alone will tell all there is about a car to know, as it can be identified by reference to the official list.

It is a very intricate and complex job to get the new numerals on the cars. The size of it can be realized only when one considers that the cars are of a big railroad system are scattered over the whole country, many of them staying away from "home" months, even years. Before such a one can be renumbered, of course, it has to return to the Pennsylvania system.

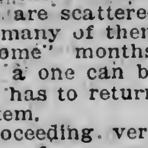

The work is now proceeding very rapidly. The general plan for renumbering was mapped out in the Pennsylvania offices at Altoona. A table was made, showing the original number of every car and the new number it was to receive, besides the kind, class and capacity. Then copies of this table were sent to agents all over the system, every one being directed to look out for unchanged cars coming into his territory and change them at once. The result of this scheme has been that the new numbers have been put on with great despatch.

To the passenger cars belonging to the lines east of Pittsburg are given the numbers 1 to 7,000 and to those belonging to the lines west of Pittsburg the numbers of 7,001 to 10,000. The freight cars are numbered from 10,001 to 500,000 on the Eastern lines and from 500,001 to 999,999on the Western lines.

To make the task as easy as possible it was arranged that the largest ownership namely, the Pennsylvania railroad proper, should carry the lower numbers. This meant that in the new scheme many cars would fall into the proper class, without having to be numbered.

The cars are to be repainted, too, but that is, of necessity, much slower work than the renumbering. There are comparatively few places where it can be done, while new numbers can be put on at pretty nearly any station where there is a small paint shop. When the repainting is done every car on the Eastern lines will have the word "Pennsylvania" on the side, above the number, and the letters "P. R. R." on the end. On the Western lines "Pennsylvania Lines" will be the legend for the side of a car and "P. L." for the end.

INFRINGEMENT ON PATENT FURNACE

Toronto, Oct. 26.—F. H. Clergue's type of ore-roasting furnace is alleged to be an infringement on the patent furnace of Francis Herreshoff, of New York, chemist, and brother of the famous yacht designer. Justice Burbidge of the exchequer court is hearing the Herreshoff claim in Judge Winchester's chambers. The suit is styled an action against the Lake Superior Power company. It was begun in 1903, but was delayed these three years by the liquidation and re-organization of the company.

The plaintiff sets forth that the Lake Superior company purchased one of the furnaces built under Herreshoff patent in 1898, experimented with it and found fault with the fastening of the rabble arms. They, however, constructed sixteen furnaces after the Herreshoff model, changing the connection of the arms to suit their own ideas. This construction permitted the escape of air from the shaft into the furnace, preventing them from obtaining a sufficiently rich gas. In 1901 they discarded the arms and shafts and put in new ones similar to the Sjostedt patent.

It is alleged the Lake Superior company is constructing and selling to others for use in the Dominion this style of roasting furnace and infringing on the plaintiff's patent.

He asks for an injunction restraining the power company from making and selling these, and for an accounting of their profits from any sales so far.

The power company claimes that the furnace it manufactures is protected by a patent held by F. H. Clergue, and there is no infringement on the Herreshoff rights.

MAN PURLOINS RED-HOT STOVE

Butte, Mont., Oct. 26.—Gamer than the Spartan youth who allowed a wolf to gnaw his vitals rather than admit the theft, Patrick Friel carried a hot stove for nearly a block in an attempt to make away with it. The fire in the stove sputtered merrily, and Friel's hands blistered and pained. But the alleged thief was game to the core.

Without pausing for an instant, the man continued his way down the street, and but for the intervention of Detective Frank White, would have undoubtedly landed the coveted burner in his cabin, several blocks' distant.

Following along behind her nervy spouse, Mrs. Friel is said to have brought up the rear of the procession, carrying an armful of stovepipe. The scene attracted many spectators, and caused considerable excitement for a few minutes.

The stove is alleged to have been stolen from a rooming house at 350 South Main street, and is said to be the property of Robert Wynn. The patrol wagon was summoned and Detective White wanted to bring the stove along as evidence.

"Not this evening," replied Barney Lavell, the patrol driver. "It's pretty cold, but I'm not going to take a chance of having the hoodlum wagon transformed into a pile of ashes." And the stove didn't ride.

The owner finally sent an express wagon to the scene and had the stove taken back to its former resting place. Friel will be charged with petit larceny.

THE SCALING OF ACONCAGUA

Helting Tells of Trip Up Highest Peak of Andes.

Geneva, Oct. 26.—Herr Helting, the Swiss Alpinist, tells in Alpina, how he climbed Aconcagua (22,860 feet), the giant of the Andes, in January last, a feat which was briefly announced at the time. The first ascent was made by an Englishman, Mr. H. Vines, thirty years ago, since when dozens of other climbers who have made the attempt have failed. "My friends, Reichert and Stoeppel, and myself left the camp," says Herr Helting, "and reached the spot from which we intended to start the real climb. Stoeppel, with true sportsmanship, there agreed to return, as his presence would only have hindered us, and then it was a case of each man for himself. We started at daybreak, but at 8 o'clock Reichert was done and gave up. He could not stand the fatigue and rarified air. He took with him his own and my porters, and descended to safety. From 12,000 feet onwards I was alone. The cold was so intense, in spite of the fact that the sun was shining, that I thought I should be frozen to death, although I was wearing three thick woolen undervests, two heavy waistcoats, two pairs of gloves, a heavy suit of clothes and a specially-made overcoat. I took nothing to eat or drink with me, and for twenty-four hours I tasted nothing. I followed the route that Mr. Vines took, every yard thinking I would drop. At last I arrived 500 yards from the summit, to reach which was only a walk up a couloir, but I thought I would never finish the climb. With force of will more than strength of body, I continued the terrible ascent, forced to stop to take breath every twenty yards or so, and at last, just as the sun was setting, I arrived at the top—the top of South America. I cannot describe my first impression or feeling, but my happiness was complete. I was at a height of 22,860 feet. After a short rest in the twilight, for at this height it is never dark, I began the descent as if in a dream, and finally arrived at our camp at 3 o'clock in the morning, nearly dead but very contented. My friend Reichert attempted the same feat next day, but failed, and was obliged to return owing to a strong wind."

Judge Windom Thinks Him Guilty of All Warrant Charges.

Eugene Nellis, who was arrested last week upon complaint of his wife, was fined $16, by Judge Windom in municipal court yesterday. In securing the warrant for her husband's arrest, Mrs. Nellis stated that she had been shamefully mistreated by her husband.

She said at that time that he had just returned from the Dakota harvest fields and had been celebrating by imbibing a good lot of evil whisky. When he went to their home at 123 Fifty-fifth avenue west and did not find her there he became very angry. Going over to her sister's house and finding her there, it was stated he gave them both a sound beating. They then called a couple of officers, who locked him up.

At the trial of the case yesterday, Mrs. Nellis denied that her husband had assaulted her and said that he had simply asked her to go home with him, which she did willingly. Judge Windom took this evidence with a grain of salt, however, and after the state and the defense had rested their cases, he decided that the man was guilty of all the warrant charged, and imposed the fine of $16.50.

SKIPS ARE CHOSEN.

Curling Club is Preparing for Winter--- Many New Members.

Eleven skips have been chosen by the Western Curling club for this winter's sport, who will soon choose their rinks and start practising after the first cold snap this fall. The skips appointed are as follows: G. G. Meldrum, A. G. Macauley, S. W. Hanchett, E. J. Zauft, M. J. Filiatrault, A. H. Donald, Rev. A. J. Hoag, H. Hewitt, H. Giggort, K. Mconald and Martin Meldahl.

Thirty names have been added to the membership roll of the club since the meeting last month, and the membership committee is carrying on a lively campaign in their efforts to still further increase the membership. Arrangements have been made to increase the size of the waiting room for the public, and the curlers' room will be made about three times its present size. Another sheet of ice will be installed if about twenty more members can be secured before cold weather.

CARPENTER BADLY CUT.

C. D. Marble Injured in Fall While at Work.

While at work making repairs on a house at the corner of Main street and Fifty seventh avenue yesterday, C. D. Marble was quite seriously injured, by receiving a bad cut on his cheek and throat as the result of a fall. Mr. Marble is an aged carpenter of West Duluth, and in some way slipped down while walking from one part of the building to another. It is thought that he was carrying an ax at the time, and when he fell, struck this. He sustained a bad gash upon his cheek and throat, but it is not thought that the wound will result in permanent injury. Dr. Keyes attended Mr. Marble and dressed the wound.

INSANE OVER RELIGION.

Mrs. Anna Maria Woods is Taken In Custody.

Lieut. Griggs of the West Duluth police department, last night placed in custody Mrs. Anna Maria Woods, who has shown evidence of insanity during the last few weeks. At the time she was in the employ of H. L. Scribner as a domestic. The woman's brother, Victor Anderson, assisted in taking her to the station and stated that she had been unbalanced mentally for several weeks and that as she grew worse nothing could be done with her. Mrs. Woods seems to be deranged on the subject of religion. Her mother, Mrs. O. L. Anderson, lives at 519 Garfield avenue. Victor Anderson made a complaint before the judge of probate this morning and the woman will be examined shortly.

REGISTER TOMORROW.

Last Chance to Get Names on the Voting List.

The last chance for West Duluthians to register for the general election will be given tomorrow. The registration places will be open from 6 o'clock in the morning until 9 in the evening and nobody should allow this chance to slip by. Everyone who did not vote at the primary election or who did not register Tuesday will be given last chance tomorrow.

Those who find that they cannot be in the city tomorrow can register by affidavits. That is, they may secure the affiidavits which must be filled out before a notary public, and their names can be placed on the voting list.

Want Crossing Installed.

As a result of the continued wet weather the row of houses and stores on the east side of Central avenue, between Grand avenue and the railroad tracks, are practically unapproachable, unless one wades through mud and mire ankle deep. The property owners are very dissatisfied over this unhandy state of affairs and are agitating the building of a couple of crossings at convenient points. One of these should be located at the corner of Grand and Central, as there is no crossing whatever at this point. The board of public works will probably be asked to take the matter up.

Entertains Lady Friends.

Miss Mabelle Robb entertained a few of her friends last night at a very pleasant evening party at her home, 410 North Fifty-second avenue west. Six young ladies were present and Misses Brayden, Haley and Foster won the prizes. The following are the names of those present: Misses Blockwood, Weddell, Brayden, Haley, Foster and Sullivan. Refreshments were served.

He says the people are still wild over the rich finds of siver there, and that more people are pouring into the little city of Cobalt, Northern Ontario, every day. Half the population of the town live in tents, but despite that there are some substantial buildings.

The boys are Mike Walt, aged 12 years; Webster Arseneau of 21 East Second street, aged 9 years, and Sidney Gordon Harris of 108 East Second street, aged 11 years.

The Arseneau boy was found this morning on Superior street, but the other two lads are still missing.

It is believed that they ran away from home, and are hiding from their parents either in Duluth or Superior.

COOK ACCUSED OF GUN PLAY

Alonzo Hopkins Charged With Assault in Second Degree.

Trouble between two cooks employed on Northern Pacific dining cars resulted in the arrest of Alonzo Hopkins on the charge of assault in the second degree, last evening.

Hopkins, when arraigned this morning, entered a plea of not guilty, and his hearing was set for Tuesday.

M. Lowry, the complaining witness, is cook on dining car No. 1064, while Hopkins is cook on car No. 1060. Lowry claims that Hopkins, who was formerly employed on the same car with him, stole some beer from the ice box. When Hopkins entered Lowry's car last night, Lowry accused him of it, and Hopkins is claimed to have threatened to shoot any person that accused him of stealing. Lowry followed him from the car, and Hopkins is claimed to have drawn a revolver and to have fired at him. Lowry then ran through the yards and got away, the bullet not striking him.

Hopkins, when arrested, said that he had not fired any shot, and that he did not carry a revolver.

GIVES MOSQUITO ADVICE.

State Entomologist Washburn Counsels American Civic Workers.

Milwaukee, Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the closing session of the American Civic association convention today, Prof. Frederick D. Washburn, state entomologist of Minnesota, read a paper on "Mosquito Extermination," going into detail as to the possibility of exterminating the various kinds of that pest. He advocated drainage as probably the best solution of the problem, and said that all shore lines of ponds should be improved. He advised the association to take up the matter of cleaner backyards, as tin cans and broken crockery, where water would be likely to lodge, were breeding places for the insect.

SAYS EMPLOYER ASSAULTED HER

Cook Claims Former Mistress Hit Her With Poker.

"Why, she is big enough to handle two like me," was the answer of Mrs. H. W. Johnson, in police court this morning, when she was accused of assaulting a former cook in her employ, Anna Swenson.

"It's ridiculous," said Mrs. Johnson. "I never assaulted her, and couldn't if I wanted to."

Mrs. Johnson keeps a restaurant at 2532 West Superior street, and the girl, who was formerly employed there, says that Mrs. Johnson hit her with a poker and tore her waist.

The trial was set for Tuesday morning.

EAGER FOR THE REPORT

Property Owners Anxiously Await Action of Real Estate Exchange.

Division of Gross Earnings Tax Desired at This Time.

Property owners along Garfield avenue, Ramsey street and Oneota street are anxiously awaiting some report of progress on the suit which the Real Estate exchange is planning to bring to compel the state to divide up the gross earnings tax on a pro rata basis, to help take care of assessments for street improvements and other city purposes.

On such streets as these, there is a very large percentage of railroad property, and if an attempt were made to improve them the city's share of the work would be enormous, as the amount that would otherwise be assessed against the railroad property must be paid from the permanent improvement fund.

Improvements are desired on all three of these streets next year, and the question is, therefore, of supreme importance at this time, especially as the permanent improvement fund is practically all pledged for next year, already.

Last spring the exchange appointed a committee to investigate the feasibility of bringing a suit to compel the state to distribute the gross earnings tax in proportion to the valuation of the railroad property in the various towns and cities, in order that the municipalities might get some return for the police and fire protection, and other city accommodations and safeguards furnished the railroads, but the committee has not yet reported.

Several property owners on Garfield avenue appeared before the board of public works this morning to see if something could not be done to compel the railroad to pay its share of improving the street, but the board was powerless.

The repreesntatives in the legislature from the three cities have tried many times to get the legislature to act, but it has been found impossible on account of the stand taken by the rural members. The only way left, therefore, is, apparently, through the courts.

Those present at the meeting this morning pointed out that usch action would solve the question of the Wisconsin Central road and its entrance to the city, and that this made it of especial importance at this time.

THE MASTER VICE.

So Is Procrastination Described by Confessed Victim.

"The bane of my existence," said the procrastinating man, "has been my habit of putting things off. I never do today what I can put off till tomorrow.

"The result is that I am always putting things off and never doing any more than is necessary for my current daily hand to mouth support; and so, as the saying is, I never have anything. I am not independent, but always dependent upon somebody else for the work that will enable me to live, and so I can never say my soul is my own. I must do the work I am set to do by some stronger man, whether I like it or not, and so I plod along, just getting through, while the man who collars things gets on.

"Of late years as I have come to realize its evil effects and the enormous difficulty of overcoming it I have come to think that the master vice of all is procrastination. And coming to think thus has disturbed me a little, because I have to give up an originally preconceived and long cherished notion.

"I had long held that the most nearly ineradicable of personal vices was gambling, but now I thought the most difficult of all vices to cure oneself of was that of procrastination. Was I wrong then? And could it be that I was wrong now?

"This, as I say, disturbed me a little; but now on this point I rest quite easy. For I have discovered contradictory as this, at first thought, might seem, have discovered that I was right then and that I am right now.

"For now I discover that the vice of gambling is but another phase of, or at least the outcrop of, that of procrastination. The great majority of those given over to gambling hope to get something for nothing; they hope to get money without effort. They put off from day to day the hard, unflinching work that would give them a sure thing, without chances, on the race of life, and make just enough to indulge their vice and their vain hopes.

"So gambling is really but a form, or outcome, of the vice of procrastination. And by the same line of reasoning I suppose we might say the same of drunkenness, which is essentially a procrastinating vice; we put things off today; today we will drink; we will work tomorrow.

"And I don't know but what we should find that every ill proceeds from the vice of procrastination; and so this, which might seem but a form of laziness, is really the master vice; and I am one of its most closely bound victims. I don't drink, and I don't gamble; but I have got the fatal habit of putting things off.

"Inertia, dullness, lack of power from want of exercise, come from it—the procrastinating man is always at the same dead low level. He is always going to do something, never doing it; just pulling through with the work he has to do, and gaining correspondingly small rewards. He never knows the joy of doing things nor gathers in its profits, but habit bound, he settles down in lifelong slavery.

"And I am one of those victims! Occasionally I do rouse up and do something out of my set routine, and in the accomplishing of some rugged task that I thus take up I find a great new joy and pride; and I am going to keep this up; but next day I sink to the old level again, and stay there; it is so much easier to put things off than to do things, and this, the trunk bad habit of which all others are but branches, is so deep rooted.

"But I am not without hope. I have lopped off those branches of which I spoke, and I am prying, prying, around the roots of the trunk."

THINGS NATURE MAKES.

Nature is something of a manufacturer herself.

In the case of certain cactus, marvelous natural pottery is produced. Woodpeckers excavate nests in the trunk and branches, and to protect itself the plant exudes a sticky juice, which hardens, forming a woody lining to the holes made by the birds. Eventually the cactus dies and withers away, but the wooden bowls remain.

As a weaver, nature also produces fine work. Certain tree barks and leaves furnish excellent cloth, as, for instance, the famous tapa cloth used in the South Sea islands.

Nature is a glassmaker, too, according to the Indian Review. By discharging her lightning into beds of quartz sand, she forms exquisite little pipes of glass.

She makes valuable ropes of various kinds in the shape of tropical vines and creepers, and she is even a lace maker, as witness the lace tree of the West Indies.

SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Grain Blockade at Buffalo is Becoming Steadily Worse.

Communication Says Shipments Must be Reduced From Duluth.

Owing to the fact that the railroads out of Buffalo cannot move the grain as fast as it comes into that port, the situation is becoming very serious. From reports from the East there is no relief in sight, and the grain outlook is expected to become worse steadily. A communication received from Brown & Co. of Buffalo, vessel agents, to vessel agents of Duluth, reads as follows:

"Owing to scarcity of cars, it is becoming difficult to find room for grain cargoes; and as nearly as we can judge, the situation is going to become rapidly worse. We fear we are at the beginning of one of the worst grain blockades in the history of our port. It can only be averted by reducing shipments of grain by lake to Buffalo."

HAS RECORD FLAX LOAD.

Steamer James Laughlin Loads 393,000 Bushels of Seed.

The steamer James Laughlin left port today with another record to her credit, this time taking out the biggest cargo of flax ever carried on the Great Lakes. She finished loading at about 11 o'clock last night at the Great Northern elevator and her cargo consisted of 393,000 bushels, all taken on in one day.

The Laughlin was scheduled to take 390,00 bushels so that she actually loaded 3,000 more than was estimated. She drew eighteen feet, six inches forward and nineteen feet aft. The grain belongs to the American Linseed company. Before the Laughlin took on this record cargo the steamer Stanton had held the record for a few days, having taken from the Duluth port 353,000 bushels of flax. This honor did not belong to the Stanton long enough for her get her cargo unloaded as the load of the Laughlin smashed all records.

Changes Reported.

Information has been received by Capt. Albert Swanson, in charge of the local hydrographic office, that Point Abbaye shoal (N.), first-class can buoy, and Point Abbaye (S. E.), secondclass nun buoy, were discontinued for the present season, Oct. 23, and their positions occupied by markers painted similarly to the markers, which have been removed.

Steamer Cowle Released.

Port Huron, Oct. 26.—After lightering over 1,000 tons of iron ore, the tugs Reid, Salvor and Winslow succeeded in releasing the steamer Cowle early today, after it had been aground since Saturday morning. It is now lying at Sarnia, reloading the cargo.

Schooner Off Rocks.

Alpena, Oct. 26.—The schooner Emma L. Neilson was released from False Presque isle late yesterday afternoon by the life savers from Middle Island. The vessel was only slightly injured.

Chicago Stops Grain Shipping.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—The movement of grain has come nearly to a dead stop on account of the shortage of cars at Buffalo. The railroads show no disposition to give assurances that grain will not stick in Buffalo elevators and shippers have passed out of the market for vessels. What little business is being done is in small lots at 1⅝ cents. For a number of seasons Lake Erie grain ports have had their annual blockade in grain, beginning about this time.

Lake Sailor Drowned.

Buffalo, Oct. 26.—William Cole, a sailor on the steamer Luzon, fell from a ladder yesterday morning and was drowned. His residence is not known.

Ore Barge Runs Ashore.

Detroit, Oct. 26.—The barge Roebling, in tow of the D. N. Houghton, bound down with ore, ran on the east bank below the lower entrance to the St. Clair Flats canal Wednesday night. The work of releasing the stranded boat will begin when the sea goes down. All passenger boats had rough times on Lake Erie and Lake Huron Wednesday night and were delayed in reaching port.

INDIANS QUIET BUT OBSTINATE

More Troops of Cavalry Ordered Because Utes Refuse to Return.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 26.—The band of Ute Indians who are to be rounded up by the United Statts cavalry, and escorted back to their reservation, are now on Little Powder river, about forty miles north of Gillette, and are temporarily camped there on account of a storm. They are quiet and have made no trouble.

Maj. C. H. Griers— in command of troop M, Tenth cavalry, which was sent to take the Indians back to their reservation, decided, after they refused to surrender, to await reinforcements before rounding them up and orders have been issued by Maj. A. J. Greely, to send more troops of the Tenth cavalry from Fort Robinson, Neb. As soon as these arrive, the entire battalion will surround the Indian camp and demand the surrender of 300 Utes, who are well armed, and who declare that they propose to go to South Dakota, to visit the Sioux. If they still refuse to accompany the troops, an attack will be the only alternative.

Sundby Tea Company Claims Damages of Its Former Employe.

Wants Him Restrained From Working for a Business Competitor.

Is an employe under contract, who quits his job and begins work for a competitor, liable for damages, and can he be restrained from working for that competitor?

This interesting question has been raised by a damage action that the Sundby Tea company has instituted against Gust Johnson in the district court, and in which the tea company seeks to obtain an order restraining Johnson from longer working for the competitor, or at least for six months.

In its bill of complaint, filed by John Jenswold, Jr., this morning, the Sundby Tea company, a local corporation that deals in teas, coffees and spices in Duluth and the surrounding country, claims that it employs a number of men styled drivers on whom it depends to solicit orders and make deliveries. The company takes the position that only through its drivers or employes is it brought into any business relations or have any knowledge of its customers, so that the trade which the drivers can hold by reason of the confidence and trust of the customers and patrons is a valuable asset to the employer.

The tea company claims that it engaged Johnson as a driver, Jan. 15, 1906, under a written contract, in which, for the sum of $60 per month in wages, he agreed that he would not work for a competitor of the tea company, or engage in any way in the same line of business for six months after he should quit the employ of the Sundy Tea company.

It is alleged in the complaint that Johnson quit his job, Sept. 19, 1906, and that immediately thereafter he began similar employment with a competing tea firm, in violation of his contract.

The Sundby Tea company believes that if Johnson continues in the employ of the other company its business will be seriously impaired. It claims that Johnson is insolvent, and has no property above that exempt from execution.

Judgment for $600 is asked, that amount to represent the damages that the Sundby Tea company claims to have suffered. It is further asked that the court issue a restraining order to prevent Johnson from further violating his alleged contract, until the end of the six months' period from the time he quit his former position.

No answer has yet been filed for Mr. Johnson.

AMERICANS HAVE BEEN ADMIRING FAKE MEMORIAL

Paris, Oct. 26.—Americans who have been staring with great interest at the upper window of the house, No. 5, on the Quai Conti, where an inscription placed upon the wall, near the street door, says that the great Bonaparte dwelt in the garret of that house when he was a young artillery officer, have been looking at a fake. Not an intentional one, however, for the inscription was put up in good faith by the city authorities.

M. Victorien Sardou, the celebrated dramatist, who is an authority on Napoleonic subjects, has been looking up the subject, and has discovered that a mistake has been made. It was the house, now No. 123 Qual Conti, that the Little Corporal lived. The inscription is to be removed to the correct position.

PUTS COMPANY ON ITS FEET

Receiver Earl of Real Estate Trust Does Good Work.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—Common pleas court today discharged George H. Earl, Jr., as receiver of the Real Estate Trust company of this city, which failed on Aug. 28, because of financial irregularities of its president, Frank K. Hippie, who committed suicide shortly before the failure.

The action was taken on the petition of counsel representing Mr. Earl. By order of the court the receivership will terminate next Wednesday and the trust company, under a re-organization plan perfected by Mr. Earl, will reopen next Thursday.

The plan provides that the creditors be paid one-third of their claims in cash and the remainder in preferred stock of the Trust company. It is probable that Mr. Earl will be chosen president of the re-organized trust company.

CAPITOL BOARD IS ARRAIGNED

Pennsylvania's State Treasurer Demands Criminal Action.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 26.—State Treasurer Berry, a Democrat, who was elected last year by the Reformers, said today that he would recommend to Attorney General Carson that criminal proceedings be instituted against members of the board of public grounds and buildings, who contracted for the furnishing and equipping of the new state capitol, which cost the state $13,000,000. He is preparing a letter to the attorney general, which he expects to have ready Monday.

Berry claims that the board exceeded its legal authority in contracting for nearly $9,000,000 of work on the building. He says he will reply later to Governor Pennypacker's letter of yesterday, defending the conduct of the board.

KENTUCKIAN FORMS JORDAN RIVER TRUST.

Covington, Ky., Oct. 26.—"Crepps Jr., infant son of Governor and Mrs. J. C. W. Beckham, of Kentucky, will be baptized in water taken from the river Jordan that I sent him."

This is the interesting announcement that comes from Col. Clifford E. Nadaud, who is at present at Alexandria, Egypt, in the interest of the new syndicate he has formed. The syndicate is a trust of its own—a water trust, which, because its head is a Kentuckian, has excited the efforts of the jokesmiths of three continents.

When Dadauh indefinately shelved his ambition to go to congress from the Covington district, he looked around for new fields in which to expend his energies, and finally concluded the water game was a good one.

Accordingly, armed with bundles of introductory letter from Secretary of State Root and others, he hiked to Constantinople, spoke to the sultan, "Abdul, Old Boy," showed his how exclusively rights in the River Jordan would rebound to the financial benefit of sultan and Nadaud, and the trick was done.

Naduad now has a company which will bottle the water of Jordan and ship it all over the world for baptismal purposes. He writes Covington friends, that the company will be captalized at $5,000,000, of which he will control absolutely 2,501,000.

He says his salary will be $20,000 per annum. He is now engaged in working up agencies in Egypt, where tourists may purchase the water and send it to their friends. It will be bottled under the inspeciton of the Turkish government, and properly sealed so as to show it is what it purports to be.

STRAUS APPOINTMENT AS WARNING TO RUSSIA.

Washington, Oct. 26.—President Roosevelt's announcement that he had selected Oscar Straus of New York for secretary of the department of commerce and labor to succeed Victor H. Metcalf on March 4, is considered here as important, from an international standpoint.

Mr. Straus is the first Jew to be taken into the cabinet. Not only is his selection pleasing to those of the Hebrew faith in America, but abroad it is expected to give notice that this government is animated by the most friendly feelings toward the Jews. It is hoped that this will have a good effect in Russia, and will serve to emphasize the antagonism of this government toward further Jewish persecutions.

So prominent a Jew as Simon Wolf of this city, who has served in the United States diplomatic service, said he believed Mr. Straus' appointment would serve as a warning to Russia of American sympathy with persecuted co-religionists.

NEW CHURCH FOR VIRGINIA

Scandinavian Evangelical Mission is Formed to Erect Building.

Virginia, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—This city has promise of another church building. Steps were taken at a meeting held this week to incorporate the society known as the Scandinavian Evangelical Mission church. This church was organized three years ago, and at present has a membership of thirty. Charles Johnson was chosen chairman; Gust Erickson, secretary, and the following trustees: Charles Johnson, one year; Oscar Sundberg, two years; Axel Helstrom, three years. A finance committee was appointed to assist the trustees to raise funds for church purposes, consisting of the following named: Mrs. Axel Helstrom, Mrs. Morell and Mrs. Ahlstrand. A building committee was also elected, consisting of Axel Helstrom, Gust Erickson and Andrew Ole.

Plans for a new church building have been drawn by P. F. Bergval. It is to be 34 by 48 feet in size and will be located on Wyoming avenue and will cost in the neighborhood of $2,500.

Rev. J. P. Ohleen, traveling missionary for the society, has been here a greater part of the last two months getting the church in running order. He will now go out among the Scandinavians of the range and endeavor to raise funds sufficient to erect the new building. He will be assisted by the members of the finance committee, who will call upon the residents of Virginia for contributions.

After the church is built, a permanent pastor will probably be appointed.

FEAR WRECK OF STEAMER

Four Hundred Life Preservers Washed on Virginia Shore.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 26.—An ocean tragedy, was feared yesterday, when more than 400 life preservers came ashore, between Cape Hatteras and Big Kinnakeet. Some are marked "Caswitz, Rettungsgurtet, G. R. P., No. 108, 341." Others "Seaman," and two bear the name "Buenkl." Three miles north of of Big Kinnanket, part of a white yawl boat and a fragment of a boat's gunwale, both unmarked were washed ashore.

Shipping men fear the loss of a passenger ship, but search among marine records has failed to reveal any names that correspond with those on the life preservers, which are generally marked with the name of the boat they are on. A revenue cutter will be sent out to search off Hatteras for further traces of a wreck.

Ninety of the 120 chauffeurs employed at the sub-station joined the 300 strikers. Thirty of the sub-station men remained at work.

EMBEZZLER'S SUICIDE.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 26.—Despondent over losing his position as secretary of the Iowa Drug company and short over $1,000 in his account with the firm, Thomas D. Connell shot himself through the head and died in a few hours. He leaves a wife and six young children.

A FOOD CONVERT.

Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve dyspepsia, keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to stimulants is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash increases his loss of power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts, and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an adv. I tried Grape-Nuts food, and, after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way.

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream, and use four heaping teaspoonfuls at a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." AURORA MAN GETS SURPRISE

Finds Supposedly Empty Closet Filled With Valuable Goods.

Aurora, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—What are evidently the fruits of a burglary of some clothing store were revealed in a peculiar manner Wednesday afternoon. A building in the rear of the Northern hotel, owned by Charles R. Hill, is used as a council chamber and courtroom. A special meeting of the council was held in the evening and Mr. Hill went to the building for the purpose of setting up the stove, which had been stored away in a closet. When he opened the closet door he was surprised to find the place stocked with a miscellaneous collection of new clothing, dry goods, furnishings, jewelry, etc., almost enough to stock a small store. The goods had the original price tag attached. None of the storekeepers of Aurora appear to have lost any goods and it is something of a mystery where the goods came from. Mr. Hill desires the owner to prove property and take them away. There are two families residing in the building. Owing to the fact that there is very little of value in the courtroom, it has been left unlocked much of the time during the summer and it is supposed that a burglar thought this unused closet a good place to hide his spoils until he would have better opportunity to remove them.

THIRD ELECTION ON BOND ISSUE

At Aurora Owing to Defects in Preliminary Proceedings.

Aurora, Minn., Oct. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although two special elections have been held here for the purpose of voting on the question of issuing bonds for the construction of water works, it is probable that another election will be necessary because of defects in the preliminary proceedings of former elections. The last bond election was held on April 20, and the sentiment in favor of bonds was almost unanimous. Since that time the Commercial Investment company of Duluth has been negotiating their sale. A special meeting of the council was held Wednesday evening to discuss the matter. G. A. Elder of Duluth, representing the Commercial Investment company, was present. He said that objection had been made to the bonds by investors because the notice of special election to vote on the bonds was not published ten days before the date of election, only seven days intervening. There is some question whether publication of the notice was necessary or whether simply posting of the notice ten days before election would make the bonds legal. It is the general opinion, however, that it will be necessary to hold another election in order to satisfy the bond buyers.

SLANDER SUIT

Is Started at Milwaukee by District Attorney McGovern.

Milwaukee, Oct. 26.—Francis E. McGovern, district attorney and independent candidate for re-election, has started suit through his law partners, Theodore Kronshage and Oscar M. Fritz, against Charles H. Phillips, alleging that in August at the drug store of Otto C. Laabs on Vleit street he spoke as follows: "That man (meaning the plaintiff) wants to be a reformer. Why did he let his mother stay in the poorhouse? Didn't he drive out with a carriage and get her in the early part of the campaign?"

Later, according to the complaint, the defendant said that what he had related was a matter of public record.

The district attorney says the statements are false and that his mother has at all times been well and comfortably provided for and taken care of and that she has sufficient means and property and estate of her own to provide at all times amply for her support.

DONOHUE PULLS OUT.

New Richmond, Wis., Oct. 26.—Charles Donohue, whose nomination to succeed State Senator James A. Frear was announced yesterday, has written to the secretary of state at Madison, withdrawing from the field. The papers for the nomination were filed by some of Mr. Donohue's friends and admirers, but he declines to run either on the Democratic or non-partisan ticket.

EVEN MONEY ON JOHNSON

Bookmaker Bets Governor Will Carry City of Duluth.

P. M. Magnusson Will Speak in Duluth Next Week.

A Superior street bookmaker is betting even money that Governor Johnson will carry the city of Duluth at the November election, and that five out of eight wards will give him majorities. The bet that he would lose St. Louis county by less than 2,000 has been changed to read less than 1,500. Even money is offered that Johnson will carry Hennepin county. Dunn's majority in the city two years ago was 3,376.

The bet on Bates still stands 10 to 3 that he will be elected, and even money that Brady will be decreed sheriff, provided the law is held to be constitutional. Betting is not very lively. Local Republicans express every confidence that Cole will be elected, but thus far not much money has been placed in the bookmaker's hands. There is plenty of time remaining before election day, however. Most of the betting in this part of the state will probably be on majorities.

"The patriotism exhibited by individual workers is our greatest encouragement just now," said Chairman McEwen of the Democratic county committee today. "Every day we are receiving letters from men through the county, asking for Johnson literature and offering to do what they can to help in his election. Their services in this direction are without charge. Some of them I never heard of before. The present campaign on the Democratic side is being carried on at less cost than any ever before conducted."

* * *

P. M. Magnusson, Democratic candidate for secretary of state, will be in Duluth next week, probably two days. He will conduct one or two meetings, the dates for which have not yet been set.

* * *

The Sixth ward Democratic precinct workers held a meeting last evening in the Sloan block and discussed methods of carrying on the campaign. About thirty men were present.

* * *

The Viking Republican club will play an important part in the reception of Congressmen Tawney and Jacobson when they arrive in the city next Wednesday to conduct a meeting at the Armory in the evening. Club members will be out in force. Bands will, of course, be provided for the occasion, and a large meeting is expected. A Republican rally will be held at the Lincoln park roller rink the same evening as the gathering at the Armory, but Congressman Tawney will not be present.

FEAR JAPANESE BREAK.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Today's cabinet meeting was attended by all the members, except Secretary Shaw and Postmaster General Cortelyou. Among the important matters discussed was the situation growing out of the anti-American sentiment in Japan and the exclusion of Japanese children from the public schools of San Francisco. It was stated by a member of the cabinet after the meeting that the general opinion of the members was that the Japanese situation was exceedingly grave and would require the most delicate treatment to avoid an open rupture.

THE MARKET HAS BREAK

Superior and Pittsburg and Other Copper Stocks Go Off.

George L. Walker Writes of the Strong Metal Market.

Superior & Pittsburg had a break in the copper stock market today and the general tone of most of the other stocks was weaker. Superior & Pittsburgh sold at the opening at $25.50, broke to $23.50, rallied to $25.12½ and closed at $24.50 bid and $24.75 asked.

Cananea Central was off. It declined from $23, at which it was traded in early in the day to $22.50 and closed at $22.87½ bid and $23 asked.

Globe Consolidated sold at $9, declined to $8.75 and closed at $8.75 bid and $8.87½ asked.

North Butte opened at $111.75, declined to $110, rallied to $111.12½ and closed at $111 bid and $111.12½ asked. Amalgamated opened at $110.50, advanced to $110.75, declined to $109.75, rallied to $110.62½ and closed at $110.-37½ bid.

Anaconda opened at $267.50, declined to $265.00, rallied to $265.25 and closed at $268.25 bid. Butte Coalition opened at $37, declined to $36.50 and closed at $36.50 bid and $37 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $140, fell off to $139.50 and closed at $139 bid and $140 asked. Trading in Butte Coalition was quite heavy, but Calumet & Arizona was quiet.

Denn-Arizona sold at $19.62½ and closed at $19 bid and $19.50 asked; Warren at $14 and closed at $13.75 bid and $14 asked; Butte & London at $2.75 and closed at $2.62½ bid and $2.87½ asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 and $1.87½ and closed at $1.75 bid and $2 asked, and Cliff at $5.50 and closed at $5.50 bid and $6 asked.

Calumet & Montana sold at $2.12½ at the opening, advanced to $2.75 and closed strongg at $2.75 bid and $3 sed strongg at $2.75 bid and asked.

Black Mountain was quiet and closed at $10 bid and $10.37½ asked.

A telegram received at George H. Crosby's office this afternoon, from the smelter of the Washoe Copper company at Anaconda, Mont., states that the last shipment of ore sent to the smelter from the Copper Queen mine of Idaho, netted $4,700, after paying freight and smelter charges.

The shipment comprised ten tons of ore and seventeen ton of concentrates. The net value does not include, either, the gold obtained in milling, and which was sent to the United States mint at Boise, Idaho.

The report is considered an excellent one.

* * *

George L. Walker's weekly copper letter to the Boston Commercial was received over the Gay & Sturgis wire today. He says:

"The metal market is quieter, with prices at the highest point so far touched. Lake and electrolytic may be quoted 22 cents to 23 cents per pound. Sales of odd lots have been made at the higher price and round lots are known to have been sold at 22½ cents. Metal brokers declare that they have found it impossible to meet the requirements of their customers. So far as spot copper is concerned there is practically a famine. The dull in the market has resulted from the recent sharp advance in 'standard,' or 'G. M. B.,' in London to around £103 per ton and the subsequent sharp decline of about £8 per ton. This has frightened consuming interests somewhat, and has caused them to withhold from making further purchases for distant advance deliveries.

"A careful review of the world's operations leads me to believe that 1906 production will not show an increase of more than 5 per cent to 7 per cent over that of last year. It is probable that the consumption demand is increasing at the rate of 15 to 20 per cent annually. At the present time production is curtailed in every district in the United States by a scarcity of labor, lack of cars and inability to get fuel, timber, machinery and other supplies delivered promptly. These hindrances to expansion will probably cut into production considerably during the remainder of the present year.

"A weakening, dragging tendency in the New York list has done much to discourage speculation in copper shares and prices in most cases are lower than they were two weeks ago. Some leading Republicans are known to believe that Hearst will be elected governor of New York. If this should happen it would undoubtedly cause a sentimental decline in prices of stocks generally. This and the condition of the money market seem to be the only obstacles to an immediate and far-reaching advance in copper share prices.

"At the moment it seems quite probable that prices may go somewhat lower between now and election. On any decline, however, I believe that the best copper stocks should be bought. The copper-producing companies will make a tremendous dividend record during the coming year, and the effect of large and increasing distributions of cash to stockholders must eventually be reflected in appreciating prices for copper shares."

Of the Greene Consolidated statement Walker says:

"The annual report is unnecessarily conservative in many particulars and this is the reason that it created an unfavorable impression and started a selling movement in the company's stocks. The report makes it appear that the company's copper costs 13.2 cents per pound exclusive of construction. As a matter of fact, however, a very large amount of construction is included in the operating cost, which could fairly be charged as construction, and which, if so charged, would bring the actual cost of Greene Consolidated production down to about 11 cents per pound. I understand, for example, that the company has sunk six shafts nd equipped them during the past two years, that they are now producing regularly and that their total cost has been charged to operating expense. In addition to this the company has denounced, patented and secured title to 8,500 acres of mineral land, doing assessment work on the same and meeting all necessary legal expenses, thus making its total holdings of mineral lands 19,320 acres. It also extended its underground openings about fourteen miles. If all that is properly investment and construction account were taken out of Greene's operating summary, therefore, it would seem that the actual cost of its copper might be about 10 cents per pound."

"The remainder of the letter is devoted to an analysis of the Greene annual report. The deduction is drawn that if the company produces 60,000,000 pounds of copper during its present fiscal year, which began Aug. 31, 1906, and ends July 31, 1907, and sells it at an average of 20c per pound, its net earnings will amount to $5,400,000, or $1 per share, equivalent to more than 20 per cent of the present selling price of its capital stock.

"Reference is made to its investment in the stocks of the Sierra Madre Land & Lumber company and the Cananea Central Copper company. It is claimed that these two investments alone have a value of $30,000,000, or $5,000,000 more than the present market price of the Greene Consolidated Copper company's capital stock.

"President Greene says that the company's developed ore reserves have an estimated value of more than $100,000,000. It is known that the extraction from some of the largest deposits in the company's property has only just begun. The policy of the Greene company to steadily increase its product capacity is being pursued without any letup.

"The much lower grade of ore treated by the Greene company during the past year does not necessarily indicate that the average grade mined in the future will be lower than that mined in the past. The yield last year was about 38 pounds of copper to the ton, a much better average than is expected from the new mines of Ely, Bingham and Utah districts.

"It is worthy of note that the company is securing 100 pounds more silver on an average than last year. It is officially stated that the cost of the output for the month of August was 10.76. The figures for September have not been made up yet, but it is certain that a lower record was made.

"The general manager of the Helvetia Copper company is quoted as being personally of the opinion that Greene Consolidated stock is worth $50 per share. The letter closes as follows: 'I believe that the Greene company will produce more than 65,000,000 pounds of copper next year, and that its net earnings over and above actual construction will approximate $5,000,000, or $5 a share. I believe the company will continue to pay dividends of at least $2.40 per share annually until it is in a position to increase this rate, and that it will eventually earn dividends which will cause its stock to sell for from two to four times its present price.'"

WOMAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Attemped to Step From Rapidly Moving Street Car.

An Italian woman, who did not give her name, was the victim of what might have proved a serious accident at Eleventh avenue west, about 6:30 o'clock last evening.

The car was running about ten miles an hour and she attempted to get off. In some way her dress caught and she was dragged along beside the car. A new conductor was in charge on the rear platform, the regular conductor being inside collecting fares. He rang the bell to stop, but the motorman naturally took this to mean the next corner, and the woman was dragged some little distance before the regular conductor saw the difficulty and gave the stop signal of three bells.

The woman lost her hat and her skirt was torn, but she was apparently not seriously injured.

OSHKOSH PIONEER DEAD

Samuel M. Hay, for Fifty-eight Years Merchant and Banker, at Rest.

Oshkosh, Wis., Oct. 26.—Samuel McClellan Hay, for fifty-eight years idenOshkosh, and a pioneer merchant and banker of wide reputation, died today, aged 81 years.

CAREER OF JOSIE.

How Her Domestic Life Has Become One Grand, Sweet Song.

"The milkman rushing up the back steps arouses Josie, the domestic electrician. Finding that it is time to get up, she turns on the switch at the head of her bed.

"Having thus put into operation the electric cereal cooker in the kitchen—which is also a combination water boiler—Josie performs her toilet. By the time she is ready to descend to the kitchen the water for the coffee is boiling, and in seven or eight minutes both cereal and coffee are ready for the table."

It is H. W. Hillman of Schenectady who thus describes the dawn of a domestic day when said day is run by electricity, says the New York Sun. Hillman enjoys the distinction of possessing the first house built with a view to the complete application of electricity to domestic uses.

Writing in Good Housekeeping, he tells how Josie turns on another switch and inside of one minute has the bacon and eggs frying; how in the meantime he has turned the current on the electric shaving mug, which furnishes hot water in less than one minute. Possibly Mrs. Hillman has improved the shaving interval to operate the electric curler. Mr. Hillman does not say so, but in another place he includes the hair curler in the electrical equipment, so it is safe to infer that the lady arrives at the electric breakfast becomingly waved.

After breakfast Josie washes the dishes in electrically boiled water, then turns on the flatiron switch and in three or four minutes has piping hot irons.

In the meantime Mrs. Hillman had been asked over the telephone for the loan of the electric heating pad, a neighbor having been taken with a chill and the neighbor's hot water bag having been taken with a leak.

Also meantime—everything seems to be going on meantime at Mr. Hillman's—the New England dinner is cooking calmly, one might almost say coolly, in the four-quart electric kettle. And, yet again meantime, Mrs. Hillman is allowing the electric sewing machine to run up a few seams for her.

"I have used a coal stove for about ten years," says Mr. Hillman, "and a gas stove for six years. With coal at an average price of $6.50 per ton, and gas at about $1.30 per thousand, our monthly bills averaged about $6 in a family of five.

"The average monthly cost of the same character of work by electricity has amounted to $6.69 for twenty four consecutive months, or slightly higher than the coal and gas. The figures in neither case, it should be added, cover lighting bills.

"The rate of charge for electricity in Schenectady is 15 cents per kilowatt, with a discount for quantity, which averages a net cost of about 10 cents per kilowatt. This refers to electricity for lighting.

"The local electric company makes me a price of 5 cents per kilowatt for the heating device circuit, because the devices are used so much during the daytime and because they secure an income of more than $100 per year from my residence, instead of only $35 or $40 per year which I would pay them for electric lighting only.

"When building, special attention was given to the heating of the kitchen and laundry from the hot air furnace. The extra initial cost is only slight, while the winter cost of operating is almost negligible.

"A hot water front was placed in my furnace at an extra cost of about $8, which furnishes hot water from October until May, the period when a furnace fire is being operated. During the summer months electric immersion coils furnish plenty of hot water without adding greatly to the expense, regarding which I have spoken fully in the foregoing."

MISDIRECTED ENERGY.

Woman's Home Companion: Frances, a girl of 13, was destined by her mother to be a fine musician. While still a little child she was taught to read the notes and her tiny fingers were placed on the keyboard. Year in and year out the child was obliged to practice, and she acquired a measured amount of skill, but her playing was wooden and spiritless. In despair, her mother said to her: "What do you expect to be when you are grown up?"

The girl sighed. "When I am grown up, mother, if I have a house of my own the first thing I shall do will be to order the piano chopped up for kindling wood. I want to be a doctor."

As time passed musical studies were dropped, and duly Frances went to the medical college. At last she was allowed liberty to grow in her own proper direction. She is a successful physician, treating nervous disorders with rare sympathy and understanding.

EATING IN ENGLAND.

Pretty Much of a Muchness Week in and Week Out.

There are some points in which the English housekeeper has the advantage of her American sister. Not only has she no flies to kill and no ice chest to keep clean (ice is rarely used in private families there), but the craving for constant novelty in the bill of fare does not seem to have attacked the British palate.

Personally, says a writer in the Ladies' World, I confess that on a sultry July morning a breakfast of bacon and eggs does seem a trifle oppressive; one misses the iced fruit and delicate cold breakfast food of the American summer breakfast table.

Orange marmalade is the English substitute for fresh fruit at breakfast all the year around. Occasionally in warm weather they serve radishes or long leaves of plain lettuce as an appetizer, but they failed to appeal to my American taste.

The use of patent breakfast foods is almost unknown; oatmeal, of course, they have, but as a rule it is rather pasty, and everywhere in England cream is looked upon as a terrible extravagance.

For cold lunch appears the cold joint of the night before, beef or mutton as the case may be; and that reminds me of a curious circumstance. In America when I have complained to my butcher that his meat was not wholly satisfactory he would reply:

"The best of the meat goes to England, mum."

In England many of the best restaurants advertise: "No foreign meat used in this establishment."

Shiploads of cattle and dressed beef are landed at the ports every week, and yet it is a fact that not a butcher shop in London professes to sell American meat.

With the joint we often had the plain boiled new potatoes, which they get from the south of France at most reasonable prices all through the spring while we are struggling against the temptation of being extravagant and trying to induce our families to be content with last year's crop.

Sometimes a salad graces the lunch table, but, as they would say, "I am not much" for English salads. They consist generally of lettuce or sliced cucumber, and are pretty strong of vinegar and pretty weak of oil. As a sweet there is almost invariably a pudding of some sort. The English puddings are delicious and there are many kinds, but they all bear a family resemblance to one another.

At dinner three meats and three sauces round out the usual menu. I quote from the bill of fare of a very English hotel:

MONDAY.

Roast Ribs of Beef. Horseradish Sauce.
Roast Mutton. Currant Jelly.
Roast Chicken. Bread Sauce.

TUESDAY.

Roast Chicken. Bread Sauce.
Roast Mutton. Currant Jelly.
Roast Beef. Horseradish Sauce.

And so on through the week. On the family table a repetition of the three, with perhaps an occasional filet with tomato sauce, rounds out the week.

Sunday dinner in almost invariably roast beef, in plainer families accompanied by the delicious but indigestible Yorkshire pudding. American cooks often feel discouraged at their lack of success with it, but I can assure you that everywhere in England I found it much the same—decidedly soggy in the middle, deliciously brown and crusty at the edges and quite greasy from the fat of the roasting meat all over.

Horseradish sauce, however, deserves to be better known than it is. It is to be served hot with the hot beef, and is excellent with cold roast for lunch next day.

Selling things, finding things, or finding people "by accident" is a poor way—and a slow way—to get along. Herald want advertising affords a SYSTEM FOR DOING SUCH THINGS

Don Quixote said: "Everyone must speak of his wants, be he where he will." But nowadays he need not speak of them if he "puts them in

WHEAT HAS DEPRESSION

American Markets Have Weaker Tone Throughout the Day.

Flax is Fairly Active, But Weaker in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 26.—Wheat had a weaker tone in the American markets throughout the session today. The closing prices were slightly off almost everywhere. There were a number of bearish factors which made themselves felt. Reports of good weather for the crops of Argentina and increased shipments from that place had a depressing effect. Liverpool closed ⅛d to ¼d lower, Paris ½c to ⅜c higher and Budapest unchanged.

The December option closed ⅛c lower at Duluth, New York, St. Louis and Kansas City, ⅛@¼c lower in Chicago, a shade weaker in Minneapolis and ⅛c higher in Winnipeg. The October option closed unchanged in Winnipeg. The May option closed unchanged in Duluth, St. Louis and Kansas City, ⅛@¼c lower in Chicago, ⅛c lower in Minneapolis and ¼c lower in New York.

Corn was stronger in Chicago, the December option closing ⅜@½c higher. Corn was unchanged in Liverpool. December oats closed unchanged in Chicago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 953,000 bus, last year 1,197,000 bus. Shipments 400,000 bus, last year 655,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 300,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat were 868,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 365,000 bus, last year 335,000 bus. Shipments 329,000 bus, last year 212,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 87,000 bus.

Wheat was dull during all of the session of the Duluth market. October wheat opened ⅛c lower at 73⅝c, advanced to 73⅞-⅞c by 9:50, declined to 73⅝c by 11, rallied to 73¾c by 12:10 and closed at that price, a loss of ⅛c from yesterday. May wheat opened ⅛c lower at 77⅝c bid, advanced to 77⅞c, declined to 77⅝c, rallied to 77½c and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday. Durum wheat was unchanged, and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of 2½c over December for No. 1 northern. It is expected that the stock of wheat in store at Duluth will decrease 500,000 bus during the week.

Flax trading was light, but steady in the local market. The tone was weaker. Flax closed ⅞c lower in Antwerp and ½-⅝c lower in London. It is expected that the stock of flax in store at Duluth will decrease 400,000 bus this week. October flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.13⅜, advanced to $1.13¾ and declined by the close to $1.13¼, a loss of ½c from yesterday. November flax opened unchanged at $1.13¾, declined to $1.13⅝, rallied to $1.13⅞, declined to $1.13½ and closed at that price, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday.

December flax opened ⅜c lower at $1.13⅞, advanced to $1.11⅝, and declined by the close to $1.11¼, a loss of ½c from yesterday. May flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.15, declined to $1.14¾, advanced to $1.15½, declined to $1.14⅝, rallied to $1.15 and closed at $1.14⅞, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Weak on General Selling on Argentine Advices.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—The wheat market today opened weak on general selling by commission houses. The main factor in the market was the news from Argentina, which reported favorable weather for the crop in that country, and also shipments considerably larger than those of last week. Shorts were the best buyers. December wheat opened unchanged at 72⅞c and sold at 72⅝@½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 608 cars against 599 cars last week and 847 cars a year ago.

The market became less active in the last half of the session, but prices held steady. The close was steady with December off ⅛@¼c at 72⅝@¾c.

The corn market was steady, the prediction of wet weather in the Northwest being about the only factor affecting the early market. Trading was very quiet. December corn opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 42⅜c to 42⅞c and for a time held within these figures. Local receipts were 210 cars with 131 of contract grade.

Prices became strong in the last half of the day. An active demand for cash corn strengthened the market for options. The high point for December was 43¼c. The close was strong with December up ⅜@½c at 43¼c.

The oats market was almost lifeless, the opening quotation being for some time the only one posted. Prices were steady. December oats opened unchanged at 33¼c an dremained for some time at that figure. Local receipts were 211 cars.

The provisions market was steady on a 5c advance in the price of live hogs, and good buying of lard by local packers. January pork was unchanged at $13.65. Lard was unchanged at $8.30. Ribs were a shade higher at $7.45.

Close: Wheat—December, 72⅝@¾c; May, 77¼@⅜c. Corn—December, 43¼c; May, 43⅜c. Oats—December, 33¼@⅜c; May, 34⅜@¾c. Pork—January, $13.72@13.75. Lard—October, $9.75; January, $8.37½. Rbs—October, $8.40; January, $7.50. Rye—Cash, 63@64c. Barley—Cas, 39@53c. Timothy, October, $4.10@4.25. Clover and flax, nothing doing. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Short sales of wheat forced the market off ⅜ cent and although there was a tendency to recovery later, the market did not respond to the bull features in the news, and the market closed with only half of the early loss recovered. An important feature is the decrease of 590,000 bushels in Northwest stocks, where there was an increase of 1,000,000 bushels the same week last year. It looks like a very small visible supply increase next Monday. We believe market will run into congested condition on any further break. That will be a soft spot to buy on.

Corn—It seems impossible for Chicago to accumulate any decrease in stocks of corn. The new crop is moving so slowly and Chicago ships out corn so fast that the situation is getting stronger instead of weaker.

Oats—Receipts run along about the same. There is some selling of long oats on every little bulge. If a wave of activity ever strikes this pit, it is likely to be on the buying side.

Provisions—There was more covering on the part of shorts for the near months. Think the market will do to buy on any reactions.

Liverpool Grain.

Liverpool, Oct. 26.—Wheat, spot, firm; No. 2 red Western winter, 6s. Futures dull; December, 6s 4⅝d; March, 6s 5d. Corn, spot, quiet; American mixed, 4s 4d. Futures quiet; October, nominal; December, 4s 4¼d; January, 4s 4⅛d.

Minneapolis Wheat.

Minneapolis, Oct. 26.—Close: Wheat—December, 72¾@72⅞c; May, 76⅝c; July, 77⅞c; No. 1 hard, 76½c; No. 1 northern, 76c; No. 2 northern, 74c; No. 3 northern, 71½@72½c.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, Oct. 26.—The flour market is unchanged. While wheat prices are lower, millers were inclined to hold quotations unchanged, owing to the stiff premiums ruling for cash wheat. The flour demand is not encouraging, buyers feeling quite bearish over the outlook, everything sold is for quick shipment. Shipments, 58,636 barrels. First patents, $4.20@4.30; second patents, $4.05@4.15; first clears, $3.25@3.35; second clears, $2.40@2.60.

Copper Gossip.

Gay & Sturgis: It is learned from a most reliable source that the new stocks which the Old Dominion company proposes to issue will be given to the shareholders at $50 a share, and if they do not desire to take the stock, it is already assured of being taken at that figure by certain large interests that have been behind the company since its formation. The sales of the shares at $50 per share, instead of $25, the par value of the stock, will just double the amount of money that will be available for the company's use. In other words, instead of $1,250,000, the company will have for its purposes $2,500,000. It is now generally understood that the company intends an important expansion of its smelting works and that the work will likely be started just as soon as the company gets around to issuing the stock. In addition to the smelting plants it is learned that the officers of the company will also view several mines in the vicinity of the Old Dominion, upon which options have already been exercised, and that it is likely that the Old Dominion may add several eligible properties to its domain.

Whether these properties are in the Globe district or not is not yet stated. It is also learned that the Old Dominion has a large amount of undeveloped ground in the vicinity of its present claims, much of which has never been prospected.

This ground will be thoroughly opened up and prospected and it is possible that several good mines will be located thereabouts.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The Sunnyside and Pennsylvania groups at Greenwater, Cal., consisting of thirteen copper claims, have been sold for $200,000 to the Heinze interests. The properties show remarkable surface values.

Gay & Sturgis: The Boston News Bureau says: While there are three months yet to be accounted for before the completion of its fiscal year, it is expected that the Mohawk Mining company will produce during the twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1906, nearly 10,000,000 pounds of copper, as compared with 9,387,000 pounds in 1905.

The final accounting will show an average price received for the copper sold of approximately 19 cents a pound, costs will be slightly shaded under those of last year (9.77 cents per pound, or 10.91 cents per pound including construction.) Earnings per share on the stock may be placed at between $8 and $9.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: We are told: "In the Old Dominion thirteenth level there was no further blasting today, but drill holes sow six feet more of smelting ore. First fifteen feet show low grade of smelting ore. Understand from good sources that the management has reported the strike very conservatively. It is by far the most important strike made in this district. The fourteenth level is also developing well."

Paine, Webber & Co.: A dispatch from the Denn-Arizona camp says: Will begin sinking at 1050 level at once. We hear from reliable source that good news will be given out next week. Think it better to buy than sell.

* * *

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed no feature worthy of mention. It was extremely dull and saggy. Public interest seems to be greatly lessened at present, and we expect an irregular traders' market between now and election, and advise the sale of stocks on every bulge, with the idea of taking them back cheaper on a weak day. Notwithstanding the rise on Old Dominion, very little stock came out, and we confidently expect the stock to sell at 75 before the New Year. Recent reports from North Butte are more bullish than ever, and we notice the stock is being accumulated around this level. A few selling orders in Superior & Pittsburg caused a sharp break to 23⅛, but the stock rallied easily to 25.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Market Closed Rather Heavy and Slightly Below the Best.

Prices Advanced But Rise Became Slower as It Extended.

New York, Oct. 26.—The opening dealings in stocks today were on rising prices, the speculative favorites leading the advance. Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, National Railroad of Mexico preferred and Brooklyn Transit gained a point each, and Reading, Baltimore & Ohio and St. Paul large fractions. Some large blocks of Reading, Union Pacific and United States Steel changed hands, but business in the general list was small.

Opening prices were not maintained long, the market developing general weakness. Large amounts of Reading were sold, driving it from 141⅛ to 139⅞, and there also were abundant offerings of St. Paul, Union Pacific, the Hill stocks and Amalgamated Copper. The initial advances were all cancelled and the market depressed below yesterday's closing. Great Northern preferred broke from 319½—the highest—to 315½, an overnight loss of 2⅝. Tennessee Coal yielded 3½, International Pump 1½, the preferred 2¼, Northern Pacific 1¾, Virginia Coke 1⅜ and Copper, Locomotive and Republic Steel 1.

Speculation liquidation came on the market freely and declines were extended throughout. Reading was in large supply and was forced 2⅜ under last night; Great Northern preferred fell 4⅛; Delaware & Hudson and United States Reduction 3 each; Vulcan Detinning 2; preferred and Central Railroad of New Jersey 1½ each, and St. Paul, Pennsylvania, New York Central, People's Gas, Sugar, Colorado Fuel, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred and others 1 to 1¼. The selling pressure relaxed but at the rallies which followed business came to a standstill about noon. Bonds were heavy.

The recovery in prices made further progress, Union Pacific and Brooklyn Rapid Transit rising to a point above yesterday's closing again, and St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Amalgamated Copper and other prominent stocks selling about on a parity with where they left off yesterday. Reading rallied 1⅜ from the lowest and Great Northern preferred 3. Quite a demand arose for United States Steel when it got below 46, and it mounted eventually to 46½. Belated losses of 1¾ and 2, respectively, appeared in Northwestern and Central Leather. Wells-Fargo Express jumped 5. Both Reading and Union Pacific weakened at 1 o'clock and the general advance stopped.

Offerings of stocks ceased for a time, and the market became firm again, especially for the Western group. Reading made practically a full recovery, selling above 140. Atchison and Baltimore & Ohio preferred gained 1 each, and Canadian Pacific and United States Rubber, 1⅜ each. Isolated losses were Atlantic Coast Line 1; Toledo,, St. Louis & Western preferred, 1¾, and Bethlehem Steel preferred, 2½.

The market closed rather heavy and slightly below the best. The recovery carried prices generally above the high level of the first hour and to above lost night's, Canadian Pacific to the extent of 2 points; Union Pacific, 1½, and Southern Pacific, St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio, and Consolidated aGs, a point each. The advance became lower as it extended.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened irregular with a dragging tendency. The same selling that was seen just before the close yesterday was in evidence again today. Standard issues were well taken on the decline, however, and in most cases closed with a small-net gain for the day. Sugar and the Steels were in good demand during the day. Market closed irregular and fairly firm. Look for nothing better than a scalping market for the present.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 26.—The cottom market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 3 points and in spite of rather better cables than expected, sold off to a net loss of about 4@6 points on the active months, under liquidation and scattering bear pressure promoted by fine weather over the South and reports of freer spot offerings. There was pretty good buying at the decline, particularly by houses with Liverpool connections.

Futures closed barely steady. October, 10.16; November, 10.21; December, 10.22; January, 10.31; February, 10.39; March, 10.48; April, 10.49; May, 10.50; June, 10.59; July, 10.66. Spot closed quiet, 30 points decline. Middling uplands, 10.65; middling gulf, 10.90. Sales, 500 bales.

ICE MEN FACE JAIL TERMS

Toledo Circuit Court Upholds Judge Kinkade's Sentences.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 26.—The circuit court today upheld the decision of Judge Kinkade of the common pleas court, in the sentences he gave Rueben Lemon, Rollin Beard and Joseph Miller, convicted of conspiracy in restraint of trade in the sale of ice. These are the famous ice cases tried in common pleas court last summer. The sentences were $2,500 each and six months in the workhouse. If the supreme court affirms the lower courts the ice men must serve their sentences. The circuit court also held the Valentine anti-trust law constitutional.

COULD TAKE A JOKE.

London Tribune: The other day a benevolent old gentleman was stopped in the Farringdon road by a tramp, who asked fo rn night's lodging. "Well, look here, my man," the old gentleman said, "what would you say if I offered you work?"

"Bless yer life, sir," came the reply. "I wouldn't mind a bit; I can take a joke same as most people."

OYSTER ECONOMY

When you buy tub oysters, how much water of doubtful purity do you suppose you are paying for? Just drain the next quart you buy and see how much water was included in the bill.

Now, then—when you buy Sealshipt oysters, you buy solid meats which have been washed and drained before packing in the air-tight, white enameled case of a Sealshipt Carrier.

One pint of sealshipt will go almost as far as a quart of any tub oysters. The price is a little higher than you pay for a pint of other oysters, that's true—but the point is, that when you buy a pint of Sealshipts, you get a full pint of oysters and nothing else.

SENATOR NELSON KICKS OVER TRACES AND WILL SPEAK AT NORTHFIELD

Though Cole Leaders Fear It Will Stir Up Strife.

Roseate Reports of Johnson's Strength Throughout the State.

Democratic Committee Meets and Finds Outlook Satisfactory.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator Nelson has kicked over the traces. He was billed by the Republican speakers' bureau to address a meeting at Northfield next Thursday evening. Upon further consideration the political managers of Cole thought it would be better taste to keep Senator Nelson out of Joel Heatwole's territory. Nelson was wired this week that the Northfield meeting was called off, and he was booked for another place. Senator Nelson, who has never had the reputation of a quitter, wired back to the effect that he would go anyway. There was some parleying back and forth and Nelson was requested to telegraph his final decision to the state central committee in cipher. He declined to consider the matter any more and stated that he would speak in Northfield. For some years the relations between Nelson and Heatwole has been strained and the whole contest on Senator Nelson has been inspired by Heatwole. It was feared that Nelson's appearance in Heatwole's stamping ground would stir up strife and contention and would lose votes for Cole. If Nelson persists in going to Northfield, there will be a small party of Republicans also go down to ask him a number of questions as to his position in certain matters. He will be

PLATFORMS COMPARED

Issues Upon Which Democrats Appeal to the People.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—It has become customary in the different states to adopt platforms on which the candidates stand for election, and in conformity with this time-honored custom, the two leading parties in North Dakota this summer adopted platforms. In some of the states where there is an overwhelming majority, party platforms count for naught, and it is really interesting to see how skillfully the machine men evade every issue and thus lead the people blindly to vote a ticket which has not the least semblance to the people's interests. We have an instance of this in North Dakota, probably the worst boss ridden state in the union, and the Republican leaders of which have been nationally advertised the past year when public opinion was focusing upon the "Looting of Alaska," and the leader of the machine whom, it is claimed, robbed thousands of homes in Alaska, corrupted the courts and had passed at Washington

INGRATITUDE OF YOUNG GIRL

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 27.—The story of a woman raising a poor but beautiful young girl, who was without home, only to have the latter rob her of her husband's love and dethrone her own reason, is most dramatically arnd pathetically pictured in a divorce case now pending in the Pottawattamie county district court at Avoca.

The story of the family's incidents was disclosed in divorce proceedings recently commenced by Cora McConnell against her husband, J. G. McConnell, who lives on a farm fifteen miles south of Avoca. Mrs. McConnell charges that she lived happily with her husband and three children until a few years ago. Nine years ago she says she took into her home to raise a friendless and unfortunate girl, by the name of Maud Conger, who came from Kansas. The girl was but 10 years old. As she grew into womanhood, the wife says, Mr. McConnell commenced to pay attentions to her. This increased, until she declares the girl reciprocated in a manner the affection bestowed upon her. Then she says she and her children became objects of neglect and abuse. She makes no criminal charge against the girl. She was compelled to leave her home, and commenced her suit for divorce. She secured a temporary order of court for the custody of her children, and an attachment against his property. But she constantly worried, despite the assurance of her friends and attorneys that the court would not take her children from her. She was unable to sleep for eight nights, and when she came into court Monday for the hearing of the case it was discovered she had gone insane. The case was continued, and she was sent to Council Bluffs for treatment, under Dr. Barsto of that place. There are some apprehensions about her recovering her reason.

TRAPPERS ENTRAPPED

Three Professional Hunters Are Caught on Thief River.

Outfits Confiscated and Men Given Five Days in Jail.

Crookston, Minn. Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Deputy Game Warden Munch has arrested in Eastern Marshall county A. P. Mandy of Massachusetts, Ed Munroe of Canada, and George Bechele of North Dakota, professional hunters and trappers, who had a fully equipped camp on Thief river, fifteen miles east of Middle River.

Munch took the hunters to Middle River, where all were sent to jail by the justice for six days, and their rifles, camp equippment, sixty-three mink traps, and fifteen mink skins, all of the value of several hundred dollars, were confiscated and forwarded to the state agent and fish commissioners.

The haul is expected to have a great effect in stopping poaching in Northern Minnesota this winter.

MARLBOROUGHS PARTED AFTER SERIES OF ROWS AND WILL NOT REUNITE

Deed Dividing the Ducal Pair Signed Last Tuesday.

Vanderbilt's Efforts to Bring About Renewed Peace Fail.

American Duchess Keeps London House and Children.

London, Oct. 27.—The afternoon papers here quote the Manchester Guardian as saying that a deed of separation between the duke and duchess of Marlborough was signed, Tuesday, on the ground of incompatibility of temper. By the provisions of the agreement, the duchess keeps Sunderland house, London, and her own dowry, but is precluded from going to Blenheim.

Disagreements between the couple have been gossiped about in high society for the last eighteen months. Tuesday, W. H. Vanderbilt, father of the duchess, arrived in London and tried to bring about a reconciliation, but failed, and the deed of separation is said to have followed.

The duke's relations with his wife's family have not been cordial for some time, chiefly due, it is said, to the disappointment to his expectations caused by the second marriage of W. K. Vanderbilt.

The duke, according to all accounts, is not blessed with a very amiable temper and affects an intense dislike for Americans, which is most trying to the duchess, who has many American friends of whom she is fond.

Nothing annoys the duke so much

BIG BEAR KILLED.

Denver, Oct. 27.—Charles G. Gates has killed a grizzly bear, which may be the biggest ever killed in Colorado. According to a telegram signed by Gates and sent from Maher, Colo., the bear weighs about 1,700 pounds, and old-time hunters says that it is about as big as grizzlies grow.

SEAMEN'S UNION PROFITS BY GOING INTO TOWING TRADE.

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 27—The Seamen's union, which has been in competition with the regular transportation companies in towing canal boats on Lake Champlain, during the past season has met with such success that a 5 per cent dividend will be declared and a new tug has been ordered to be added to its fleet next year. The union went into the business because of excessive rates charged by the transportation companies.

POLICEMAN BLAMES TRUSTS FOR INABILITY TO DRESS WELL.

Oshkosh, Wis., Oct. 27.—Joseph Smick, a policeamn for nine years, resigned yesterday, claiming that the trusts have so raised the price on food and the necessities that it is impossible for him to dress becomingly as a copper on the salary he is getting. He says he will buy a farm.

REMEMBERS DIME LOST YEARS AGO AND FINALLY GETS IT.

Attica, Ind., Oct. 27.—Returning to his boyhood home, after 65 years, Frank Bookwalter, millionaire of Springfield, O., remembered that when five years old, he had lost a dime in a crack of the stone steps of his home and had been forbidden to recover it. Yesterday he offered a man $1 to recover the long-lost dime. The old steps were lifted and the coin found. Mr. Bookwalter was delighted as a boy.

BOLD RAID BY BANDITS

St. Petersburg Robbers With Bombs Loot Treasury Wagon.

Outlaws Get Away With $193,000 After a Lively Battle.

Crime Committed at Midday in Center of Big City.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 27.—Using bombs and revolvers at high noon today, in the very center of this city, a band of highwaymen attacked a wagon conveying the cash from the customs department to the state treasury, and succeeded in getting away with $193,000.

Two bombs were thrown in quick succession at the vehicle as it was passing a corner near the Ekaterinsk canal close to a branch of the treasury, after which a rush was made for the wagon by a number of armed men.

After exchanging a hot fire with the gendarmes escorting it, the robbers managed to secure the booty and fled across a small foot bridge spanning the Ekaterinsk canal, leaving five of their number in the hands of the police. Many bystanders sustained slight injuries as a result of the explosions.

The garrison of St. Petersburg has been strengthened by three regiments of infantry, to assist in preserving order next Tuesday, the anniversary of the granting of the Russian constitution, which will be celebrated in St. Petersburg by official services of thanksgiving in the Kazan and St. Isaac cathedrals. Permission has ben given to the inhabitants to decorate and illuminate their houses, but stringent orders have been issued against street demonstrations or meetings. The prefect of police has ordered the house porters, who form a non-uniformed auxiliary police, to remain constantly on duty at the doors of their houses all Monday and

RICH MAN KILLS GIRL AND SHOOTS SELF DEAD IN A NEW YORK HOTEL

LEONARD LEOPOLD,
Wanted in Chicago for the Murder of Mrs. Leslie, actress, for her jewels.

Millionaire Trust Company Official in Dark Tragedy.

Compact Between Couple Held to Have Caused Crime.

Woman Shot Four Times; One Bullet Ends Man's Life.

New York, Oct. 27.—L. G. Hampton, assistant secretary of the United States Trust company of this city, and a millionaire, shot and killed Victoria I. Taczkow, a beautiful young woman, in the Hotel Griffou on West Ninth street, late last night and then committed suicide.

Hampton was infatuated with the woman and they had been together many times during the past month, and had gone to the hotel where the tragedy occurred early yesterday. Whether or not the tragedy was the result of a compact between the two to die together has not been determined, but the circumstances seem to show that the young woman agreed to die with her companion.

Hampton, who was about 60 years old, leaves a wife and two children. Miss Taczkow was 29 years old and lived with her father and invalid mother. She was employed in a Fifth avenue department store.

Thursday afternoon Hampton called at the Hotel Griffou and engaged a room, saying he would return late that night or the next morning, and adding: "I expect to have my wife with me. Would you like me to register now?"

The clerk replied that it would be time enough to do this when he arrived at the hotel to take the room.

FEE THEFT IS CHARGED

G. A. Blomberg Must Return to St. Peter for Trial.

Former Clerk Accused of Misusing the County Funds.

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson issued requisition yesterday on the governor of Montana for the return for trial for grand larceny of fees of A. Blomberg, Jr., of St. Peter, the man who in the 1904 campaign made affidavit that the governor's father died in the poorhouse.

Four indictments have been returned against Blomberg, former clerk of the district court of Nicollet county, charging grand larceny in the second degree. He was arrested at Billings at the request of Sheriff John McMillan of St. Peter, and on arrest stated that he would return without requisition papers, and also denied all knowledge of the charges against him.

The specific indictment on which application was made to Governor Johnson for requisition charges grand larceny in the second degree. Under the agreement when Blomberg held office he was to receive $1,000 a year as salary. Of this, the county was to pay $700 in cash and the rest was to be retained by him from the fees collected. It is alleged that he did not make full report of the fees collected, and thus defrauded the county out of money belonging to it. During the first years of his incumbency he was wholly dependent upon fees. A later law, however, made provision for a combination fee and salary basis. The first year he held office, it is alleged that he made affidavit that his fees fell short of the requisite $300 to make up his salary. The sum was paid by a special order of Judge Webber. The following year the same thing was done, and in both instances it is charged that fees in excess of that amount were collected.

Nov. 10, 1905, C. E. Johnson, deputy public examiner, made an examination of his books and found on the face of the books that there was a shortage of several hundred dollars. At that time Blomberg made good all shortages reported, not even attempting to take advantage of the fact that several of the claims against him were outlawed.

The operations on which the present indictments are founded do not appear specifically on the face of the indictment other than to state that certain funds were misappropriated. Since his defeat for re-election Blomberg has held a position as bookkeeper at Billings.

He said that nothing has done more harm in the effort to prevent tuberculosis than the belief by many it is in the family and there is no use to fight against it.

SENATOR NELSON KICKS OVER TRACES AND WILL SPEAK AT NORTHFIELD

Though Cole Leaders Fear It Will Stir Up Strife.

Roseate Reports of Johnson's Strength Throughout the State.

Democratic Committee Meets and Finds Outlook Satisfactory.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator Nelson has kicked over the traces. He was billed by the Republican speakers' bureau to address a meeting at Northfield next Thursday evening. Upon further consideration the political managers of Cole thought it would be better taste to keep Senator Nelson out of Joel Heatwole's territory. Nelson was wired this week that the Northfield meeting was called off, and he was looked for another place. Senator Nelson, who has never had the reputation of a quitter, wired back to the effect that he would go anyway. There was some parleying back and forth and Nelson was requested to telegraph his final decision to the state central committee in cipher. He declined to consider the matter any more and stated that he would speak in Northfield. For some years the relations between Nelson and Heatwole has been strained and the whole contest on Senator Nelson has been inspired by Heatwole. It was feared that Nelson's appearance in Heatwole's stamping ground would stir up strife and contention and would lose votes for Cole. If Nelson persists in going to Northfield, there will be a small party of Republicans also go down to ask him a number of questions as to his position in certain matters. He will be

Issues Upon Which Democrats Appeal to the People.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—It has become customary in the different states to adopt platforms on which the candidates stand for election, and in conformity with this time-honored custom, the two leading parties in North Dakota this summer adopted platforms. In some of the states where there is an overwhelming majority, party platforms count for naught, and it is really interesting to see how skillfully the machine men evade every issue and thus lead the people blindly to vote a ticket which has not the least semblance to the people's interests. We have an instance of this in North Dakota, probably the worst boss ridden state in the union, and the Republican leaders of which have been nationally advertised the past year when public opinion was focusing upon the "Looting of Alaska," and the leader of the machine whom, it is claimed, robbed thousands of homes in Alaska, corrupted the courts and had passed at Washington

INGRATITUDE OF YOUNG GIRL

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 27.—The story of a woman raising a poor but beautiful young girl, who was without home, only to have the latter rob her of her husband's love and dethrone her own reason, is most dramatically amd pathetically pictured in a divorce case now pending in the Pottawattamie county district court at Avoca.

The story of the family's incidents was disclosed in divorce proceedings recently commenced by Cora McConnell against her husband, J. G. McConnell, who lives on a farm fifteen miles south of Avoca. Mrs. McConnell charges that she lived happily with her husband and three children until a few years ago. Nine years ago she says she took into her home to raise a friendless and unfortuate girl, by the name of Maud Conger, who came from Kansas. The girl was but 10 years old. As she grew into womanhood, the wife says, Mr. McConnell commenced to pay attentions to her. This increased, until she declares the girl reciprocated in a manner the affection bestowed upon her. Then she says she and her children became objects of neglect and abuse. She makes no criminal charge against the girl. She was compelled to leave her home, and commenced her suit for divorce. She secured a temporary order of court for the custody of her children, and an attachment against his property. But she constantly worried, despite the assurance of her friends and attorneys that the court would not take her children from her. She was unable to sleep for eight nights, and when she came into court Monday for the hearing of the case it was discovered she had gone insane. The case was continued, and she was sent to Council Bluffs for treatment, under Dr. Barsto of that place. There are some apprehensions about her recovering her reason.

TRAPPERS ENTRAPPED

Three Professional Hunters Are Caught on Thief River.

Outfits Confiscated and Men Given Five Days in Jail.

Crookston, Minn. Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Deputy Game Warden Munch has arrested in Eastern Marshall county A. P. Mandy of Massachusetts, Ed Munroe of Canada, and George Bechele of North Dakota, professional hunters and trappers, who had a fully equipped camp on Thief river fifteen miles east of Middle River.

Munch took the hunters to Middle River where all were sent to jail by the justice for six days, and their rifles, camp equippment, sixty-three mink traps and fifteen mink skins, all of the value of several hundred dollars, were confiscated and forwarded to the state agent and fish commissioners.

The haul is expected to have a great effect in stopping poaching in Northern Minnesota this winter.

Vanderbilt's Efforts to Bring About Renewed Peace Fail.

American Duchess Keeps London House and Children.

London, Oct. 27.—The afternoon papers here quote the Manchester Guardian as saying that a deed of separation between the duke and duchess of Marlborough was signed, Tuesday, on the ground of incompatibility of temper. By the provisions of the agreement, the duchess keeps Sunderland house, London, and her own dowry, but is precluded from going to Blenheim.

Disagreements between the couple have been gossiped about in high society for the last eighteen months. Tuesday, W. H. Vanderbilt, father of the duchess, arrived in London and tried to bring about a reconciliation, but failed, and the deed of separation is said to have followed.

The duke's relations with his wife's family have not been cordial for some time, chiefly due, it is said, to the disappointment to his expectations caused by the second marriage of W. K. Vanderbilt.

The duke, according to all accounts, is not blessed with a very amiable temper and affects an intense dislike for Americans, which is most trying to the duchess, who has many American friends of whom she is fond.

Nothing annoys the duke so much

Crime Committed at Midday in Center of Big City.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 27.—Using bombs and revolvers at high noon today, in the very center of this city, a band of highwaymen attacked a wagon conveying the cash from the customs department to the state treasury, and succeeded in getting away with $193,000.

Two bombs were thrown in quick succession at the vehicle as it was passing a corner near the Ekaterinsk canal close to a branch of the treasury, after which a rush was made for the wagon by a number of armed men.

After exchanging a hot fire with the gendarmes escorting it, the robbers managed to secure the booty and fled across a small foot bridge spanning the Ekaterinsk canal, leaving five of their number in the hands of the police. Many bystanders sustained slight injuries as a result of the explosions.

The garrison of St. Petersburg has been strengthened by three regiments of infantry, to assist in preserving order next Tuesday, the anniversary of the granting of the Russian constitution, which will be celebrated in St. Petersburg by official services of thanksgiving in the Kazan and St. Isaac cathedrals. Permission has been given to the inhabitants to decorate and illuminate their houses, but stringent orders have been issued against street demenstrations or meetings. New York, Oct. 27.—L. G. Hampton, assistant secretary of the United States Trust company of this city, and a millionaire, shot and killed Victoria I. Taczkow, a beautiful young woman, in the Hotel Griffon on West Ninth street, late last night and then committed suicide.

Hampton was infatuated with the woman and they had been together many times during the past month, and had gone to the hotel where the tragedy occurred early yesterday. Whether or not the tragedy was the result of a compact between the two to die together has not been determined, but the circumstances seem to show that the young woman agreed to die with her companion.

Hampton, who was about 60 years old, leaves a wife and two children. Miss Taczkow was 29 years old and lived with her father and invalid mother. She was employed in a Fifth avenue department store.

Thursday afternoon Hampton called at the Hotel Griffon and engaged a room, saying he would return late that night or the next morning, and adding: "I expect to have my wife with me. Would you like me to register now?"

The clerk replied that it would be time enough to do this when he arrived at the hotel to take the room.

It was in the case of the Gossard Corset company against Helene C. The supreme court affirmed the lower court, which held she had a right to wear whatever she pleased.

MURDER IS ONE THEORY

Young Finn Laborer May Have Met With Foul Play.

Mystery Surrounds Body Found in Ditch Near Floodwood.

Mystery surrounds the death of the young man whose body was found lying beside the Great Northern tracks about two miles from the village of Floodwood yesterday.

Coroner McCuen was notified last evening that a body had been found lying in the ditch beside the tracks and John McCullough, of the undertaking firm of Durkan & Crawford, was sent after it. He returned to the city this afternoon, bringing the remains with him.

The young man, who was only about 19 years of age, went by the name of Robert Allen, although he is of Finnish descent. He had probably adopted this English name for convenience.

Allen had been working in and around Floodwood since last spring, and Thursday night he started for a camp some little distance from Floodwood, where he intended to go to work. He was accompanied by two other men, whose names are not known.

That was the last seen of the young man alive. His body was found lying in the ditch beside the track. There was about two feet of water in the ditch, and the body was almost submerged.

The manner in which he met his death is a matter of mere guesswork at present. It is possible that the two strangers who were with him, were responsible, although there are no marks of violence on his body, and it is not thought that he had any money with him which might be an incentive for such a crime. He had nothing in his pockets but some trinkets and a few worthless personal possessions when the body was found.

It is also possible that he was struck by a train and knocked off into the ditch.

Another theory is that he became intoxicated and falling into the ditch, was drowned.

The latter theory is not given much credence, however, as Allen was not known as a heavy drinker, and was not in the habit of becoming intoxicated. He was also sober when last seen alive.

Coroner McCuen will hold a post mortem examination this afternoon to ascertain if death was due to poisoning or to any natural causes, and if the examination should warrant it, the county authorities will begin an investigation and seek to locate the two men who were last seen with him.

WANTS HIS DAMAGES

John Korby Charges John Chesser With Intent To Defraud.

Action Grows Out of Suit Over Wife's Affections.

Because he has not yet been able to collect the judgment of $1,668 entered in his favor against John Chesser, in the district court, John Korby, who was awarded that amount for the alienation of his wife's affections, has brought a second suit in which Chesser, David Beaudoin and others were made defendants.

Mr. Korby claims that Chesser, to hinder, delay and defraud him from the collection of the judgment has conveyed to Beaudoin title to a quantity of real estate, and several mortgages, which aggregate a sum considerably more than the amount of the judgment.

In his complaint, filed with the clerk of district court this morning, Mr. Korby states that he secured execution of judgment, but that the sheriff returned it unsatisfied. He demands judgment against all the defendants and that the court set aside the conveyances made to Beaudoin.

David Beaudoin, one of the defendants has started a suit against Mr. Korby, in which he petitions the court to discharge a lis pendens that Mr. Korby filed against certain lands in section 23-58-10, which Chesser conveyed to Beaudoin. Beaudoin claims that Korby has wilfully and wrongfully clouded the title to the land and prevented him selling it. He claims that the conveyance from Chesser to himself represented a bona fide purchase. John Martin of Virginia, appears for Mr. Beaudoin.

At the trial of the damage action of Korby against Chesser there was some testimony introduced, tending to show that Chesser and Beaudoin were jointly interested in a number of deals.

The damage case trial attracted much interest. It was tried twice. The jury in the first trial returned a verdict for Mr. Chesser, but the court set aside on the ground that the verdict was not sustained by the evidence, and ordered a new trial. At the second trial Korby got a verdict, and the court refused Chesser's motion for a new trial.

The Superb Universal Steel Range

SUPERB UNIVERSAL

Absolutely the finest high-grade Steel Range on the market today—and we can prove it.

The Superb for 1906 has more improvements than any other steel range. It has these special features:

White Porcelain Lined Oven Door—Reflects light into the oven, will not discolor, and is practically indestructible.

Oven Door is spring balanced, and fitted with automatic drop braces, which make the door practically unbreakable.

Body of Range is made of the best extra heavy cold rolled polished steel, strongly riveted and interlined with asbestos, preventing radiation of heat, making the range more durable and saving fuel; ovens are large, quickly heated, and so well braced and riveted that plates will not warp or buckle. Heavy ornamental cast-iron base.

Broiler Attachment—This is an entirely new device and is attached to front key plate, whereby this plate is raised and lowered easily and quickly, allowing meats, etc., to be broiled directly over the fire and preventing the escape of smoke and odors into room. Can be used when adding fuel to fire.

Combination Check Draft and Pipe Damper, so made that either register, check or pipe damper may be operated entirely independent of each other to check fire or control heat in oven, a special feature found on Universal Ranges only. Pouch feed and draft register form cast part of left end of range.

Fire Box is adapted for burning all kinds of fuel, is fitted with duplex grate, which can be easily and quickly removed without disturbing other fire-box fittings, and which, when removed, forms a perfect grate for burning wood. The linings are extra heavy and well ventilated. Is fitted with fire box extension for wood. By removing end linings will take 27-inch wood.

Cast Iron Flue Back—which will not rust out, is attached with locked bolts, so that it can be removed at will and returned to place by simply removing the nuts on the outside.

Nickel Trimmings are the finest and most elaborate ever used in a steel range, and possess a whiteness and brilliancy only found in the Universal.

GALE ON LAKE SUPERIOR.

Weather Man Says Storm Will be Dangerous for Small Boats.

The brisk northwest gale which has been blowing all day is expected to increase in velocity this afternoon and this evening and the weather forecaster has warned captains of small boats against leaving port tonight, saying that the storm will be a dangerous one on Lake Superior. The wind is expected to blow at the rate of fifty miles an hour this evening and tonight, but the storm will decrease in violence tomorrow. The gale may cause considerable delay, it is thought, to boats coming up Lake Superior as well as to the boats which are ready to leave the Duluth port.

BRUTE ENTERS HOUSE AND ATTACKS THREE GIRLS

Forces Open Door of Bathroom Where Children Took Refuge.

Narrowly Escapes Serious Injury at Hands of Angry Crowd.

Duluth was probably as near to having a lynching as it has ever been, about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

A man who gave his name as Clarence Potter was the brute who aroused the wrath of the people living in the vicinity of Lake avenue and Superior street, and he was lucky to be placed behind the bars at police headquarters without meeting with some serious injury at the hands of the people who caught him.

Potter rang the bell of the residence of John Kerr, at 17 Lake avenue north, shortly before 2 o'clock, and asked for some woman who was unknown in the neighborhood. Mr. Kerr's little daughter, Eva, and two of her playmates, children of 12 and 13 years of age, were in the house at the time. The man, after being informed that no such woman lived there, turned and started to leave. He is then claimed to have returned, and to have forced his way into the house. He walked back into the kitchen, and the girls, terrified at his actions, fled into the bathroom and locked the door. The man is then claimed to have secured an old pair of scissors from the kitchen, and to have forced open the door.

The children screamed in terror and in some manner managed to dodge past him and escape, running down the alley. The man followed them, and some citizens who happened to be passing saw him pursuing the girls. N. H. Witt and Jack Miles were the first to the rescue and they grasped the man in no gentle manner. Mr. Witt's actions were far from being lamblike and the captive was given about as neat a drubbing as has been administered in Duluth in many moons. An officer appeared on the scene and took the man in charge. He was promptly removed to headquarters and locked up.

When taken to the station he appeared to be completely intoxicated, but those who saw him pursuing the girls say that he was far from being as drunk as he made out. He had undoubtedly been drinking, but the spectators say that he was in possession of his senses and could walk straight.

The girls were thoroughly frightened by the affair, and were almost hysterical. The little Kerr girl is only 12 years of age, and her playmates, Myrtle Forsythe and Myrtle Siggert were about the same age.

BRAKEMAN HAS NECK BROKEN

C. B. Blancard Meets His Death On Missabe Ore Train.

The body of C. B. Blancard, a brakeman on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road, was brought to Duluth this morning.

The young, who was employed as a brakeman on one of the ore trains of the road, was killed early this morning on the line some distance above Proctor. The details of the accident are not known, not having yet been reported to the coroner.

The neck was broken, and death was doubtless caused by a fall of some kind, as there were no marks to show that the body was run over by the train.

The young man was about 24 years of age and unmarried. He has a brother in the West end.

TERRIFIC GALE IS PREDICTED

Wind Expected to Reach Velocity of Fifty Miles.

A terrific northwest gale is predicted for tonight on Lake Superior, and vessel captains are being warned by the weather bureau.

The wind is expected to reach a velocity of fifty miles an hour before morning.

The temperature is also dropping, and will probably go to the freezing point tonight, according to the local weather forecaster. The gale, however, will not be accompanied by rain or snow, and the weather is expected to be generally fair tomorrow.

MILWAUKEE'S BOY MAYOR IN THE ROLE OF KAISER.

Milwaukee, Oct. 27.—The first case of lese majeste ever investigated by an American police department is now being handled at the Central station. The crime was committed Monday night about 11 o'clock, and right in the heart of the city, but until now the central station people have succeeded in keeping it under cover while the investigation proceeds.

Monday night Mayor Becker went to the Davidson theater. While preparing to enter the carriage a cry rang out in the port cochere:

"Hurray for Rose!"

The offense was reported in writing and the police chief was called on the carpet the next day because his men did not catch the offender.

Partridge on Wolvin Building.

A wild partridge was seen by H. J. Wessinger at the Wolvin building this morning. The bird was seated on the window sill of one of the upper stories, and appeared to be resting while surveying the street below. Mr. Wessinger opened the window suddenly, hoping to catch the partridge, or, more properly speaking, ruffed grouse, but the bird flew away before he could lay hands on it. Those who make a study of creatures of the forest say that during a certain period in October the grouse apparently go crazy for a time, and some of them fly long distances, where ordinarily they are to be found in the same district for months at a time. This explains their appearance in Duluth every fall.

MISER'S FORTUNE FOUND.

Winona, Oct. 27.—Notes, mortgages, certificates of deposit and other personal property, worth thousands of dollars, have been dug up on the farm of Lemuel Hill, an aged hermit of Pleasant Hill, who died last week in a local hospital. Living in seclusion, dressing shabbily and denying himself even the plain comforts of life, it was supposed that this old miser had left valuables, but the searching party was amazed by the value of the documents unearthed.

VIRGINIA WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Victoria King Claims Husband Locked Her Up.

Victoria King, a resident of Virginia, has started divorce proceedings in the district court against John King, who is alleged to be a resident of Arbor Vitae, Wis. The grounds of Mrs. King's complaint are drunkenness and excessive cruelty.

According to the complaint, Mrs. King is 36, and her husband is 44 years old. They were married at Quebec, Can., in July, 1889, and have six children, with ages ranging from 7 to 15 years. The two youngest children are being supported by their mother, while the remaining four live with their father in Wisconsin.

Mrs. King charges her husband with being especially violent toward her during the months of June, July and August, 1904, when he is claimed to have struck her repeatedly, called her vile names, and even imprisoned her and the children in a room in their house. The wife alleges that King became so violent and dangerous, that she dared no longer live with him. She asks a decree and the custody of the two children. John M. Martin of Virginia is her attorney.

CIGAR MAKERS GET RAISE.

Big Company Celebrates High-Water Mark by Substantial Token.

Cigarmakers throughout the whole country are jubilant over the raise in wages which has been given them by the American Cigar company. This raise, which varies from 5 per cent to 25 per cent, according to location, took place the third week of this month. It was entirely unsolicited on the part of the employes, and on this account was the more unexpected.

During the past year the success of the company has been very flattering. Realizing that this success was due directly to their employes, they decided, some time ago, to present them a substantial token of their appreciation. Nothing was said of the matter, and no one had an inkling of it until the managers of the hundreds of factories were notified of the plan. The employes were vastly surprised and pleased when they opened their envelopes to find they had been earning an extra salary for a week. This is the second time the company has given its people a general rise. All classes of its employes both skilled and unskilled, have profited thereby. When the company took over a number of the Southern factories, the cigarmakers were getting only $2.50 a day. The company at once raised the schedule to $3, and this month's step brings it up to $3.50 in all of the largest factories.

Apropos of cigars, it is an interesting fact that the cheroot-smoking districts are suffering severe encroachment at the hands of the 5-cent cigar, for which larger orders are coming in, in these sections. It is inferred from this that the taste of the cheroot smoker is improving. Indeed, the demand for cigars in general seems to be increasing, for last month the American people reached their high-water mark when they turned out 140,000,000 of them. They are confident that the increase they have given their employes will stimulate the latter to greater efforts and enable them to follow up the record with one sill higher.

A ROUSING RECEPTION

Arrangements Complete for Next Thursday's Johnson Meeting.

John Dwan Brings Encouraging Report From Twin Cities.

Arrangements are now complete for the reception of Governor Johnson when he arrives in the city next Thursday. He will arrive on the 7:30 evening train, and will be met at the depot by the uptown membership of the Young Men's Johnson club, local members of the Democratic county committee, and other interested Democrats.

Accompanying the Young Men's club will be the fife and drum corps, which will lead the way to the St. Louis hotel. Meantime the West end contingent of the Young Men's club will gather at Twentieth avenue west, and, to band music, will march to the St. Louis hotel. The West Duluth contingent will meet in West Duluth, at a place not yet designated, and come in a body to the St. Louis hotel, where all club members from different parts of the city will be brought together.

By this time there will, of course, be a good many Johnson followers on hand, and the line of march will be taken to the Armory.

There will be enough doing, in fact, to let the people know a political meeting really is to be held, provided the weather man is friendly to the present administration. The Lake county contingent will also take part in the parade.

* * *

Judge Ira B. Mills of the state railroad and warehouse commission arrived in the city last evening. Judge Mills has just returned from the northwestern part of the state, and says that everything is looking bright for Cole there, while in Southern Minnesota a heavy vote for Cole is expected. He claims the election of the entire Republican ticket from top to bottom.

John Dwan of Two Harbors, Democratic candidate for attorney general, was in the city today, on his way home from Minneapolis, where he attended a meeting of the Democratic state committee. He says that it was a largely attended meeting and from every county there were excellent reports. From those that gave Dunn a majority two years ago there were confident predictions of reduced majorities, and in those that went for Johnson, the committeemen expect gains. This was true of all but Hennepin, where a falling off is of course expected, but the majority there is expected to be not less than from 3,000 to 5,000, and bets are being made that indicate an expectation of about those figures.

The Hennepin county Democrats are making a strenuous campaign and are holding several meetings every night. Last evening they pressed Mr. Dwan into service for a couple of speeches.

OIL FINES FAIL IN OHIO COURT

Attorney General Beaten in Suits to Mulct Trust $270,000.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 27.—Attorney General Ellis was defeated today in his fight against the oil trust, in a decision handed down by Judge Dillon in the common pleas court. The Manhattan Oil company, understood to be a part of the Standard Oil company, was sued by Attorney General Ellis, under the Wills law, for fines amounting to $270,000, this method being taken instead of trying to drive the company from the state by ouster suits. The corporation admitted that it had not paid the tax but claimed it was exempt. The case came up for settlement on motion for judgment, and was decided against the attorney general.

How to Cure a Cold.

I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by all druggists.

All London Credits Marlborough Separation---Gossip Is Busy.

London, Oct. 27.—Although both the duke and duchess of Marlborough maintain absolute silence and decline to furnish any information, all indications tend to corroboration of the stories that a climax has been reached in their domestic affairs. The duchess said this afternoon that she had nothing to say, while the duke has not answered the telegrams addressed to him at Blenheim, where he is staying with Winston Spencer Churchill and other relatives. The duke's lawyers say that they are entirely ignorant of the existence of a deed of separation.

It appears to be the general understanding that the magnificent palace will be closed, as the duke will find difficulty in keeping it up. It is said he will take up his residence at Woodstock house—a small place on the estate.

According to Reynolds' Newpaper, the duke, in the opinion of the duchess, paid greater attention than necessary to a young girl friend of his wife's.

A LETTER TO OUR READERS.

53 Cottage Street, Melrose, Mass.
Dear Sir:

"Ever since I was in the Army, I had more or less kidney trouble, and within the past year it became so severe and complicated that I suffered everything and was much alarmed—my strength and power was fast leaving me. I saw an advertisement of Swamp-Root and wrote asking for advice. I began the use of the medicine and noted a decided improvement after taking Swamp-Root only a short time.

I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. In order to be very sure about this, I had a doctor examine some of my water today and he pronounced it all right and in splendid condition.

I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable, and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery, and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers, I am,

"Very truly yours,
"I C. RICHARDSON."

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root. If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

ROOSEVELT TO GERMANY

President Sends Letter to Open New Professorship.

Kaiser Calls for Cheers From Assembled Students.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Prof. John W. Burgess, dean of Columbia university, New York, first incumbent of the Theodore Roosevelt professorship of American history and institutions at the University of Berlin, began his lectures today.

Emperor William, the empress, Prince August Wilhelm, United States Ambassador Tower and Mrs. Tower, Dr. Studt, the minister of education, and about fifty professors and some resident Americans occupied chairs near the reading desk, while behind them were four hundred students, who energetically cheered when he entered and applauded every reference to President Roosevelt.

Prof. Burgess read a letter from Mr. Roosevelt, of which the following is a translation:

"White House, Oct. 12.—My Dear Prof. Burgess:—Allow me, through you, to greet the University of Berlin with the heartiest good will. The historical friendship between Prussia and the United States and then, after Prussia had founded the German empire, between this mighty empire and the United States, has never been broken nor even shaken in the least. This friendship began in the mutual esteem and mutual good will that existed between Washington and Frederick The Great, and was confirmed by the fact that Prussia alone among all the European powers showed herself willing to have trade relations with the United States during the period of our necessity and weakness in those trying years between 1783 and 1789, and to make a trade treaty with us.

"Already during the Colonial period of our history there was a large German element among our people. Men of German blood gave us great and successful service during the Revolutionary period, as leaders, both in war and peace. General Steuben trained the Continental army and Muhlenberg was the first speaker of the house of representatives. Since the Revolution, a continuous German emigration has taken place that has proved most important for the population of the Northwestern territories. The men of German birth and race were nearly all devoted in body and soul to the Union, and were extremely hostile to slavery. Through their powerful help the Northwest territories were made into the free states that form the heart of the republic. We have to thank men of German birth or origin that, at the outbreak of the Civil war, Maryland, Missouri and even Kentucky held firmly to the Union, and during the fearful period, they rendered us services by word and deed, which will never be forgotten.

"Since the Civil war, the large emigration of students from the United States to German universities is one of the most remarkable and important features of our intellectual life and it is one of the most significant facts in our American education that those sons of our republic, who have been educated in German universities guide and control our higher education. All this had powerful influence in bringing about an exchange of culture, which in a certain sense culminated in the founding of the professorship that you, my dear professor, are charged with inaugurating.

"Again expressing my heartiest greeting for the university and with best wishes for your success and that of your students, I remain,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

While the cheering was still in progress, the emperor rose and said: "Fellow students: Let us express our thanks for what has been expressed so eloquently, by accepting the offered hand, which has been extended to us from America and by giving a cheer for the man, who is the incarnation of the good qualities of his people, President Roosevelt. Hurrah! hurrah! hurrah!"

The members of the emperor's suite, the professors and the students responded vigorously. The emperor then conversed with Prof. Burgess and with Amabassador and Mrs. Tower.

PASTOR IS RELEASED

Dr. T. H. Cleland Formally Leaves His Charge in Duluth.

Resolutions of Eulogistic Nature by Church and Presbytery.

The meeting of the Duluth Presbytery yesterday afternoon, at which Dr. T. H. Cleland severed his official connections with the First Presbyterian church, of which he has been pastor for thirteen years, was largely attended, practically every Presbyterian clergyman in the district being present.

Rev. P. E. Zartman of the Presbytery of New York City, who happened to be a visitor here, was invited to sit in the meeting. Dr. Zartman opened the meeting with a talk on personal holiness.

Rev. E.F. Higgins, who has been doing missionary work in the logging camps for several years past, and who has recently returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, gave a brief report of his trip through the State of Washington, where he visited many camps. He said there are about 10,000 lumbermen in that state without the spiritual guidance of a minister. He said his meetings were well attended. Mr. Higgins estimates the number of men in Northern Minnesota camps this year at 25,000, or about 5,000 less than last year.

S. S. Williamson, C. M. Wilson and G. H. Claypool, representing a committee from the First Presbyterian church, presented to the presbytery the petition of Dr. Cleland and the church for his release from the pastorate. After a number of eugolistic speeches, official action was taken, releasing Dr. Cleland. A committee comprised of Rev. S. F. Sharpless, Rev. J. C. Ferris and Rev. H. B. Sutherland was appointed to draft resolutions to be presented at a reception to be given Dr. Cleland next Tuesday evening in the church building.

The resolutions which will be presented are as follows:

"Be it resolved, that the presbytery place on record its high appreciation of the fellowship and work of Dr. T. H. Cleland, as a presbyter, always ready for any work called upon to be done, which was always skilfully and faithfully performed. As a brother, dearly beloved and revered we commend him to the blessing of the Great Head of the church and wish him God speed in the new work the master has called in him to do.

"REV. S. F. SHARPLESS, D. D.,
"REV. J. C. FERIES,
"REV. H. D. SUTHERLAND,
"Committee."

A committee from the First Presbyterian church presented the following resolutions to Dr. Cleland, on his resignation:

"Whereas, after laboring faithfully in this church and city for the past twelve and one-half years, our beloved pastor, Dr. T. H. Cleland, has resigned to enter into another field, and

"Whereas, by his kindly Christian courtesy and ministry of service, he has greatly endeared himself to this congregation and the people of the city at large, and

"Whereas, by his faithful, zealous preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ, he has built up the church to a high spiritual standard, and by his good business methods has cleared the church of debts, and placed the church on a prosperous, material basis;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the congregation accept his resignation with the deepest sorrow and regret, and that we pray that God may constantly pour out his richest blessings upon him in his new field of labor."

The presbytery authorized the First Presbyterian church to supply itself with a pastor after next Sunday, when Dr. Cleland will preach his farewell sermon. Revv. M. L. Upham has been appointed moderator of the session of the church, but no steps have yet been taken to secure a successor to Dr. Cleland.

Rev. J. C. Faries has been appointed to succeed Dr. Cleland as chairman of the home mission committee. Rev. S. F. Sharpless was made a member of the same committee.

The presbytery examined for ordination Rev. A. N. Wolff of Scanlon. Arrangements were made for the ceremonies to be held at Scanlon, Nov. 7.

The next meeting of the presbytery will be held at Scanlon, Nov. 7.

Charcoal Kills Bad Breath.

Bad Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Drinking or Eating Can Be Instantly Stopped.

Sample Package Mailed Free.

Other people notice your bad breath where you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people to stand before them and while you are talking, give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning—that awful sour, bilious, bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared.

Sometimes your meals will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You've had onions," or "You've been eating cabbage," and all of a sudden you belch in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of odors, as every one knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn his face away from you when you breathe or talk; your breath will be pure and fresh, and besides your food will taste so much better to you at your next meal. Just try it.

Charcoal does other wonderful things, too. It carries away from your stomach and intestines, all the impurities there massed together and which causes the bad breath. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber.

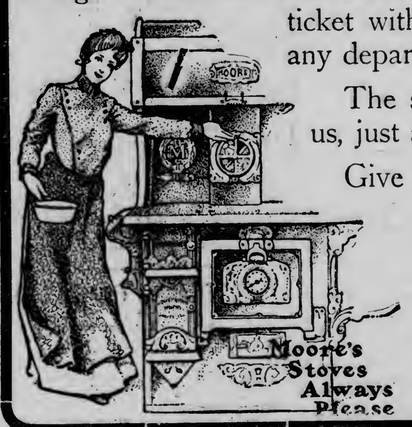

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure sweet breath, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep th intestines in good working order. These two things are the secret of good health and long life. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample pacakage free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 60 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

HEARST IN FIERY MOOD

Accuses Foes by Name of Plotting Wholesale Corruption.

Tells What He Will Do to Trust Barons If Elected.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 27.—W. R. Hearst was greeted by thousands of cheering people here and at Troy last night. Torchlight parades and fireworks preceded each meeting. In each of his speeches he expressed confidence that the people would wrest control of the government from the trusts and great public service corporations. He reiterated his attacks on Attorney General Meyer and continued:

"We do not know what particular outrage, what final blow to popular institutions, to American rights and liberties may be dealt at this election, but we do know that every trust-owned officer in every branch of government will do his best to defeat the will of the people and to continue the trusts that suckle him in power."

Hearst declared his belief that he would carry the election by 200,000 "unless there was some treachery," and went on:

"Tonight, I solemnly warn the people of this state that even more desperate measure will be taken by the corrupt corporations at this election than were taken last year. All that Belmont and Ryan and Morgan and Rockefeller and Rogers spent to buy or bribe or steal the mayor's chair for their puppet, McClellan, will be lost if a governor and legislature are elected who will see to it that the votes that we have fought to preserve are honestly counted as cast.

"Then the bought and branded cattle of the trusts would be driven out of office or removed for criminal complicity; and all the greedy hopes of gain of these financial outlaws would be destroyed. The public booty they had within their grasp would be taken away from them; the millions and hundreds of millions they had expected to make out of the people's property by pillage and plunder and by oppression and extortion, would be lost to them. In honest business they would have no advantage over honest business men and as thieves they would stand before the people and the law as other thieves amenable to the law.

"You can easily see that these trust buccaneers, these financial freebooters, these political pirates will not tolerate honest conditions, nor allow their acomplices in office to be removed if their wealth and power can prevent." Mr. Hearst excoriated Elections Commissioner Dady of New York City and Senator McCarran of Brooklyn, whom he called "the briber for the Standard Oil and lighting trust and Brooklyn Rapid Transit."

In conclusion, Mr. Hearst said: "Whether I am elected or not, I am enlisted in this battle to the end and that I will fight in the lead or in the ranks as you desire. But if you see fit to elect me, and my associates and give us an honest legislature, I pledge you that we will restrain corrupt corporations and whip them and their servants out of the temple of our government. And we will restore the government to the people and adopt laws that will perpetuate the people in power for generations to come."

New York, Oct. 27.—The appellate division of the supreme court, reviewing the decision of the board of elections on contested nomination cases in New York county, rendered yesterday, a decision, removing from the ticket a majority of the Independence league candidates for congress, state, senate and assembly. In a few instances, contested candidates will have places on the ballot because objection was not made within the prescribed time, or because no protest was entered. Counsel for the league announced afterward that they had filed an application with the court of appeals at Albany, which took a recess yesterday until Nov. 12, for a special session at which the ruling may be argued.

Corning, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for governor, addressed three large audiences here last night. Only one meeting had been planned, but the Corning opera house and then the courthouse were so quickly filled that he agreed to speak a third time in the city hall. He paid tribute to old soldiers and went on:

"The issue in this campaign is simply whether the good sense of the people of this state shall triumph. It is a shame to find an effort, an effort organized, an effort which some think may possibly be conducted successfully, to make the people of this country think all business life is base, that all those who are in control of the great enterprises are plunderers and bandits, that there is no wholesomeness in American life. I tell you it is false. American business is bottomed upon integrity."

as that frequently printed reports of his having received magnificent presents from his father-in-law. When Sutherland house was being built it was published that this was being done with money furnished by W. K. Vanderbilt as a Christmas present to the duke and duchess.

The duke angered by the publication, gave out a sharply worded denial, in which he intimated that W. K. Vanderbilt had never given either himself or the duchess anything beyond the marriage settlements.

Close friends of the duke say he is one of those men who could never be contented or consistently agreeable, and that the question of money really need not trouble them at all if it were not for other sources of disagreement.

The two children, the marquis of Blandford and Lord Spencer Churchill, will, it is understood, remain with the duchess for the present.

FISH NOT TO RETIRE.

New York, Oct. 27.—The statement is made by a high authority that the Chicago story that an agreement had been reached between Stuyvesant Fish and E. H. Grammer, now vice president of the New York Central lines, west of Buffalo, is untrue, and that there has been no change of the two interests.

RICH MAN KILLS GIRL.

Nothing more was seen of Hampton until yesterday morning, when about 9 o'clock he entered the hotel, accompanied by an unusually handsome brunette, fashionably dressed, going to the hotel office, registering as "Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair, Burlington, Vt."

The couple took breakfast and then went to their room. The woman left the hotel several times during the day, but Hampton remained in his room. Soon after she returned from one of these excursions early in the evening, a light dinner was sent to their room, and a request was sent to the clerk to call them at 11 o'clock last night, Hampton saying: "We want to be called at 11, so that we may catch a train."

From that time until 10:30 o'clock nothing was heard or seen of the couple, but at that hour, a maid, who was in the corridor outside the room they occupied heard what she thought was an explosion in the street. At five minutes to eleven she went to the room to call the couple, but when her repeated raps at the door brought no response, she notified the hotel office.

The room was opened with a pass key, and on the floor, at the far end of the room, between a large mirror and a dresser, lay the man on his back, with a revolver in his right hand, and his hat tightly in the left hand. A shot fired into his mouth had entered his brain, killing him instantly. Directly in front was the bed and upon it was the woman, also dead. Her feet were on the floor, while her head was resting on the bed clothes, with her left arm shielding her face. In her arm were three bullet wounds, none of which appeared more than flesh wounds, but right under the left arm pit, was found a fourth wound. The bullet had been fired evidently after the woman had sunk back onto the bed, when she had been shot in the arm, for it entered her body in a downward direction, and went through her heart.

The first positive identification of the victims of the tragedy was made by the dead woman's brother. He had been notified that a young woman, wearing jewelry bearing his sister's initials, had been murdered, and went to a police station to look at the articles which had been taken there. He at once recognized a pair of silk garters, with bold buckles, as the property of his sister. One of the buckles bore the letters "V. I. T.," while on the other was inscribed "L. G. H." Young Taczkow also told the police that the man undoubtedly was Louis G. Hampton, who had been very attentive to his sister for some time.

"Hampton told us that he intended to marry my sister when his mother died," said Taczkow. "I never knew much about him, but he seemed to be honorable in his intentions, and appeared to be very fond of my sister. Victoria was a good girl, and never stayed out all the night. We thought we knew where she was every minute of the time."

Hampton had a summer home at Highland, in Ulster county, this state, and Mrs. Hampton and her daughter spent the last summer there. In addition to a valuable watch and other jewelry found in Hampton's pockets, were papers which directed inquiry to the apartment house in West Twenty-third street, where he had lived with his wife. At the United States Trust company, it was said today that he was at the offices of the company Thursday attending to his duties. Yesterday he telephoned that he was indisposed, but would be at the office today. An officer of the company said Hampton's duties were secretarial only, and that he had nothing to do with the company's finances. It is believed that his books were correctly kept.

Hampton had been employed by the Trust company for thirty-five years and was a protege of Former President John A. Stewart, now chairman of the board of directors. He was regarded at the office of the company as able and efficient, and of good habits.

The United States Trust company, of which Hampton was assistant secretary, is one of the largest and strongest trust companies in New York. Ex-Secretary Lyman J. Gage was its president until recently, and, on his retirement, Edward W. Sheldon was elected president, and Hampton for sometime acted as secretary.

Ridgways

Trouble

WE have got to stop advertising—at least until we can discover some new way to do it. The trouble is by the old method we cannot keep our advertising within gunshot of our contents. We cannot expect to sell a weekly ten hours old with advertising ten days old. This advertisement was written just ten days ago. We had to write it ten days ago in order to have it appear all over the country this morning.

Now that you know what Ridgway's is trying to do, our only reason for further advertising would be to call your attention to the special features in each number as it is issued, but if we are obliged to write the advertisement ten days before the number which we wish to advertise comes along, we cannot talk in our advertisements about these special features for the simple reason that we our selves do not know ten days before what the special features are going to be.

With our mobile organization we expect to be able to turn Ridgway's inside out any time big developments make it necessary up to within a few hours of going to press. Very often it will happen that the most interesting feature in Ridgway's will be something that your local editor has dug up, something that the rest of the country would not have reason to be as much interested in as you are. We might ask each of our local editors to write the advertising for his section, but they are so loaded up with things to do now we wonder when they find time to visit their families.

It will be a pity if we have to give up advertising. Possibly we could figure out some way to send the advertisements by telegraph the same way that we edit the Weekly. That sounds good. It's new, too. Wonder how much it would cost. We shall look into it. Heigh ho! How trouble heaps up for the fellow who tries to do new things.

Maybe you will remember to buy Ridgway's every Saturday. It is bound to be better every week. Just compare the issue this week with our first number.

IN POLITICS

One unusual thing about the present campaign is that no one appears to be saying anything about majorities. Two years ago Dunn and his backers were freely talking about the big majorities he was going to have, and a good many bets were made on the majority proposition. For several weeks before election, the predicted majority for Dunn, was in the neighborhood of 30,000. ome of the more enthusiastic ones placed it even higher, and some of the more conservative of the Republicans placed their estimates much lower, and with good reason, as it afterward developed.

This fall the Republicans, while expressing every confidence that A. L. Cole will be elected governor, have nothing to say regarding majorities, at least nothing is heard about it in Duluth, so far as the whole state is concerned. Probably their experience of two years ago had something to do with it, breeding a certain degree of caution. The Democrats are also cautious, but they are freer in talking majorities than the Republicans.

Interest is centering on the vote on governor in Duluth and St. Louis county, the Republican stronghold of the state. A Superior street bookmaker who in the past has established quite a reputation for safe betting, is offering even money that Johnson will carry the city of Duluth. He is also beting that Cole's majority in St. Louis county will be less than 1,500. The Republicans will be disappointed if it isn't a good deal larger than that, and the Democrats will likewise be disappointed if it isn't much smaller.

Judging by the range tours of Johnson and Cole, and comparing the receptions accorded each, the Democrats claim to have the best of the bargain, so far as an encouraging outlook is concerned. Johnson was more enthusiastically received all along the line and his day meetings were just as largely attended as were the evening gatherings of Cole, Clapp and Bede. Congressman Bede alone is generally able to fill a house, no matter what his subject may be, and Senator Clapp is looked upon as being a speaker of no mean ability. The Republicans were unfortunate in meeting with poor weather in Duluth, and this doubtless had a tendency to keep away some voters, but even under the circumstances the attendance at the local meetings should have been larger.

• • •

Probably the two biggest Duluth meetings of the campaign will be held next Wednesday and Thursday evenings at the Armory. Congressman James A. Tawney of Winona, and Jacob F. Jacobson of Lac Qui Parle county will speak on behalf of the Republicans, Wednesday night, Oct. 31, and on the following evening, Governor Johnson will hold forth. There is no reason why the hall should not be well filled on both occasions.

Jacobson is a picturesque figure and good speaker, and the platform abilities of Tawney are well known. Governor Johnson will, so far as known at present, be alone in his efforts to please, but his past appearances here have so delighted Duluth audiences that he will be certain to draw a good crowd. The nearness of election day, and the fact that this will be the last opportunity of the public to hear both sides of the question through the medium of public speakers, will, of course, do much toward drawing crowds.

The Republicans will hold a meeting Wednesday evening at the Lincoln park roller rink. This will be addressed by Prof. Martinson, who has been filling the pulpit of the Bethany Swedish Lutheran church lately, and who before that was a teacher in the Swedish Lutheran college at Minneapolis. Congressman Tawney will not speak at the West end meeting.

For at least these two night, Duluth will be forced to sit up and take notice of the fact that a political campaign is on. Both sides will have bands and processions, and the occasions will take on the appearance of a good, old fashioned political rally. The followers of Governor Johnson in Lake county are so enthusiastic that they are planning on sending a big delegation to Duluth Thursday evening. The latter will arrive in Duluth at 7:30 in the evening, and will participate in the procession.

P. M. Magnusson, Democratic candidate for secretary of state, will speak in Duluth next week. The date has not yet been arranged. He may deliver two addresses here.

Democratic County Chairman W. E. McEwen says the present campaign is being carried on at less cost than any conducted in the state for many years past, on the Democratic side. The Democratic headquarters in the St. Louis hotel have only two people employed, while the Republicans, in the Mesaba block, have five or six.

• • •

It is understood that John D. Brady, Democratic candidate for sheriff, has legal talent employed and all papers ready to institute an action to unseat William J. Bates from the shrievalty in case Bates is elected to succeed himself. Odds are being offered that Bates will be removed from office, provided the law, as it stands on the books, is found to be constitutional.

A story is going the rounds of how Clarence B. Miller came nearly not filing the necessary papers in his candidacy for the house before the time limit expired. He had until Oct. 16, with the other candidates, to file the papers, but went on a hunting trip before doing so, and was considerably delayed in his return. When he got back to town he was very busy. The last day on which he could get the papers to their proper place still found his forgettor in good working order, and when he finally did remember that it was the last day, it took some lively hustling on his part, and the energetic use of the telephone, in order to get the papers filed. This was accomplished, however, and Mr. Miller was able to breathe a sigh of relief. If the filing had not been successful, it is said Mr. Miller would no longer have been a candidate, and the second position in the house would have gone to Mr. Fulton of Two Harbors, Prohibition candidate.

Democrats profess to be getting a lot of amusement out of the fact that thousands of Republican circulars being sent over the state are headed as follows:

"Republican ticket—President, Theodore Roosevelt."

FRED W. KUGLER

The Business Men's Candidate For County Commissioner, Second District.

Your commissioner has been largely instrumental in increasing the taxable value of the mines, from $5,600,000 to a little over $71,000,000. He stands for and believes that everyone should pay a just and relative value tax, whether they be rich or poor. He favors an act of the legislature, creating a commission which shall be appointed by the court, for the construction and repair of all town and county roads, and that all work shall be done by contract, under the supervision of a competent engineer. He pledges himself, if elected, to stand, as in the past, for economy and sound business principles, in conducting county affairs.

asked to explain the La Follette statement made recently at Hutchinson, Minn., and a very lively time is expected. Nelson is known to resent this kind of tactics and doubly so in Heatwole's territory, where he will be more sensitive than ever and will regard the questions as inspired by Heatwole.

Following a meeting of the Democratic state central committee, held late yesterday afternoon at the Merchants' hotel, the leaders refused to make a direct estimate on Governor Johnson's plurality at the election to be held Nov. 6, but they were unanimous in their expressions of belief that he would be elected. They declared that the outlook could not well be more roseate, but they said they were not going to disclose their strength at this time simply to invite assaults by the enemy in the closing days of the campaign. Members of the committee, seen by the newspaper men immediately upon the adjournment of the committee after a two hours session, were content to declare that the outlook was most satisfactory and estimates by individuals ran from 10,000 to as high as 30,000.

There were representatives of some fifty counties in attendance upon the meeting of the state central committee, and the counties represented included the entire nine congressional districts of the state. City Attorney Bert Fesler and Charles d'Autremont were down from Duluth, and Pine, Itasca and several other counties in the Eighth district were also represented. The Eighth district members were strong in their claims of what the balloting would show in their district for Governor Johnson, but possibly the most optimistic claims were advanced by the Ninth district men. Where Governor Johnson won by a plurality of only 130 votes two years ago, it was said that he would surely have 4,000 and possibly 5,000 this year. J. A. McDermott, who returned to St. Paul yesterday, after a week spent with Governor Johnson in the Seventh district, said that the Seventh turned out the best meetings despite the terribly inclement weather, of any district thus far in the campaign. McDermott insisted that the same towns as visited two years ago gave the governor three times as many people to hear him this year and he predicted a big increase in the governor's Seventh district vote. The Sixth district, where Johnson ran especially strong two years ago, was reported to be holding its own this year. The Fourth, where Ramsey casts the biggest part of the vote, was vouched for by her committeemen as in splendid shape, and Governor Johnson, it is said, would show an increased vote of more than 1,000 over his majority of 1,100 two years ago, and possibly a much heavier majority than this. In the wards, where the workingmen live, it was said that almost everybody, without respect to party, is for Johnson this year.

The First district will show up strong this year and gains are expected, according to the committeemen from several of her most populous counties, while the Second and Third will more than hold their own. But two counties in the state were reported as showing possible losses from the vote for Johnson two years ago, and it was said that more recent developments showed that the slump in these two was not going to be nearly so bad as had earlier been feared.

The attack of R. C. Dunn on Governor Johnson's record, it is believed, was discussed at the committee meeting, but was dismissed as more of an attack on State Auditor Iverson and Attorney General Young, candidates on the same ticket with Mr. Cole, than on Governor Johnson. It is understood, however, that Democratic speakers next week will take up and discuss Dunn's charges. In some quarters, where practical politics are discussed, it is declared that the Dunn speech, with the prominence that has been given it by the Pioneer Press, hitherto not very strenuous for Mr. Cole's election, will have the effect of sending a good many men who were against Dunn and the Pioneer Press last year, back to the Johnson camp.

• • •

Indications point to the fact that the railroad and warehouse commission are preparing to throw James Manahan out of the rate hearing, now pending before that body. They figure that if they can get rid of him the people will be kind enough to retire Governor Johnson, and the commission and the corporations will have an opportunity to rest.

• • •

All of Governor Johnson's friends should organize themselves to get out the vote. That is all that is needed to elect him.

• • •

The Cole supporters say that Governor Johnson is not entitled to credit for reduction in freight rates, because a Republican legislature authorized the railway and warehouse commission to investigate and reduce rates, and that the investigation was made by the commission which issued the order on which reductions were made. But the railway and warehouse commission had been in office for four years before it began this investigation. Governor Van Sant had been in office four years, but he had not told the legislature, as did Governor Johnson, at the very beginning of his term, that "railway rates are much higher in our state than across our border in Canada. That there is unjust discrimination there is no doubt. Railway rates are lower in Iowa than in this state by 25 to 40 per cent. Something is radically wrong with a system which places the Minnesota shipper at such a disadvantage." Governor Van Sant did not recommend to the legislature at any time during his four years as governor that investigation be made.

Mr. Johnson's opponents may protest as much as they please—they may proclaim that that it was the legislature and the commission, and that Johnson had nothing to do with it, but the logic of the case is against them. Nothing was done until Johnson pointed out the manifest injustice of existing conditions, and inducted a remedy. The people recognize this, and give Governor Johnson full credit for the reform accomplished.

Robert C. Dunn dug himself out from under the avalanche of votes which buried him a couple of years ago, and tells the people, in a speech delivered in behalf of Candidate Cole, at Milaca, that timber thieves have not stolen them blind in Minnesota. Bob sticks close to his friends—even after the resurrection.

The Cole supporters have been making much of late of a letter from George S. Loftus, commissioner of the Minnesota Shippers and Receivers' association, stating that Cole was right on the reciprocal demurrage fight in the last legislature. He laughs best who laughs last, for a letter has just been sent by Mr. Loftus to Carlos Avery, of Hutchinson, in which he states very clearly the position taken by Governor Johnson. He writes:

Hon. Carlos Avery, Hutchinson, Minn., Sir: I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 23rd inst. The Minnesota Shippers and Receivers' association, is in no sense a political organization and can not engage in a partisan contest. We are advising the election of good men who will favor the best interests of the people; in other words, we want men who favor a government by the people instead of a government by the railroads. We are opposing the candidates who fail to answer satisfactorily the questions on the enclosed card, but have refrained from taking any part when both opposing candidates are right. But in districts where only one has answered the questions in the interests of the people, have given him our support, regardless of whether he is a Republican, Democrat, or Prohibitionist.

Referring to the attitude of Governor Johnson, would say, that both he and Mr. Cole have answered the questions affirmatively. Governor Johnson did take an interest in the reciprocal demurrage fight in the last legislature and in the right direction. I have reason to believe that the association will receive assistance in case either candidate for governor is elected. You will appreciate, of course, that it is quite impossible for the association to take partisan attitude, as our aim is to secure such legislation and executive action as will prove beneficial to all the people of the state. Yours truly, laws which would further his heinous plans. He is known throughout the country as the czar of North Dakota, and the title seems very appropriate. He is a resident of New York and a ruler in North Dakota.

G. S. LOFTUS, Commissioner.

For the first time since statehood the people of North Dakota have been attracted to the platforms, and nearly every speaker on the stump is being questioned regarding them. The Republican party, or rather the machine, adopted a platform that, with the exception of one sentence, refers to the past and promises nothing. Hansbrough, who passed the legislation to further the plans of Alexander McKenzie in Alaska, is commended, and McCumber, who is known as one of James J. Hill's best aids in the senate and who was elected to his present position because Hill was favorable, and who is accused by La Follette of trying to defeat the working of the interstate commerce commission law, is also commended. Congressman Gronna also comes in for a fair share of the praise, ontwithstanding the fact that he left congress long before it was finished to attend to his personal business interests and let the interests of the people who had elected him go. The last sentence of the platform reads:

"Be it resolved, that this convention favors and recommends the enactment by the next legislature of a direct law for the nomination of all county, legislative, district, state and congressional offices and preferences for United States senator."

This section seems out of harmony with the rest of the platform. The bosses never intended this to go in the platform, but the insurgents forced it upon them. When the mock platform was handed in and read, the insurgents were disgusted and threatened to bolt if the unanimous expression of the people regarding a direct primary was not carried out. Mr. McHarg and others did not believe in a direct primary and stood solid against the resolution which was offered from the floor. The machine men said that they could not afford to pass a resolution from the floor, as all such resolutions were to be handed to the committee, making the point that they might not be in "good" English. However, the insurgents finally gained a point, and the committee was instructed to prepare a clause covering the primary, and the committee came in with the following or something nearly like it: "We further recommend to the next legislative assembly of North Dagota that they pass a law which, in their judgment, will be satisfactory to the majority of the people, regarding the primary."

This was not satisfactory to the insurgents, and after a hard fight, in which the machine men contended that it was not the province of the convention to dictate or suggest to the legislature, and the insurgents maintaining the opposite, the direct primary clause was tacked on the platform. By the insurgents it is believed that it means the deathknell of bossism in this state, while the machine nominees smile and intimate that a bill which will be unconstitutional will be passed by the legislature next winter.

So much for the Republican platform. Now let us turn to the Democratic platform, which enunciates a number of principles and promises valid laws. There are several points which stand out conspicuously. For instance, the third plank walch favors a direct primary election law, and an expression favoring United States senators and the completing divorcing of the judiciary and school offices from party designation. This would mean that the candidates for the judiciary and for school offices would be placed on a separate ballot without party designation. It is a well-known fact that the governor never exercises the power of appointment and it is said that he could not even appoint his private secretary without the permission of the bosses. The Democrats believe that he should exercise this power without dictation. They also favor the election of United States senators by popular vote. Their platform demands equal taxation and that corporate property belonging to railway, telegraph, telephone, express and sleeping car companies shall pay the same proportion of taxes as the farmer, merchant and laborer, and arraigns the Republican party of this state for its discrimination in favor of these corporations. The demand is also made that power be conferred on the railroad commissioners of the state to establish and enforce both passenger and freight rates on traffic originating in the state and that an effective anti-pass law be passed by the legislature. "The political affairs of the state of North Dakota," says the platform, "are controlled by the railroads. We call upon the citizens of the state to assist us in relieving the state from such domination."

These are a few of the chief features of the Democratic platform, which are conceded to be the strongest ever adopted in this state.

DEMOCRATS HIT BY BONAPARTE

Secretary Declares Party Works Only "To Get Office."

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 27.—At the principal meeting incidental to the Republican congressional campaign in this city, last night, Secretary of War Taft and Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte were the principal speakers.

In opening the meeting, Mr. Bonaparte denounced the Democratic party, declaring that it was a "party of no principles and no policy except to get and keep office, no matter how." "Anything to win," he said, "has been its motto for forty years, and what it has been for two generations, it is today. It has nominated Hearst for governor of New York just as thirty-four years ago it nominated Greeley for president of the United States. It tried a 'sane and safe' candidate in 1904 only because it had been beaten with one not called 'sane' or 'safe' in 1900 and four years previously, and as it was beaten even worse when it tried sanity and safety, it is apparently getting ready to try something yet more insane and yet more unsafe in 1908."

Secretary Taft addressed himself to current national issues viewed in the light of the work of the last congress.

COMMITTED TO JAIL

For Receiving Transportation in Advance With Intent to Defraud.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Jackson, Chris Larson, Carl Johnson, John Olson and Carl Magnusen, laboring men from Grand Forks, N. D., were tried in justice court Thursday, on the charge of receiving transportation in advance with the intent to defraud, pleaded guilty and were sentenced to pay a fine of $25 each and costs, or in default thereof to serve forty-two days in the county jail. They had no money and were committed.

The me.. were hired in Grand Forks by T. M. Klement to work for the Joseph Gibson Lumber company at Bena, were furnished tickets to Bena, and started on the train for their destination. When the train reached Bemidji the men got off and came up town, leaving the car by stealth. They were afterwards located by the police and identified by Mr. Klement, who caused their arrest.

ATTENDANCE IS INCREASING

The attendance at the evangelistic services at the Second Presbyterian church, last evening, was very gratifying. Rev. W. J. Lowrie, pastor of Westminster church in West Duluth, was the speaker, and his text was "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."

Around that theme he builded a comprehensive sermon. He took it from three different sides, first speaking of the persons who should come to Christ, the manner in which they could come, and the best time to acknowledge themselves.

Prof. Butts sang several numbers.

There were three conversions professed at the close of the service.

Three services will be held at the Second Presbyterian church tomorrow. The pastor, Rev. S. F. Sharpless will conduct the services at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., and Prof. Butts will have charge of the service at 3 p. m., which will be especially for young people.

The evangelistic services will be continued all next week. Rev. C. W. Lowrie of Cloquet, Minn., will be the speaker Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

VICKSBURG MEMORIAL.

Illinois Dedicates Its Monument to Its Civil War Heroes.

Vicksburg, Miss., Oct. 27.—The magnificent Illinois memorial temple in the Vicksburg national park was dedicated yesterday under the most favorable auspices with Confederate veterans of Mississippi and Louisiana and Union soldiers of Illinois fraternizing. William J. Calhoun was the orator of the day, and addresses were made by Governors Vardaman of Mississippi and Deneen of Illinois; C. Matthews, president of the Illinois monument commission, and others. The monument was accepted on behalf of the United States government by Gen. J. C. Schofield, representing the secretary of war. The parade was one of the greatest events of its kind ever seen here. Applause reached its highest point as the strains of "Dixie" and "Yankee Doodle" mingled.

Gained Ten Pounds in Two Weeks

MR. J. B. COOPER.

Mr. J. B. Cooper of Scottsville, Ark., who wasted away from 180 pounds to 150 pounds in a few months, praises Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for restoring his health.

It required only two bottles to effect a cure and increase his weight 10 pounds, according to his own statement, written June 6, 1906, which follows:

"During my seventeen years as a salesman of general merchandise I have lost about six month's time only until recently, when I contracted a severe attack of bronchitis which made me feel as though I had consumption.

"I had been bothered with a slight cough for eight or nine months. I lost in weight, from 180 to 150 pounds. My doctor recommended Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as the best cure for consumption, so I decided to try it, and after using two bottles sweetened with rock candy, I gained ten pounds in two weeks.

"It certainly does all the doctor told me it would do, and is the most effective tonic and stimulant I have ever taken. The doctor had me order some of it for his patients, so you can see what he thinks of it."

Respectfully yours,
J. B. COOPER.

ADVERTISING MINNESOTA.

Everybody agrees that advertising is profitable, providing it is the right kind.

Advertising is a feature of the "state development" campaign, and Minnesota will profit by it if it is of the right sort.

The election of a governor, and the manner in which it comes about, make advertising matter that goes broadcast over the nation, and whether it is good advertising or not depends upon the nature of the result and how it was accomplished.

Minnesota is offered two kinds of advertising in this connection, and the voters will choose the sort they want at the election Tuesday, Nov. 6.

They have a chance to show the opportunities Minnesota offers to young men by crowning the achievements of Governor Johnson's first term by a re-election. Minnesota has already gained fame from the fact that Governor Johnson, born in this state, has risen from obscurity to the highest place in the state solely by force of his own native character. His integrity, his devotion to duty, his vigilant watch over the people's interests and his alert and vigorous activity in seeing that they are preserved, have shown that Minnesota recognizes merit, and that men are to her greater than partisanship.

On the other hand, what sort of advertising will result if he is defeated, and Candidate Cole is given his place?

It will advertise to the world that the corrupt corporate interests of the state can safely manipulate the convention of a great party, representing the rank and file of that political faith, defeating the choice of that rank and file and placing in nomination for governor a man of their own selection. It will advertise to the nation that a nomination gained in such a manner, and ratified on the night following the convention by the most disgraceful orgie that ever took place in Minnesota, the bills being paid by the "interests" that had triumphed and were willing to show their gratitude to those that had helped them, may be approved by the common people of this great state, and that a nomination brought about in such a disgraceful manner may be officially sealed by a certificate of election that will place in the governor's chair the candidate that profited by the manipulations of the "interests."

Which sort of advertising do you prefer that your state should have, Mr. Voter?

Yours is the choice. When you go to the ballot box with your vote a week from Tuesday, you will help decide whether Minnesota is to be advertised as a place where merit wins, or as a place where partisanship, as the ally of corruption, can triumph over it.

REGISTER TONIGHT.

Had you remembered that this is the last day of registration for the election which takes place a week from Tuesday?

If you had forgotten, it is probably not too late yet to show your good citizenship by making yourself eligible to vote.

The polls are open for registration purposes until 9 o'clock, and The Herald last night published a full list of polling places in Duluth. If you do not know where to go, look up that list.

You do not think much of negligent public officers, do you? Yet negligent officers are the natural sequence of negligent voters.

If for no other reason than that you will have a right to kick if the election does not go to suit you, you should register and vote.

If you have not done it already, do it now.

GETTING DESPERATE.

Chairman A. B. Cole, of the A. L. Cole campaign committee, must be verging on the desperation that makes for recklessness. In a speech in his home city of Fergus Falls recently, he made charges against Governor Johnson's administration so deliberately false that a local Republican newspaper, the Fergus Falls Journal, had to come out and correct them, with this explanation: "Before our political enemies get a chance to criticise Dr. Cole we want to say that he was wrong, believing that it is better for the Republican party to tell the exact truth rather than to make political capital by incorrect statements."

Dr. Cole said in his speech that Governor Johnson claimed credit for raising the assessment on the iron mines $60,000,000. The Fergus Falls Journal showed, what everybody knows, that the governor's state board of equalization has raised the iron mines to $70,000,000 against $38,000,000 two years ago, an increase of $32,000,000, which is all that anybody has claimed.

Dr. Cole also charged that the board had raised farm lands in Otter Tail county 50 per cent, so the people would have to pay much higher taxes. As to this, the explanation made by the Journal is very simple. When the county board of equalization fixed the valuation of farm lands at $4.27 an acre two years ago, the Republican state board of equalization, finding them lower than the rest of the farming lands in the state, raised them to $6.40 per acre, and taxes were paid on this basis. This year the county board reduced the lands to $4.24 an acre, and Governor Johnson's board of equalization, for the same reason that actuated the Van Sant board, raised them. But the Johnson board, because of its raises on the franchises and other corporation property in the cities and on the iron mines, was able to make the assessment $6.15, or 25 cents per acre less than it was two years ago.

So the farmers of Otter Tail county will actually pay on a less valuation than they did two years ago, and since the state tax is lower under Governor Johnson's administration than it was under the last, their tax rate will also be lower. Thus they will profit not only by a reduced valuation, but by a reduced tax rate.

And yet Chairman Cole, in his anxiety to stem the tide that is overwhelming his brother, would have tried to make those farmers believe that Governor Johnson had raised their taxes!

If Dr. Cole had been in politics longer, he would realize that dishonest methods of campaigning like this are never effective, because the people are too familiar with public affairs to be fooled, and when they catch somebody trying it, the attempt becomes a boomerang.

OLD MEN OF FIFTY.

The local news in The Herald last night contained a brief story of the arrest of a young man for striking an individual who was described as "an old man of 50."

That phrase must have stirred the hearts of men of 50 who will consider it news that they are "old men." It is true that to those in the thoughtless twenties 50 years looks like "old age," but it is also true that no man has any business to be old at 50.

A man who has just reached his two score years and ten ought to be in his prime. He should be the ripe fruit of humanity before it has begun to shrivel or decay. His powers ought to be at full tide, mental and physical alike. If he is old, there is something wrong with him and with the way he has been living.

The explanation of the young culprit when he was arrested throws much light upon the use of the term.

"He had such a sour look on his face that I couldn't help taking a poke at him," said the young man who had assaulted one of twice his years.

Don't you understand it perfectly now? Haven't you had the same thought? Doesn't a sour, gloomy visage arouse something of the same feeling in your own breast? Very likely you don't give in to the impulse. That is not the way to reform humanity.

It is much better to bid your friend whose face suggests a perpetual mouthful of sour pickles to cheer up and try to smile.

A smile is a potent weapon. It vanquishes gloom and discouragement. It scatters the clouds of doubt and fear. It throws aside the curtain of depression and lets in the sunlight of good cheer.

But since one hears that this "old man of 50" has a face so sour that a young associate "couldn't help taking a poke at him," there is no longer occasion for surprise that he should have been called an old man at 50.

For there is nothing that paves the way for the footprints of age more quickly than the habit of gloom. Youth is optimistic, cheerful, courageous. When these happy qualities leave, age comes rapidly. A man who has cultivated a sour countenance will age so rapidly you can see him do it. If he permanently acquires it at 30, he is as likely to look as old then as he is at 50.

So keep your courage, your cheerfulness and your optimism. Don't let the fountain of tears spring a leak and drown out the garden of smiles. If you would be young at 50, stay young and cheerful. Cultivate the smile. Get one that "won't come off." It beats all the cosmetics and facial massages on earth for preserving youth.

ANOTHER DIALOGUE.

Political Worker: "Yes, Governor Johnson has made a good governor, or at least he has created that impression. But he has made it by smoothly letting things run, and by a genial, do-nothing policy."

Plain Citizen: "My dear sir, do you think I am a fool? Do you imagine that I do not read the papers, and that I do not know what has been going on in the past two years? Let me ask you another question: Hasn't timber stealing been stopped in Johnson's administration?"

Political Worker: "Well, State Auditor Iverson says it has, but—"

Plain Citizen: "Has it ever been even interrupted before?"

Political Worker: "Not that I know of, but—"

Plain Citizen: "Isn't Governor Johnson proceeding against every timber thief in the state, and making them pay treble damages for the timber they have stolen from the state?"

Political Worker: "Yes, but the information on which he bases his suits was prepared in a Republican administration."

Plain Citizen: "Yes, but didn't it have to wait until Johnson came in before anything was done with it? Wasn't the man that furnished the information made an outcast from the ranks of the Republican machine? And wasn't it the disgrace of this neglect that led in a large measure, to Johnson's election in 1904?"

Political Worker: "Perhaps it was, but the real reason was that there was a fight in the Republican ranks."

Plain Citizen: "Yes, but that fight was largely because many party members revolted from the rule of the machine that would have perpetuated these iniquities. And the nomination of Candidate Cole by the interests that profited by the continuance of timber stealing furnishes ground enough for another revolt as great. And while we are talking about Governor Johnson's 'do-nothing' policy, haven't freight rates been reduced in his administration for the first time in years, and will not every single producer and consumer in the state benefit thereby?"

"Political Worker: "Ah, I have you there. The reduction was forced by the Republican railroad and warehouse commission."

Plain Citizen: "Yes, because that is the only body of officers in the state authorized to force reductions. But what had the board done in the many years of its existence prior to the time that Governor Johnson brought it up with a round turn and forced it from inaction into activity? Absolutely nothing. And it would be doing nothing still if it were not for Governor Johnson's prodding. Again, hasn't the state tax rate been reduced in Governor Johnson's administration?"

Political Worker: "Yes, but other state officers are entitled to part of the credit."

Plain Citizen: "Admitted. But you cannot withhold from Governor Johnson the share of the credit belonging to the executive head of the state government. Here you have had to admit that he has stopped timber stealing, brought about rate reductions and reduced the state tax, and yet you argue to me that he has done nothing. Your attempt to deceive is no compliment to my intelligence."

ELECTION FORECASTS.

Now comes the season wherein the political prophet revels in temporary prominence.

After election, when it will become quite clear how little he really knew about the situation, he will slink into obscurity for another two years.

The most interesting prophets are those representing the campaign committees. They are admirable for their optimism and their cheerfulness. Neither side, in any contest, can see the slightest cloud in the sky. The situation "could not be better." "Our candidate will be elected by an overwhelming majority." "It will be a landslide for our man." "A careful canvass of the field shows that the other fellow does not stand a ghost of a show."

One is just as optimistic, usually, as the other. Indeed, it is commonly a friendly competition to see which can picture the rosiest outlook.

And just in absolute confidence, gentle reader, neither of them knows any more about it than we do. They guess, and we have the privilege of guessing, too. Furthermore, their guesses are tinctured by the rosiness of their hopes. We, being plain citizens without personal interests at stake, can make a fairer guess than they can.

In these days of independent voting the campaign manager that tells you confidently how it is going to come out is either trying to fool you, or he has allowed his hopes to delude him. In the days when it was considered the proper thing to vote the straight ticket, days now happily gone from us, the campaign manager could make a canvass by precincts and tell pretty closely what was going to happen. Now, he can't tell how two men out of ten are going to vote.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, in a recent discussion of this most important subject gave utterance to views upon it that a mere man would hardly dare to offer unless an easy avenue for quick escape was closely at hand.

She was talking to the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs a few days ago when she criticised strongly certain varieties of women's clubs. For instance, she said that she knew of a small Western town that has ten Shakespeare clubs. "Grasp, if you can, the full horror of that," said Mrs. Decker. "And it was nothing new—some of the clubs had been studying Shakespeare for ten years. But the streets of that town are dirty, and esthetically the place is dead. There is no care for child life, no interest in sanitation, no regard for the larger issues. It is all Shakespeare. With all reverence for the Bard of Avon, I say, what a pity!"

It is a pity. No doubt the excellent women that compose those ten Shakespeare clubs fancy they are leavening the lump of society with the salt of culture when they pursue the fascinating study of Shakespeare. And Shakespeare needs no recommendation, either. The study of his marvelous genius is wholesome occupation. But it is by no means suitable for a steady occupation. Women's clubs that study Shakespeare while dirty, unkempt streets, dingy interiors, unsanitary alleys and vile backyards go neglected, are overlooking vast opportunities.

It is perfectly safe to talk this way in Duluth, because it is different here. Our women's clubs are alive to their opportunities, and while no doubt they study Shakespeare and Maeterlinck and Browning to a wholesome extent, they also keep a busy eye and a keen nose turned toward the beauty and healthfulness of the community.

As a matter of fact, they show a more vigilant and active public spirit than the men do. It is due to them that a successful campaign against disfiguring signs upon scenic rocks has been carried on and that the girls of the public schools are being taught to cook and keep house while the boys are being taught to love flowers and care for gardens. In all matters of municipal housekeeping they are alert, practical and industrious.

While the city with its ten Shakespeare clubs must suffer by comparison with Duluth, a city without any women's clubs must suffer equally by comparison with the community that has a surplus of Shakespeare clubs. The women of a community might do many worse things than to study Shakespeare, and it is easy to imagine many such things. The city with well-directed women's clubs is much more fortunate than the city with ill-directed women's clubs, but the city without any women's clubs at all is in a deplorable condition.

Bob Dunn and the morning paper make State Auditor Iverson say that part of the timber trespass money collected in Governor Johnson's administration was for trespasses committed since Johnson came in. Iverson did not say it. His letter, given in Dunn's speech, simply says that a certain sum of money for trespass was collected in that period. As a matter of fact timber trespassing has been stopped, for the first time, since Johnson became governor.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Tom Taggart came nearly being accused of allegiance to the Republican party down in Indianapolis recently, and all through the fault of a weighing machine," said B. N. Moody of Chicago at the McKay. "The Grand hotel is owned by Taggart, and it has long been known as a Democratic hostelry, being the meeting place of Democrats in Indianapolis whenever the party had anything special on foot.

"In the center of the hotel lobby is a large weighing machine and pasted in the center of the machine's dial, where it hits the eye of every man using the scales, is the inscription, in large letters: 'Stand still.'

"One of the disciples of Uncle Joe Cannon, or of another ardent protectionist, saw the inscription and a thought came to him. He pasted over the word 'still' a paper bearing the word 'pat,' making the inscription read 'stand pat.'

"Secretary Reiley of the Democratic state committee was the first big gun to notice the traitorous words, and it took him a very short while to hunt up the manager and file a protest."

"In my younger days it fell to my lot to be the private secretary of a politician who traveled about the country a good deal making speeches," said E. T. Barber of Philadelphia, Pa., at the Lenox. "I was compelled to carry a typewriter about with me, and had a good deal of trouble as a result. A typewriter is not the easiest thing in the world to handle on a journey. If you take it with you in the coach it is always in the way, and if it is checked it is very liable to be broken.

"I worried a lot over the thing, but finally hit upon a plan I thought would be a good one. I invented a typewriter table that would fold up and go in a trunk, and then arranged a set of screws to fasten the machine to the bottom of the trunk while traveling. I figured that by being fastened securely to the bottom it could not be injured, no matter how much it might be bounced about.

"Arrangements being completed, I fastened the typewriter securely and started on our way. After two or three days' travel I found occasion to use the machine. Feeling pretty clever over all the trouble I had saved myself, I opened the trunk and then nearly fainted away. The typewriter was lying about in pieces. It had worked loose from the bottom of the trunk, and was scattered promiscuously all over the inside. The pieces were bent and twisted in all manner of shapes, and the whole thing was a complete wreck. I was never able to get it in running shape again, and had to buy a new outfit altogether. After that I quit experimenting."

THE WEATHER.

It was "an eager and a nipping air" that blew down over the hills this morning from the northward. It was cloudy, too, and from the rolling clouds that the north wind tampered with boisterously, a few flakes of snow occasionally dropped. It wasn't quite wintery, but it certainly was very much like later in the fall than Oct. 27. Yesterday's high temperature was 50 degs. and last night's lowest was 32 degs. The weather man expects colder and windier weather tonight, with warmer weather tomorrow afternoon.

A year ago today it was snowing.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "A storm of marked severity is central over Southern Michigan this morning. It is attended by a severe westerly gale and rain or snow in the lake region and central valleys. An area of high barometric pressure is central over Rocky mountain districts, causing colder weather and freezing temperatures throughout most of the Northwest. Dangerous northwest gales will occur in the lake region today and tonight. Generally fair weather and freezing temperature is indicated for this locality tonight and Sunday.

Twilight.

The twilight is sad and cloudy,
The wind blows wild and free,
And like the wings of sea birds
Flash the whitecaps of the sea.

But in the fisherman's cottage
There shines a ruddier light,
And a little face at the window
Peers out into the night.

Close, close it is pressed to the window,
As if those childish eyes
Were looking into the darkness
To see some form arise.

And a woman's waving shadow
Is passing to and fro,
Now rising to the ceiling,
Now bowing and bending low.

What tale do the roaring ocean
And the night wind, bleak and wild,
As they beat at the crazy casement,
Tell to that little child?

And why do the roaring ocean
And the night wind, wild and bleak,
As they beat at the heart of the mother,
Drive the color from her cheek?

Why Did You Move?

The New York World offered a $10 prize for the best answer to the query: "Why did you move?" Some of the replies follow:

"What else could I do? I was living in Pittsburg."

"Because all my troubles were 'little ones.'"

"For piano reasons."

"After papering my rooms at my own expense the landlord thought they looked so nice that he raised the rent. Consequently I moved."

"The following vocal selections almost every night in a flat above caused my move: 8 p. m., 'Tell me love's sweet story;' 8:15 p. m., 'My love is like a dew-drop;' 8:30 p. m., 'Will you love me when I am old?;' 8:15 p. m., 'Love me little, love me long;' 9 p. m., 'What's the use of loving if you can't love all the time?' 9:15 p. m., 'Love is blind;' 9:30 p. m., 'I loved you better than you knew;' 9:45 p. m., 'Good night, beloved, good night;' 10 p. m., 'Will you love me when I'm gone?'"

"It's one of my wife's habits, and what she says goes in our home."

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Sticking to the Main Thing.

The insight to discern and the power to adhere to the main concerns of life are valuable assets for any man. Possessing them he can, if necessary dispense with the advantages that may accrue from being well-born and tenderly reared and still climb high on the ladder of fame. Lacking them, he may have a fine ancestry, powerful friends, exceptional opportunities and still be distanced in the race. And these qualities are not simply the gifts of the gods; they can be cultivated, otherwise we should not be talking about them this Saturday night.

"He's a success in everything except the pulpit" was the keen comment in my hearing on a certain minister. The speaker meant that this particular parson could do many things well and some things extraordinarily well, but that he couldn't preach effectively. Too bad isn't it, that the follower of any profession—law, medicine, the ministry, journalism, teaching, should get the reputation of being more of an adept in other departments of activity than in the one vocation to which he is supposed to have consecrated his life? Why did he choose it, then, in the first place?

Life to be sure is a complicated affair. Duties throng upon us. Pleasures multiply. The will is drawn in this, that and the other direction. But when we simplify life down to a limited period of time is it not possible to see and pursue the main things? We may not be able to say that in the week just closed we accomplished all we would like to have done. There were alluring by paths into which we were tempted to stray. There were side issues with which we would like to have dealt. But there were only seven days and we had strength and time to do only the main things, and if we have done those as well as we knew how we ought not to be wholly discouraged or vainly self-reproachful now that the week has vanished. And as for the coming week why need the accumulation of appointments scare us, when we only need to do the really important things, and for them we shall have ample time and strength. Of course the emphasis must vary according to local conditions. Perhaps the main thing which you ought to do this next week, Mrs. Weary Worker, is to give yourself entirely to rest and your main duty, Mr. Haughtyman may be to compose the differences between yourself and the man who thinks you have wronged him.

It is through such concentration as this that we grow intellectually and morally. The man who wants to profit by the printed page must often put aside the beguiling novel or illustrated magazine in order to get at the heart of the solid books. And the man who turns his battries on one besetting sin and keeps them in action until that sin is dislodged, wins his character in time.

So too in the realm of human service. Read again the parable of the good Samatarian and see how thoroughly he did his work, not leaving the wounded traveler until everything possible had been done for him. He bound up his wounds and put him on his horse and took him to the inn and paid for his keep and said he was ready to do more for him. The business of each of us is to stick to some wayward boy, some needy family until we have done them permanent good.

One of the greatest educators and leaders whom Japan has produced, Joseph Neesima, when it was occasionally suggested to him that he should do this or that minor thing would reply. "I can't, I have a plow on my hands." He meant that he had put his hand to the great task of establishing a high grade Christian school in his native land. Let us all keep to the great highways of duty. Let us cleve to the main concerns.

THE PARSON.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Simetimes a woman does a thing the way she sets out to, unless you expect her to.

When a man bets on an election, he is sure the country is going to the dogs unless his side wins.

The reason most people don't lose more money in their investments is that they haven't it to lose.

A girl is no longer a bride, but a married woman, when, instead of crying because her husband don't praise her biscuits, she gets mad.

One of the truths a man learns by getting married is that it doesn't cost any more to feed two than one; but at the same time he learns it costs fifty times as much to dress them.

Lines to a Collar Button.

Out up on you! Curse of evil,
Smooth invention of the devil,
Sent on earth to make a man
Swear profusely when he can
Find you nowhere on the floor,
Tho' he looks the whole room o'er!
Time is coming, some sweet day,
When your rule will pass away.
Then it won't be hard to dress—
Then you'll never more, I guess
Lose yourself as sure as fate
Just because a chap is late,
Having twenty minutes' grace
Ere he's due to reach some place
Where an heiress whom he'd wed
Faints to see the minutes sped
Past the hour strictly set,
Leaving him unmarried yet.

Frank Patterson, a former engineer on the Northern Pacific railroad, had a leg cut off in the yards at West Superior yesterday afternoon, while working as a brakesman.

At a meeting of laboring men at the Knights of Labor hall, Rice's Point, last evening, Dr. Ames was endorsed for governor.

"I'll bet my roll that these two guys coming down the avenue are from Superior," said "Poggles" Jefferson, who was leaning up against a leading retail store, with the hope that some friend would come along and buy him a drink.

"How can you tell," we said, knowing that to tarry meant to "buy," but willing to pay the poll for a little chat with the picturesque "Poggles."

"Why it's as plain as Johnson's chances for getting re-elected. Them two guys has got 'jasper' written all over their maps. Wait till they get down by the Torrey building and watch 'em rubber. Them guys come over here every little while to see how it feels to be in a real big town.

"Then they go back and tell all the guys along Tower avenue what a time they had. Them Tower avenue farmers always come over here to get the hayseed out of their whiskers and give them something to talk about while they are whittling in the grocery stores on the other side of the bay.

"If Duluth wasn't here, there would'nt be any Superior, because nobody would live there if they wasn't able to come over here every little while. That's all the fun they get out of living, telling about what awful hits they are, the minute they get on Superior street, and some of Duluth's fairest daughters get a lamp on them.

"Lots of Superior dames come over here to trade, too, for there ain't no use for them dealers in Superior trying to tell them they got just as good stuff. Yuh can't make no woman believe that something yuh buy in a small town is just as good as that yuh get where there is crowds on the streets some time besides on Saturday nights.

"But did yuh see them two guys that just went by? I never saw them before in my life. They're not the fellows that I meet up with all the time but I'll stake my Elgin creamery watch that them fellers is dyed-in-the-wool Duluthians. I'll bet that they begin to fret and worry to beat the cars whenever they get farther West than West Duluth.

"How can I tell? Watch them turn into that copper stock brokers' office. Thats the answer.

"This here girl is a waitress. Notice how she slides along. That's so as not to spill the coffee. She must be an arm-worker instead of a tray-girl. Say, its a cinch she can carry her weight in plates on them arms of hers, and not spill nothing unless some slob bumps into her just when she is getting ready to set the grub down.

"She looks like a veteran all right. I bet she's been sayin' 'tea, cawfee or milk' so blame long that she has to drink booze at times to keep from it making her sick.

"These here ladies lives at Hunter's Park. Notice how they're piping off clocks all the time to see if they got time to get a hot choclate before their car comes.

"Look at this boy. Don't he make yuh sick, though. No, he ain't working just at present, but he's got some cigarettes with his name on them, and his clothes are more swagger than them guys in the clothing store ads. Honest, I don't see how them guys do it. He don't never run out of cigarettes either. He's got a walk like George Cohan, and I didn't notice, but I bet he wears one of our safety pins in his necktie.

"That's all right, I knew yuh would say that I was sore because I didn't have some of them loud clothes. Mebbe I am, but if yuh ever see me togged up in them kind of garments, yuh can bet that I got the price of a theater ticket in my jeens, anyway.

"That guy is a hot old dog! See that guy with the checker board overcoat. He may look all right, but he is very yellow. I know him personally. He travels for some St. Paul shoe house, and he likes to get in a gang and lean up against some bar till they put the lights out, telling what a great fellow he is, and spouting some of them stories that Joe Miller thought was too old to put in his book.

"He is the original Clarence Bixby, the shine, and if yuh ever run up against him, give him a good punch in the face for me."

"Poggles" was not usually so spiteful; it was evident that something lay back of it all, so we observed nonchantly:

"Have you known him a long time?"

"A long time," said Poggles, and with something of a sigh. "And altogether too long. We used to go to school together in St. Paul. His folks was common enough, but nice enough people, yuh know, and Clarence used to be around quite a good deal.

"He always had conversation on tap, and managed to butt in with a real swell crowd about the time he begun to shave every day, and got all-fired careful about whether he had a clean collar on or not. His old man had worked for the shoe company a good long time, so they finally staked him to a pretty good job, and that made it so the family could fix up a little bit.

"He had a sister that certainly was a peach. She was one of them pretty girls that seemed to have some sense, too. I remember when me and Clarence used to play together, she was good-looking even then.

"Clarence began to travel on the outskirts of society, and I knew that if his sister ever got in, the other girls in the set would be worried to death, for she certainly was first-class when it came to looks. She was always all right, too, when she met a fellow on the street. She used to hand me a pleasant smile every time I saw her. One day I met her on the street and walked up to the house with her, it was only three or four blocks. That was the only time I ever tried to butt in at all, because I knew that I would be ruled off right away.

"But the next day, this traveling person we just saw comes to me and says that my attentions to his sister were very annoying to her, and wisned as a fayor to her, I would forget the very slight acquaintance that existed. What do you think of that?

"Say, I was so mad I couldn't talk. I was going to give him a good swift punch, but it was on the street and I didn't want to get up no mix-up there. And honestly, I was so mad that I couldn't say anything. I just stood there and took it.

"After he went away, when it was too late, I thought of some scorching come-backs. But what do yuh think of the thing? Say, I'd known this guy and his sister nearly all their lives and it kinda made me feel punk all over to get handed one like that. I knew that it wasn't for me to be blowing around in the same crowd with her, but gee, I thought I was good enough to be spoken to on the street. And I always thought that girl was all right, too.

"I never had anything give me such a 'sorry' as all that. After that, when I met this guy or his sister, I was looking away off at something else. I didn't look their way at all. One day I meets this girl face to face with a crowd of other girls and she gave me one of them smiles and bowed in a friendly fashion.

"I never let on that I knew her though. The next time I met her, she was alone. She stopped me and says, gay as yuh please: 'See here, Will Jefferson, what do you mean by cutting me dead on the street?' And all at once, I took a big tumble. I knew then that brother of hers was a whole lot yellower than I thought; the girl hadn't never said anything to him about my annoying her. But I couldn't tell her what a low down thing he was, so I stalled around and told her that I didn't see her. Say that girl give me a great old lecture and wanted to know why I never came up to the house with Clarence any more. She certainly was a swell girl. She married some wealthy guy there in St. Paul—but say, that brother of hers is one of the lightest ever. Haven't a cigar yuh're not using, have yuh?"

Saves All Wasted With Other Stoves

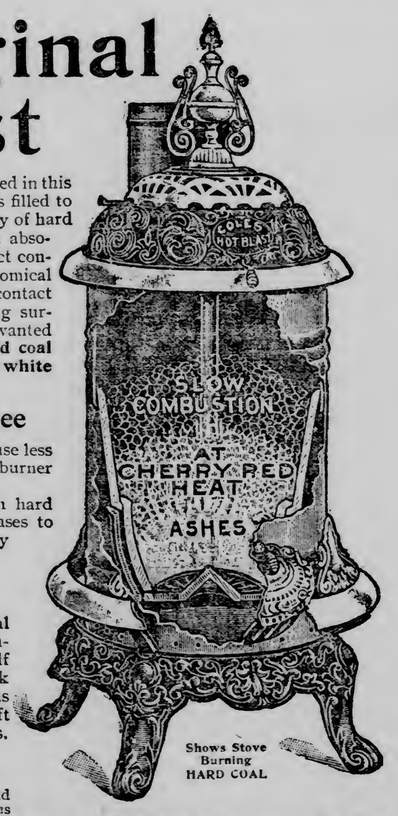

For Hard Coal, Soft Coal or Lignite

The waste of gas in burning hard coal is shown by opening the magazine cover of an ordinary base burner, when the oxygen supplied fills the entire stove with flaming gas. Cole's Hot Blast stove burns this gas in hard coal which, in ordinary stoves, escapes, on account of their leaky construction, causing great waste and endangering health and life when it escapes into the rooms.

In the ordinary magazine hard coal stove, three-fourths of the coal is partially consumed in the magazine, where it gives off no heat, as it is not in contact with the radiating surface. The one-fourth of the coal in the fire pot must be kept at a white heat combustion to throw the heat into the rooms, thus causing great waste.

Cole's Original Hot Blast

The combustion chamber and the magazine are combined in this stove and the Combustion is Perfect. The stove is filled to the top of the inside cast iron lining. This large body of hard coal is burned under perfect control by means of the absolutely air-tight construction of the stove giving perfect control over the drafts. The coal is kept at a slow, economical cherry red combustion and as the heat is in direct contact with every square inch of the sensitive steel radiating surface, all the heat is radiated into the room where it is wanted and not blanketed in and sent up the chimney. Hard coal at Cherry Red Combustion burns 48 hours, while at white heat it is consumed in from 2 to 5 hours.

Shows Stove Burning HARD COAL

Sold Under a Positive Guarantee

We Guarantee Cole's Original Hot Blast to use less hard coal for heating a given space than any base burner with the same heating surface.

Requires attention only morning and night with hard coal. Warm rooms day and night. No escaping gases to endanger life. The heat wasted up the chimney with other stoves is saved.

Burns Any Fuel—Saves Half

Cole's Hot Blast is not only a perfect hard coal stove, but is generally recognized as the most economical and cleanest soft coal stove made. Soft coal is half gas and a $3.00 ton of soft coal or a $2.00 ton of slack is made to do the work of $9.00 worth of hard coal, as the gas half is utilized as a heat producer. It burns soft coal, hard coal or wood without any change of fixtures.

Scientific Construction

Cole's Original Hot Blast has an absolutely air-tight and gas tight construction throughout, by reason of its numerous patented improvements. The patented Hot Blast draft saves the gas. A patented steel collar connects the elbow draft to the stove body and cannot be made to leak air by action of the fiercest heat. The patented compound hinge on the ash door cannot warp and the door closes air-tight by its own weight. The heavy fire box protects the joints, where other stoves burn out first. The guaranteed smoke-proof feed door prevents smoke, soot or dust from escaping into the room when fuel is put into the stove. Perfect cleanliness, therefore, from soft coal.

CAUTION. Like all original improvements, Cole's Original Hot Blast has many imitations: They are failures, because they do not have the above patented features. The words "Cole's Hot Blast from Chicago" will be found on the feed door of every Cole's Hot Blast. None genuine without it.

GRAIN MAN IN CORNER

Iowa Cereal Club Secretary Hit Hard by Questions.

Open Charges of Seeking to Mislead Are Voiced.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 27.—At the session yesterday of the interstate commerce commission's inquiry relative to the fixing of prices for grain by the Des Moines Cereal club for the members of the State Grain Dealers' association and the pooling of elevator business at many Iowa points, several members of the Cereal club testified that they could not remember that the organization had ever voted to fix prices for grain.

Then R. W. Harper swore that as a guest of the club he had often attended its banquets and meetings, and that after discussion of prices, the vote of the meeting was taken on motion of the presiding officer, George A. Wells, secretary of the Grain Dealers' association, and expressed by lifted hands as a basis for quotations for the ensuing week furnished to members of the association by Ward G. Case of this city.

Commissioner Lane gave the members of the Cereal club, who had testified that prices were not fixed at meetings of the organization, an opportunity to amend their testimony, after Mr. Harper had concluded and Secretary Wells said he had intended to testify that he had not put motions of this character at every meeting of the club and was about to proceed with further amendments when Commissioner Lane, leaning over his desk, created a sensation by the inquiry: "Didn't you try to mislead the commission on that point?"

Wells said that he had not.

"Why did you testify as you did?" continued Commissioner Lane. "Did you not try to create the impression in the commissioners' minds that there was no fixing of prices and that nothing was done to fix prices at these meetings? Didn't you do that?"

Wells insisted that he had not done so.

"Was not that your distinct effort in answer to the questions?"

"No, sir," replied Wells.

"Didn't you in every way try to evade and avoid answering the questions of Mr. Marble (the commission's lawyer), put to you at the time when asked in regard to fixing prices?"

Wells started to make some explanation when he was dismissed from the stand.

The facts disclosed by yesterday's witnesses were that the Grain Dealers' association is making a fight against the Farmers' elevator, which is not a member of the association, by restricting its terminal market when possible; that extensive pooling arrangements have existed and now exist in Iowa, which control the amount of business done by competing elevators; that prices of "regular" elevators are governed more or less by a card issued here by Ward G. Case, and that this card formerly was the result of the weekly discussion.

RAILROADS

CAPT. REID WILL GET IT

Sarnia Man Will Probably Land Interstate Bridge Contract.

Preliminary Arrangements for Northern Railway Club Banquet.

After a long delay, it looks very much as if the contract for clearing away the wreck of the interstate bridge was about to be let, and steps taken toward the rebuilding of the structure. Capt. James Reid of Sarnia, Ont., marine contractor, is in the city figuring with officials of the Great Northern, and the indications are that he will be awarded the contract.

Although the captain will have nothing to say in regard to the matter as yet, it is understood that he has the job as good as cinched. The railroad officials are said to be objecting to the price asked, but it is thought an agreement will be reached within the next few days whereby the work will be let to the Sarnia man.

RAILWAY CLUB BANQUET.

Members of the Northern Railway club, at the meeting held in the Commercial club rooms last night, ratified the action of the executive committee in deciding upon Thursday evening, Nov. 22, as the date for holding the annual meeting and banquet.

The banquet will be given at the Spalding hotel. Guests will be seated promptly at 8:30 o'clock, and following the banquet a short business session will be held at the table. Officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and brief reports of what has been accomplished during the past year will probably be read. After this there will be a dance, lasting until midnight.

The reports will show a very successful year. The club was formed not quite a year ago. The organization was perfected on the night of the big storm which resulted in the wreck of the Matanafa. The fact of its being born on a night of storm and disaster did not in the least affect its future, for the organization and its affairs have been running smoothly since the first day of its existence. It has met with remarkable success all along, and the indications are that this success will continue indefinitely.

The present officers of the organization are W. A. McGonagle, president; E. C. Blanchard, first vice president; H. S. Bryan, second vice president; J. I. Thomas, treasurer; and C. L. Kennedy, secretary. The success of the club is in a large measure due to the efficient work of its officers. In the absence of President McGonagle, Mr. Blanchard presided at last night's meeting, as he has done on previous occasions.

The committee to have charge of arrangements for the banquet, as announced by Mr. Blanchard, is as follows: C. L. Kennedy, chairman, J. W. Kreitter, Thomas Owens, S. F. McLeod and J. C. Myron.

COMPLETED AHEAD OF TIME

Third Avenue West Paving Finished Before Contract Expired.

Another city improvement contract has been finished a week ahead of the time stipulated in the contract.

Hugh Steele has completed his work on Third avenue west, and the street is now paved from Michigan to Second streets.

Good time was made in spite of the bad weather conditions and the shortage of labor. He will now turn his attention to Commerce street, which is to be paved this fall.

Fair progress is being made on the other smaller contracts remaining unfinished, and very little work will have to be carried over the winter.

"RAFFLES" SENTENCED.

Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 27.—Because of sympathy for his wife and baby, Judge A. S. Blair lightened the sentence of Charles Ralston, the mysterious "Raffles" who burglarized the West Side Carnegie library and took a valuable copy of Rembrandt, the work of a local artist, to four months in jail and to pay a fine of $100. The maximum penalty is ten years in the penitentiary.

SOCIETY LEADER GONE.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 27.—J. D. Jordan Morris, who come from South Wayne, Wis., has disappeared. He is wanted for forgery in Darlington, a few miles from Madison. He also forged a check for $250 here. He was a society leader, and his disappearance has caused a big sensation. His wife is prostrated.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Cincinnati Enquirer: The name of Sam Jones was almost a household word in the United States. His death marks the passing of a picturesque character, albeit a useful one. Like his early prototype, Jonathan Edwards, he painted in lurid colors the terrors of hell fire and damnation to the unregenerate. It takes that sort of preaching once in a while to make people reflect and get their bearings again.

Boston Transcript: The Rev. Dr. Morrison of Indiana has been inquiring as to the cost of converting a sinner in that state. He reports to the Presbyterian synod that in Indiana villages conversions have been effected at a trifling expenditure of $27, whereas in Indianapolis the cost is $920. But if so much has to be paid for the conversion of an Indianapolis sinner, no wonder the price at Chicago is nearly prohibitive.

Kansas City Star: The death of Sam Jones, the evangelist, closed a spectacular career. There was in his public preaching a certain force that held and persuaded people. Often he would make a hundred or more converts in a night. While in all probability a majority of these returned to their former ways, the good he did was worth the effort. He talked straight from the shoulder and, while his language was neither grammatical nor elegant, it was always expressive. He was especially severe in his denunciation of whisky and hurled invectives upon the heads of saloonkeepers and drunkards at every meeting. In later years he discarded altogether the language of an educated man and used the phraseology of an illiterate person. This only augumented his success, for apparently he was enabled to get closer to those whom he believed most needed salvation. His name will not live in history, but possibly many fashionable ministers could learn lessons in the saving of souls from the homely ways of this preacher.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Minot Man's Partner Charges He Carried Off Firm's Money.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—J. P. Nixon, the partner of Fred B. Miller, who was reported mysteriously missing and was thought to have been murdered and robbed, says he has heard from Miller. He says that Miller and another man boarded a westbound Soo train and are well into Canada. He says further that the partnership affairs of himself and Miller are very much involved, and claims that Miller collected $700 due the firm from creditors and that in addition disposed of real estate, realizing enough to make the total amount of cash $2,000. Miller is also said to have taken the books of the firm with him.

Irwin Dalmeter, postmaster and editor of a paper at Knox, was dangerously injured while in a hunting boat on a lake near Knox. On entering a boat he attempted to draw his gun toward him by the muzzle. It was discharged, the shot taking effect in the shoulder. His physician believes he can save his life.

Farmers in the neighborhood of Drake, Balfour and Rugby are buying watchdogs and gatling guns to defend their homes against the invasion of robbers who are working in that portion of the state.

Grand Forks—Walter Whitehead, a colored pugilist who for a time lived here, proposed to Marie Brown, aged 15 years, by mail, and she left St. Paul to join her intended. The mother of the girl found the pugilist's letter among her daughter's effects and communicated with the Fargo police, with the result that Whitehead was arrested and when the train arrived from St. Paul, the girl was taken in charge. Whitehead formerly had a wife in Fargo, and it is not known that he ever secured a divorce. The girl says that Whitehead promised her a better living than she had at home.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Miller—Paul Miller, a miner, was crushed to death under falling rock in the Homestake mine. He and his partner were working on the 1,100-foot level and were tearing down some rock. As Miller attempted to walk under the overhanging mass a large part of it gave way, burying him beneath it. He was crushed almost beyond recognition. He was a Russian, about 30 years old, and a single man.

Ipswich—The inquest on the death of Fireman Mayo, killed in a wreck of a stock train near here Tuesday night, was resumed yesterday. Johnson was taken worse yesterday, but is better today. Brakeman Chamberlain, Engineer Springer and Fireman Hanicker, all of whom are injured in the wreck, are doing well.

DULUTH A VERY ORDERLY CITY

No Crimes Worth the Name Reported This Month.

While the police of Minneapolis and Chicago are growing prematurely gray worrying over the activity of thieves, robbers, hold-up artists, thugs and murderers, the Duluth police are finding it hard to keep busy.

This morning two lone drunks represented the sum total of the efforts of the officers for the preceding twenty-four hours. One of them begged Judge Windom for an opportunity to get out of the city, and was given it, with a ten-days sentence hanging over his head if he returns.

The other was a mild mannered tippler, who didn't look as if he had ever harmed anyone but himself, and the court didn't have the heart to order out the team to take him to the county jail. He therefore drew a suspended sentence in place of the ordinary $1 fine.

Aside from the drunks, the month has been a very quiet one in police circles, and aside from one jewel robbery, there have been no crimes worth mentioning.

WOMAN KILLS WOLF.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 27.—With a neck-yoke as her only weapon a Nebraska woman brained and killed a big gray wolf, the other day. The plucky woman was Mrs. Bert Lowe, who was driving from her home near Springview to that village.

KILLED AT CROSSING.

Hudson, Wis., Oct. 27.—Dennis Smith was instantly killed at the Second street crossing in this city by a west bound passenger on the Omaha road, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. He was crossing the track on a dump cart loaded with mill wood and drawn by four horses. The pilot of the engine struck the cart squarely, smashed it and scattered the mill wood for over fifty feet around. The horses were thrown into a ditch, but strange enough, were entirely uninjured. Smith was crushed at the hips and died within a few minutes.

Store Open Late Tonight.

COME TONIGHT

The opening of the winter season is on hand and our great preparations to put good winter clothes on your body, which have been on foot for the last four months, are now well nigh complete. Many manufacturers were slow delivering the goods we ordered from them, because labor is scarce, goods are high and the demand all over the country is tremendous. We want our customers to know the true market conditions, because this is a season when it pays more than ever to trade at a store that is run on decent principles and to fight shy of all wool sales at paper prices. Our advice to customers is to pay a trifle more this fall for their clothes and underwear, if they can at all afford it. Both wholesaler and retailer were forced to pay more and if you let yourself be fooled into the notion of getting something good for less than you can get it at this store with its great purchasing power and many advantages—you'll rue it soon enough.

Come in tonight and inspect the vast array of good things to wear here for men and boys. Any citizen may take pride in such a showing as this store affords to its patrons this fall, and to show it to his out-of-town friends.

HINT DROPPED BY LA FOLLETTE

In Albion Speech That a New Party is Brewing.

Milwaukee, Oct. 27.—United States Senator La Follette has spoken. The substance of his announcement, made Thursday in several villages of Dane county, for the first time since the primaries, follows:

He will not be read out of the party, and remains a regular.

Governor Davidson is all right as far as his ability permits, and the senator guesses reform will not be retarded by Mr. Davidson. Mr. Lenroot would have been safer and stronger, being more intellectual.

There is a possibility that rumors which have been circulated recently about a new Bryan-Folk-La Follette party may develop into facts.

Hearers differ as to the meaning they gathered from the senator's address. When it came to the stock lecture about "representative government," however, the senator was very definite.

Many persons say that La Follette slurred Governor Davidson under the guise of supporting him. Others say he did not. The slur is supposed to have been in these words:

"Governor Davidson will do the best he can, and not knowingly retard the progress of reform."

Hints were given as to a break in the old party lines and the formation of the rumored new party in an expression to the effect that the fight against the corporations is greater than any party, and if the people knew the facts and understood them they would no longer remain bound by any party ties of old.

The address was delivered in the same little hall at Albion where La Follette made his first public address many years ago. He was introduced by Charles Marsden as the next president of the United States.

"You can't tie my hands with any political office!" roared the senator during his speech. "No political party nor any nationality can shackle me. I will not support any man whom I believe a traitor to the reform plaform pledges."

La Follette had nothing to say about W. D. O'Connor, chairman of the state central committee, candidate for lieutenant governor and vanquisher of the senator and Irvine L. Lenroot of Superior in the recent primaries.

"Between the Democratic candidate and Governor Davidson, I have no hesitation to say that I bow to the will of the Republican primaries," said the senator.

NEW STYLES IN CLOTHES

Eastern Drummer Tells What Well Dressed Man Should Wear.

Some Sartorial Gossip for the Neglected Male Sex.

"Form fitting styles will predominate this winter in men's clothes," said an Eastern clothing drummer who is stopping at a local hotel.

"I do not mean by that, that the clothes will be tight fitting, but the coats will conform to the lines of a man's figure, whether they are sack coats for business wear, double breasted or frock.

"For the most part, the coats have only two buttons. This is one of the latest novelties. Both single and double breasted coats are made with but two buttons, and with long lapels, which are not pressed flat, but rolled.

"The vent is disappearing from the back of the coat, and the owners will regret it. The coats this year are about the same length as last year, and that means that a man cannot sit down without wrinkling the back. With the vent there was no trouble, but without it, you will find it hard to keep the back of you coat looking neat and well-tailored.

"There is little or no padding in the shoulders.

"The cuff seems to be growing in popularity and nearly all of the new coats have cuffs on the sleeves. They are one, two or three inches in width, and are of various shapes. They are trimmed with buttons and they may be fastened on the underside with a loop that fastens one button to the other.

"There is a very wide choice offered in goods. Almost any quiet mixture is good form.

"The authorities differ on the trousers this winter. Some say that the trousers should be even fuller about the hips and others claim that they should fit more closely. I guess you can take you choice and not be far off.

"Gay vestings are very much in vogue, and there are some beautiful things offered in vests of all one color, which I personally prefer. The vestings are rather lighter in color than last year, but almost any fancy vest that shows good taste in the choice of colors, is good form.

"Long full overcoats are going to be as popular as ever. They are really the most sensible thing, and so much more comfortable and easy to put on than the form fitting coats, which are despised by so many men, and which others swear by.

"The hats are going to be a little lower in the crown, and with a little more roll to the brim.

The wide four-in-hand tie will be popular again this winter, and will be worn with the wing collar again. This combination seems to be the choice of most of the good dressers."

WEST DULUTH

YOUNG MEN WILL MARCH

Johnson Club Will Take Part in Rally Thursday.

Membership in West Duluth Organization is Growing Fast.

The organization of the Young Men's Johnson club of West Duluth is proceeding in a very satisfactory manner among the Democrats of this end of the city and a total membership of nearly two hundred is expected to be enrolled when all of the young men have been interviewed. A meeting for the preliminary rounding up of the members before the big Johnson rally at the Armory will be held at West Duluth either Monday or Tuesday of next week, when officers will be elected and plans for the finishing of the campaign out here will be made.

The work of enrolling members in the club has been successfully conducted by John Cashin during the past few days and there are already over fifty who have joined. Mr. Cashin will make another thorough canvass tomorrow and by the first meeting next week he expects to have a membership of nearly two hundred. The sentiment of the young men in this district seems to be strongly in favor of the organization and Mr. Cashin has no trouble in persuading them to join.

Nearly two hundred strong the club will, next Thursday evening, assist at the welcoming of Governor Johnson and will march with the uptown club to the Armory from the governor's hotel. The West Duluth club will meet here first and go to Duluth in a body.

A Certain Cure for Croup—Used for Ten Years Without a Failure.

Mr. W. C. Bott, of Star City, Ind., hardware merchant, is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. His children have all been subject to croup and he has used this remedy for the past ten years, and though they much feared the croup, his wife and he always felt safe upon retiring when a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was in the house. His oldest child was subject to severe attacks of croup, but this remedy never failed to effect a speedy cure. He has recommended it to friends and neighbors and all who have used it say that it is unequaled for croup and whooping cough. For sale by all druggists.

ATTRACTIONS IN STAR COURSE

Lecture Season Opens Nov. 21—Bryan Date Very Soon.

The Star Lecture course for the season of 1906-07 will open at the First Methodist church, Nov. 21, and in many respects it will be one of the most notable in its history.

One date remains to be filled in the course of last year, that of William Jennings Bryan, and he has notified the management that he will be here immediately after election to deliver his lecture on "The Prince of Peace." All holders of tickets for the course of last winter are entitled to hear this and to occupy the same seats they had then. Those who have not tickets will, of course, be afforded an opportunity to purchase single admission tickets.

The reservation of seats for the course of the coming year will take place at the lecture room of the First Methodist church two weeks from today, Saturday, Nov. 9. The same plan will be followed that has been for several years. Numbered tickets will be given to all as they enter the door and duplicates of the issued numbers will be drawn from a hat and the order of choice will be as the numbers are drawn out. This places all upon an equal footing.

The new course will include more than a usual number of attractions that can be called entertainments. There will be two musical numbers of a very high class, in fact among the very finest in the country. The Bostonia Sextet club will open the course Nov. 21. The instrumentation comprises two violins, viola, cello, bass and clarinet, and everywhere the club has apepared it has met with the highest of praise from critics. Miss Shanna Cumming, one of the finest soprano singers in Chicago, will be with the club.

Leonora ackson, the violinist, who so completely charmed Duluthians on the occasion of her former visit here, will come again with a new company. Supporting her will be Miss Florence Pace, soprano, Charles E. Clarke, baritone, and Ralph E. Plumer, pianist.

The famous Dunbar quartet and bell ringers, who have no superiors as popular entertainers, will come. They are among the most sought after of all attractions, and always have more dates asked for than they can fill.

Isabel Carghill Beecker will appear in interpretative recitals and will present "An Evening With American Fiction," and a reading of "A Man Without a Country." The foremost men of the country, class her as among the very best in her line, if, indeed, she has an equal.

S. W. Gillilan, the humorist, who made such a great hit last year, will again be heard, this time in a talk entitled "A Sample Case of Humor." Mr. Gillilan was again engaged, because of the general request that was made that he be included in this year's course. He provides an evening of mirth that cannot be excelled.

The lecture numbers need little explanation, for each one speaks for itself. Senator Robert M. La Follette will deliver his lecture on "Representative Government," and it goes without saying that there will be an outpouring to hear this aggressive and eloquent public man.

Russell H. Conwell has always been a great favorite with Duluth audiences but has not visited here for several years. There has been a general demand for another visit from him. He will deliver his famous lecture "Acres of Diamonds."

Frank Dixon, the youngest of a family of preacher-orators, including father and three sons, has been engaged to deliver his lecture, "The Man Against the Mass." He is a brother of Thomas Dixon, the noted preacher-author, and is said to be just as much of a sensation on the platform.

GRAFT FIGHT TAKES TRUCE

No Further Steps In San Francisco Likely Until Monday.

San Francisco, Oct. 27.—District Attorney Langdon and his assistants remain today in possession of the office which constitutes the basis of contention between opposing factions of the administration, and it is probable that there will be no repetition of yesterday's exciting proceedings until Monday, when the grand jury is to meet to select a foreman and enter on its duties.

Abraham Ruef continued to lay claim to the office of district attorney by virtue of appointment of Acting Mayor Gallagher, and in spite of the order of Judge Seawell, but his declarations of last evening are regarded in the light of a truce, which will continue until Monday. He asserts that while he is prohibited from acting in the capacity of district attorney, he is nevertheless in possession of the office. His attitude toward the promised investigation of the alleged municipal corruption indicated that he will, if confirmed as district attorney, take the investigation out of the hands of the grand jury and submit the charges to representatives of the bar association or the attorney general's office.

SKILLFUL TREATMENT OF MEN'S DISEASES.

THERE is nothing that speaks for more than actual facts which are everyday occurrences, and when we propose to demonstrate to any man afflicted with any of the diseases that come under our specialty, that we are constantly dismissing cured cases that have been existing in chronic and malignant form for months, it should be certainly enough that we do all we claim—cure diseases of the Pelvic System if they are in reach of medical science. Our ability is proven by the professional services we render, and, though we seldom fail to effect a cure under such circumstances, we receive thanks for our best and conscientious services.

Numerous Pelvic Diseases and Their Dangerous Development.

It is not generally known that such a large number of men are afflicted with some Pelvic disease and chronic complications arising therefrom. The most prolific source of chronic troubles in the Pelvic system is from what is considered the simplest contagious disease, and from neglect and improper medical attention it develops into Prostatitis and finally Kidney and Bladder affections that become so serious as to be incurable. So many men of all ages begin with a little inflammation which should be oured in a few days. This condtion through improper attention or neglect of treatment allows the disease to incapacitate them for the physical and mental duties of man. Impure blood is a disease that in the primary stage, by our system of treatment, is checked in its ravaging course and never amounts to more than a trifling blood disorder, though there are many who are gradually decaying and their misery doubled by the use of injurious treatments. Skin Diseases, Nervous Decline, Weakness and associated diseases are equally sure of a detrimental course if they are not treated promptly and scientifically. What is more vivid than the old adage, "A stitch in time saves nine," to a man whose health is being impaired by a treacherous ailment, and how can a man spend his money more wisely than to save his physical and mental powers.

Varicose and Hydrocystic Enlargements, Wasting, Weakening and Debilitated conditions so common among men, in fact, all troubles peculiar to men, are successfully treated by us, because we have practiced our specialty long enough to formulate scientific methods upon which we can depend, and conscientiously promise our patients entirely satisfactory results.

WE CURE IMPURE BLOOD Skin Diseases, Eczema, Itching, Burning, Pimples, Blotches and Discolorations of the skin.

Blood Poison is either specific or nonspecific. If specific it has arisen by the transfer of poison, and it often appears in the form of scrofula, eczema or similar affections. The nonspecific form is ordinary skin diseases and eruptions, which are due to the blood becoming laden with impurities from the whole system getting out of gear so that poisonous matter accumulates in the blood.

In the treatment of all blood diseases the mistakes too often made are in giving medicines—so-called "blood purifiers"—and in taking patent medicines that are usually harmful because they stop the work of the exoretory glands in throwing the poison to the surface, so that the outward signs will disappear for a while, and in so doing the poison in the system increases sometimes to the extent that it attaoks the internal organs and becomes fatal. Don't allow the poison to be locked in your system. Have it eliminated, the components of the blood repaired, the tissues restored, and your whole system cleansed so that you will always have pure flesh and blood and robust health. Our treatment is a specific that completely reorganizes the blood corpuscles, by means of which every particle of infectious matter is eliminated. It has been thoroughly tested in the most severe cases and will eradicate every trace of the disease so that a sign never reappears.

Our study and extensive practice in the treatment of all forms of Kidney, Bladder and all Urinary Troubles have familiarized us to the extent that we have attained skill which insures successful treatment in all cases not absolutely incurable. We determine the condition by a scientific analysis of urine, and the severe genito- urinary troubles we have cured by our systematic course of treatment gives us suoh confidence in our method as to assure good results, and we offer you Consultation Free, Confidential and Private—A personal, thorough and searching examination is required, though if inconvenient to call, write us for information. Office hours are from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., excepting Sunday, from 10 to 1.

PLAYS and PLAYERS of the WEEK

BIJOU. REFINED VAUDEVILLE. THE LYCEUM DRAMA. METROPOLITAN. BURLESQUE.

AT THE LYCEUM

Three Notable Attractions Next Week, Robert Edeson in "Strongheart" Tuesday and Wednesday, Alberta Gallatin in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" Thursday, and Florence Robert in "The Strength of the Weak," Friday and Saturday.

Robert Edeson, who jumped into a position of stardom in a single night through his delightfully artistic interpretation of the main character in "Soldiers of Fortune," and later made a very great hit as Lieut. Ranson in "Ranson's Folly," has this year a play which has proved by far the best character part has has ever had, and perhaps one of the greatest successes on the American stage. The play is a four-act comedy drama, by William C. DeMille, entitled "Strongheart," and which had sensational engagements in both New York and Boston during the past two seasons. Henry B. Harris will present Mr. Edeson here in this play, at the Lyceum, next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mr. Edeson has always been the serious and studious worker in the drama, and his inspiration and ambition to procure only American plays is worthy of much commendation from theater-goers, who love everything that breathes the spirit of the manly American man.

In "Strongheart" the author, William C. DeMille, has chosen as a background of his characteristically American play, Columbia university of New York. His personages are the types found in every college today, the dominant figure being Strongheart, the son of an Indian chief, who, after graduating from Carlisle, is completing his education there. His winning personality, his simple-heartedness and his prowess on the football team, have made him a universal favorite with his classmates. They welcome him to their homes, and he is in every sense one of them, until he declares his love for the sister of his chum, when their bitter antagonism is aroused. But he has won her love, and she offers to return with him to his tribe. They reject her, as they will not welcome a woman not of their race, as the wife of their future chief.

The most impressive scene of Mr. DeMille's play is naturally the one which develops the theme of race conflict, where Strongheart's two best friends, one the brother and the other the unsuccessful suitor of the girl he loves turn against him. There is another which is certain to catch the public fancy. It shows the training quarters of Columbia's football eleven during the intermission between the first and second halves of the big game of the season, which forms an important part in the development of the story. It is a distinct and refreshing novelty. The first half has been played without a score for either side, and the team comes panting in, covered with mud and bruises, to be harangued and abused by the coach in a rousing roast, filled with racy, scathing vocabulary of the up-to-date college sport. In the midst of the utmost excitement an act of treachery is discovered, suspicion is cast upon Strongheart, and he is refused permission to participate in the game. His innocence is established, but it is in the prejudice that is then aroused which culminates in the succeeding episodes of the play. Mr. Edeson, as Strongheart, the Indian, educated to the ideas and standards of the white race, offers a convincing study of the stoicism as it may be modified by learning and love. Mr. Edeson has given a new and remarkable creation to the stage, just as Mr. DeMille has given the drama a new problem.

Mr. Harris has selected for Mr. Edeson's supporting company a list of players whose names are a guarantee of excellence. Conspicuous among them are Sydney Ainsworth, Mary Boland, Frank J. McIntyre, Marjorie Wood, A. Byron Beasley, Ira Hards, Beatrice Prentice, David Todd, Richard Sterling, Betty Chapman, Francis Bohn, Desiree Lazard, Harrison Ford and Clay Boyd.

DOROTHY VERNON.

Alberta Gallatin In Dramatization of Charles Major's Story.

"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," the dramatization of Charles Major's popular romantic novel, which was made by Paul Krester, who also dramatized that great success, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," is to be presented at the Lyceum, Thursday, Nov. 1st, with Miss Alberta Gallatin in the stellar role. Book plays, as a rule, are not lasting successes. Sidom can the dramatist preserve the beauty and continuity of the story, but Mr. Krester is said to have done so, and has maintained the interest throughout the whole play.

Miss Alberta Gallatin, who is to play the star role of Dorothy Vernon, is an actress of considerable experience in legitimate work and was secured by the managers because they believed it would perfectly fit her. She is said to possess beauty of a rare type and that exemplifies Mr. Major's description of the character. The management has supplied Miss Gallatin with a very capable company, containing several well known players.

FLORENCE ROBERTS.

Great Emotionable Actress to Play at Lyceum Next Week.

Perhaps no local theatrical event will incite more interest than the engagement of the talented emotional actress, Miss Florence Roberts, at the Lyceum, on Friday and Saturday of next week, in her new play, "The Strength of the Weak." The promoters are pleased to term the play a modern work, the efforts of two authors, Alice M. Smith and Charlotte Thompson. In reality it is a strong problem play, dealing with the ever before us sex question, but the critics who reviewed it on the occasion of its initial introduction to Broadway agreed that it was exceptionally well treated and the fact that it enjoyed a run of some 150 nights on the "Great White Way" stamps it one of the best of its class.

The part of Pauline Darcy, played by Miss Roberts, is said to be perhaps the best she has attempted in the long list of successes to her credit. The scenes are laid in and around New York, the opening one being in the girls' room of an Eastern woman's college, where Pauline has written a book, under an assumed name, and which has become the sensation of the hour. The book in reality is the life of the unhappy girl, who has been betrayed by her unfaithful guardian, and who, realizing her shame, resorts to the book to express her belief that a good woman falling can by dint of her own efforts regain her self-respect and position. The success of the book leads the girl to hope that she can with the money repay the guardian and thereby cancel her obligation to him. When she graduates she leaves for New York to begin life anew and casts loose from the man who was responsible for her downfall. She subsequently meets and falls in love with a noble young fellow and consents to be his wife, but not until after she has acquainted him with the story of her past and been forgiven. As she tastes the first sweets of an honest love, her happiness seems almost complete, when the former guardian appears on the scene and attempts to renew his relations with the unfortunate girl and she by accident learns that the man she loves and her betrayer are father and son.

The play affords Miss Roberts, it is said, exceptional opportunity for the display of the talents that have made her one of the foremost of American emotional actresses. The same excellent company that appeared with her in the notable run of the play at the Liberty theater includes Thurlow Bergen, C. J. Williams, Charles Kent, Miss Virginia Brissac, Miss Florence Robinson and Miss Ruth Allen.

AUDITORS AS SEEN BY ACTOR

Robert Edeson Who Comes Here in "Strongheart" in Some Poses Showing Characters In Audience as Seen from Stage.

"Amuse Me if You Dare."

The Blase Youth in the Stage Box.

The Man Who Has Seen Everything.

The Gallery Boy.

As a rule all go to the theatre to see the actor, to watch his mannerisms, his graces and to hear his interpretation of the argument offered by the playwright. Few perhaps stop to consider what the actor thinks of the people, or how he sees them from his place behind the footlights. If you have never stood where the actor stands, looking out over a sea of faces, you can not possibly know or have even an idea of the many auditors who hold up their personality to the stage folk and reflect their feeling of likes or dislikes across the ten feet of space that divides the audience from the stage, but the actor sees them and finds in the different characters as much amusement or chagrin, perhaps, as the auditors find in the people of the play.

Though they have never seen these characters, most people are nevertheless aware that they exist, and for the benefit of these who have not stopped to think about it, Mr. Edeson in the pictures above gives a reflection of a few of the more important ones. There is the blase youth in the stage box, who has paid his $2, not apparently because he finds anything in the actors or the play worthy of consideration, but because it is quite a thing to be a patron of a first-class actor or play and to be seen occupying a prominent seat on a first night.

Then there is the man who has dined well at his home or club and who, having traveled much, finds little to amuse, and who assumes that patronizing air that will lead those who see him to believe that the particular actor to whom he has been good enough to lend his presence, is only a mere child in his art, compared to those comedians or tragedians of whom he has seen so much, both here and abroad.

Knowledge invariably lends itself to criticism and in the third picture is seen the man who finds old ideas in the new play, and takes pleasure in showing to those beside him, who have really come to enjoy, that he at least is not a novice and cannot be so easily persuaded that the line which has just created a burst of laughter has in it anything that is new or original or justifies even an excuse for a smile. He has come to the theater with the knowledge of the first critic in the land and refuses to acknowledge that the sun, although bright and warm today, shone yesterday, and so has lost its attractiveness.

The actor is always sure of one auditor at least who throws prejudice to the four winds and insists upon a full measure of pleasure and enjoyment for the 25 cents he has paid for a gallery seat. There is no joke too old, providing it is a good one, that does not bring a ring of laughter from his receptive heart. There is no villain too bad (artistically), who does not come in for his full share of hisses, and no hero who at the last moment saves the girl from the villain's clutches, in whose glory he does not share by a strenuous appreciation of hand-claps and whistles. "I like the gallery boys " said the late Henry Irving, "he it is who is the true critic and of whom we may all expect a sincere appreciation or an assertive disapproval."

TWO GREAT ARTISTS.

Yvette Guilbert and Albert Chevalier Win Chicago's Enthusiasm.

Yvette Guilbert and Albert Chevalier, two of the greatest artists of the stage, will appear at the Lyceum Monday, Nov. 5. No better indication of their work can be given than the criticism by W. L. Hubbard of the Chicago Tribune, on Oct. 18, a portion of which is as follows:

"Two artists. Two great artists. Not great so far as the medium through which their art is revealed is concerned, but great in what is behind that medium and is disclosed through it. Such are Yvette Guilbert and Alfred Chevalier, who yesterday afternoon and evening were heard in Orchestra hall. Finer, truer art has not been offered in Chicago—or anywhere else in the world, so far as that is concerned. For that which each of these two gifted people places before their patrons is as faultless in its way as is the greatest that any singer, instrumentalist, orchestra, or actor achieves, no matter who or where the performer or body of performers may be. It is perfection of its kind, and it is the quality, not the size, of an artistic achievement that determines its value.

"Both Mme. Guilbert and Mr. Chevalier are workers in miniature, but both are masters. Their respective fields of work seem at first glance diametrically opposite, but this difference exists more in externals than in the essence of the artistic offering itself. Mme. Guilbert devotes herself to the singing of songs of the Pompadour, the 'crinoline,' and the early English periods, and for these she attires hrself in beautiful costumes of those times. She is to the eye a veritable delight—dainty as a bit of Dresden china, exquisite as a figure by Watteau.

"Mr. Chevalier lends his art to the singing and reciting of songs and poems written largely in the idiom of the London cockney, or in the vernacular of the slums. He appears dressed in costumes ragged and soiled—those which suit the people he impersonates. He presents no figure of beauty or of grace. Realistic better describes the externals of his performance.

"And yet diametrically opposed though the work of Mme. Guilbert and Mr. Chevalier may seem to be, the inner character of their art offerings is largely the same. Both the songs the gifted Frenchwoman sings and the songs and poems the Englishman gives are the expression of the folk of the countries and ages in which they originated. Both have the simplicity, the directness, the truth which are the basis of all folk lore, either sung or spoken, and which give that lore its enduring value. It matters not whether Mme. Guilbert be singing the beautiful 'Bells of Nantes,' or Mr. Chevalier be giving his pathetic, 'My Old Dutch,' each is voicing the sentiments and feelings of the people. One people is French, the other British, but both are the same at bottom for both have the sympathies and the emotions that are common to all humanity."

The feature attraction for the week, will be Gilroy-Haynues and Montgomery. This clever trio present a musical sketch, entitled, "The Good Ship, Nancy Lee." The captain, Nancy Lee, is impersonated by Mr. Haynes who has an excellent voice; Mr. Gilroy, comedian, of the sketch, is a real entertainer in the comedy line. Miss Montgomery possesses a remarkable contralto voice, which is sweet and well trained. Special scenery, electrical effects and properties are carried for the production of the act.

Jules Herron, a comedian of reputation and a fine monologue artist, will present his eccentric dances and song hits, which are interspersed with some new stories.

Lorraine and Howell, sketch artists, grotesque dancers and contortionists, present a comedy skit, introducing their trio of trained dogs, Teddy, Grip and Jo Jo, who do long distance leaping through hoops of fire, hurdle jumping, bareback riding and dog punching, and many other stunts.

A musical treat will be offered by Miss Sadie Rosenweig, the management having secured this clever violinist at great expense. Miss Rosenweig has appeared in all large European cities and has recently made her debut before American audiences.

The three Poiriers, aerialists, will be seen in the most sensational and daring ring and bar act ever seen on any stage. This act is also a European attraction, and they made their first appearance in America the past season, with the Barnum & Bailey shows.

Jack O'Toole will render the new song by Charles K. Harris, entitled, "Somewhere," which is illustrated with colored views.

The moving pictures will show the royal bull fight in Spain at the time of the king's coronation, also the funniest picture ever seen, entitled "The Two Terrible Kids and Their Bull Dog."

Matinees are given daily at 2:45 and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. The management announces that all three performances are given in full. At the matinees and second shows at night the complete program is given the same as the first show at night. A special school children matinee is given Saturday afternoon, and regular performances Sunday afternoon and evening.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

New York, Oct. 27.—There are now to be seen on Broadway three reputed theatrical novelties which are to all intents and purposes palatable antiquities with only the thinnest refurbishing of modernity. Two of them are by men of distinguished talent, not untouched by genius, and these two are virtual failures.

• • •

Once before in these columns, apropos of "The Serio-Comic Governess" and "Jinny the Carrier," it was lamented that Israel Zangwill takes himself seriously as a humorist. In fact, he takes himself not only seriously but syllogistically. Once Mr. Zangwill took himself as a writer of tragedy, and the result was the stage version of the "Children of the Ghetto." That was a really deep and great play. Mr. Zangwill knew it, and at least one of his critics. There was hope then that he would give to the theater the same ripeness and sincerity of effort which he has given to fiction. But the public proved reluctant and Mr. Zangwill has since given it fripperies. Of these "Nurse Marjorie," upon which Miss Eleanor Robson is lavishing her talents and her charm at the Liberty, is the latest, and, it is to be fervently hoped, the last.

Not the least distressing circumstance is that potentially the story is a romantic comedy of the first water—at once deeply human and modern and of a potent dramatic appeal. Marjorie is a young Irish lady of high title and great fortune, who in order to achieve a career of usefulness has sunk her identity and taken up with the life of a trained nurse. Her patient is a youth of humble origin and new wealth who is carving out a parliamentary career as champion of the people. This Danbury falls in love with his nurse—as who would not, when she lives in the person of Miss Robson? It appears, however—and with charming spirit and audacity Nurse Marjorie helps on the deception—that she is the daughter of an Irish hostess of a fried fish shop in Whitechapel—a flamboyant fishwife with an impossible husband and brood of excruciating brats. Here is the old Story of Beauty and the Beast, of Prince Florizel and Perdita. And it has a delectable latter day twist in the fact that Danbury is confronted with the seeming necessity of marrying into the very midst of the class of which in his parliamentary life he is the fervent champion. It would not seem possible for a man of Mr. Zangwill's talents to mar such a story. Mr. Zangwill is a humorist, and a humorist of the theater.

The integrity of character and the probabilities of life are bagatelles in comparison with the necessity of any momentary stage effect. When the playwright wants a comedy scene, as in the first act, he makes his hero forget his duty to his constituents and to his country, and sham an illness from which he has long recovered in order to philander in the nursing home with Marjorie—as if it were not possible by any other means—and especially by being a man!—to win her. Then, when the playwright wants a dramatic climax he makes the same hero remember his career with such single-minded devotion that he refuses to marry Marjorie, even though she throws herself at his head most bewitchingly. No manipulator of antique stage plays ever dangled a marionette more unblushingly.

But it is as a stage humorist that Mr. Zangwill shines most balefully. As lord of the property joke Mr. Zangwill outdoes himself. In the literature of the world, it has been scientifically computed, there are only eighteen jokes of any kind. Of property jokes there are only five. It is funny when you sit upon somebody else's top hat. It is funny when you burn your finger against the stove or in a candle flame. It is funny when you pull open the door on a cadger and bring a keyhole listener sprawling in on the floor. It is funny when you smash glass or china. Of the fifth property joke I am at present mercifully spared the memory. These four I recall because Mr. Zangwill revels in all of them. You wonder how he has managed to deny himself the fifth property joke—which, as I now sadly recall, is to put your face through a horse collar and grin at the audience.

"The antiquity of Mr. Gillette's "Clarice" may be suggested to the waywise in the fact that he describes it on the program as a comedy-drama. The term has a fine flavor of the days of the collaboration of Belasco and De Mille. These were not the first playwrights, to be sure, who discovered that an audience relished smiles as a seasoning to tears, laughter as a respite for the tenser dramatic emotions. The fact remains that the practice at all times has regarded a play as a unit, with mirth and sadness not mixed like fruits in a macedoine, but blended, as they are in life, like the iridescent tints of a cunningly woven silk. Certain of Mr. Gillette's characters appear only for the purpose of some quite ancient and irrelevant wheeze, and others, notably the hero, whom he himself plays, are busied at times with sentimental farce and at others with curdling melodrama. It is not merely the antiquity of this sort of thing that jars—it is the fact that it so obviously reveals the hand of manipulation. The inspiration is not life, but the stage.

Coming from a playwright who is at once so expert and so original in his touch upon an ineptitude is very hard to account for. Hitherto his best work has been melodrama—which has been none the less frankly melodrama because it has been handled with consummate simplicity and freshness of touch. In "Clarice" his skill is as great as ever in all superficial matters. The plot turns upon the attempt of a physician to convince his successful rival in love, Carrington (Mr. Gillette) that he is dying of consumption, whereas he is on the verge of recovery. Preposterous as this is, it is handled with no little quiet and conviction.

The plot originates quite quickly and coldly in the heart of a woman who has loved the victim and been repelled, and the jealous lover takes up with it only after a very life-like struggle against sense and honor. Carrington, in the interest as he thinks of the girl he loves, breaks off the match and in despair drinks poison. Here, too, artificial as is the deed of self-sacrifice ,the writing, and most of all Mr. Gillette's acting, are rigidly restrained and horribly convincing. Women in the audience grow faint and sick. Not even the startling denouement—a hypodermic injection of ether from the hand of the repentant physician—quite breaks the spell. If the play had been maintained throughout in the key of melodrama it is probable that we should all have been electrified as we have been in the past.

The fatally disturbing element, I suspect, was not so much the wildness of the story, or any shortcoming in writing or in acting, as the excellence of the first of the four acts. This was an idyllic comedy of the purest type. Here was a bit of writing, consummately interpreted by both Mr. Gillette and Miss Marie Doro, which was sustained throughout on the highest level. The story was one of the simplest, without improbability or factitious complications of any sort. Carrington has fallen in love with his girlish ward, and the efforts of her aunt to separate them, while it tries their love to the utmost, ends by uniting them. The dialogue was light, crisp and humorously tender, the action full of subtle lifelikeness and aptly divined episode. Mr. Gillette has never been more charmingly simple, never more manfully and graciously impassioned. For one full hour the specter of comedy drama was kept beyond the gates, and high comedy reigned supreme.

Not the least paradox of this most paradoxical play was the fact that side by side with so much that was old and stageworn was his passage which revealed the playwright on a plane which he has never before achieved. Mr. Gillette has always worked slowly and developed slowly. Artistic failure though the play is as a whole, it is quite within the bounds of possibility, that it is the earnest of a time when its author will appear before us as finished and original a writer of comedy as he has been of melodrama.

"Cape Cod Folks" opened at the Academy of Music with a great blaze of trumpets and billed as a stupendous production. The play contains many grand "Down East" types. The heroine, a Boston girl, becomes a country schoolmistress, and is soon entangled in various village love affairs, including one of her own. The sensation scene shows a storm on the coast, with a shipwreck and a most realistic sea, through which the heroine rows, at a frightful risk, to rescue her lover. This act was the great one of the play. The play itself is founded upon Sarah Greene's novel of the same name, and a large number of actors are included in the cast.

• • •

What is described as a Western play, different from the usual drama located among brave men who wear blue shirts and slouch hats, is "Three of Us," which opened the Madison Square theater on Wednesday. There is a strong love story for the plot, and all the action takes place indoors.

• • •

Weber's theater has divorced "John Hudson's Wife." While she was a very clever little lady, she did not attract admirers enough, and as she has departed, "The Measure of a Man" takes her place. This play has been very favorably received in the different cities it has visited. The cast includes E. M. Holland, Robert I. Drouet, Mary Hall and Percy Haswell.

• • •

Edna May's play and London appearance have been at last decided on. Charles Frohman has accepted "Nellie Neil" by cable. The book and lyrics are by C. M. S. McLennon, author of the "Belle of New York." It is a modern play in three acts, with music by Ivan Caryll.

The Chorus Singers' union is again causing nights and days of anguish to the managers of grand opera. They declare they will make vigorous war against the importation of foreign chorus singers and have a committee watching every incoming steamship. The union singers claim that there is just as good talent in America as there is in Europe and that American singers are as well trained. Strikes may result if the foreign chorus is put on, as the union singers are backed by the Theatrical Mechanical association, which is comprised of all the stage hands, engineers, electric light men, etc., this threat to tie up productions is causing terror among the managers.

W. C. and Cecil de Mille make no pretense that their new vehicle for Nat Goodwin, "The Genius," is anything but an old-fashioned farce, and the result is an uncommon deal of hearty laughter. It is not safe to conjecture what the occasion might prove without Mr. Goodwin; and it is probable that even Mr. Goodwin's unction is in part due to his own personal experience in the genius line. The farce is a burly satire on what Robert Chambers has called m-nd, and having run the gamut of Clyde Fitch, Henry V. Esmond, Augustus Thomas, and, last and least, from this actor's point of view, William Shakespeare, Mr. Goodwin is, no doubt, in a frame of mind to play horse all superficial matters. The plot turns upon the attempt of a physician to convince his successful rival in love, Carrington (Mr. Gillette) that he is dying of consumption, whereas he is on the verge of recovery. Preposterous as this is, it is handled with no little quiet and conviction.

As for Mr. Goodwin, here he is again, as Pantaloon would say. He has not quite gone back to first principles. In the hazy, mellow memories of youth there is a picture of a big black tomcat on a back fence, with back arched and tail erect, confronting a silhouette of the quandom Nat in symmetrical attitude. There is nothing quite as hilarious in the present play. Mr. Goodwin is a simple-minded stock broker, who is turned down by a modern young girl because he has no soul. So he, too, becomes a soul-hunter—but with a difference. In a studio on South Washington square he finds three starving artists, a painter, a sculptor and a musician of the line of "Vie de Boheme," "Trilby" and "The Music Master"—easy types, two of which are capitally played by Neil O'Brien and Robert Payton Gibbs. He syndicates them, and for a handsome consideration gives out the joint product of their talents as his own.

The fun centers in the hero's effort to talk soulful. "Will you," he says to his affinity, "oh, will you be a Triche to my Dante?" How Zangwill would joy in the lines—and how he would bore us with it! In the unpretending hands of the Messrs. de Mille it is screamingly funny.

The critic who has scorned the three in their own persons lauds them in the form of a genius trust. Society flocks to Mr. Goodwin. The soulful girl throws herself at his head. But the genius business bores, the soulful maiden pails—and Mr. Goodwin's eye has strayed to a sort of Trilby artist's model. The farce waxes fastest and most furious when the genius undertakes to convince the world that he is, after all, only a simple-minded stock broker. The failure of his efforts drives him distracted, and the public only takes this as his madness, as the final proof of his genius.

Not even those who have most severely denied that Mr. Goodwin has genius have ever doubted his exceeding cleverness and his power of low comedy. The present occasion is one of real, old-fashioned rings of laughter, of the kind that exercises the diaphragm and cleanses the liver. And that is about the only commodity we have lost in the generation that has superannuated the old farce and the old comedy drama. Meanwhile Mr. Goodwin is reviving "When We Were Twenty-One" at matinees, so there is hope that the eclipse of his ambition for the legitimate is only temporary.

Forbes Robertson and his wife, who was Gertrude Elliott, have arrived in New York for their American tour. They open in the new Amsterdam, in New York, on Monday next. Mr. Robertson has chosen a George Bernard Shaw play, "Caesar and Cleopatra," for his present tour. It has never been played in public before and is characterized by the author as a history. It shows Caesar as a young man in his meeting with the famous beauty.

• • •

Helen Modjeska began her farewell tour last week, and will be seen in "Macbeth," "Mary Stuart" and "Camille." She will appear in a number of principal cities before permanently retiring from the stage she has graced for so many years.

• • •

Things are not in the best of shape with "Popularity," George Cohan's straight comedy, which has been playing at the Wallaack for the past several weeks. The author has temporarily withdrawn it and is now engaged working it over.

• • •

Heinrich Conried denies the story which again has come forward that he is to be the director of the new theater to be built in New York.

• • •

Duse has secured the rights to produce "The Shulamite" in Italian. The play is from the pen of Henry Knoblauch and served to introduce the English actress, Lena Ashwell, to American audiences last week at Chicago. The play is a strong one, with the Transvaal in the early Boer days as its locale.

Peter Dailey is to end his run in "The Press Agent" on Nov. 1. It is believed he will join the Lew Fields forces.

There was a young girl from Cork,
Who could whistle and sing like a lark,
She went on the stage,
Became all the rage,

and here is where the romance begins: Lydia Limerick, fearful that her talents should go to waste, joined the chorus of "My Lady's Maid," at the Casino; and she was fair—oh! very fair; fair as fancy ever feigned, as the light of a conquin, as a virgin's vow, as the angels of Aiden, as the glorified isles of light, as the flower opening in the morn, as the hills of Paradise, as the goddess who sweeps through the ivory gate, as a sculptor's marble ream, as a foam-born Venus, as the lotus when the morn kisses its opening petals, as the dreams young poets weave, as the spotless moon upon the midnight sea, as the dawn in the springtime, as Phoebus' sapphire-regioned star, as an angel from an unknown land, as a musk-willow forest, as breathing marble, and as the fabulous asphodels; but Cyril was not much for looks, indeed he was as homely as a deal, hedge, mud or stump fence; but he was rich. They met at Sherry's—introduced, of course. Cyril's parents did object; but then, what was the use? It was a hurried wedding; then a quite little home in Harlem, and to resume our rhyme, Lydia was called on by all of Cyril's relatives,

Our actress friends are doing quite well in the way of names. At Chicago, an actress named Iva Hammer haunts the critics; and in "My Lady's Maid," at the Shuberts' Casino, New York, there is a young lady named Iva Dohl! If you know of any other good ones send them along.

Lew Fields and his company is to burlesque "The Great Divide," in which Margaret Anglin and Henry Miller have made an enormous success at the Princess theater, New York. In order that the principals might study the characters in the play the Lew Fields company occupied all of the boxes at the Princess theater on Thursday afternoon, last week. The title of the burlesque has not been determined, nor has the name of its author been divulged. The burlesque will be seen at Lew Fields' Herald Square theater in about three weeks, when Mr. Fields will burlesque the role, Ruth Jordan, in which Miss Anglin has achieved so great a triumph, and Edna Wallace Hopper will be seen as the replica of Mr. Miller's Stephen Ghent.

"The Love Route," which will open the new Lincoln Square theater, under Shubert management on Oct. 30, tells of a struggle between a railroad corporation and a breezy, obstinate Texas girl. Allene Houston has inherited the right from her father. The corporation projects a branch line which will cut across the Houston ranch, and the young woman is determined the road shall not be built. John Ashby, the lover of the girl and an ambitious young railroad builder, is sent to Texas to construct the road. Neither his desire to win the girl nor the threats of war with her cowboys deters him, and he proceeds to lay siege to her heart and to take forcible possession of her real estate. The track layers approach the range from either side, and when its boundaries are reached, Ashby, facing an entire arsenal of shooting irons, leads his workmen through the fences and proves the genuineness of his sense of duty. Before the rails are laid on the girl's land her ranch foreman is fatally shot. He has silently loved the girl and has considered Ashby his rival. His last act is to shoot Ashby. Weeks after Ashby recovers and learns that the girl, out of admiration for his fine courage, has herself completed the road. The great scene of the play is presented in the third act—a scene tinted with a melodramatic moment—which is but a step in the tragic sequence—and which leads to a battle of wits and (as the scene is laid in Texas) a battle of guns. One hundred and fifty persons are concerned in the final adjustment of boundaries. A railroad engine is run into the mob, ties and rails are torn up, and spades, pickaxes and bricks are used as effective arguments.

Paul Rubens, author of the book and music of "My Lady's Maid," which is now at the Casino, New York, is not entirely unknown to America. Four of the best lyrics in "Florodora" were from his pen, the same being "Tact," "Inkling," "The Queen of the Philippine Isles" and "I Am a Lady." Mr. Rubens has also furnished lyrics for "The Cingalee," "The School Girl" and "The Three Little Maids."

Mme. Melba will spend her autumn in London, where she is to sing in the Italian season at Covent Garden. This will keep her busy until she sails for this country in the end of December. While in America she will limit the number of her concert appearances to ten.

David Wartield has repeated in Boston the artistic triumph which he scored in New York in "The Music Master" under Belasco's management, and is playing to larger crowds, and, consequently, larger receipts than he did in the metropolis, owing to the fact that the capacity of the Majestic theater in Boston is greater than that of the playhouse in which he made his phenomenal run.

Boston is to have the honor this year of seeing the premiere of the new Belasco production, "The Rose of the Rancho." For many years Washington enjoyed the distinction and most of the famous Belasco plays were first offered there. Last year Pittsburg was asked to pass judgment on the premiere of "The Girl of the Golden West."

"Moon Dear," the tuneful, catchy song of "A Society Circus" at the New York Hippodrome, has proved to be the most popular song hit of any theatrical production in years, almost half a million copies having been sold since the initial performance. The words and music were written by Manuel Klein, the musical director of the Hippodrome. Samuel Merwin, a well known magazine writer, in a recent visit to the wilds of Manitoba, 4,000 miles from Broadway, coming upon a railroad engineer's camp at the close of a hard day's travel, heard from within the tent a tenor voice singing "Moon Dear" to the accompaniment of a mandolin, while the chorus was sung by half a dozen of the camp in rousing style. Mr. Merwin did not interrupt the songfest till finished. The engineer said afterward that he had heard the song weeks before at the Hippodrome and bought a copy before leaving New York. "The men," he said, "insist on my singing it every night after supper, and if you hear your Indian guide crooning it tomorrow, as he paddles you down the McKenzie river, don't be surprised." Mr. Merwin said he got "Moon Dear" for forty miles the next day. Mr. Merwin is now engaged on the score of the forthcoming production.

Wright Lorimer has a season of forty weeks booked for his production of "The Shepherd King," which includes all of the principal cities in the country, and yet he plays no engagement of less than three nights anywhere. In most of the cities he is to stay two and three weeks. As this is the fourth season of "The Shepherd King," it clearly shows the strong hold this great Biblical play has upon theatergoers, elsewise it would be impossible for him to secure such extended engagements.

• • •

From a sociological standpoint it is most interesting to watch the crowds that flock to the Manhattan theater, where Grace George is presenting her success, "Clothes," at both matinee and evening performance. The doorkeeper of the theater and the management both note the same faces coming back time after time to see the play. This is remarkable in a city like New York, where the major portion of the theatergoers are drawn from the thousands of transients who are daily brought into the city by the railroads. This fact alone shows the solidity of Miss George's success.

• • •

Mr. Belasco is determined that none of his stars shall become so closely identified with one character that the public will see them in no other. Unlike other managers, he is too resourceful in his artistic possibilities to depend on one vehicle to serve as long as playgoers will pay to see it. He believes that the public is entitled to a range of novelties from his players. Warfield could probably play "The Music Master" for the next ten years, but in the height of his great success in New York, Mr. Belasco decided to present him next year in a new creation. No one but himself, of course, has the remotest idea what sort of role he will assign to this gifted star.

• • •

When Robert Edeson made his first success as a star under the management of Henry B. Harris in "Soldiers of Fortune," many tempting offers were made to present him in London. These offers were renewed after his triumph in "Ranson's Folly," but Mr. Harris steadily declined all propositions. However, he has decided to send Mr. Edeson to London next April presenting "Strongheart" with the company that has been identified with the production for the last three years.

Mrs. Leslie Carter's dressmaker is a person of unusual resource. Last Tuesday evening, with her trunks packed, and her ticket bought for a flying trip to Paris, for designs and fabrics for gowns to be worn by Mrs. Carter, in the new Royale play, "Cleo," shortly to be produced by Charles Dillingham, the modiste found herself facing the proposition that her steamer sailed at 9, next morning, but that she couldn't start with complete instructions, because the author of the play, who lives in Avon, N. J., had only that evening completed the last act, and could get the manuscript into New York only by connections with the first train out of Avon in the morning, an arrangement that would leave no time for the scrip's perusal for costume hints before the steamer sailed.

It was during her good-bye call on Mrs. Carter, Tuesday evening, that the dressmaker learned her situation.

"Why don't you have Mr. Royle read the last act to you over the telephone?" she asked her patron.

And that's what was done.

The telephone toll was $37.80, but the dressmaker went up the gangplank next morning smiling.

Fritzi Scheff doesn't want any of grand opera. A Berlin impressario, during the prima donna's trip abroad last summer tried to engage her for a between-season's continental tour.

"No more grand opera for me," replied the singer, "there's nothing like singing in comic opera, especially in America. Comic opera audiences laugh so—why, it's like telling a funny story to some one who owes you money!"

The claws were off the lobster served Sharkey.

"Bring my lobster with the claws on!" he ordered.

"That one's all right, Tom,' interposed Stone, with a wink at the waiter, 'they come that way sometimes—get to fighting in the water and wallop each other's mitts off!"

"Then bring me the winner," said Sharkey.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

High School Girls, the Attraction Next Week, With Famous Burke Brothers as Special Feature.

The famous Burke Brothers, John and Charles, who are appearing together after a separation of four seasons, will appear as a special attraction with the High School Girls, at the Metropolitan, next week. The company begins its engagement in Duluth with a matinee tomorrow afternoon, coming direct from the Star theater in St. Paul.

The organization will remain all the week, giving matinees on Tuesday, Thursday (ladies' day) and Saturday, in addition to the one tomorrow.

"An Egyptian Lemon" and "Cupid in the Philippines" are the titles of the two rollicking burlesques that have been written by the Burke Brothers for the High School Girls. Both are said to be capital combinations of comedy, satire and music. This latter has been selected with great care, and is sung by clever principals and a chorus of very pretty girls.

The company is a large one, and includes such famous vaudeville favorites as Hilda Carle and her Red Raven Cadets, George and Lilla Brennan, in a new and novel song and dance turn; the Bijou Comedy Four, with many new songs and some newer fun, and Misses Willard and Hughes in a new "sister act," called "From the Bowery to Broadway."

The Burke Brothers, in addition to their own fun-making, have valuable assistance from their famous "Wise Mike."

If the press agent is to be believed, the High School Girls have one of the best shows on the circuit.

AT THE BIJOU

First Anniversary of New Theater to be Celebrated Next Week, and Especially Fine Vaudeville Attractions Are Engaged for the Event.

The First anniversary of the new Bijou will be celebrated next week and big attractions have been booked for the week. Each lady attending Monday night will receive a beautiful rose in honor of the event. A fine program of vaudeville features will be seen.

The feature attraction for the week, will be Gilroy-Haynues and Montgomery. This clever trio present a musical sketch, entitled, "The Good Ship, Nancy Lee." The captain, Nancy Lee, is impersonated by Mr. Haynes who has an excellent voice; Mr. Gilroy, comedian, of the sketch, is a real entertainer in the comedy line. Miss Montgomery possesses a remarkable contralto voice, which is sweet and well trained. Special scenery, electrical effects and properties are carried for the production of the act.

Jules Herron, a comedian of reputation and a fine monologue artist, will present his eccentric dances and song hits, which are interspersed with some new stories.

Lorraine and Howell, sketch artists, grotesque dancers and contortionists, present a comedy skit, introducing their trio of trained dogs, Teddy, Grip and Jo Jo, who do long distance leaping through hoops of fire, hurdle jumping, bareback riding and dog punching, and many other stunts.

A musical treat will be offered by Miss Sadie Rosenweig, the management having secured this clever violinist at great expense. Miss Rosenweig has appeared in all large European cities and has recently made her debut before American audiences.

The three Poiriers, aerialists, will be seen in the most sensational and daring ring and bar act ever seen on any stage. This act is also a European attraction, and they made their first appearance in America the past season, with the Barnum & Bailey shows.

Jack O'Toole will render the new song by Charles K. Harris, entitled, "Somewhere," which is illustrated with colored views.

The moving pictures will show the royal bull fight in Spain at the time of the king's coronation, also the funniest picture ever seen, entitled "The Two Terrible Kids and Their Bull Dog."

Matinees are given daily at 2:45 and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. The management announces that all three performances are given in full. At the matinees and second shows at night the complete program is given the same as the first show at night. A special school children matinee is given Saturday afternoon, and regular performances Sunday afternoon and evening.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

New York, Oct. 27.—There are now to be seen on Broadway three reputed theatrical novelties which are to all intents and purposes palatable antiquities with only the thinnest refurbishing of modernity. Two of them are by men of distinguished talent, not untouched by genius, and these two are virtual failures.

• • •

Once before in these columns, apropos of "The Serio-Comic Governess" and "Jinny the Carrier," it was lamented that Israel Zangwill takes himself seriously as a humorist. In fact, he takes himself not only seriously but syllogistically. Once Mr. Zangwill took himself as a writer of tragedy, and the result was the stage version of the "Children of the Ghetto." That was a really deep and great play. Mr. Zangwill knew it, and at least one of his critics. There was hope then that he would give to the theater the same ripeness and sincerity of effort which he has given to fiction. But the public proved reluctant and Mr. Zangwill has since given it fripperies. Of these "Nurse Marjorie," upon which Miss Eleanor Robson is lavishing her talents and her charm at the Liberty, is the latest, and, it is to be fervently hoped, the last.

Not the least distressing circumstance is that potentially the story is a romantic comedy of the first water—at once deeply human and modern and of a potent dramatic appeal. Marjorie is a young Irish lady of high title and great fortune, who in order to achieve a career of usefulness has sunk her identity and taken up with the life of a trained nurse. Her patient is a youth of humble origin and new wealth who is carving out a parliamentary career as champion of the people. This Danbury falls in love with his nurse—as who would not, when she lives in the person of Miss Robson? It appears, however—and with charming spirit and audacity Nurse Marjorie helps on the deception—that she is the daughter of an Irish hostess of a fried fish shop in Whitechapel—a flamboyant fishwife with an impossible husband and brood of excruciating brats. Here is the old Story of Beauty and the Beast, of Prince Florizel and Perdita. And it has a delectable latter day twist in the fact that Danbury is confronted with the seeming necessity of marrying into the very midst of a class of which in his parliamentary life he is the fervent champion. It would not seem possible for a man of Mr. Zangwill's talents to mar such a story. Mr. Zangwill is a humorist, and a humorist of the theater. The integrity of character and the probabilities of life are bagatelles in comparison with the necessity of any momentary stage effect. When the playwright wants a comedy scene, as in the first act, he makes his hero forget his duty to his constituents and to his country, and sham an illness from which he has long recovered in order to philander in the nursing home with Marjorie—as if it were not possible by any other means—and especially by being a man!—to win her. Then, when the playwright wants a dramatic climax he makes the same hero remember his career with such single-minded devotion that he refuses to marry Marjorie, even though she throws herself at his head most bewitchingly. No manipulator of antique stage plays ever dangled a marionette more unblushingly.

But it is as a stage humorist that Mr. Zangwill shines most balefully. As lord of the property joke Mr. Zangwill outdoes himself. In the literature of the world, it has been scientifically computed, there are only eighteen jokes of any kind. Of property jokes there are only five. It is funny when you sit upon somebody else's top hat. It is funny when you burn your finger against the stove or in a candle flame. It is funny when you pull open the door of a sudden and bring a keyhole listener sprawling in on the floor. It is funny when you smash glass or china. Of the fifth property joke I am at present mercifully spared the memory. These four I recall because Mr. Zangwill revels in all of them. You wonder how he has managed to deny himself the fifth property joke—which, as I now sadly recall, is to put your face through a horse collar and grin at the audience.

"The antiquity of Mr. Gillette's "Clarice" may be suggested to the waywise in the fact that he describes it on the program as a comedy-drama. The term was a favorite one of the early collaboration of Belasco and De Mille. These were not the first playwrights, to be sure, who discovered that an audience relished smiles as a seasoning to tears, laughter as a respite for the tenser dramatic emotions. The fact remains that the practice at all times has regarded a play as a unit, with mirth and sadness not mixed like fruits in a macedoine, but blended, as they are in life, like the iridescent tints of a cunningly woven silk. Certain of Mr. Gillette's characters appear only for the purpose of some quite ancient and irrelevant wheeze, and others, notably the hero, whom he himself plays, are busied at times with sentimental farce and at others with curdling melodrama. It is not merely the antiquity of this sort of thing that jars—it is the fact that it obviously reveals the hand of manipulation. The inspiration is not life, but the stage.

Coming from a playwright who is at once so expert and so original in his artifices upon inevitable it is very hard to account for. Hitherto his best work has been melodrama—which has been none the less frankly melodrama because it has been handled with consummate simplicity and freshness of touch. In "Clarice" his skill is as great as ever in all superficial matters. The plot turns upon the attempt of a physician to convince his successful rival in love, Carrington, Mr. Gillette that he is dying of consumption, whereas he is on the point of recovery. Preposterous as this is, it is handled with no little quiet and conviction.

The plot originates quite quickly and coldly in the heart of a woman who has loved the victim and been repelled, and the jealous lover takes up with it only after a very life-like struggle against his sense and honor. Carrington, in the interest as he thinks of the girl he loves, breaks off the match and in despair drinks poison. Here, too, artificial as is the deed of self-sacrifice, the writing, and most of all Mr. Gillette's acting, are rigidly restrained and horribly convincing. Women in the audience grow faint and sick. Not even the startling denouement—a hypodermic injection of ether from the hand of the repentant physician—quite breaks the spell. If the play had been maintained throughout in the key of melodrama it is probable that we should all have been electrified as we have been in the past.

The fatally disturbing element, I suspect, was not so much the wildness of the story, or any shortcoming in writing or in acting, as the excellence of the first of the four acts. This was an idyllic comedy of the purest type. Here was a bit of writing, consummately interpreted by both Mr. Gillette and Miss Marie Doro, which was sustained throughout on the highest level. The story was one of the simplest, without improbability or factitious complications of any sort. Carrington has fallen in love with his girlish ward, and the efforts of her aunt to separate them, while it tries their love to the utmost, ends by uniting them. The dialogue was light, crisp and humorously tender, the action full of subtle lifelikeness and aptly divined episode. Mr. Gillette has never been more charmingly simple, never more manfully and graciously impassioned. For one full hour the specter of comedy drama was kept beyond the gates, and high comedy reigned supreme.

Not the least paradox of this most paradoxical play was the fact that side by side with so much that was old and stageworn was his passage which revealed the playwright on a plane which he has never before achieved. Mr. Gillette has always worked slowly and developed slowly. Artistic failure though the play is as a whole, it is quite within the bounds of possibility, that it is the earnest of a time when its author will appear before us as finished and original a writer of comedy as he has been of melodrama.

"Cape Cod Folks" opened at the Academy of Music with a great blaze of trumpets and billed as a stupendous production. The play contains many grand "Down East" types. The heroine, a Boston girl, becomes a country schoolmistress, and is soon entangled in various village love affairs, including one of her own. The sensation scene shows a storm on the coast, with a shipwreck and a most realistic sea, through which the heroine rows, at a frightful risk, to rescue her lover. This act was the great one of the play. The play itself is founded upon Sarah Greene's novel of the same name, and a large number of actors are included in the cast.

• • •

What is described as a Western play, different from the usual drama located among brave men who wear blue shirts and slouch hats, is "Three of Us," which opened the Madison Square theater on Wednesday. There is a strong love story for the plot, and all the action takes place indoors.

• • •

Weber's theater has divorced "John Hudson's Wife." While she was a very clever little lady, she did not attract admirers enough, and as she has departed, "The Measure of a Man" takes her place. This play has been very favorably received in the different cities it has visited. The cast includes E. M. Holland, Robert Drouet, Mary Hall and Percy Haswell.

• • •

Edna May's play and London appearance have been at last decided on. Charles Frohman has accepted "Nellie Neill" by cable. The book and lyrics are by C. M. S. McLennon, author of the "Belle of New York." It is a modern play in three acts, with music by Ivan Caryll.

The Chorus Singers' union is again causing nights and days of anguish to the managers of grand opera. They declare they will make vigorous war against the importation of foreign chorus singers and have a committee watching every incoming steamer. The union singers claim that there is just as good talent in America as there is in Europe and that American singers are as well trained. Strikes may result if the foreign chorus is put on, and as the union singers are backed by the Theatrical Mechanical association, which is comprised of all the stage hands, engineers, electric light men, etc., this threat to tie up productions is causing terror among the managers.

W. C. and Cecil de Mille make no pretense that their new vehicle for Nat Goodwin, "The Genius," is anything but an old-fashioned farce, and the result is an uncommon deal of hearty laughter. It is not safe to conjecture what the occasion might prove without Mr. Goodwin; and it is probable that even Mr. Goodwin's unction is in part due to his own personal experience in the genius line. The farce is built upon the notion that Robert Chambers has called ar-rot, and, having run the gamut of Clyde Fitch, Henry V. Esmond, Augustus Thomas, and, last and least, from this actor's point of view, William Shakespeare, Mr. Goodwin has, no doubt, in a frame of mind to play horse with current notions of inspiration and greatness.

Henry E. Dixey once hitched his wagon to the Shakespearian star, and the net result is a parody of "The Seven Ages of Man," which is well worth hearing, but which you are not likely to hear unless you catch him late of a Saturday night, with old Anthony Comstock a remote dot in the sky line.

As for Mr. Goodwin, here he is again, as Pantaloon would say. He has not quite gone back to first principles. In the hazy, mellow memories of youth there is a picture of a big black tomcat on a back fence, with back arched and tail erect, confronting a silhouette of the quandom Nat in symmetrical attitude. There is nothing quite as hilarious in the present play. Mr. Goodwin is a simple-minded stock broker, who is turned down by a modern young girl because he has no soul. So he, too, becomes a soul-hunter—but with a difference. In a studio on South Washington square he finds three starving artists, a painter, a sculptor and a musician of the line of "Vie de Boheme," "Trilby" and "The Music Master"—easy types, two of which are capitally played by Neil O'Brien and Robert Payton Gibbs. He syndicates them, and for a handsome consideration gives out the joint product of their talents as his own.

The fun centers in the hero's effort to talk soulful. "Will you," he says to his affinity, "oh, will you be a Triche to my Dante?" How Zangwill would joy in the lines—and how he would bore us with it! In the unpretending hands of the Messrs. de Mille it is screamingly funny.

The critic who has scorned the three in their own persons lauds them in the form of a genius trust. Society flocks to Mr. Goodwin. The soulful girl throws herself at his head. But the genius business bores, the soulful maiden palls—and Mr. Goodwin's eye has strayed to a sort of Trilby artist's model. The farce waxes fastest and most furious when the genius undertakes to convince the world that he is, after all, only a simple-minded stock broker. The failure of his efforts drives him distracted, and the public only takes this as his madness, as the final proof of his genius.

Not even those who have most severely denied that Mr. Goodwin has genius have ever doubted his exceeding cleverness and his power of low comedy. The present occasion is one of real, old-fashioned rings of laughter, of the kind that exercises the diaphragm and cleanses the liver. And that is about the only commodity we have lost in the generation that has supernannuated the old farce and the old comedy drama. Meanwhile Mr. Goodwin is reviving "When We Were Twenty-One" at matinees, so there is hope that the eclipse of his ambition for the legitimate is only temporary.

Forbes Robertson and his wife, who was Gertrude Elliott, have arrived in New York for their American tour. They open in the new Amsterdam, in New York, on Monday next. Mr. Robertson has chosen a George Bernard Shaw play, "Caesar and Cleopatra," for his present tour. It has never been played in public before and is characterized by the author as a history. It shows Caesar as a young man in his meeting with the famous beauty.

Helen Modjeska began her farewell tour last week, and will be seen in "Macbeth," "Mary Stuart" and "Camille." She will appear in a number of principal cities before permanently retiring from the stage she has graced for so many years.

Things are not in the best of shape with "Popularity," George Cohan's straight comedy, which has been playing at the Wallaack for the past several weeks. The author has temporarily withdrawn it and is now engaged working it over.

Heinrich Conried denies the story which again has come forward that he is to be the director of the new theater to be built in New York.

Duse has secured the rights to produce "The Shulamito" in Italian. The play is from the pen of Henry Knobbauch and served to introduce the English actress, Lena Ashwell, to American audiences last week at Chicago. The play is a strong one, with the Transvaal in the early Boer days as its locale.

Peter Dailey is to end his run in "The Press Agent" on Nov. 1. It is believed he will join the Lew Fields forces.

There was a young girl from Cork,
Who could whistle and sing like a lark,
She went on the stage,
Became all the rage,

and here is where the romance begins: Lydia Limerick, fearful that her talents should go to waste, joined the chorus of "My Lady's Maid," at the Casino; and she was fair—oh! very fair; fair as fancy ever feigned, as the light of a tonquin, as a virgin's vow, as the angels of Alden, as the glorified isles of light, as the flower opening in the morn, as the hills of Paradise, as the goddess who sweeps through the ivory gate, as a sculptor's marble ream, as a foam-born Venus, as the lotus when the morn kisses its opening petals, as the dreams young poets weave, as the spotless moon upon the midnight sea, as the dawn in the springtime, as Pacebus' sapphire-regioned star, as an angel from an unknown land, as a musk-willow forest, as breathing marble, and as the fabulous nightshades; but Cyril was not much for looks, indeed he was as homely as a deal, hedge, mud or stump fence; but he was rich. They met at Sherry's—introduced, of course. Cyril's parents did object; but then, what was the use? It was a hurried wedding; then a quite little home in Harlem, and to resume our rhyme, Lydia was called on by all of Cyril's relatives,

Our actress friends are doing quite well in the way of names. At Chicago, an actress named Iva Hammer flaunts the critics; and in "My Lady's Maid," at the Shuberts' Casino, New York, there is a young lady named Iva Dohl! If you know of any other good ones send them along.

Lew Fields and his company is to burlesque "The Great Divide," in which Margaret Anglin and Henry Miller have made an enormous success at the Princess theater, New York. In order that the principals might study the characters in the play, the Lew Fields company occupied all of the boxes at the Princess theater on Thursday afternoon, last week. The title of the burlesque has not been determined, nor has the name of its author been divulged. The burlesque will be seen at Lew Fields' Herald Square theater in about three weeks, when Mr. Fields will burlesque the role, Ruth Jordan, in which Miss Anglin has achieved so great a triumph, and Edna Wallace Hopper will be seen as the replica of Mr. Miller's Stephen Ghent.

"The Love Route," which will open the new Lincoln Square theater, under Shubert management on Oct. 30, tells of a struggle between a railroad corporation and a breezy, obstinate Texas girl. Alene Hoskins has inherited the fight from her father. The corporation projects a branch line which will cut across the Houston ranch, and the young woman is determined the road shall not be built. John Ashby, the lover of the girl, and an ambitious young railroad builder, is sent to Texas to construct the road. Neither his desire to win the girl nor the threats of war with her cowboys deters him, and he proceeds to lay siege to her heart and to take forcible possession of her real estate. The track layers approach the range from either side, and when its boundaries are reached, Ashby, facing an entire arsenal of shooting irons, leads his workmen through the fences and proves the genuineness of his sense of duty. Before the rails are laid on the girl's land her ranch foreman is fatally shot. He has silently loved the girl and has considered Ashby his rival. His last act is to shoot Ashby. Weeks after Ashby recovers and learns that the girl, out of admiration for his fine courage, has herself completed the road. The great scene of the play is presented in the third act—a scene tinted with a melodramatic moment—which is but a step in the tragic sequence—and which leads to a battle of wits and (as the scene is laid in Texas) a battle of guns. One hundred and fifty persons are concerned in the final adjustment of boundaries. A railroad engine is run into the mob, ties and rails are torn up, and spades, pickaxes and bricks are used as effective arguments.

Paul Rubens, author of the book and music of "My Lady's Maid," which is now at the Casino, New York, is not entirely unknown to America. Four of the best lyrics in "Florodora" were from his pen, the same being "Tact," "Tinkling," "The Queen of the Philippine Isles" and "I Am a Lady." Mr. Rubens has also furnished lyrics for "The Cingalee," "The School Girl" and "The Three Little Maids."

David Warfield has repeated in Boston the artistic triumph which he scored in New York in "The Music Master" under Belasco's management, and is playing to larger crowds, and, consequently, larger receipts than he did in the metropolis, owing to the fact that the capacity of the Majestic theater in Boston is greater than that of the playhouse in which he made his phenomenal run.

Boston is to have the honor this year of seeing the premiere of the new Belasco production, "The Rose of the Rancho." For many years Washington enjoyed the distinction and most of the famous Belasco plays were first offered there. Last year Pittsburg was asked to pass judgment on the premiere of "The Girl of the Golden West."

"Moon Dear," the tuneful, catchy song of "A Society Circus" at the New York Hippodrome, has proved to be the most popular song hit of any theatrical production in years, almost half a million copies having been sold since the initial performance. The words and music were written by Manuel Klein, the musical director of the Hippodrome. Samuel Merwin, a well known magazine writer, in a recent visit to the wilds of Manitoba, 4,000 miles from Broadway, coming upon a railroad engineer's camp at the close of a hard day's travel, heard from within the tent a tenor voice singing "Moon Dear" to the accompaniment of a mandolin, while the chorus was sung by half a dozen of the camp in rousing style. Mr. Merwin did not interrupt the songfest till finished. The engineer said afterward that he had heard the song weeks before at the Hippodrome and bought a copy before leaving New York. "The man," he said, "insist on my singing it every night after supper, and if you hear your Indian guide crooning it tomorrow, as he paddles you down the McKenzie river, don't be surprised." Mr. Merwin said he got "Moon Dear" for forty miles the next day. Mr. Merwin is now engaged on the score of the forthcoming production.

Wright Lorimer has a season of forty weeks booked for his production of "The Shepherd King," which includes all of the principal cities in the country, and yet he plays no engagement of less than three nights anywhere. In most of the cities he is to stay two and three weeks. As this is the fourth season of "The Shepherd King," it clearly shows the strong hold this great Biblical play has upon theatergoers, elsewise it would be impossible for him to secure such extended engagements.

• • •

From a sociological standpoint it is most interesting to watch the crowds that flock to the Manhattan theater, where Grace George is presenting her success, "Clothes," at both matinee and evening performance. The doorkeeper of the theater and the management both note the same faces coming back time after time to see the play. This is remarkable in a city like New York, where the major portion of the theatergoers are drawn from the thousands of transients who are daily brought into the city by the railroads. This fact alone shows the solidity of Miss George's success.

• • •

Mr. Belasco is determined that none of his stars shall become so closely identified with one character that the public will see them in no other. Unlike other managers, he is too resourceful in his artistic possibilities to depend on one vehicle to serve as long as playgoers will pay to see it. He believes that the public is entitled to a range of novelties from his players. Warfield could probably play "The Music Master" for the next ten years, but in the height of his great success in New York, Mr. Belasco decided to present him next year in a new creation. No one but himself, of course, has the remotest idea what sort of role he will assign to this gifted star.

• • •

When Robert Edeson made his first success as a star under the management of Henry B. Harris in "Soldiers of Fortune," many tempting offers were made to present him in London. These offers were renewed after his triumph in "Ranson's Folly," but Mr. Harris steadily declined all propositions. However, he has decided to send Mr. Edeson to London next April presenting "Strongheart" with the company that has been identified with the production for the last three years.

Mrs. Leslie Carter's dressmaker is a person of unusual resources. Last Tuesday evening, with her trunks packed, and her ticket bought for a flying trip to Paris, for designs and fabrics for gowns to be worn by Mrs. Carter, in the new Royale play, "Jeo," shortly to be produced by Charles Dillingham, the modiste found herself facing the proposition that her steamer sailed at 9, next morning, but that she couldn't start with complete instructions, because the author of the play, who lives in Avon, N. J., had only that evening completed the last act, and could get the manuscript into New York only by connections with the first train out of Avon in the morning, an arrangement that would leave no time for the script's perusal for costume hints before the steamer sailed.

It was during her good-bye call on Mrs. Carter, Tuesday evening, that the dressmaker learned her situation.

"Why don't you have Mr. Royle read the last act to you over the telephone?" she asked her patron.

And that's what was done.

The telephone toll was $37.80, but the dressmaker went up the gangplank next morning smiling.

Fritzl Scheff doesn't want any of grand opera. A Berlin impressario, during the prima donna's trip abroad last summer tried to engage her for a between-season's continental tour.

"No more grand opera for me," replied the singer, "there's nothing like singing in comic opera, especially in America. Comic opera audiences laugh so—why, it's like telling a funny story to some one who owes you money!"

The claws were off the lobster served Sharkey.

"Bring my lobster with the claws on!" he ordered.

"That one's all right, Tom,' interposed Stone, with a wink at the waiter, "they come that way sometimes—get to fighting in the water and wallop each other's mitts off!"

"Then bring me the winner," said Sharkey.

ELEVATOR SITE IS SOLD FOR AN IMPROVEMENT

Cargill Elevator Company Buys One of Best Locations on Rice's Point—Frank Frerker Buys a Lake Avenue Property for Improvement—Some Pertinent Observations by T. W. Wahl.

The past week in Duluth realty circles has been marked by an excellent demand for property, principally residences, althoug there have been a few good sales made of centrally located business property. Several deals in the latter calss of property are practically at the closing point, but the agents through whom the transactions are made prefer to withold information until they are assured there can be no slip. The week has been a busy one at the office of the register of deeds, a large amount of transfers having been placed on record. Among these were a large batch of deeds conveying the West end property to the Clyde Iron works, and on which a modern plant is to be erected the coming year. Considerable range property is changling hands right along, and some of the recent sales have been made at figures that show a big advance in values of that class of property. While this is hardly the season for farm land sales, a fairly good business along that line is reported by the local interests that are selling that class of lands. On the whole the year has witnessed an excellent movement of new agricultural lands in this vicinity.

• • •

One of the most important of the recent transactions is, without doubt, the transfer from George C. Howe to the Cargill Elevator company of an elevator site on Rice's Point. The deed, which was filed this week, shows that the site is located between the old Peavey Elevator system and the Imperial mill. It is considered one of the best located properties in Duluth for the purpose, being so easily accessible by water and by railroads. The consideration stated in the deed, is merely nominal, the real figure not being made public. As the property is considered a very valuable one, it is thought that the amount paid for it by the elevator company must have been a pretty good figure. It is not known when the property will be improved, but thought possible that work may be started before next spring. The elevator, if built, will cost at least half a million dollars and will be constructed of cement, steel and tile.

Another local sale of importance this week was the transfer from out-of-town parties to Frank Frerker of the vacant property on the west side of Lake avenue and at the south end of the viaduct, for $9,500. The property has a frontage of fifty feet on the avenue, and is 260 feet deep. It runs back to the Lake avenue slip and has railroad facilities. The sale was made through the office of Stryker, Manley & Buck. It is understood that Frerker Eros., have purchased the property with the intention of improving it with a large wholesale business, but their plans along that line have not yet been made public. The location is an excellent one for the purpose, and it is believed likely that the improvement will be made during the coming year.

It is generally conceded that if Duluth were not such a lively copper stock market there would be the best real estate market here the city has ever had. Time and again the real estate men have claimed that men with means, who could and actually would like to buy real estate for investment, perhaps for a home, have hestitated because they have felt they could turn their money over a little faster in socks than in ground. Concerning the situation, T. W. Wahl makes the following observations, in which he compares Duluth real estate to "Acres of Diamonds." Mr. Wahl says:

"Duluthians have had the benefit of some wonderfully successful mining flotations, especially copper, and today evidence of the success of these mining companies can be seen on every hand. On account of these flotations they have been over-looking one very important, safe and solid investment, namely, Duluth real estate, and have allowed outsiders to come in and carry off most of the cream of our property.

"This is like the old story, 'Acres of Diamonds'; a Pensylvania man selling his farm and going to Alaska looking for oil; Rockefeller thereby getting one of the richest oil farms in the world; an Australian trading his lands, containing untold deposits of gold, for a song, and going on a long journey looking for gold fields, etc.

"Duluth is growing very rapidly. If you do not believe so, just think how many strange faces you see in street cars, and everywhere else, when, five or six years ago, you knew pretty nearly everybody. Our directory shows a very heavy increase in the last year, and today it is hard to find a vacant house, flat or store, from Lester Park to Fond du Lac.

"West Duluth, the manufacturing district of the city, makes a very prosperous showing. A visit to this end of the city would surprise even some of our oldest inhabitants, by reason of the wonderful changes in the past few years. Today there are more plants running than we ever dreamed of in our palmiest boom days, and they are run as business propositions, not for boom purposes. They have not located to receive large bonuses and land grants but are here because they expect to do business and make money for the stockholders in a legitimate way. To those who are wondering whether Duluth is growing or not, I would say, take a trip to West Duluth and you will see a thriving part of the city, and incidentally take a look at the blast furnace, coke ovens, the gas plant, the carbolite company's large plant, the match factory, the box factory, the brass works, the National Iron works, the sash, door and blind factory, the stone crushing company's plant, the lumber mills, and many others.

"In the opinion of our best business men we will see large blast furnaces erected by the United States steel people in a comparatively short time. The cement works will be in operation, and now that the water power is just about completed, which means cheap power, you will see plants springing up far more rapidly in the near future than they have in the past four or five years.

"The growth of a city is very much like the growth of a private business, it has its early struggles and vicissitudes, until it gets firmly established, then if it has the right location, and the right people, it will grow very materially of its own accord. It can be helped very much in its growth by the individual efforts and loyalty of the citizens. The best citizen is the one who becomes an owner of his own home, thereby becoming a stockholder in the municipality. He will then take more of an interest in public affairs. He will get out to vote at election, and try to correct existing evils at the ballot box, and instead of knocking his home because he is paying too much rent, he will become a booster.

"If a business concern owns its location and building, its financial standing is ever so much stronger than its competitor, who has to pay rent. In Duluth there are a great many concerns that could own the property they are occupying, but instead, are using their surplus funds in speculations away from the city, when, from a standpoint of safety and investment, it would be far better invested right at home.

"Of course there has been more or less property bought by home people, in fact, some of our leading mining men own some of our very choicest Superior street property, but the people who can handle deals of $500 to $5,000 are not, as a rule, buying real estate, but are speculating mostly in stocks. They cannot afford to lose, but they are the very ones who do, in any kind of a boom, real estate, copper, gold.

"There is not the slightest sign of a boom in Duluth real estate, therefore now is the time to buy property. A great many people are predicting a boom in Duluth real estate on account of the great many varied interests that are locating here, and my opinion is the day is not far distant when we will at least see a lively market for property, and the public will be speculating in that instead of stocks."

Stryker, Manley & Buck report the sale of a lot in Hunter's Park, adjoining Maj. H. V. Eva's residence property, to H. W. Nichols of the North Land Coal company. The property has a frontage on Woodland avenue of 80 feet and is a little over 300 feet deep. Mr. Nichols bought it for $1,100 and is building thereon a home that will cost in the neighborhood of $5,000. The same company has sold four lots on the upper side of Woodland avenue in Hunter's Park, to Harry L. Peck, for $1,250, on which the latter is erecting a new residence. Among other sales are those of a house and lot at 5417 Grand avenue east, to H. G. Curtis, for $2,000, and a house and lot in West Duluth for $900.

W. M. Prindle & Co. report the sale of three lots on the upper side of Fifth street, opposite Portland square, for $2,700; two houses and lots at the West end for $1,000; two lots at Second street and Twenty-fourth avenue east, for $2,000, and a First street property, for $20,000. The details of the latter sale are not yet made public.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION. Opens the Walker (Plute) Indian reservation in Nevada on Oct. 29, noon. For years this region has been known to contain great mineral wealth, principally gold and copper, but it was closed to the white man. The Indian police guarded their boundaries vigilantly and the white prospector caught in the reservation was summarily ejected. Through secret information secured from a reliable Indian (this at considerable expense) all arrangements are completed whereby this Indian will guide a mining engineer and a prospector on the opening day to the exact locality where rich mineral will be found. The mining engineer will make legal location by right of discovery and the prospector will do the initial work to open up the mine which may prove one of the richest in Nevada. This claim will be for sale. Here is your chance to buy desirable mining property at small cost direct from original locators. Bank references given. Address Mining Engineer, box 567, Goldfield, Nevada.

I WANT EVERY READER OF THE Duluth Herald to send me his name and address. I have something to say to you regarding a money-making proposition right here in Goldfield. I have not the time to outline my plan in a great big advertisement. All I want is just your name and address. When you write I will take it for granted that you want to make money. Then I will show you and convince you that you will do well in doing what I say. Goldfield will make a hundred millionaires this fall and winter. Write me if you want to join this class, and I will surely interest you. I am responsible, and refer you to any bank in Goldfield. William H. Wilson, P. O. Drawer 567, Goldfield, Nev.

Buyers seem to have "caught on" to the stupidity of the bovine market letters which appear daily in the local morning paper. Compare the predictions with the facts, as time develops them, and learn that bellowing brokers have designs upon your pocketbooks.

Buyers, make the market; use your own brains; keep your own counsel, and the results will be satisfactory.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Strong on Buying by Shorts and Bullish News.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—The wheat market today opened strong on a fair demand by shorts and commission houses. Nearly all the early news was of a bullish character. Cables were firm, Northwestern receipts were light and the weather was unfavorable for the movement of the new crop. December wheat opened ¼@⅜c to ⅜@½c higher at 73c to 73⅛c, sold at 73¼@73⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 551 cars against 794 cars last week and 884 cars one year ago.

The market became easier late in the day on profit sales. The high point for December was 73⅜c. The close was firm with December up ½c at 73⅛@73¼c.

The corn market was firm on a good demand by shorts and light offerings. Cables were reported firm, and the strength of wheat had considerable effect. December corn opened ⅛c to ⅜c higher at 43⅜c to 43⅝c and for a time held within those figures. Local receipts were 182 cars with 105 of contract grade.

Prices eased off in sympathy with the wheat market, December dropping to 43¼c. The close was steady with December up a shade at 43¼@43⅜c.

The oats market was firm in sympathy with wheat and corn. The volume of business, however, was small. December oats opened ⅛@¼c higher at 33½c and sold at 33½@33⅝c. Local receipts were 234 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and firm. A 5c advance in the price of live hogs being the chief bullish feature. January pork opened 5@7½c higher at $13.80. Lard was unchanged to 2½c higher at $8.37½ to $8.40.

Close: Wheat—December, 73⅛@73¼c; May, 77¾c. Corn—December, 43¼@43⅜c; May, 44c. Oats—December, 33½c; May, 34⅞c. Pork—January, $13.72½; May, $13.77½. Lard—October, $9.65; January, $8.37½. Ribs—October, $8.15; January, $7.45@7.47½. Rye—Cash, 63½@65½. Barley—Cash, 41@52c. Timothy—December, $4.15. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The best thing that can be said about wheat as the week closes is that both the professional trade and the public are taking more interest in it. It may be that the activity is little inclined to the bull side. It looks as if the foreign situation is going to join with the conditions on this side to bring about a more healthy trade in wheat, cash and futures. New York houses claim a good export business over night. The talk of closing more of the mills in the Northwest is offset by the fact that when this was tried last season, as a means of reducing the cash premiums, it did not work well, both the wheat and the prices got away from the millers and they started up very quickly and began buying again. All foreign markets were up. We feel that the situation is more hopeful for buyers who have the patience to get in on the breaks.

Corn—Shorts in December could not stand the pressure of bad weather, slow action on the part of the roads in moving corn to market, large local shipments for the week resulting in a further decrease of stocks, and a rather strong upturn in the Liverpool cables. Export clearances are much improved for the week. Reports of dry rot in corn in this and other states continue. Believe the market should react a little before being bought.

Oats—The trade again lagged behind the other pits, helped only a little by the strngegth in wheat and corn. Long oats come out every time the May price touches 35 cents and believe these offerings may have to be absorbed and a little break occur before the market will look inviting to buyers.

Dennis, Chicago: I maintain that this will be the smallest big crop of wheat ever raised in this country. The idea of a tremendous crop, too large to be used up, permeates the speculative, milling and export mind so thoroughly that few, if any, will make any money on the first 5-cent advance. The following from the Commercial West voicing the sentiment of a prominent miller shows the strong hold this idea has on the general trade and public: "There is only one thing that will put us right—a break in wheat. I am not necessarily a believer in cheap wheat, neither do I contend that the raw material would have to remain lower. I mean only that the big crop idea has taken rest in the minds of the trade and they simply will not buy the flour until they see prices where they think they ought to be. Where wheat ought to be I leave for someone else to figure out. I only know that most of the big buyers will stock up with flour on the present basis."

New York Grain.

New York, Oct. 27.—Close: Wheat—December, 81⅝c; May, 83⅝c. Corn—December, 53⅜c; May, 50½c.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, Oct. 27.—The flour market is quiet. High premiums for cash wheat and a bearish attitude towards current quotations by buyers has restricted the flour trade. The grinding capacity will be curtailed, the number of mills closing down being put at six. The car situation is bothering the millers also. Shipments, 71,269 barrels. First patents, $4.20@4.30; second patents, $4.05@4.15; first clears, $3.25@3.35; second clears, $2.40@2.60.

THE PRODUCE MARKET.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers:

Cananea Herald, Oct. 20: "Calumet & Sonora, backed by strong Minnesota interests, got under way with its sinking during the week and on Thursday, at the end of its first 6 feet on the contract from the 100-foot level, got ore. The bottom of the shaft is now in this and has excellent showing. The ore goes about 15 per cent copper, with gold values on the side. The management is encouraged to believe that the find will open up well. The shaft is to go to the 300-foot level before other work is done, unless it should be deemed advisable to start drifts, which will not be allowed to interfere with the sinking. The property adjoins Greene Consolidated on the north and Cananea Central on the east and northeast."

FIRMNESS IN STOCKS

With the Exception of a Temporary Flash of Weakness.

Bank Statement Not Good But Better Than Was Expected.

New York, Oct. 27.—There was very dull trading when business began at the stock exchange today. Gains were in the majority, Northern Pacific, Reading and Mexican Central rising about a point and Great Northern preferred and American Ice 3¼. Canadian Pacific declined ¾.

Stocks that had opened above yesterday's closing were not supported after the opening, the entire market selling off to below yesterday. The readiness of the room operators to take profit in Reading forced it down 1⅜ from the best. Union Pacific sold nearly a point below last night and the general list a moderate fraction. The market grew firmer toward 11 o'clock, but continued intensely dull. Canadian Pacific, National Biscuit and United States Rubber first preferred declined 1 to 1¼.

The market closed strong and moderately active. Prices advanced on the bank statement, which reported a heavy loan contraction instead of an increase as expected. The recovery reached about the level of the opening prices. St. Paul, Atlantic Coast Line and Sloss-Sheffield Steel rose 1 and National Railroad of Mexico preferred 1¼. Northwestern, Great Northern preferred and Delaware & Hudson sold a point under last night. There was some large buying of United States Steel toward the last, at an advance of a point, and Amalgamated Copper also was a point higher.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market opened fractionally higher and with exception of a temporary flash of weakness ruled firm throughout. The bank statement, although by no means a good one, was better than was expected. Some signs of weakness followed, but good support was given and the standard issues closed at about best prices of the day. The closing indicates a better market Monday, but we see nothing more than a scalping affair for the time being.

* * *

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened very quiet and steady. The traders were waiting for the bank statement and when it was published it was better than expected. Prices advanced and there was short covering. The market was limited and there was no rush to buy. We look for a dull market next week. We do not look for any decided movement until after election.

St. Paul Live Stock.

St. Paul, Oct. 27.—Cattle—Receipts, 1,125; steady; quotations unchanged. Hogs—Receipts, 2,400; steady; range, $5.80@6.20; bulk, $6.05@6.15. Sheep—Receipts, 9,500; steady, unchanged.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 27.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 4 to 7 points in response to better cables than looked for, but almost immediately weakened under aggressive selling and stop loss liquidation, caused by the additional margin calls sent out after the close yesterday. After the opening bulge prices broke to the low points of yesterday then rallied slightly as a result of covering.

Futures closed steady. Closing bids: October, 10.15; November, 10.20; December, 10.44; January, 10.32; February, 10.40; March, 10.50; April, 10.51; May, 10.58; June, 10.60; July, 10.68. Spot closed quiet, 10 points higher; middling uplands, 10.75; middling gulf, 11.00. Sales none.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, Oct. 27.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: Market is slack today. The weather has kept buyers from out the cities at home. There are more sellers than buyers on the market today. Buyers are waiting for it to freeze up so that logging operations can commence. There is a slight demand for good large mules.

Copper Gossip.

Gay & Sturgis: The bank statement, owing to large curtailment of loans, made a better showing than expected, and the tone of the market improved. The Boston market was firm with Calumet & Arizona the feature. The stock closed at $145 bid with last sale at $140¾. It probably foreshadows a $4 dividend. Earnings are equivalent to over $20, so a quarterly dividend of $4 does not seem unreasonable. Osceola must be earning $30 per share at present and the stock is selling 20 points lower. It seems likely to us the market will have a chill before election and that a substantial movement is not likely before then.

* * *

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The feature of our market was the sensational rise in Calumet and Arizona, which closed $145 bid, none offered. We understand very important developments have been made at the property and that the stock will look cheap at $150 next week. North Butte should be purchased around these prices also, as we understand that the recent developments are most favorable. There is some good news coming out soon on Copper Range. The whole market strengthened toward the close and we look for better prices next week.

* * *

Gay & Sturgis: Official Bisbee advices are that the drift on the 1,100-foot level of Calumet & Arizona's Oliver shaft is in 15 per cent ore. These values are on the Buckeye claim No. 2. An additional furnace is about to start on the ores from Calumet & Arizona and Superior & Pittsburg.

* * *

Gay & Sturgis: The Boston News Bureau says: The Ahmeek could utilize additional drill power to advantage and it is safe to state that its growing needs in this direction will receive early attention. With the facilities available not more than 1,150 tons of rock can be broken daily, which volume, less the discard, will henceforth represent the amount to be forwarded to the mill until another compressor has been provided.

Gay & Sturgis: The News Bureau this morning says: The grading for the four-mile railroad of the Arizona Commercial Copper company has been completed and the grading crew discharged. Steel rails are now being laid, and it is expected that the road will be completed by Dec. 1 at the latest. The company has already secured its equipment, having purchased ten cars from the Copper Range company. The company is continuing the development of both its Copper Hill and Black Hawk properties, and the management anticipates being in a position to make substantial shipments of ore when its railroad is completed. The striking of sulphides on the thirteenth level of the Old Dominion mine is a matter of considerable importance to the Arizona Commercial. The thirteenth level of the Old Dominion mine corresponds to a depth of 1,000 feet of the Gray mine of the United Globe, and 1,040 feet of the Arizona Commercial. The Gray mine sank a winze from the 1,000-foot level to the 1,100-foot level and found at that depth an excellent grade of sulphide ore. It is believed that this sulphide ore body extends through the entire camp, and that while the Arizona Commercial company has a 12-foot vein of sulphide ore on its 800-foot level, that at a greater depth it will likewise have big bodies of sulphides.

REMARKS.

With the exception of the phenomenal strength shown in the price of Calumet & Arizona stock, none of which is offered at a bid of $145.00 per share, after the close of the market today at $142.50 bid, the balance of the list closed about unchanged with a tendency to better prices during the coming week. Though there may be a temporary setback in prices of all securities in the event of Hearst's election, the better class of the unlisted copper stocks at the present prices will not be affected to any extent, there being no margins to worry over, and should be bought on any weak spots. Cut this out to compare with the prices at the close of this year.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS:

Vice President: To be elected.
Secretary: J. V. Shaw.
Treasurer: O. O. Kincaid, cashier of John S. Cook & Co. Bank, Rhyolite, Nev.
Additional Directors: Jack Adams, general superintendent of the Amalgamated Copper Company, Butte, Montana.
R. P. Kelley, mine owner and capitalist, Butte, Montana.
General Offices of the company: Butte, Montana; Rhyolite, Nevada.

Company's Estate.

The mining estate of the Butte and Greenwater Copper Company consists of ten full claims located in the very heart of the Greenwater District, Inyo county, California. The claims are Copper Bar Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4; Copper Eagles Nos 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6.

Adjoining Properties.

The Investor Group, owned by Nash and Wallace, adjoins the Copper Bar Nos. 1 and 2 on the west. The Water View Group, owned by Clark and Benson, adjoins the Copper Bar No. 3 and 4 on the east. The Good Luck and Investor Group adjoins the Copper Bar Nos. 1 and 3 on the north. The Iron Dyke Group, owned by Kunze, divide or lie between the Copper Bar Group and the Copper Eagle Group of the Butte and Greenwater corporation.

The property to the west of the Copper Eagle, is owned by Beadle and Drake. The property to the east of the Copper Eagle is owned by Clark and Benson. The War Eagle Group and the Anaconda Group are one claim length north of the Copper Bars.

The Gold Note Group, which recently changed hands for $250,000, lies one claim length west of the Copper Bars, while the Greenwater United Copper Co. lies two claims lengths west of the Copper Bar.

Surface Showing.

The Copper Bar Group is traversed by two strong iron capped ledges, with copper stained rock showing strong on the surface, cropping out strong through the iron capping. The strongest of these ledges is a continuation of the Death Valley and Greenwater and the Greenwater United Copper Co. ledge, which can be traced across the Gold Note and Investor Groups into the Butte and Greenwater property.

There is a strong ledge on the Copper Eagle, running across Eagle Nos. 4, 5 and 2. It is the opinion of our engineer that the ledge which runs north and south through the Copper Bars, across the Iron Dyke Group, and thence across the Copper Eagles, is the continuation of the Copper Helmet ledge which shows sensational values in copper.

Six assays taken from samples clear across these ledges which crop for a distance of 2,000 feet, run as follows in copper: 7-3 | 10 per cent; 9-4 | 10 per cent; 6-9 | 10 per cent; 12-7 | 10 per cent; 21-4 | 10 per cent and 4 per cent, or a general average of 10-3 | 10 per cent.

General Location.

The property is located one mile from the Death Valley and Greenwater in a south-easterly direction, and on the general strike of the Death Valley and Greenwater ledge, which can be walked on from the Death Valley property across the intervening properties, and then across the property of the Butte and Greenwater estate. The property is a half mile southeast of the Greenwater United.

General Information About the Greenwater District.

The first work done in the district was on the property of the Furnace Creek Copper Co. where a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 320 feet. This comptny had strong surface indications to start with, assays running as high as 30 per cent in copper. Stock was put on the market originally at 25 cents a share, and is selling today in the neighborhood of $5.00, and has sold as high as $8.00. The Death Valley and Greenwater stock was out on the market the 15th of August, at $1 per share, and is selling around $3.50 per share. This company is capitalized at three million shares par value $1. The entire property is selling today on the basis of ten and a half millions. Since the present owners obtained control of the Death Valley and Greenwater, they have been working 60 men on the surface and sinking four shafts, where the four gasoline hoists, which are now en route, will be installed.

Shipping Facilities.

The Tonopah and Tidewater, generally known as the "Borax Smith" extension of the Santa Fe, has surveyed a line directly into the Greenwater camp; and the Clark road has also surveyed a line from Johnnie Siding. Both these lines will be in operation by the first of the year. The Tonopah and Tidewater is now within 30 miles of the camp.

Management.

The management of the Butte and Greenwater Copper Company is in the hands of the most experienced copper operators in the world, without exception. Wallace Corbett, president and general manager of this company, is known throughout the United States, as one of the most successful operators in copper mining. He has been connected with the Boston and Montana Company for fifteen years. To find out his record, telegraph any bank in Silver Bow County, Montana.

O. O. Kincaid, treasurer of the company, is one of the best known bankers in Nevada, besides having had years of practical experience in mining.

Jack Adams, who is largely interested in the company and is one of the directors, has been general superintendent of the Amalgamated Copper Company interests in Butte since the formation of that company.

R. P. Kelley, another director, has made an enormous fortune in copper mining in Montana within the past ten years.

These men are among the largest stockholders in the Butte and Greenwater Copper Company. Mr. Corbett will have personal charge of the development of the company's estate. We make the statement without fear of contradiction, that no company has been launched where there is a greater array of copper mining talent, than can be found in the Butte and Greenwater Company.

Capitalization.

The physical conditions of the Greenwater District are of such a nature that the enormous amounts of money that has been found necessary to be expended in ordinary copper mining operations in order to get sufficient development to put the rank and file of companies on a paying basis does not hold true in the Greenwater district.

The contour of the country is such, that the property can be opened by a system of tunnels. A tunnel driven on the ledge for 500 feet, will give not less than 350 feet of stoping ground. The modest capitalization, 1,500,000 shares with 40 per cent of the stock in the treasury, will give ample funds for the proper development of this company, and we unhesitatingly recommend this stock as a most desirable investment.

Development.

Development work is already started on this property and will be carried on continuously. The company is sinking a shaft on the Copper Bars and driving a tunnel on the Copper Eagles.

Prospective Profits.

We believe that Butte and Greenwater stock will repeat the history of the Furnace Creek Copper, Greenwater and Death Valley and United Greenwater in showing handsome profits above subscription price. Reservation should be made by telegraph at our expense.

* * *

The final accounting of the receipts and expenditures from the Labor day celebration was read by the Labor day committee last evening at the meeting of the Duluth Trades and Labor assembly, and a division of the proceeds was decided upon.

Although there are still a few outstanding bills which are yet to be collected, the Labor day committee reckons that there is a little over $300 as profits from the celebration. The total receipts amount to about $931, and the expenditures about $693. The committee wished to have the money divided between the two central labor organizations, the trades assembly and the structural alliance, so that it might be discharged from further duty.

On of the members of the assembly wanted to know how this money was going to be divided, and Ernest Peters, secretary of the Labor day committee, stated that at a meeting of the committee, that body had voted to divide the profits equally between the two central organizations. At that meeting, however, only four of the trades assembly delegates had been present, while there were five from the structural alliance. Delegate Pereault argued that the committee had no power to decide how the money should be divided, and said that it was up to the trades assembly to make the division.

The delegates of the assembly who are also delegates to the structural alliance wanted the money to be equally divided, but President Shartell stated that they should have had an understanding to that effect before the celebration took place, and said that the old rule of giving the trades assembly two-thirds and the structural alliance the remainder should not be changed at this time.

Hoping to stop the discussion and settle the affair amicably for both sides, Delegate Baker moved that the money be turned over to the pavilion committee to be used in completing the pavilion at Fairmount park. Delegates Eastman and Pereault each argued that the trades assembly had no right to give away money belonging to the structural alliance, and so the motion of Mr. Baker was ruled out.

When a final vote was taken the original motion to divide the profits in the usual maner was carried by a vote of 20 to 5. Two-thirds of the $300 will go into the treasury of the trades assembly and the other third into that of the structural alliance.

* * *

The matter of the bogus labels, which it is claimed were used on clothing, sold by some of the clothing firms in Duluth was brought up at the meeting. Several weeks ago a delegate of the assembly said he knew of a printer, who had started to purchase some wearing apparel at a prominent store, which did not carry the union label, and when he refused it on that account, the clerk offered to sew one on. The proprietors have since denied this and as the member who claimed to have had the experience is out of the city, it could not be proved. The assembly has never taken any action in the matter and the store has not been boycotted, nor put upon the unfair list.

* * *

The assembly directed Secretary Pereault to send communications to the unions representing the iron moulders, machinists and licensed tugmen stating the conditions in regard to the strike of the dock and ship carpenters at the Napoleon Grignon shipyards in the hope that those unions might be able to assist the strikers.

* * *

Delegate Pereault asked that a committee be appointed to interview the city officials in regard to having the sign and bill board ordinance enforced. City Building Inspector S. J. Kelley stated the facts in regard to this law, and informed the members that the city attorney should be interviewed in order to secure its enforcement. A committee composed of Messrs. Shartel, Pereault and Hegg was appointed by Vice President McDonald.

* * *

The assembly voted the sum of $50 for the use of President Shartel for his trip to Minneapolis next month, when he will represent Duluth union labor at the annual meeting of the American Federation of Labor to be held there, Nov. 12.

* * *

A communication from the secretary of the typographical union, asking that certain printers of the city be placed upon the unfair list, was read and a committee appointed to consider the matter. The following printers were on the list: O. F. Collier, Christie Lithograph & Printing company, J. J. Le Tourneau & Co., Thwing-Stewart company, Keystone Press, Northland Printing company and the Barker & Orr. President Shartel named Delegates Perry, McDonald and Freemont as the committee.

* * *

The horseshoers' union entered a plea for help through a communication, stating that they were unable to get certain of the horseshoers in the employ of the city into the union and asking that a committee be appointed to assist them. Messrs. Hegg, Baker and Taylor were appointed.

* * *

Martin Holmen, reading clerk of the assembly, was unable to be present at the meeting and President Shartel appointed Walter Eastman as acting reading clerk for the evening.

* * *

J. S. Abbott, 2925 Minnesota avenue, was obligated last evening as the delegate to represent the local union of stationary engineers.

* * *

President Shartel informed the members that John T. Dow, the Democratic candidate for the senate in the Fiftieth district had signed the platform of the Minnesota Federation of Labor.

* * *

Henry Pereault, who has been employed as a cigarmaker at the Tom Reed factory on Michigan street, has taken the position of traveling salesman for the same firm. For the present he will be engaged principally in the city.

ATTEMPTS TO HANG HIMSELF

Peter Grigo, Insane Patient, Gets Strap Around His Neck.

A suicidal mania seems to have struck the insane patients that are being held in custody by Sheriff Bates, awaiting their disposition by the court and the state board of control. P. Grigo, who was found insane Thursday, attempted to hang himself with a strap from the cot in his cell, yesterday afternoon, but was prevented from doing so by two cellmates. His hands have been bound, and he is now under constant guard.

A few days ago Andrew Neimi, while being returned to his cell from the probate court room, seized a razor from a prisoner, who was in the act of shaving, and cut his throat from ear to ear before the attendants had time to interfere. Neimi was removed to the hospital, and his chances are good for recovery from both his wound and his mental malady.

POLICE ORDER IS SWEEPING

New York Commissioner Ends "Plain Clothes" Favoritism.

New York, Oct. 27.—A police order almost if not quite as sweeping as that of Wednesday, which directed the transfer of every captain in the greater city with one exception, was issued by Police Commissioner Bingham yesterday. Under this every "plain clothes" man in the city will don a uniform at 6 o'clock tonight and in future the power of captains to assign any man to "plain clothes duty" will be limited. The order threatens to do away with plain clothes men, otherwise known as "ward men," except as made through inspectors. Many retirements from the force are looked for on account of the order.

UNITARIANS EXTEND CALL.

Invite Dr. Kerby S. Miller to Become Pastor of the Church.

Dr. Kerby S. Miller of Polo, Ill., has been extended a call to become pastor of the First Unitarian church of Duluth, by the members of the congregation. Dr. Miller is now at his home in Polo and will receive formal notification of his election to the Duluth pastorate, at once.

There is little question but that he will accept, as he has preached here several times and was not only well liked, but liked this city and its people.

H. J. Atwood, Arthur H. Kreiger and H. J. Grannis were elected directors by the members of the church, at the annual meeting last evening. Mr. Grannis was re-elected.

Rev. Harry White, the former pastor, has accepted a call at Natick, Mass.

President Orders Exclusion Inquiry by Secretary Metcalf.

Mikado's Government May Exact Some Form of Redress.

Washington, Oct. 27.—President Roosevelt has directed Victor H. Metcalf, secretary of the department of commerce and labor, to go to San Francisco and make a complete inquiry into the situation affecting the exclusion of Japanese children from the schools provided for white children.

The determination to send Secretary Metcalf to San Francisco was one of the results of the request made by Viscount Aoki, the Japanese ambassador, who, at a conference with Secretary Root, asked that the Japanese subjects in California be accorded their full rights, under the treaty of 1894, including that of the children to attend the public schools of San Francisco. The dispatch of a cabinet officer on such a mission, it was argued, would demonstrate to the Japanese the evident sincerity of this government, and its desire to show that every effort is being made to get at the facts.

It is hardly likely that any report from Mr. Metcalf will be available before the president leaves on his Panama trip, although he may send some of his information by telegraph soon after he arrives at San Francisco. It is hoped that the expressed desire of the administration to secure the treaty rights of the Japanese will tend to allay the anti-American feeling in Japan until the whole matter is diplomatically adjusted.

Secretary Metcalf will, if he finds it necessary, communicate with Governor Pardee, the mayor of San Francisco, and the authorities of the school board, and also will consult with the Japanese consular officers in San Francisco.

Japanese restaurant keepers have suffered indignities in San Francisco as well as Japanese school children, according to reports received by the Japanese ambassador, from Japanese consular officers in that city. At least seven or eight reports have been made concerning a boycott in which agents have been posted to prevent patrons from entering the restaurants, and stones have been thrown and windows broken. The ambassador said that all trouble had been confined to San Francisco.

London, Oct. 27.—In a dispatch from Tokio, the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph protests against the sensational misrepresentations of the actual state of Japanese feeling regarding the shutting out of Japanese children from the schools of San Francisco. He says it is true that the Japanese are intensely pained, but that they are sensible enough to realize that California is not the United States, and that the episode is isolated and distinctly local. The Jiji Shimpo, even goes so far as to contend that the Japanese in San Francisco are themselves partly to blame on the ground that they do not assimilate American ways and customs. As the civil authorities are involved, Japan will ask for some form of redress, but the matter is not regarded as of international importance.

DEAF MAN KILLED.

Frank Lord Meets Death on the Iron Range Track.

Two Harbors, Minn., Oct. 27.—An ore train in charge of Conductor E. W. Glass struck and instantly killed Frank Lord, 56 years old, yesterday morning. The man was employed by Ab Smith, watching his camp at Mile Post 45, and was walking north on the northbound track. He paid no attention to the locomotive whistle, nor to the warnings of men standing near, and it was afterwards learned from Mr. Smith that the man was deaf.

The body was brought here on the order of Dr. John Pearson, coroner of Lake county, and is in an undertaking establishment awaiting disposition. Nothing has been learned of any relatives, and it is probable that Lord will be buried at the expense of the county.

AFTER BANK WRECKERS.

Three Men and Woman Arrested for Washington Collapse.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Warrants for the arrest in connection with the failure of the Aetna Banking & Trust company, a branch of a Butte, Mont., institution, closed a few days ago by the comptroller of the currency, of E. M. McCormick, promoter; Raymond S. Donaldson, real estate dealer; Miss Barbara E. T. Kritschmann and John T. Hoag, assistant cashier, were issued yesterday. McCormick, Donaldson and Miss Kritschmann were directors of the Illinois Securities company, and Hoag made an affidavit that this concern had a deposit in the bank.

WINS EIGHT-HOUR TEST.

Federal Government Gets Verdict in First of New Suits.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 27.—The first test of the federal eight-hour day law ended in a victory for the government here yesterday. After being out only fifteen minutes, the jury in the United States court found the Sheridan-Kirk Contracting company guilty of violating the law in the construction of the Ohio river dam at Fernbank. Managers of employment agencies testified that it was impossible to get men for the pay that would be given them for an eight-hour day.

LIVELY ON WESTERN MESABA

The operations of the Steel corporation near the towns of Bovey and Coleraine, on the Western Mesaba, are making good headway. Half a dozen big steam shovels are digging into the earth, engaged in removing the overburden from the ore deposits; shafts are sinking, mine and other buildings are going up, machinery is being installed. In fact, the intentions of the company for this part of the Mesaba are very elaborate and comprehensive and already the foundations for probably the most important mining operation now under consideration anywhere are well advanced. Plans for washing the ore—a process which is necessary because of the large percentage of sand associated with the mineral—have been perfected, and there is in coure of erection a large temporary washing plant on the west side of Trout lake. The proposed system, when permanently installed, includes mining, hoisting and separating in one operation and is simple in the extreme. No ore will be shipped this season, either from the Holman or Canisteo mines, contrary to expectations, but next year, along in the latter part of summer, the properties will be prepared for substantial outputs. Stripping operations will continue without cessation, as long as the weather will permit. Considerable of the material in which the machines have operated lately has been a sticky blue clay, not the best ground to handle, yet as much as 275 cars, or over 1,600 cubic yards, have been removed by one shovel in a single day.

During the career of the Steel corporation there has not been a year in which it has not bought more ore in the ground than it has taken out. Notable purchases it has made have been the Chemung and Canisteo leases, on the Mesaba, which added more than 150,000,000 tons to its reserve; the Union Steel company's mines; the Clairton mines, including the big Champion, on the Marquette range, and several others, as well as many single leases, fees and small groups. Those have replaced, several times over, the 90,000,000 tons that have been mined by the corporation during its existence and lately the purchases of the Hill lands have added several hundred million tons more. The value of iron ore is increasing steadily in the Lake Superior region. The demand for the product is increasing at a greater rate than new deposits are being shown up for reserves, and even the Mesaba district, which ten years ago was described as having ore in inexhaustible quantities, is known to have its limits.

There is a noticeable tendency on the part of consuming interests in control of mines to conserve ore holdings, particularly so in the case of the Bessemer product. It is realized, with the big corporation in control of the great bulk of the known ore bodies and steadily reaching out for more, that the possibility of obtaining future supplies is gradually contracting, and hence it behooves the indepedents, those with properties, the output of which they formerly shared with less fortunately situated consumers, to retain their own ore for future needs. Thus a new value is being placed on ore of the better grade, and less of the product is being let go than in former years. The Biwabik Ore company, owner of the big Biwabik mine, on the Mesaba, and in which the Steel corporation has a minority interest, furnishes an example of the case in point. The Biwabik produces a good ore of Bessemer grade. It is developed to such an extent that it could ship two million tons in a season, and this is one of the years when heavy sales could have been made, but the company is not letting go of anything like the amount it could sell and ship. The Biwabik last year produced upwards of a million tons, and this season will send out only about three-quarters of that, the most of this going to the Youngstown Steel company and the Briar Hill Iron company, which control the mine, and much of the remainder to the Steel corporation. There is pending, it is reported in mining circles, a deal for the lease to the New York State Steel company of an important proved deposit of the Tesora Mining company, which controls a number of tracts on the Mesaba and in which the Yawkey estate of Detroit is interested with Mayor Fay of Virginia. The New York State Steel company is a concern which is putting in Talbot open hearth furnaces at Buffalo, and expects to build blast furnaces. Early in the season it took a lease to a forty-acre tract in section 10-58-18, near the Wacouta and Iron Mountain mines, its first entry on the Mesaba, and probably any other range.

Should the Steel corporation's big Mountain Iron mine forward the expected output of 3,000,000 tons this year, it will have shipped 12,681,568 tons in eight seasons, from 1899 to 1906 inclusive. It was the first shipper on the Mesaba

BUTTE MINES IN GOOD SHAPE

North Butte Sinking Its Shaft and Output of Ore Will Be Increased by First of the Month—Good Headway Making in Shaft on Belinda.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 27.—All of the large copper mines of the Butte district are in good shape now, with the exception of the Rarus, the lower levels of which are so warm that it is impossible for the men working there to do a day's work within the limits of the eight-hour day. This condition will be remedied soon, however, for air shafts are going down with a view of airing the openings. One of these shafts is now 700 feet deep and is going at a rapid rate, for the desire of the Red Metal company is to connect the Rarus openings with it as soon as possible. Ben B. Thayer is now inspecting all of the mines on the hill. He went through the Rarus on Wednesday and emerged with the conviction that the temperature below would stand cooling.

Mr. Thayer will not only inspect all of the large copper producers in the Butte district, but will likely visit all of the outside properties of the Amalgamated company. He came here in his private car Washoe and will use it in his outside trips. He will remain in Montana until about the middle of next month.

The Never Sweat mine is out of commission for ten days or two weeks, the Anaconda company having decided to reset the hoisting engine because of a settling of the ground upon which the foundation rests. Men are working night and day on the job and will finish it as soon as possible, after which the mine will again give up its customary quantity of copper ore.

As to the production of copper in the United States in general and Butte in particular this year, Mr. Thayer says: "In my opinion the output of copper in this country this year will not exceed 2 per cent over that of last year, and I doubt whether it will reach 2 per cent. Arizona will yield more than it did last year, but there will be a falling off in the lake country and the output in Butte will not be much greater than it was in 1905. This is easily explained. In the first place, none of the companies organized recently are producing—the same mines that were producing last year are producing this year, no additions of consequence having been made to the producing class. Last year all of the large mines were operated to capacity, and a similar condition prevails this year, with the exception of a few small producers, the ore of which was not available last year. Some of the big mines were closed for repairs during certain periods last year, and some have been closed for periods this year.

"Next year, however, there will be an increase in the copper production of the Butte district, for in all likelihood some of the new companies will be mining more or less ore and the larger companies will be in better shape for greater production than they are at present. It will be at least a year and a half before the Boston & Montana company finishes the work calculated to increase the production in that branch of the system.

"As to the copper market, it is in splendid shape, and the price at which the metal is quoted shows conclusively that consumption is greater than production."

* * *

The North Butte company, which is one of the prolific producers in the district, is sinking its main shaft from the 1,600-foot level to the 1,800 and is now several feet below the 1,600 level. It has three veins opened on the 1,600 and will open the same veins on the 1,800, thus making a 200-foot lift. These veins are the Speculator, which is from 10 to 15 feet wide; the Jessie vein, from 15 to 30 feet wide, and the Edith Mary and Miners' Union, from 15 to 30 feet wide, and all first-class ore on the 1,600. They have been opened a distance of more than 2,500 feet on the 1,600. With these veins opened on the 1,800 the company will have millions of tons of ore in sight, enough to last it twenty years or longer. By the first of the month the output of ore will be increased, the company believing that by that date the skip pockets on the lower level will have been finished. The output at present is a little more than 1,000 tons a day, and the increase will bring it up to about 1,300 tons.

According to the railroad shipping tabs, the copper output of the Butte district so far this year has been exaggerated in eastern publications. As an instance, reports were printed in Boston, New York, Chicago and in other cities to the effect that Butte would produce about 400,000,000 pounds of copper this year. In those reports the output for certain months for the different companies was given in figures. The output of the Original company alone for August was placed at 2,206,425 pounds, and for September it was placed at more than 2,000,000. Railroad sheets show that during August the company shipped 1,342,600 pounds and for September it shipped 1,161,484 pounds, which is 363,825 pounds less for August than Eastern reports show and nearly 900,000 pounds less than is shown in the report for September, a difference of nearly 10,000,000 pounds a year. The greatest production of the Original during any month does not exceed 1,800,000 pounds.

Eastern publications credit some of the smaller companies with enormous production as compared with the real production. Anaconda, Boston & Montana, North Butte, Coalition or Red Metal, Butte & Boston, Parrot and Washoe are large producers of copper, and La France and the Pittsburg company are fair producers, but outside of these there is practically little copper turned out in Butte. East Butte and East Butte Extension are running a neck-and-neck race in the line of production. Both Farrel and Alliance will be in the producing class before the expiration of the year, ore of good grade having been struck in their ground. It may be that Reins will turn out some copper before long, but its present output will not glut the market.

THE BONANZA CIRCLE MINES

Bisbee, Ariz., Oct. 27.—The recent strike in the Superior & Pittsburg still continues to grow. Connection has been made between the Hoatson and Junction shafts, on the 1,000-foot level, which will relieve the Hoatson of its water, and also help materially to improve the air in the lower levels. The new Nordberg hoist at the Cole shaft has been completed. The usual shipments of ore are being sent to the smelter at Douglas from the Calumet & Arizona and the Superior & Pittsburg.

The discovery of new ore bodies in the Superior & Pittsburg ground is of great importance to several surrounding properties. From the pitch and dip of all three bodies, and their general character, it is very apparent now that they belong to the same ore zone from which the Calumet & Arizona, Copper Queen, Shattuck and Lowell mines have taken the greater part of their most valuable ore.

At the Shattuck this ore body was encountered at a depth of about 700 feet, and in the Meg shaft of the Calumet & Arizona at 900 feet. At the Oliver it was in evidence at 100 feet, at 1,100 feet in the Lowell, and at about the same level in the strike now made by the Calumet & Pittsburg.

The Shattuck being situated on the highest point on the mountain in this string of mines, it can be easily seen that the ore is following along a general strata, which dips in a regular manner down into the basin to the north of the Mule mountains.

At the angle the ore body is taking it would lead to the opinion that the Junction shaft would have to be sunk at least 200 feet deeper to catch it in this ground, and it is almost a foregone conclusion that the Warren shaft will also reach it at about the same depth as the Junction.

The three discoveries made in the Hoatson drift show that the ore goes directly into the Warren ground and that the shaft in that property can hardly escape catching it.

The strike may be considered the most important made during the year, as they definitely settle the question which way the ore dips from the mountains, and at about what depth it may be expected to encounter it on the flat from Lowell to a point below Bakerville.

The Warren shaft still continues to be sunk without the use of machinery, and will continue doing so until the pipe line is completed from the Saginaw-American shaft, when it will start the hoist, now all ready to go into commission, and begin sinking with machine drills. An eight-inch main will bring water on to the Warren ground, and it will be used both for the mine and the townsite.

At the Shattuck-Arizona, the burned buildings are being reconstructed, and the new big hoist is being installed. Shipments continue about as usual.

The Denn-Arizona is engaged in setting its new Prescott pumps, and will soon have them in working order.

There has been little change at the Cochise this week, although the shaft is bottomed in mineralized ground. The second call of $2.50 per share is due Nov. 1 on this stock.

During the week rumors have been received here that certain factions among the stockholders of the Modern mine have entered into a battle for control, and that no matter who comes out ahead, the property will probably be put into operation again.

THE LATEST SULLIVAN LUCK

Maneuvers Which Attended Struggle for the Hailstone Group of Claims in the Fairview Mining District of Nevada.

Goldfield, Nev., Oct. 27.—For ways that are dark, and for tricks that are vain, the mining investor has left Bret Harte's "Heathen Chince" trailing in the rearward dust. Time was, perhaps, when the business of buying and selling mines was as free from guile as the buying and selling of sassafras. That time having passed, mine bartering absorbed some of the attributes of the horse trade. And now matters have reached such a pass that when a mine worth buying is to be bought, the buyer who wishes to put on his competitors what Billy Baxter used to call the "triple kejinks," has to be shrewder than the serpent, sharper than a weasel, oilier than an ambassador, and able to shatter time and space in a 40,000-horse power motor car. In proof of which, witness the manouvers which attended the struggle for the Hailstone group of claims, in the Fairview mining district, in this locality.

In the center of the valuable mining properties that are making of Fairview a bigger game than Tonopah was at the same age, there lie three groups of claims, known, respectively, as the Fairview Eagle, the Fairview Eagle's Nest and the Hailstone. The big chief of the first of these is George Wingfield, Goldfield's original millionaire. He is an industrious and persevering person, and has burrowed for gold in the Eagle like a ferret after rats. Among his other burrowings was a shaft, about thirty feet from the sidelines of the Eagle's Nest. Not very far down he struck something that made him glad. He tunneled after it, got gladder and gladder, and then, just as the pursued vein of $500-to-the-ton ore widened out to eight feet, made the painful discovery that he was no longer mining in the Eagle, but in the Eagle's Nest. Bringing down the roof of his tunnel with a dynamite cartridge, Wingfield sat down to ponder.

He knew he couldn't buy the Eagle's Nest, because that property is already being mined by the Eagle's Nest Fairview Mining company. Yet he didn't like to think of that big vein, and the argosy it carried, and think of himself, in the same thought, left out of the potential rewards. So he decided upon a middle course. He went to the Sullivan Trust company, the owners of the controlling interest, said that if they would sell him 100,000 shares of Eagle's Nest—and he couldn't have bought a share from anybody else—he would tell them a good place to dig. And this deal promptly went through.

Five minutes after Wingfield had left the Sullivan office the Sullivan automobile was scooting toward Fairview, with "Wild Bill" DeJarlais to drive it, and with Jack Campbell, the Sullivan mine manager, as a lone passenger. Campbell did not even have time to annex a razor, a toothbrush or an alternate sock, for what meant at least a four-days' trip, but neither is he a Beau Brummel at inopportune crises. Mine managing and manicuring are frequently at loggerheads.

When Campbell reached the Eagle's Nest and took a good, long look at the vein stumbled upon by Wingfield, he discovered something that Wingfield had not suspected; namely, that while the vein in question entered the Eagle's Nest with a trend to the north, it almost immediately switched off to the northwest, and that after a catacornered crossing of the Eagle's Nest for about 400 feet, it cut across the Hailstone for 500 feet, traversing the Eagle's Nest again, further on.

Then the telegraph wires began to work, and the gentlemen who guide the destinies of the L. M. Sullivan Trust company got together in their most private office, and sat up, and took notice. Campbell received instructions to corral the owner of the Hailstone, J. W. Langley, the Tonopah broker, and either get an option on the Hailstone, or never come back. Having a family in Goldfield, and being accustomed to play aces, Campbell got both broker and option into his automobile and started home.

Meanwhile, however, Wingfield, not being wrapped in dreams, got wind of the Hailstone strike, and set out in quest of Langley himself. But Langley, being under the wing of Campbell in the Sullivan automobile, was inaccessible. Then the Sullivan car suffered a temporary breakdown at Diamondfield. Wingfield heard of Niagara Company Has Leased the Portland Tract on Marquette Range—Cleveland-Cliffs Company's New Maas Mine Nearing the Producing Stage—A Crystal Falls Find.

THE MICHIGAN IRON RANGES

Ironwood, Mich., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Niagara Mining company of Rogers, Brown & Co., is not only to resume operations at its Ohio property, located at the western edge of the Marquette range in Baraga county, but it has leased the Portland tract, in the same field, from the Maas estate of Negaunee, and will shortly proceed with its development. The Portland lies betwen the Ohio and Webster mine, a property of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, and now idle. The Ohio produces an ochrous limonite ore—high in phosphorus and low in iron, the latter averaging probably a trifle above fifty units—a product for which there was no demand when the mine was closed down upwards of two years ago, but which can now be disposed of to advantage. The property is equipped with an adequate plant of machinery, in a good state of repair. A force of about sixty men will be employed throughout the winter, many of whom will be transferred from the Munro mine, a summer proposition on the Menominee, and in order that a respectable output may be achieved next season operations in the way of development will be pushed as much as possible. The Niagara company, likewise controls the old Norwood mine, lying directly northeast of the Beaufort, which in turn adjoins the Ohio, and it is likely that some ore will also be taken from this property next season. Bot hthe Ohio and Norwood carry extensions of the Beaufort vein. The Beaufort mine was formerly in the hands of the Niagara people, but the lease to it was permitted to lapse some months ago. This property is opened by two shafts, the deeper down 300 feet, and it has an excellent plant of machinery. It would be no surprise to see this mine also on the active list in the year soon to open.

The Portland has been leased for a term of years at a royalty of 20 cents, in addition to a substantial bonus. The property will make a good-sized mine, and can be operated either as an open pit or an underground proposition. It was explored two years by the Rogers-Brown interests, at which time a deposit of ore extending across the two forties, 200 feet in width on the eastern end and about eighty feet in width at the western end, was proved up. The ore outcrops in many places and in none of the numerous test pits sunk was the overburden found to be more than twenty feet. The depth of the deposit is still to be determined, but if on a par with that at adjoining properties, it is estimated there are not less than four or five million tons of ore, all of it averaging better than 50 per cent in metallic iron. The tract has never been tested with a drill, but there is reason to believe the ore will be found to extend down at least 300 feet. Some work will be done on the tract this fall and winter, largely in the way of preparation unless the management concludes to sink a shaft. Much ore can be mined in open cut during the summer seasons, and it is likely that one or more pits will open. In any event, the Niagara company has entered the field to remain as long as there is a demand for the grade of ore mined there. It is reported in the connection that the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company will do some work in the district next season. The company owns the Imperial mine, in addition to the Webster, both of which were operated for a few seasons some five or six years ago. There is a very extensive deposit of ore at these properties, but unfortunately it is of the same low grade as that at the Beaufort group, a short distance west. A fact not generaly known is that it was in this field that Thomas A. Edison's first experiments along the line of concentrating lean ores were made some sixteen years ago.

It is in this Spurr mountain region that the Steel corporation will conduct extensive logging operations this fall and winter. A force of 100 men will be employed if that number can be procured. Temporary headquarters, to be opened as soon as a road can be built, will be two miles distant from that location. This latter camp will be one of the finest ever erected in the peninsula, and men engaging with the company are assured as good wages as are paid anywhere for similar work, while the general conditions will be ideal. The tract contains timber of various kinds, including cedar, spruce, pine and maple, and all of it will be cut. The com-

IS ENTHUSED OVER SHOWING

Calumet, Mich., Oct. 27.—Capt. Thomas Hoatson returned this week from Keweenaw county, and brought back with him a glowing description of the showing made in the workings of the Keweenaw Copper company's property. He went to the bottom of the shaft on the Medora vein and from there picked up some rock, which he displayed to friends in Calumet, and all agree that it is by far the best showing ever seen from an amygdoloid vein in this district.

The samples which Capt. Hoatson showed were heavily shot with copper, and coming from the bottom of the shaft show best the condition of the workings. The past fifteen feet have gone into rock of equal richness, and every indication points to this proving a most valuable opening on the Medora property. The shaft is now bottomed at 120 feet.

The compressor, hoist and other machinery is all in place, and this week saw the miners using air drills for the first time. Three drills are being used in sinking. The compressor has a capacity for from twelve to fifteen drills, and it is expected that as soon as the 200-foot depth is reached a station will be cut and drifts east and west started. With this work done it is expected that a considerably larger force will be employed at the Medora shaft.

The skip is now hoisting rock, and it is being accumulated at the stock pile to be stamped at some later date. A two and one-half ton skip is to be operated in the shaft. The machinery installed is all of a permanent character and will be possible to operate the shaft until a considerable depth is reached.

Diamond drilling operations are being carried on at the Empire tract, and Capt. Hoatson expects to receive word from there in a few days announcing the striking of the Medora vein there. Such being the case it will give the Keweenaw property almost three miles of territory carrying this vein. Should it prove anywhere near as rich in other parts as it is in the shaft now sinking, Keweenaw has a bright future before it.

It is planned that in the event of the Medora lode being encountered at the Emipre a shaft will be sunk soon and active mining operations started at that point. At these two points the Keweenaw company is concentrating its efforts, and hopes to make even a better showing than was done by the Copper Range properties.

The Hancock Consolidated is making good progress in unwatering its workings. The water, in fact, is going down more rapidly than was hoped for, as no interruptions have been met. Four pumps are in service, and a heavy stream is thrown out night and day. There now seems to be no doubt that the shaft will be clear of water some time before the end of October. It is bottomed only thirty feet below the tenth level, and only about one more lift remains to be pumped. The Hancock Consolidated has reached a fairly accurate idea as to the location of its proposed vertical shaft, from an engineering viewpoint, because of a little uncertainty remaining the management is not yet ready to state where the spot is. When this shaft gets under way and the old shaft now being unwatered is shipping its rock to the stamp mill—two events that are not far in the distance—this property will be in the center of a great deal of attention.

NEW ORE-BEARING CHANNELS

In the Cactus Property of the Newhouse Company in Beaver County, Utah—Ground Adjoining the Centennial-Eureka at Tintic, Acquired by Newhouse and Heinze.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 27.—The most recent sensation in local mining circles was the release by Samuel Newhouse of particulars concerning the opening of new ore bearing channels in the Newhouse Mines and Smelters Corporation's Cactus property in Beaver county. Since his relation of conditions not less than $1,500,000 of Salt Lake money has been invested in the shares of the company, which have doubled in price. For the past six months new territory to the south of the older workings of the mine has been opened up from the fourth, fifth and sixth levels of the old mine, while a diamond drill hole, put down on the sixth or opening tunnel level, has gone through 259 feet of the same kind of ore that has been opened above. The new ore body has been crosscut for 225 feet without disclosing the opposite wall and has been run through on its strike for nearly 250 feet.

Every drift in the new ore channel is still in fine ore, ore that Mr. Newhouse admits is 100 per cent better than the average of the older mine, while the workings on the tunnel level are disclosing such high values in gold and silver in addition to the copper that it has become necessary to change the equipment of the assay office to meet the changed conditions. Engineers who have in the mine recently declare that no other property in the state can show such immense bodies of high grade ore. This is the first time that Salt Lake ever became excited over the development of a copper mine.

In addition to what has been accomplished in the south ground of the Cactus a tremendous body of ore is being mined to the west of the older portion of the mine, around what is known as the Frenchman shaft. Here mammoth steam shovels are employed in the "glory hole" system of mining. The ore body is 700 feet long and 175 feet wide and is known to extend down to the 600-foot or tunnel level, through which the ore passes out to the milling works. It costs less than 20 cents a ton to mine and transport this ore to the mill and an average of 800 tons a day is being handled.

Six Utah companies have declared dividends in the past week. The Beck tunnel's contributions amounting to $30,000, or 3 cents a share; Carisa has posted the usual $5,000, or 1 cent a share; Grand Central, $15,000, or 6 cents; Victoria, $10,000, or 4 cents, and the Utah Mine company $5,000 or 5 cents.

It comes from an absolutely reliable source that Samuel Newhouse and F. A. Heinze are the men who are acquiring a great deal of ground adjoining the Centennial-Eureka property of Tintic on the south. A large operating shaft has been started already and the expectation is that one of the biggest corporations in the state will be launched upon the new properties in the not distant future. Much of the ground being taken in is already productive, and the prospective value of all of it is simply immense.

Twenty miles in the Tintic district marketed 134 carloads of ore last week. Owing to the fact that the railroad companies have not been able to deliver coal, some of the mines in that camp were compelled to close down for a portion of the week, otherwise the output would have been heavier than it was.

Ground has been broken for the new mill at the mouth of Markham gulch in Bingham, which is to handle the ores of the Red Wing and the Utah Apex mines. The Red Wing is the property controlled by the Utah Development company. The capacity of the mill will be at first 200 tons. In the Red Wing mine alone it is claimed that they have more than enough ore to keep the mill running for a year. They have a great deal of milling ore blocked out in the Apex.

The manager of the Little Eddie, a copper property near the Copper Glance and the Puritan, the latter of which is controlled by New England people, is developing into a good mine. The manager states that he has now a great deal of shipping ore, as well as low grade ore, blocked out. The Copper Glance property is showing a marked improvement, which is reflected in the advance in the price of the stock rather suddenly from 8 cents a share to 25 cents.

In the Ohio Copper crosscut No. 10, on the 500-foot level, at a distance of about 660 feet from the first crosscut, the ore body still shows large and rich. The values are good both as to milling ore and as to the high-grade portion of the vein. The concentrates from the mill still run over $50 a ton. The stock has been very active around $3.50 a share.

The Boston Consolidated is rapidly clearing away the overburden by the use of steam shovels. Mr. Cates reports the property as showing up better with every shift, ont only in the sulphide zone, but in the porphyry belt. The earnings of this company after the new mill is in operation should easily reach $1,500,000 a year. The same may be said also of Utah Copper.

The Standard Copper company, which owns a good group of claims south of the Boston Consolidated, is developing some fine ore, both lead and copper. This stock has been active around 50 cents a share. There has been some deal pending on this, and the prospects are that the control will be secured by some more prominent mining men who are seeking a foothold in Bingham.

The earnings of the Daly-Judge property during the past month encourage the stockholders to believe that the first dividend in January will be 45 cents a share. The stock continues steady around $11 to $11.25. Daly-West advanced slighlly last week on the report that the Little Bell fissure had been encountered and some ore found. However, it has fallen off again, as indications are that the great body of ore has not yet been encountered.

The Columbus Consolidated is in condition for good dividends. It is expected that the directors will post one in De-

TROY-MANHATTAN COMPANY

Has Been Reorganized With Capital Stock of $3,000,000---Thomas F. Cole is Not a Stockholder in the Company.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 27.—Some time ago there was published by one of the coast papers a dispatch bearing a Phoenix date line, which was supposed to give a true outline of the plan of reorganization of the Troy-Manhattan Copper company, which owns one of the best known properties in Pinal county. In the dispatch it was stated that one of the principal stockholders was Thomas F. Cole, the well-known mining king, and that the company would in time be made a part of the syndicate of Arizona properties he recently took over. Joseph C. Erman, the vice president and general manager of the promoting company, the Troy-Manhattan Development company, passed through the city a few days ago en route to Humboldt, and gave for publication several details of the plans of the company. He denied very emphatically that Thomas F. Cole was in any way connected with the company, but he assumed that this rumor had gained credence through the fact that a number of the Cole people are stockholders in the promotion company.

According to Mr. Erman, a bond was given on Oct. 2 to Joseph H. Chandler of Chicago, the Western counsel for the United States Steel corporation, on all of the holdings of the Troy-Manhattan. A few days ago a company was formed here in Arizona, known as the Troy-Manhattan Development company, and to this company will the bond be transferred in a few days. For this purpose C. C. Chapin of Boston, the president of the new company, is now on his way from Phoenix to Chicago. There was no money consideration in connection with the bond, the new company simply guaranteeing to take up the stock of the holders in the first and original company by giving share for share stock in a third company to be organized later with a capitalization of $3,000,000. It is understood the proposed issue has already been more than subscribed.

The Troy-Manhattan group embraces a number of claims on which there is an abundance of low-grade ore. The best showing yet to be made on the property was on the Alice vein, where a crosscut shows a breast of ore 190 feet wide that will average 3 per cent. The product yields to treatment in an ideal manner. The ore which has been taken from the claims has all been thrown on a dump, where there is now a considerable accumulation. There was at one time a 50-ton furnace on the property, but the coke had to be freighted from Casa Grande and the project was later abandoned.

The railroad has now made possible the shipping of ore, and it will be begun, it is thought, at once. To consult with officials of the Arizona Smelting company at Humboldt Mr. Erman is making the journey. The prospective shipments will amount to 100 tons a day. Sixty-five men are now at work on the property, and this force will at once be increased. The stock of the new company is held by Chicago and Duluth capitalists.

Kelvin, according to Mr. Erman, is one of the busiest camps imaginable. It was especially lively last Monday, that date being pay day for the Ray, Big Lead, National, Calumet & Kelvin Reduction company. The camp is no longer the one-company town it was years ago, when the Ray company was operating at its height. This situation shows its good effect, for there are numerous stores, and the competition makes reasonable prices.

At the National Mining & Development company property there are now forty-five men at work. Mr. Erman is also superintending the opening of this property, and in addition is working a force of men on the Calumet claim, in which he owns a one-fourth interest.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT

Numerous Strikes in All Sections of District Made in October and General Outlook Flattering---Tunnel May be Delayed.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 27.—Numerous strikes in all sections of Cripple Creek have been made in October. The general outlook is flattering.

The Gatch Park tunnel, to drain Cripple Creek mines to a depth considerably below the El Paso tunnel now in operation, may be delayed for legislative action creating drainage districts in mining camps. Such a measure is now under consideration by the National Mining congress now in session in Denver. Several leading companies have subscribed liberally to the fund for constructing the tunnel.

The cyanide process is rapidly supplanting the chlorination and all other processes in treating Cripple Creek and other Colorado ores of value below $12 per ton. Scores of such plants have been erected this year.

Colorado capitalists have bought the Lucky Strike copper mine near Rawlins, Wyo., for $10,000 consideration. Experts say the mine may be made a big paying proposition by systematic development.

The Standard Mining & Leasing company, operating on the South Burns claim of the Acacia company on Bull Hill, Cripple Creek, is shipping at the rate of 500 tons per month as against 300 tons in September. The ore ranges from $25 to $80 per ton, the average being $40.

The Willey mine, near Kokomo, Colo., recently encountered two new ore bodies. Some of the ore carries $200 per ton values. A new roaster has been added to the mill, which is treating the ore in the second vein, the fist being shipped to smelters direct.

The Isabella mine on Bull Hill, Cripple Creek, is outputting 800 to 1,200 tons of $30 ore monthly from recent strikes made by lessees, of whom twenty are actively at work.

LIVELY ON WESTERN MESABA

The operations of the Steel corporation near the towns of Bovey and Coleraine, on the Western Mesaba, are making good headway. Half a dozen big steam shovels are digging into the earth, engaged in removing the overburden from the ore deposits; shafts are sinking, mine and other buildings are going up, machinery is being installed. In fact, the intentions of the company for this part of the Mesaba are very elaborate and comprehensive and already the foundations for probably the most important mining operation now under consideration anywhere are well advanced. Plans for washing the ore—a process which is necessary because of the large percentage of sand associated with the mineral—have been perfected, and there is in coure of erection a large temporary washing plant on the west side of Trout lake. The proposed system, when permanently installed, includes mining, hoisting and separating in one operation and is simple in the extreme. No ore will be shipped this season, either from the Holman or Canisteo mines, contrary to expectations, but next year, along in the latter part of summer, the properties will be prepared for substantial outputs. Stripping operations will continue without cessation, as long as the weather will permit. Considerable of the material in which the machines have operated lately has been a sticky blue clay, not the best ground to handle, yet as much as 275 cars, or over 1,900 cubic yards, have been removed by one shovel in a single day.

During the career of the Steel corporation there has not been a year in which it has not bought more ore in the ground than it has taken out. Notable purchases it has made have been the Chemung and Canisteo leases, on the Mesaba, which added more than 150,000,000 tons to its reserve; the Union Steel company's mines; the Clairton mines, including the big Champion, on the Marquette range, and several others, as well as many single leases, fees and small groups. These have replaced, several times over, the 90,000,000 tons that have been mined by the corporation during its existence and lately the purchases of the Hill lands have added several hundred million tons more. The value of iron ore is increasing steadily in the Lake Superior region. The demand for the product is increasing at a greater rate than new deposits are being shown up for reserves, and even the Mesaba district, which ten years ago was described as having ore in inexhaustible quantities, is known to have its limits.

There is a noticeable tendency on the part of consuming interests in control of mines to conserve ore holdings, particularly so in the case of the Bessemer product. It is realized, with the big corporation in control of the great bulk of the known ore bodies and steadily reaching out for more, that the possibility of obtaining future supplies is gradually contracting, and hence it behooves the independents, those with properties, the output of which they formerly shared with less fortunately situated consumers, to retain their own ore for future needs. Thus a new value is being placed on ore of the better grade, and less of the product is being let go than in former years. The Biwabik Ore company, owner of the big Biwabik mine, on the Mesaba, and in which the Steel corporation has a minority interest, furnishes an example of the case in point. The Biwabik produces a good ore of Bessemer grade. It is developed to such an extent that it could ship two million tons in a season, and this is one of the years when heavy sales could have been made, but the company is not letting go of anything like the amount it could sell and ship. The Biwabik last year produced upwards of a million tons, and this season will send out only about three-quarters of that, the most of this going to the Youngstown Steel company and the Briar Hill Iron company, which control the mine, and much of the remainder to the Steel corporation. There is pending, it is reported in mining circles, a deal for the lease to the New York State Steel company of an important proved deposit of the Tesora Mining company, which controls a number of tracts on the Mesaba and in which the Yawkey estate of Detroit is interested with Mayor Fay of Virginia. The New York State Steel company is a concern which is putting in Talbot open hearth furnaces at Buffalo, and expects to build blast furnaces. Early in the season it took a lease to a forty-acre tract in section 10-58-18, near the Wacouta and Iron Mountain mines, its first entry on the Mesaba, and probably any other range.

Should the Steel corporation's big Mountain Iron mine forward the expected output of 3,000,000 tons this year, it will have shipped 12,681,568 tons in eight seasons, from 1899 to 1906 inclusive. It was the first shipper on the Mesaba

Maneuvers Which Attended Struggle for the Hailstone Group of Claims in the Fairview Mining District of Nevada.

Goldfield, Nev., Oct. 27.—For ways that are dark, and for tricks that are vain, the mining investor has left Bret Harte's "Heathen Chinee" trailing in the rearward dust. Time was, perhaps, when the business of buying and selling mines was as free from guile as the buying and selling of sassafras. That time having passed, mine bartering absorbed some of the attributes of the horse trade. And now matters have reached such a pass that when a mine worth buying is to be bought, the buyer who wishes to put on his competitors what Billy Baxter used to call the "triple kejinks," has to be shrewder than the serpent, sharper than a weasel, oilier than an ambassador, and able to shatter time and space in a 40,000-horse power motor car. In proof of which, witness the manœuvers which attended the struggle for the Hailstone group of claims, in the Fairview mining district, in this locality.

In the center of the valuable mining properties that are making of Fairview a bigger game than Tonopah was at the same age, there lie three groups of claims, known, respectively, as the Fairview Eagle, the Fairview Eagle's Nest and the Hailstone. The big chief of the first of these is George Wingfield, Goldfield's original millionaire. He is an industrious and persevering person, and has burrowed for gold in the Eagle like a ferret after rats. Among his other burrowings was a shaft, about thirty feet from the sidelines of the Eagle's Nest. Not very far down he struck something that made him glad. He tunneled after it, got gladder and gladder, and then, just as the pursued vein of $500-to-the-ton ore widened out to eight feet, made the painful discovery that he was no longer mining in the Eagle, but in the Eagle's Nest. Bringing down the roof of his tunnel with a dynamite cartridge, Wingfield sat down to ponder.

He knew he couldn't buy the Eagle's Nest, because that property is already being mined by the Eagle's Nest Fairview Mining company. Yet he didn't like to think of that big vein, and the argosy it carried, and think of himself, in the same thought, left out of the potential rewards. So he decided upon a middle course. He went to the Sullivan Trust company, the owners of the controlling interest, said that if they would sell him 100,000 shares of Eagle's Nest—and he couldn't have bought a share from anybody else—he would tell them a good place to dig. And this deal promptly went through.

Five minutes after Wingfield had left the Sullivan office the Sullivan automobile was scooting toward Fairview, with "Wild Bill" DeJarlais to drive it, and with Jack Campbell, the Sullivan mine manager, as a lone passenger. Campbell did not even have time to annex a razor, a toothbrush or an alternate sock, for what meant at least a four-days' trip, but neither is he a Beau Brummel at inopportune crises. Mine managing and manicuring are frequently at loggerheads.

When Campbell reached the Eagle's Nest and took a good, long look at the vein stumbled upon by Wingfield, he discovered something that Wingfield had not suspected; namely, that while the vein in question entered the Eagle's Nest with a trend to the north, it almost immediately switched off to the northwest, and that after a catacornered crossing of the Eagle's Nest for about 400 feet, it cut across the Hailstone for 500 feet, traversing the Eagle's Nest again, further on.

Then the telegraph wires began to work, and the gentlemen who guide the destinies of the L. M. Sullivan Trust company got together in their most private office, and sat up, and took notice. Campbell received instructions to corral the owner of the Hailstone, J. W. Langley, the Tonopah broker, and either get an option on the Hailstone, or never come back. Having a family in Goldfield, and being accustomed to play aces, Campbell got both broker and option into his automobile and started home.

Meanwhile, however, Wingfield, not being wrapped in dreams, got wind of the Hailstone strike, and set out in quest of Langley himself. But Langley, being under the wing of Campbell in the Sullivan automobile, was inaccessible. Then the Sullivan car suffered a temporary breakdown at Diamondfield. Wingfield heard of Numerous Strikes in All Sections of District Made in October and General Outlook Flattering---Tunnel May be Delayed.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 27.—Numerous strikes in all sections of Cripple Creek have been made in October. The general outlook is flattering.

The Gatch Park tunnel, to drain Cripple Creek mines to a depth considerably below the El Paso tunnel now in operation, may be delayed for legislative action creating drainage districts in mining camps. Such a measure is now under consideration by the National Mining congress now in session in Denver. Several leading companies have subscribed liberally to the fund for constructing the tunnel.

The cyanide process is rapidly supplanting the chlorination and all other processes in treating Cripple Creek and other Colorado ores of value below $12 per ton. Scores of such plants have been erected this year.

Colorado capitalists have bought the Lucky Strike copper mine near Rawlins, Wyo., for $10,000 consideration. Experts say the mine may be made a big paying proposition by systematic development.

The Standard Mining & Leasing company, operating on the South Burns claim of the Acacia company on Bull Hill, Cripple Creek, is shipping at the rate of 500 tons per month as against 300 tons in September. The ore ranges from $25 to $60 per ton, the average being $40.

The Willey mine, near Kokomo, Colo., recently encountered two new ore bodies. Some of the ore carries $200 per ton values. A new roaster has been added to the mill, which is treating the ore in the second vein, the fist being shipped to smelters direct.

BUTTE MINES IN GOOD SHAPE

North Butte Sinking Its Shaft and Output of Ore Will Be Increased by First of the Month—Good Headway Making in Shaft on Belinda.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 27.—All of the large copper mines of the Butte district are in good shape now, with the exception of the Rarus, the lower levels of which are so warm that it is impossible for the men working there to do a day's work within the limits of the eight-hour day. This condition will be remedied soon, however, for air shafts are going down with a view of airing the openings. One of these shafts is now 700 feet deep and is going at a rapid rate, for the desire of the Red Metal company is to connect the Rarus openings with it as soon as possible. Ben B. Thayer is now inspecting all of the mines on the hill. He went through the Rarus on Wednesday and emerged with the conviction that the temperature below would stand cooling.

Mr. Thayer will not only inspect all of the large copper producers in the Butte district, but will likely visit all of the outside properties of the Amalgamated company. He came here in his private car Washoe and will use it in his outside trips. He will remain in Montana until about the middle of next month.

The Never Sweat mine is out of commission for ten days or two weeks, the Anaconda company having decided to reset the hoisting engine because of a setting of the ground upon which the foundation rests. Men are working night and day on the job and will finish it as soon as possible, after which the mine will again give up its customary quantity of copper ore.

As to the production of copper in the United States in general and Butte in particular this year, Mr. Thayer says: "In my opinion the output of copper in this country this year will not exceed 2 per cent over that of last year, and I doubt whether it will reach 2 per cent. Arizona will yield more than it did last year, but there will be a falling off in the lake country and the output in Butte will not be much greater than it was in 1905. This is easily explained. In the first place, none of the companies organized recently are producing—the same mines that were producing last year are producing this year, no additions of consequence having been made to the producing class. Last year all of the large mines were operated to capacity, and a similar condition prevails this year, with the exception of a few small producers, the ore of which was not available last year. Some of the big mines were closed for repairs during certain periods last year, and some have been closed for periods this year.

"Next year, however, there will be an increase in the copper production of the Butte district, for in all likelihood some of the new companies will be mining more or less ore and the larger companies will be in better shape for greater production than they are at present. It will be at least a year and a half before the Boston & Montana company finishes the work calculated to increase the production in that branch of the system.

"As to the copper market, it is in splendid shape, and the price at which the metal is quoted shows conclusively that consumption is greater than production."

* * *

The North Butte company, which is one of the prolific producers in the district, is sinking its main shaft from the 1,600-foot level to the 1,800, and is now several feet below the 1,600 level. It has three veins opened on the 1,600 and will open the same veins on the 1,800, thus making a 200-foot lift. These veins are the Speculator, which is from 10 to 15 feet wide; the Jessie vein, from 15 to 30 feet wide, and the Edith Mary and Miners' Union, from 15 to 30 feet wide, and all first-class ore on the 1,600. They have been opened a distance of more than 2,500 feet on the 1,600. With these veins opened on the 1,800 the company will have millions of tons of ore in sight, enough to last it twenty years or longer. By the first of the month the output of ore will be increased, the company believing that by that date the skip pockets on the lower level will have been finished. The output at present is a little more than 1,000 tons a day, and the increase will bring it up to about 1,300 tons.

According to the railroad shipping tabs, the copper output of the Butte district so far this year has been exaggerated in eastern publications. As an instance, reports were printed in Boston, New York, Chicago and in other cities to the effect that Butte would produce about 400,000,000 pounds of copper this year. In those reports the output for certain months for the different companies was given in figures. The output of the Original company alone for August was placed at 2,206,425 pounds, and for September it was placed at more than 2,000,000. Railroad sheets show that during August the company shipped 1,342,600 pounds and for September it shipped 1,161,484 pounds, which is 863,825 pounds less for August than Eastern reports show and nearly 900,000 pounds less than is shown in the report for September, a difference of nearly 10,000,000 pounds a year. The greatest production of the Original during any month does not exceed 1,800,000 pounds.

Eastern publications credit some of the smaller companies with enormous production as compared with the real production. Anaconda, Boston & Montana, North Butte, Coalition or Red Metal, Butte & Boston, Parrot and Washoe are large producers of copper, and La France and the Pittsburg company are fair producers, but outside of these there is practically little copper turned out in Butte. East Butte and East Butte Extension are running a neck-and-neck race in the line of production. Both Farrel and Alliance will be in the producing class before the expiration of the year, ore of good grade having been struck in their ground. It may be that Reins will turn out some copper before long, but its present output will not glut the market.

THE MICHIGAN IRON RANGES

Niagara Company Has Leased the Portland Tract on Marquette Range—Cleveland-Cliffs Company's New Maas Mine Nearing the Producing Stage—A Crystal Falls Find.

Ironwood, Mich., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Niagara Mining company of Rogers, Brown & Co., is not only to resume operations at its Ohio property, located at the western edge of the Marquette range in Baraga county, but it has leased the Portland tract, in the same field, from the Maas estate of Negaunee, and will shortly proceed with its development. The Portland lies betwen the Ohio and Webster mine, a property of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, and now idle. The Ohio produces an ochrous limonite ore—high in phosphorus and low in iron, the latter averaging probably a trifle above fifty units—a product for which there was no demand when the mine was closed down upwards of two years ago, but which can now be disposed of to advantage. The property is equipped with an adequate plant of machinery, in a good state of repair. A force of about sixty men will be employed throughout the winter, many of whom will be transferred from the Munro mine, a summer proposition on the Menominee, and in order that a respectable output may be achieved next season operations in the way of development will be pushed as much as possible. The Niagara company, likewise controls the old Norwood mine, lying directly northeast of the Beaufort, which in turn adjoins the Ohio, and it is likely that some ore will also be taken from this property next season. Bot hthe Ohio and Norwood carry extensions of the Beaufort vein. The Beaufort mine was formerly in the hands of the Niagara people, but the lease to it was permitted to lapse some months ago. This property is opened by two shafts, the deeper down 300 feet, and it has an excellent plant of machinery. It would be no surprise to see this mine also on the active list in the year soon to open.

The Portland has been leased for a term of years at a royalty of 20 cents, in addition to a substantial bonus. The property will make a good-sized mine, and can be operated either as an open pit or an underground proposition. It was explored two years by the Rogers-Brown interests, at which time a deposit of ore extending across the two forties, 200 feet in width on the eastern end and about eighty feet in width at the western end, was proved up. The ore outcrops in many places and in none of the numerous test pits sunk was the overburden found to be more than twenty feet. The depth of the deposit is still to be determined, but will be on a par with that at adjoining properties, it is estimated there are not less than four or five million tons of ore, all of it averaging better than 50 per cent in metallic iron. The tract has never been tested with a drill, but there is reason to believe the ore will be found to extend down at least 300 feet. Some work will be done on the tract this fall and winter, largely in the way of preparation unless the management concludes to sink a shaft. Much ore can be mined in open cut during the summer seasons, and it is likely that one or more pits will open. In any event, the Niagara company has entered the field to remain as long as there is a demand for the grade of ore mined there. It is reported in the connection that the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company will do some work in the district next season. The company owns the Imperial mine, in addition to the Webster, both of which were operated for a few seasons some five or six years ago. There is a very extensivo deposit of ore at these properties, but unfortunately it is of the same low grade as that at the Beaufort group, a short distance west. A fact not generaly known is that it was in this field that Thomas A. Edison's first experiments along the line of concentrating lean ores were made some sixteen years ago.

It is in this Spurr mountain region that the Steel corporation will conduct extensive logging operations this fall and winter. A force of 100 men will be employed if that number can be procured. Temporary headquarters, to be opened as soon as a road can be built, will be two miles distant from that location. This latter camp will be one of the finest ever erected in the peninsula, and men engaging with the company are assured as good wages as are paid anywhere for similar work, while the general conditions will be ideal. The tract contains timber of various kinds, including cedar, spruce, pine and maple, and all of it will be cut. The com-

NEW ORE-BEARING CHANNELS

In the Cactus Property of the Newhouse Company in Beaver County, Utah—Ground Adjoining the Centennial-Eureka at Tintic, Acquired by Newhouse and Heinze.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 27.—The most recent sensation in local mining circles was the release by Samuel Newhouse of particulars concerning the opening of new ore bearing channels in the Newhouse Mines and Smelters Corporation's Cactus property in Beaver county. Since his relation of conditions not less than $1,500,000 of Salt Lake money has been invested in the shares of the company, which have doubled in price. For the past six months new territory to the south of the older workings of the mine has been opened up from the fourth, fifth and sixth levels of the old mine, while a diamond drill hole, put down on the sixth or opening tunnel level, has gone through 259 feet of the same kind of ore that has been opened above. The new ore body has been crossed for 225 feet without disclosing the opposite wall and has been run through on its strike for nearly 250 feet.

Every drift in the new ore channel is still in fine ore, ore that Mr. Newhouse admits is 100 per cent better than the average of the older mine, while the workings on the tunnel level are disclosing such high values in gold and silver in addition to the copper that it has become necessary to change the equipment of the assay office to meet the changed conditions. Engineers who have in the mine recently declare that no other property in the state can show such immense bodies of high grade ore. This is the first time that Salt Lake ever became excited over the development of a copper mine.

In addition to what has been accomplished in the south ground of the Cactus a tremendous body of ore is being mined to the west of the older portion of the mine, around what is known as the Frenchman shaft. Here mammoth steam shovels are employed in the "glory hole" system of mining. The ore body is 700 feet long and 175 feet wide and is known to extend down to the 600-foot or tunnel level, through which the ore passes out to the milling works. It costs less than 20 cents a ton to mine and transport this ore to the mill and an average of 800 tons a day is being handled.

Six Utah companies have declared dividends in the past week. The Beck tunnel's contribution amounts to $30,000, or 3 cents a share; Carisa has posted the usual $5,000, or 1 cent a share; Grand Central, $15,000, or 6 cents; Victoria, $10,000, or 4 cents, and the Utah Mine company, $5,000 or 5 cents.

It comes from an absolutely reliable source that Samuel Newhouse and F. A. Heinze are the men who are acquiring a great deal of ground adjoining the Centennial-Eureka property of Tintic on the south. A large operating shaft has been started already and the expectation is that one of the biggest corporations in the state will be launched upon the new properties in the not distant future. Much of the ground being taken in is already productive, and the prospective value of all of it is simply immense.

Twenty miles in the Tintic district marketed 134 carloads of ore last week. Owing to the fact that the railroad companies have not been able to deliver coal, some of the mines in that camp were compelled to close down for a portion of the week, otherwise the output would have been heavier than it was.

Ground has been broken for the new mill at the mouth of Markham gulch in Bingham, which is to handle the ores of the Red Wing and the Utah Apex mines. The Red Wing is the property controlled by the Utah Development company. The capacity of the mill will be at first 200 tons. In the Red Wing mine alone it is claimed that they have more than enough ore to keep the mill running for a year. They have a great deal of milling ore blocked out in the Apex.

The manager of the Little Eddie, a copper property near the Copper Glance and the Puritan, the latter of which is controlled by New England people, is developing into a good mine. The manager states that he has now a great deal of shipping ore, as well as low grade ore, blocked out. The Copper Glance property is showing a marked improvement, which is reflected in the advance in the price of the stock rather suddenly from 8 cents a share to 25 cents.

In the Ohio Copper crosscut No. 10, on the 500-foot level, at a distance of about 600 feet from the first crosscut, the ore body still shows large and rich. The values are good both as to milling ore and as to the high-grade portion of the vein. The concentrates from the mill still run over $50 a ton. The stock has been very active around $3.50 a share.

The Boston Consolidated is rapidly clearing away the overburden by the use of steam shovels. Mr. Cates reports the property as showing up better with every shift, ont only in the sulphide zone, but in the porphyry belt. The earnings of this company after the new mill is in operation should easily reach $1,500,000 a year. The same may be said also of Utah Copper.

The Standard Copper company, which owns a good group of claims south of the Boston Consolidated, is developing some fine ore, both lead and copper. This stock has been active around 50 cents a share. There has been some deal pending on this, and the prospects are that the control will be secured by some more prominent mining men who are seeking a foothold in Bingham.

The earnings of the Daly-Judge property during the past month encourage the stockholders to believe that the first dividend in January will be 45 cents a share. The stock continues steady around $11 to $11.25. Daly-West advanced slightly last week on the report that the Little Bell fissure had been encountered and some ore found. However, it has fallen off again, as indications are that the great body of ore has not yet been encountered.

The Columbus Consolidated is in condition for good dividends. It is expected that the directors will post one in De-

THE BONANZA CIRCLE MINES

Bisbee, Ariz., Oct. 27.—The recent strike in the Superior & Pittsburg still continues to grow. Connection has been made between the Hoatson and Junction shafts, on the 1,000-foot level, which will relieve the Hoatson of its water, and also help materially to improve the air in the lower levels. The new Nordberg hoist at the Cole shaft has been completed. The usual shipments of ore are being sent to the smelter at Douglas from the Calumet & Arizona and the Superior & Pittsburg.

The discovery of new ore bodies in the Superior & Pittsburg ground is of great importance to several surrounding properties. From the pitch and dip of all three bodies, and their general character, it is very apparent now that they belong to the same ore zone from which the Calumet & Arizona, Copper Queen, Shattuck and Lowell mines have taken the greater part of their most valuable ore.

At the Shattuck this ore body was encountered at a depth of about 700 feet, and in the Meg shaft of the Calumet & Arizona at 900 feet. At the Oliver it was in evidence at 100 feet, at 1,100 feet in the Lowell, and at about the same level in the strike now made by the Calumet & Pittsburg.

The Shattuck being situated on the highest point on the mountain in this string of mines, it can be easily seen that the ore is following along a general strata, which dips in a regular manner down into the basin to the north of the Mule mountains.

At the angle the ore body is taking it would lead to the opinion that the Junction shaft would have to be sunk at least 200 feet deeper to catch it in this ground, and it is almost a foregone conclusion that the Warren shaft will also reach it at about the same depth as the Junction.

The three discoveries made in the Hoatson drift show that the ore goes directly into the Warren ground and that the shaft in that property can hardly escape catching it.

The strike may be considered the most important made during the year, as they definitely settle the question which way the ore dips from the mountains, and at about what depth it may be expected to encounter it on the flat from Lowell to a point below Bakerville.

The Warren shaft still continues to be sunk without the use of machinery, and will continue doing so until the pipe line is completed from the Saginaw-American shaft, when it will start the hoist, now all ready to go into commission, and begin sinking with machine drills. An eight-inch main will bring water on to the Warren ground, and it will be used both for the mine and the townsite.

At the Shattuck-Arizona, the burned buildings are being reconstructed, and the new big hoist is being installed. Shipments continue about as usual.

The Denn-Arizona is engaged in setting its new Prescott pumps, and will soon have them in working order.

There has been little change at the Cochise this week, although the shaft is bottomed in mineralized ground. The second call of $2.50 per share is due Nov. 1 on this stock.

During the week rumors have been received here that certain factions among the stockholders of the Modern mine have entered into a battle for control, and that no matter who comes out ahead, the property will probably be put into operation again.

IS ENTHUSED OVER SHOWING

Calumet, Mich., Oct. 27.—Capt. Thomas Hoatson returned this week from Keweenaw county, and brought back with him a glowing description of the showing made in the workings of the Keweenaw Copper company's property. He went to the bottom of the shaft on the Medora vein and from there picked up some rock, which he displayed to friends in Calumet, and all agree that it is by far the best showing ever seen from an amygdoloid vein in this district.

The samples which Capt. Hoatson showed were heavily shot with copper, and coming from the bottom of the shaft show best the condition of the workings. The past fifteen feet have gone into rock of equal richness, and every indication points to this proving a most valuable opening on the Medora property. The shaft is now bottomed at 120 feet.

The compressor, hoist and other machinery is all in place, and this week saw the miners using air drills for the first time. Three drills are being used in sinking. The compressor has a capacity for from twelve to fifteen drills, and it is expected that as soon as the 200-foot depth is reached a station will be cut and drifts east and west started. With this work done it is expected that a considerably larger force will be employed at the Medora shaft.

The skip is now hoisting rock, and it is being accumulated at the stock pile to be stamped at some later date. A two and one-half ton skip is to be operated in the shaft. The machinery installed is all of a permanent character and will be possible to operate the shaft until a considerable depth is reached.

Diamond drilling operations are being carried on at the Empire tract, and Capt. Hoatson expects to receive word from there in a few days announcing the striking of the Medora vein there. Such being the case it will give the Keweenaw property almost three miles of territory carrying this vein. Should it prove anywhere near as rich in other parts as it is in the shaft now sinking, Keweenaw has a bright future before it.

It is planned that in the event of the Medora lode being encountered at the Emipre a shaft will be sunk soon and active mining operations started at that point. At these two points the Keweenaw company is concentrating its efforts, and hopes to make even a better showing than was done by the Copper Range properties.

The Hancock Consolidated is making good progress in unwatering its workings. The water, in fact, is going down more rapidly than was hoped for, as no interruptions have been met. Four pumps are in service, and a heavy stream is thrown out night and day. There now seems to be no doubt that the shaft will be clear of water some time before the end of October. It is bottomed only thirty feet below the tenth level, and only about one more lift remains to be pumped. The Hancock Consolidated has reached a fairly accurate idea as to the location of its proposed vertical shaft, from an engineering viewpoint, because of a little uncertainty remaining the management is not yet ready to state where the spot is. When this shaft gets under way and the old shaft now being unwatered is shipping its rock to the stamp mill—two events that are not far in the distance—this property will be in the center of a great deal of attention.

TROY-MANHATTAN COMPANY

Has Been Reorganized With Capital Stock of $3,000,000---Thomas F. Cole is Not a Stockholder in the Company.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 27.—Some time ago there was published by one of the coast papers a dispatch bearing a Phoenix date line, which was supposed to give a true outline of the plan of reorganization of the Troy-Manhattan Copper company, which owns one of the best known properties in Pinal county. In the dispatch it was stated that one of the principal stockholders was Thomas F. Cole, the well-known mining king, and that the company would in time be made a part of the syndicate of Arizona properties he recently took over. Joseph C. Erman, the vice president and general manager of the promoting company, the Troy-Manhattan Development company, passed through the city a few days ago en route to Humboldt, and gave for publication several details of the plans of the company. He denied very emphatically that Thomas F. Cole was in any way connected with the company, but he assumed that this rumor had gained credence through the fact that a number of the Cole people are stockholders in the promotion company.

According to Mr. Erman, a bond was given on Oct. 2 to Joseph H. Chandler of Chicago, the Western counsel for the United States Steel corporation, on all of the holdings of the Troy-Manhattan. A few days ago a company was formed here in Arizona, known as the Troy-Manhattan Development company, and to this company will the bond be transferred in a few days. For this purpose C. C. Chapin of Boston, the president of the new company, is now on his way from Phoenix to Chicago. There was no money consideration in connection with the bond, the new company simply guaranteeing to take up the stock of the holders in the first and original company by giving share for share stock in a third company to be organized later with a capitalization of $3,000,000. It is understood the proposed issue has already been more than subscribed.

The Troy-Manhattan group embraces a number of claims on which there is an abundance of low-grade ore. The best showing yet to be made on the property was on the Alice vein, where a crosscut shows a breast of ore 120 feet wide that will average 3 per cent. The product yields to treatment in an ideal manner. The ore, which has been taken from the claims has all been thrown on a dump, where there is now a considerable accumulation. There was at one time a 50-ton furnace on the property, but the coke had to be freighted from Casa Grande and the project was later abandoned.

The railroad has now made possible the shipping of ore, and it will be begun, it is thought, at once. To consult with officials of the Arizona Smelting company at Humboldt Mr. Erman is making the journey. The prospective shipments will amount to 100 tons a day. Sixty-five men are now at work on the property, and this force will at once be increased. The stock of the new company is held by Chicago and Duluth capitalists.

Kelvin, according to Mr. Erman, is one of the busiest camps imaginable. It was especially lively last Monday, that date being pay day for the Ray, Big Lead, National, Calumet & Kelvin Reduction company. The camp is no longer the one-company town it was years ago, when the Ray company was operating at its height. This situation shows its good effect, for there are numerous stores, and the competition makes reasonable prices.

At the National Mining & Development company property there are now forty-five men at work. Mr. Erman is also superintending the opening of this property, and in addition is working a force of men on the Calumet claim, in which he owns a one-fourth interest.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

With the autumn Assembly ball last evening the formal opening of the winter season was ushered in and the cotillions and the charity ball and Christmas festivities will have arrived before one realizes that the weeks have fled. The decorations were very simple, a bank of palms screening the orchestra, being the only effort in that direction, but the affair was a most brilliant one, a larger number of the young married set being in attendance than at any of the recent affairs. LaBrosso played the delightful program of music and among those present were:

Among the most interesting events of the week were the musicales upon Thursday and Friday evenings, at which Mr. and Mrs. Julius H. Barnes were hosts in honor of their sister, Miss Josephine Carey, who has recently returned from a four's years study of the piano at Berlin. A large number of guests were entertained both evenings and much interest was evidenced in Miss Carey's first playing. Her program was especially pleasing, a Beethoven Sonata, Op. 27, No. 1, being presented with a Schumann number, "Carnival Jest from Vienna," and in a Chopin waltz in G flat and a Gluck-Brahms "Gavotte," were played with exquisite delicacy and art. The closing number was an octave study by Karl Krebs.

Assisting was Miss Grace Heitman of St. Paul, who told with much charm an interesting story "Mlle" and read Riley's, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," and a Scotch selection with dainty grace. A voice mellow and soft, full of delicate shadings, is not the least of Miss Heitman's charms.

The rooms were prettily decorated in roses, the pink blossoms being used in the receiving rooms, and in the dining room red flowers were used. Assisting in the dining room were, Misses Georgia Everest, Alta Owens, Hazel Owens and Katherine Burris.

Of much interest to Duluth society was the Twenty-fifth wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler Adams, which was enjoyed last Saturday evening at Woodlands, their Deerwood home. The immediate family present were: Culver Adams, their oldest son, R. H. Dinner was served at 7:30 o'clock and toasts and presentations speeches added to the enjoyment of the evening. An original poem by Mrs. Edgar Markell was read and greatly enjoyed.

One of the most charming of the autumn weddings was that of Miss Mary Heath Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Miller, and Robert Blair Quigley, which took place Wednesday evening at the Glen Avon Presbyterian church. The little church was a bower of beauty for the ceremony. The altar was banked with palms and ferns, relieved at intervals with graceful clusters of white chrysanthemums. A row of gleaming white candles before the altar added to the effectiveness of the decoration. The pews were also decorated with white ribbons and flowers.

At 8 o'clock the wedding music was played by Miss Myrtle Taber at the organ, Miss Trufant at the piano, and George Tupper, violin, and the wedding party entered the church. The little flower girls, Gertrude Miller and Patience Quigley, came first, and were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Winnifred Quigley and Miss Marion Sherwood. The maid of honor, Miss Lee Morrison, came next, and last the bride with her father. They were met at the altar by Mr. Quigley, with his best man, Wyman Miller, and the service was read by Rev. J. C. MME. ANNA HELSTROM, Famous Prima Donna of Royal Opera in Stockholm to Sing at Lyceum Monday.

Monday evening the famous Swedish prima donna, Madame Anna Helstrom, will sing at the Lyceum in Duluth, under the auspices of the Orpheus society of this city. She is a singer of remarkable talent and has won recognition throughout the country. She is pronounced the worthy successor of Jenny Lind and Christine Nilsson, and is the leading singer in the royal opera in Stockholm. The Minneapolis Journal said of her singing:

"It is difficult to speak of the new star's singing with anything like moderation. She is wonderfully gifted by nature, with a keen intelligence, a perfect physique, a lovely piquant face full of life and animation and varying in expression with each passing thought, and, most attractive of all, she has a winning and charming personality that bubbles over with bonhomie and graciousness. Mme. Helstrom's voice is unlike any other that has been heard here. Its two predominant qualities are a richness and fullness of timbre which satisfy and appeal to the listener, and a clear and bell-like intonation that carries it with ease into the furthest recesses of the room. It is remarkable also in its magnificent range from deep contralto notes to the highest notes of the upper register, and that with a smoothness and finish that are most marvelous. It is rare, indeed, to combine such gifts in one voice, and when such a voice has been trained, as Mme. Helstrom's evidently has, to the acme of her art, the singer then becomes the 'diva of song.' Mme. Helstrom is easily the peer of any of the leading singers of the day, and it is inevitable that she shall soon devote her gifts to all mankind, instead of to the royal opera of Sweden, where she now reigns."

TALKS OF MADAM BUTTERFLY

Miss Rena Vivienne Discusses Puccini's Opera and Physical Difficulties Artists Encounter in Playing Leading Parts.

An interview in the Washington Post of last Sunday with Rena Vivienne will be of much interest to Duluthians. Mme. Szamosy and Miss Vivienne were interviewed concerning their ideas of "Madame Butterfly," and concerning the latter the Post says:

"Then the footsteps of the inquirer led to Rena Vivienne, who sang 'Madam Butterfly' for the first time on Tuesday evening. She is a frank unspoiled American girl, whose enthusiasm has not been worn thin by her years of study, and many triumphs abroad. She came out of the West, and is proud to own it, and she is genuinely pleased at making her debut on the operatic stage here in America rather than in Europe.

"Yet I cannot say that it was altogether my American loyalty which prompted me to accept Mr. Savage's offer, she confesses. It was 'Madam Butterfly,' the opera itself, which drew me. From the moment I first heard it, the music lured me irresistibly, and the role of the little Japanese maiden tugged at my heart-strings. I would have done anything, gone anywhere, for the privilege of singing it. As we say, I 'felt the part' long before I had a chance of trying it. So, although I was to have made by debut in Genoa this winter, and plans to that end were nearly perfected, I dropped everything at the first hint of a chance to appear in Puccini's exquisite opera. I studied the role long and thoroughly under my master, Victor Maurel, and, at length, arrangements were made for me to sing it before Tito Ricordi and Puccini himself. My engagement was the result, and I was radiant. Tito Ricordi has done everything for me, in helping me prepare for my debut, advising and encouraging me, but to my teacher, Maurel, I owe all of the success I have had here and in Europe.'

Vivienne feels very strongly that one of the great mistakes made by young women who go abroad to study is the frequent changing of instructors.

"'I have had one teacher only, not six or seven,' she said, 'and to this I attribute the comparatively short time it has taken me to become ready for serious public work. I have spent only three years in preparation for grand opera, but it was all steady, uninterrupted work, under the same master—work that told, every day of it. If I had studied a year under this one and a year under that, I should still be in the preparatory stage. Of course, I had studied in this country before going abroad and had much public experience, but my study in Europe was all with Victor Maurel.'

"Vivienne was first cast for the role of Suzuki, which part she had also studied carefully, but after the opera was put into rehearsal she was given Madam Butterfly.

"'It is a most charming role to sing, and I love it even more than I thought I should,' she exclaimed enthusiastically. 'The intimate relationship of the music to the action, the beauty of the orchestration, and the picturesque Japanese setting are all as much of a delight to those in the company, I am sure, as to those in the audience. The great difficulty we have, of course, is to keep the pose, the gestures, and the gait of the Japanese women, while trying to give first attention to the voice. The bending posture, which must be kept up throughout the opera, is not only a strain on the muscles of the back, but also a tax on the muscles of the mind—to keep remembering it. The little, mincing walk is also very hard, both to remember and to accomplish. Another great difficulty I worked under was the scene in which the sleeping child is carried slowly to bed while a lullaby is sung. The little girl who plays the part of the baby is near 7 years old, and is very heavy. To carry her easily and swayingly, while keeping a clear, well-sustained tone for the lullaby, is no small matter. I could carry her with less strain if I could lift her higher on to my breast or shoulder, but that would cut off the full play of the chest, which the voice demands.

"'Another strain on the muscles is caused by the clumsy sandals. The effort to maintain the bending posture, unsupported by heels, which help to throw the body forward, is very great.

"'At first, Mr. Savage had the company fitted with the Japanese "geta," explained Vivienne. 'This is an out-of-door clog, worn by the women, and it has two very high pegs or heels, to keep the feet out of the mud. When we tried them, however, we found that they made us so tall that they had to be abandoned. We are so much taller than the Japanese women, anyway, that our height had to be decreased, instead of increased.

"Vivienne has the dark eyes and oval face which lend themselves well to the Japanese make-up, and her speaking voice is musical, with just a suspicion of an acquired foreign inflection.

"'The music, the music is everything,' she declares, in summarizing her feeling with regard to the new opera. 'It is so beautiful that it brings the tears. The faint music from without, while Butterfly stands waiting at the window—I forget the long strain of standing motionless as I listen to it. And the tragedy in the music, when Butterfly falls dead, is far greater than the tragedy in the acting. Puccini is all—all. The rest of us do not count.'"

FAIR AT SEATTLE IN 1909

Seattle to be Seat of Another Great International Exposition--To Exploit Resources of Alaska--A Flood of Gold for the Project.

Seattle, Oct. 27.—Another world's fair is due in a little less than three years, a Western world's fair this time, yet one which will include in its attractions the pride of the Southern seas and the wealth of the golden North. It is to be called the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, and is already in course of preparation.

The most notable achievement to date of the management of the new fair was the raising in one day of $650,000 to finance the enterprise. This was an accomplishment never before equalled by any city, and if it is to be taken as a criterion of what is to follow, the fair of 1909 is certain of success.

It was Seattle spirit, nationally famous, that made possible the raising of this flood of gold. And the same Seattle spirit will back the project during the next three years. The fair was conceived before the gates of the Portland exposition had swung to for the last time. The idea took, and in May a corporation was formed. During the summer the people talked it up, and it became the consensus of opinion that $500,000 would be necessary if an exhibition worthy the fame of Seattle and the Northwest were to result. It seemed a lot of money, but the people weren't scared at all.

Will H. Parry, chairman of the ways and means committee, had charge of the raising of the funds, and he proclaimed "Everybody Helps" the slogan. It took. It was emblazoned on the dead walls, placarded on street cars and automobiles, and posted in shop windows.

And on Oct. 8 everybody helped. The gods who help the men who help themselves owe Seattle folks a lot of assistance. The soliciting committee visited the high and low, and everybody gave his mite or his much. And when the work closed at the end of the business day, the treasury had $650,000 in checks and gold. A quarter more than was asked for: The people would have given an even million if it had been necessary.

When the legislature of the state of Washington, a commonwealth having a population of less than a million, meets this winter, the legislators will be asked to vote $1,000,000 for the coming fair. And there is every prospect that this sum will be granted. The national government will be asked for another million, and the individual exhibitors and foreign nations will swell the grand total to $10,000,000. A ten million dollar fair in a city which twenty-five years ago had a population of less than 4,000 people!

The fair is going to tell the people who come to it, first of all, some things about Alaska that few people know. Did you, for instance, know that within the Arctic circle can be grown grasses and vegetables and the hardier grains? Did you know that since the Klondike rush $180,000,000 worth of gold has come to Seattle from the Northland? That the whaling industry has been worth $100,000,000? Alaska was the biggest bargain Uncle Sam ever bought, a bigger bargain, even, than the Louisiana territory. The territory cost $7,200,000. Its imports and exports are annually more than three times the purchase price. Besides the gold, the land is rich in a dozen other minerals, the fisheries are among the finest in the world, and the furs for which the country was principally famous when the United States acquired it are still a considerable asset.

There will be an Alaska building at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, and probably another building to house the displays from the neighboring territory, Yukon. Gold was found in the Yukon country long before it was known to exist in any quantity on the American side.

The powers in national affairs are appreciating more and more the tremendous importance of the Pacific Northwest as an agricultural country, as the seat of most of America's rapidly decreasing timber supply, and a land of continually increasing commercial weight. The powers also are coming to appreciate more and more the great educational value of such an exhibition as the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific is to be. A world's fair is a veritable college to the man who has been unable to go to college in his youth. Taken all in all, the legislators will find it hard to get around, with clear consciences, voting a big appropriation to the fair, and there is no solicitation in Seattle that they will not come up to the scratch.

The national exhibition at the fair will deal largely with the Northland, but will not neglect the United States proper, nor the immensely interesting island possessions. The Orient generally will have dependencies in the islands of the Pacific they will wish to exploit, and Australia and New Zealand probably will have separate displays. And then there is the Dominion of Canada and Mexico, and the republics of South and Central America.

Asia and Oceanica have ten times the population of the United States; they occupy three times as much space. Trade between the nations bordering on opposite shores of the broad Pacific, while growing every year, is by no means what it would be if each side knew the needs of the other. To contribute this information, through the medium of exhibits, will be a principal object of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition. The visitors from across the sea will be afforded many surprises, and Americans who suppose that the principal products of China and Japan are rice and merchandise for the curio shops will learn that there are other commodities much more important. From the getting-together will come a sticking-together that will be mutually helpful.

The builders of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition have the experiences of a line of earlier fairs to guide them, and they have noted one lesson and profited by it already. Everyone remembers how the staff palaces at St. Louis and Portland went for a song, and some of them without even the song. There will be nothing of the sort at Seattle; for most of the buildings will be erected for all time.

The grounds of the lusty young university of Washington, an institution which already ranks at the top of the Northwestern list, have been chosen as the fair site. They embrace 255 acres, ideally situated on the shore of Lake Washington, the largest fresh-water body in the West. It is planned that the fair buildings, after the fair, shall be used as recitation halls and dormitories for the sons and daughters of Washington.

The plan now is—and it seems so popular that its success is assured—for the participating commonwealths to erect buildings and donate them to the university. Each state that is represented at the fair of 1909 will be represented in the college thereafter as long as its building stands. The structure will be a lasting memorial to the progressiveness of the participating state.

The exposition management has had a commissioner visiting the states of the Middle West and East, and he has found encouragement on every side. State participation on a scale far in advance of that at any other show held on the edge of the continent is already absolutely assured.

Altogether, the outlook is remarkably bright. The fair starts with abundant funds, and every prospect of abundant support. And back of it all is the Seattle spirit, which was good for $650,000 in a single day. A spirit that is good for $650,000 is strong enough to back up a $10,000,000 show with anything it needs.

PRINCETON SCORED ON

Cornell Makes First Touchdown in Annual Game.

Tigers Also Score and Go Ahead on Kicking of Goal.

New York, Oct. 27.—At 2:25 Cornell came on the field, with 10,000 people in the stands at the time. In a few minutes the Princeton players followed, and were greeted with hearty cheers. The line-up was:

Princeton—	Position.	Cornell—
Wister	lc	Babcock
Stannard	lt	Cook (Capt.)
Laroon	lg	Thompson
Herring	c	Newman
Martin	rg	O'Rourke
Cooney	rt	Brenton
Hoagland	re	Van Orman
E. Dillon (Capt.)	qb	Jameson
Tibbett	lh	Earle
Harlan	rh	Gibson
McCormick	fb	Walders

After a few minutes play, Walders of Cornell scored a touchdown, but Cook missed the goal. Princton then worked the forward pass and Wister and Cooney scored touchdown and goal. A placement kick by Walder's failed. The first half ended with the ball in the center of the field, and the score: Princeton, 6; Cornell, 5.

In the second half: McCutheon went in for Walders for Cornell. Princeton carried the ball right up the field and gained 30 yards on an exchange of punts. Wister made 20 yards on a forward pass. Princton made a touchdown, McCormick carrying the ball over. Cooney kicked goal making the score: Princeton, 12; Cornell 5.

ZACCHEUS IS HIS THEME.

The head of a well known theological seminary is accustomed to test the ability and self possession of the students by sending them into the pulpit with a sealed envelope in their hands containing the text of a sermon to be delivered on the spur of the moment, says the Chicago Tribune.

On one such occasion the student, on opening his paper, read these instruction: "Apply the story of Zaccheus to your own circumstances and your call to the ministry."

The student, cleverly enough, delivered himself of the following:

"Brethren, the subject on which I address you is a comparison between Zaccheus and myself, with reference to my qualifications for the pulpit. The first thing we read of Zaccheus is that he was small of stature. I never felt so small as I do now. In the second place, we read that Zaccheus was up a tree, which is very much my position at present. Thirdly, it is related that Zaccheus made haste to come down, and in this I gladly and promptly follow his example."

SACRIFICES TO LIBERTY

Russian Workmen Defy Trial by Court Without Counsel.

Judges Refuse to Admit Evidence of Police Plotting.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 27.—In consequence of the refusal yesterday of the court trying the members of the council of workmen to admit the report of M. Lopucsin, the former director of the police department, to Premier Stolypin, proving that the police department had caused incendiary proclamations to be printed and had organized attacks on the Jews, or to summon Count Witte, Minister of War Rudiger, Admiral Birelieff and other witnesses to prove that the council of workmen was sanctioned by the government, the attorneys defending the fifty-two delegates today withdrew from the case.

The accused men, through their spokesmen, Krusmaleff and Bronstein, then declared that they ceased to recognize the jurisdiction of the court, and would press to the extremity of shedding blood, their refusal to participate any further in the trial.

The court, to avoid trouble, thereupon decided to proceed with the case without the presence of either lawyers or the accused. Such a proceedure is quite customary under present revolutionary conditions in Russia. The scene in the court was dramatic.

The withdrawal of the attorneys was dictated largely by political reasons, and in order to emphasize attacks on the government for organizing outbreaks against the Jews as shown by M. Lopucsin's report, which was without special bearing on the defense.

The accused, at a conference last night, vcluntered to sacrifice themselves for the good of the cause.

DEMOCRATS HOLD RALLY AT BAGLEY

Mr. Pendergast Speaks Along Lines of State Development.

Bagley, Minn., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A Democratic rally was held here Thursday evening, at which there was a large crowd and much enthusiasm. Attorney McGlennon of Bagley, candidate for county attorney, presided and introduced L. G. Pendergast of Bemidji, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor. Mr. Pendergast spoke for about an hour, and was listened to with rapt attention. He spoke along the lines of state development, and more especially the north half of the state, which needs assistance in development of this part of the state. He told of being an early pioneer in the state, and one who had fought in the Civil war with the state's veterans. His speech was both interesting and forceful, and he was given much applause. He was given assurance of the support of the people of Bagley, and says he has every reason to believe that Governor Johnson and himself will receive a handsome indorsement in Clearwater county.

Mr. Pendergast left this morning for Staples, where he is this afternoon addressing a gathering of G. A. R. comrades from Staples and surrounding towns. He will also speak at that place this evening.

Great Britain's Educational Bill.

There is a temporary suspension of hostilities in Great Britain over their educational bill, but which is sure to break out again when parliament meets this winter. The agitation has surpassed in duration, intensity and bitterness that of any other public question, dating back to 1870. It was in 1853 that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters was first compounded, and it succeeded because it contained true merit and deserved to succeed. It has been the standby in thousands of homes because of its efficacy in cases of dyspepsia, indigestion, nausea, headache, costiveness, biliousness, cramps, flatulency, bloating, poor appetite, colds, chills, female ills or general debility. We hope every sick man and woman will take the hint and try a bottle at once. You'll find it the best stomach medicine you've ever taken. Insist on Hostetter's.

HIGH QUALITY SUGAR BEETS

Are Raised on the Northern Wisconsin Experiment Farm.

Madison, Oct. 27.—The successful growing of sugar beets of an unusually fine quality on the university of Wisconsin agricultural experimental sub-station at Iron River, Wis., seems to be the solution of the problem of finding a profitable crop suitable to the climate and soil of Northern Wisconsin lands formerly covered with timber. The analysis of beets grown on the Iron River experiment farm shows a higher percentage of both sugar content and purity than beets have yielded in any other portion of the state. The sugar content of these Northern Wisconsin beets was 16.9 per cent, as compared with 14.7 per cent, the average for Wisconsin. The purity percentage was also exceedingly high in the Iron River beets, being 93.3, against 83.7 per cent, the average of the beets produced in all parts of the state. Both the sugar content and the purity percentage were higher for these beets of Northern Wisconsin than for those grown under the most favorable conditions at the Madison experiment station farm. The results indicate that, with proper agricultural methods, sugar beets can be made to yield excellent returns from land which has been idle and unprofitable since the timber on it was cut.

On the Iron River farm the beets were planted thirty inches apart, which is a much wider distance than on the Madison farm, and the yield is nine tons per acre. If closely planted they probably would have equalled or even exceeded the sitxeen or eighteen tons per acre yield on the Madison station farm. Next year the beets will be grown with a view to getting large tonnage. The aim this year was merely to see if beets could be raised at all in that climate, and no special scientific methods were used. One of the interesting features of the experiment as it will be continued next season is the tests to be made with various fertilizers and of muck and peat in enriching the red sand soil which is typical of the Iron River district. A sparing use of the common black muck and peat found in swampy places is thought will be found of much benefit to the crops, as it largely increases the capacity of the ground for retaining moisture.

COURTS HIT GRAFT GAME

San Francisco's District Attorney Checkmates Ruef Scheme.

People Cheer Langdon and Heney and Hiss Their Foe.

San Francisco, Oct. 27—District Attorney Langdon, who was suspended by Acting Mayor Gallagher Thursday night, in an evident effort to check graft investigation by Francis J. Heney, secured yesterday morning from Superior Judge Seawell an order temporarily restraining Abraham Ruef, whom the acting mayor appointed to succeed Langdon, from interfering with the officials or affairs of the district attorney's office.

Following this in the afternoon in the court of Superior Judge Thomas Graham, where the final member of the new grand jury was chosen and where it was expected the court would settle the question of recognition of either Langdon or Ruef as district attorney, Heney made no objections to the actions of a deputy sheriff who had several times attempted to search him. Ruef said the deputy was acting under his instructions, it being Ruef's belief that Heney was armed.

The court warned the deputy to cease annoying Heney. Then Ruef attempted to address the jude as "officer of the court," but Heney objected. Judge Graham declined to pass on the issue, saying that he would not at that time settle the dispute nor recognize anyone as an officer of the court.

Ruef, however, succeeded in obtaining permission to speak as an attorney at the bar and declared that he wished to proceed with an examination into the qualifications of certain grand jury men. After some further heated arguments, Judge Graham ordered the grand jury dismissed until Monday morning. Heney strongly objected to this, saying Mr. Langdon knew what matters would be presented to the jury in its first hour, and, that time now would be given to bribe certain witnesses and get them out of the country.

During the proceedings, a crowd of 3,000 was present in the corridors, and a big squad of police was summoned to eject them. Several prominent citizens were roughly thrown into the street. Later certain people were admitted to the courtroom until it was filled. When Langdon and Heney emerged they were heartily cheered. A few minutes later Ruef appeared, and was hooted and hissed. As he was making his way to his automobile, a man who had been ejected from the courtroom attempted to strike him, but the police seized him. Ruef was attended in court and afterwards by two dectectives.

SUCCESSFUL ORCHESTRA.

Conducted by Student Musicians at Wisconsin State University.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 27.—Among the musical organizations at the University of Wisconsin, none has made more progress and obtained more recognition than the university orchestra. This organization has just entered upon its third season, having been re-organized two and a half years ago under the direction of Herman E. Owen, of the university school of music. There are now forty members, and it is proposed to increase the number after the first concert, which is to be given Nov. 1.

While membership in the orchestra is purely voluntary, the instruction and practice, which the students obtain, is now recognized as a part of the regular work of the school of music, which is open to all university students. The faculty has recognized the value of the training and has granted credit toward the baccalaureate degree for all work done in the orchestra. Rehearsals are held weekly on Wednesday evenings throughout the year.

The quality of the music, which the orchestra has been studying, is shown by the following selections, which have formed a part of various concerts given recently: The Good Friday music from Wagner's "Parsifal," the intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana," Rossini's Tancridi overture, selection from "Carmen," Chopin's Funeral March, Meyerbeer's Coronation, March from "The Prophet," German's "Three Dances from Henry VII.," and Schubert's Rosamunde overture.

FALL NEST BUILDING.

We are apt to think that birds build only in spring or in summer, because that is their "natural" season and because their ancestors did so. But have you never thought that perhaps the heat or the mildness of the weather may have a direct influence and may actuall yinvite them to build? Here is a little incident, says a writer in St. Nicholas, which I saw last year, and which seems to point in that direction.

Sept. 24 was springlike in temperature; a fine rain was falling, and I was afield, watching a small host of migrants, mostly myrtle warblers and sparrows, but especially interested in the movements of some young goldfinches that were learning to feed on thistles. About a cavity in an ol dapple tree were four bluebirds hovering and warbling. Looking more closely, I noticed that each pair seemed to be trying to get possession of the hollow as I have seen them fighting for a nesting place in spring. To my astonishment one male had a straw in his bill. He went into the hollow, tarried for a while and returned without the straw. Then the female went in and stayed for several minutes. The birds were so much interested that I went to within a few yards of them before they left. In the hollow was the foundation of a nest.

A bird called the pine siskin, which I caught one day and which roamed about the house, found an old vireo's nest and at once took possession, pulling and picking curiously at the loose fibers as if to arrange them to a siskin's taste. I have also seen a pair of waxwings gather nesting material when it seemed too late in the season even for them. Perhaps furthem study of the birds in the fine autumn weather will show that they are often led to build useless nests. It would be interesting to know how far they may sometimes carry those untimely efforts.

Guarantee Liquor Cure

We would not under any circumstances endorse a remedy for the cure of the drink habit until we had absolutely satisfied ourselves that it did all claimed for it. Orrine is the only cure for the drink habit that we know of and the only one that we ever knew of that had enough merit to be sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure. It has stood the test of years of use and we know of many whom it has cured of the drink habit.

The guarantee given with each package thoroughly protects the buyer. Orrine is in two forms; No. 1 for secret use and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured, $1 a box. Mail orders filled. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or F. W. Kugler, 108 West Superior street.

* * *

To the Duluth music lovers and the members of the Matinee Musicale in particular, the following notice of the playing of the Olive Mead quartet from the Musicale Courier and Concert Goer will be of interest. The quartet will present the first artist's recital of the year on Nov. 2, under the ausplces of the Matinee Musicale, the recital to be given at the Pilgrim Congregational church. The Concert Goer says: "Assisting Thomas Whitney Surette, the lecturer, the Olive Mead quartet is filling three engagements under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute. Never in the history of this unique organization has it ever played with such mastery and beauty of tone and such freedom as this season. Miss Mead has had her talented associates in her summer home, and there they put in many hours andd ays of serious work, which tells to the fullest extent. Not long ago, in speaking of a woman's string quartet recently formed in London, Mr. Finck, critic of the New York Post, says that they might well emulate the example of the Olive Mead quartet, since they must be ranked with the most capable chamber music organizations in the country, with no consideration of sex. This was brought to mind forcibly when these young women played with such remarkable sweep and authority the very difficult B flat minor Tschaikowsky quartet and the Andante from the opus 11. There was a very large audience present and the enthusiasm was at its fullest. The Olive Mead quartet in the near future will go on a long tour, when they will be heard as far West as the Pacific coast. After their return they will give their usual series in New York at Mendelssohn hall."

CASE OF DESTITUTION.

Widow and Six Children at Sparta Were Almost Starving.

Sparta, Minn., Oct 27.—One of the worst cases of destitution ever brought to light in this county was discovered yesterday, when A. J. Sullivan of the Genoa mine entered the home of Mrs. Yorkinen here, whose husband died two weeks ago of typhoid fever. Six children were living in a shack with their widowed mother, who seemed more willing to starve than to accept charity from her neighbors. There was nothing in the food line in the house with the exception of some mouldy hard tack.

At the suggestion of Mr. Sullivan a collection was taken up among the people of the city, $49 being raised in a short time, which will go a long way towards putting the family on its feet for a time, or until county aid can be secured for them.

WHY SO WEAK?

Kidney Trouble May Be Sapping Your Life Away. Duluth People Have Learned This Fact.

When a healthy man or woman begins to run down, without apparent cause, becomes weak, languid, depressed, suffers backache, headache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, look to the kidneys for the cause of it all. Keep the kidneys well and they will keep you well. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and keep them well. Here is Duluth testimony to prove it.

J. H. Tomlin, lather and contractor, of 112 West Palmetto street, Duluth Heights, says: "What I said in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, six years ago, was not only true, but the cure I described at that time has been permanent, and I am pleased to inform other sufferers of this fact. My case was a severe one, and it clung to me persistently for two years. The backache [illegible] got so bad that I was obliged to lay off from work for days at a time, and I suffered such pain that it hurt to bring the slightest strain on the muscles of the back and loins. The kidney secretions were irregular, and I was unable to rest well at night. All these irregularities yielded promptly to the treatment, and the result was a permanent cure."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

JOHN CHRISTIE'S TRIP TO SCOTLAND

Few Duluthians will fail to recognize in the accompanying picture the genial countenance and figure of John Christie who, with Mrs. Christie, returned a few days ago from a three months' tour of Scotland, England and the continent.

The togs are the only unfamiliar features in the picture, but they are not so unfamiliar to Mr. Christie, who wished to have a likeness of himself in the dress of the men of the land of his birth.

While on his recent visit Mr. Christie donned the dress of a Scotch gentleman, which differs somewhat from the Scotch military dress which people in this country have been accustomed to see in exhibitions of the sword dance, etc. In this instance Mr. Christie wore the Scotch tweed cap, coat and vest, the kilt of tartan cloth, the sporren hanging from the belt and the heavy Scotch stocking reaching to just below the knees.

Mr. Christie is by birth of Clan McIntosh, the insignia of which is shown by the colors and arrangement in the kilt. The photograph was taken at Forfar, Scotland, where Mr. Christie and his father formerly published the only weekly paper in town, and which place he left when he came to America to seek his fortune. This was his second trip to his old home since leaving it, the first one having been made in 1881.

While in Scotland, Mr. and Mrs. Christie visited a great many of the interesting historic spots and reunions were had with the numerous relatives scattered over the isle. Their itinerary included a trip to Castle Stirling, Abbey Craig, the Field of Bannockburn, Loch Katrine, Loch Lomond, Glasgow, the abbey at Dunfermline where the heart of Robert Bruce is buried, Edinburgh, Loch Leven where Queen Mary was a captive, Kirkcardy, the Kyles of Bute, the Carinan and Caledonian canals to Oban and Iverness, across the northern part of Scotland to Aberdeen and Balmoral, a visit to the towns on the East coast and then to England and the continent.

At Inverness, Mr. and Mrs. Christie called on Bailie Thomson, on Castle Hill, the father of Colin Thomson of the American Exchange bank of this city.

Mr. Christie is preparing in published of which he hopes soon to have his friends re-visit in memory the many famous and fond-remembered spots they left in Scotland when they came to America.

TWO ENGINES IN COLLISION NEAR HIBBING

The accompanying picture is reproduced from a flashlight photograph belonging to J. M. McClintock and taken the evening of Oct. 13, of the two engines in collision near Hibbing, following the daring theft of a freight train by Chester Armstrong from the Great Northern Railway company's yards.

Armstrong, who is now in the county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury on the charge of obstructing a railroad track and endangering the lives of passengers, is alleged to have been in an intoxicated condition when he found the freight train made up for Nashwauk standing on a siding, while the whole train crew were at their supper. Clambering on the engine and pulling the lever Armstrong, who was familiar with locomotive operations from his experience as fireman at a mine location, started away from Hibbing with increasing speed on the track over which the Duluth passenger train was nearly due for Hibbing. On a curve,, about half a mile out of the railroad yards, the engine crew on the Duluth train were surprised to see coming toward them the Nashwauk freight, under full head of steam, and with no effort of the figure they could see in the cab to check the train. The air brakes were set on the passenger locomotive and the engineer and fireman jumped. A moment later the two engines came together with a crash, the pilots splintering up like kindling wood, boiler meeting boiler, with the headlights tight against each other. As the picture shows, the forward ends of the locomotives were literally jammed together.

The heavier engine, No. 994, of the freight train, withstood the shock best, while the lighter passenger engine, No. 151, was knocked from the track and was badly wrecked. In the picture the cab can be seen in the position it was driven against the steam chest.

Fortunately the trains were not going at a high rate of speed and nobody was killed. The sudden jar of the train threw two women from their seats with violence, and these sustained minor injuries.

Armstrong was seen and recognized by the crew of the passenger engine, but he made his escape in the darkness. He was apprehended a few days later while landing from a launch on Sturgeon lake, several miles from Hibbing. He professes to have no knowledge of his escapade.

To the Duluth music lovers and the members of the Matinee Musicale in particular, the following notice of the playing of the Olive Mead quartet from the Musicale Courier and Concert Goer will be of interest. The quartet will present the first artist's recital of the year on Nov. 2, under the auspices of the Matinee Musicale, the recital to be given at the Pilgrim Congregational church. The Concert Goer says: "Assisting Thomas Whitney Surette, the lecturer, the Olive Mead quartet is filling three engagements under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute. Never in the history of this unique organization has it ever played with such mastery and beauty of tone and such freedom as this season. Miss Mead has had her talented associates in her summer home, and there they put in many hours andd ays of serious work, which tells to the fullest extent. Not long ago, in speaking of a woman's string quartet recently formed in London, Mr. Finck, critic of the New York Post, says that they might well emulate the example of the Olive Mead quartet, since they must be ranked with the most capible chamber music organizations in the country, with no consideration of sex. This was brought to mind forcibly when these young women played with such remarkable sweep and authority the very difficult E flat minor Tschaikowsky quartet and the Andante from the opus 11. There was a very large audience present and the enthusiasm was at its fullest. The Olive Mead quartet in the near future will go on a long tour, when they will be heard as far West as the Pacific coast. After their return they will give their usual series in New York at Mendelssohn hall."

CASE OF DESTITUTION.

Widow and Six Children at Sparta Were Almost Starving.

Sparta, Minn., Oct 27.—One of the worst cases of destitution ever brought to light in this county was discovered yesterday, when A. J. Sullivan of the Genoa mine entered the home of Mrs. Yorkinen here, whose husband died two weeks ago of typhoid fever. Six children were living in a shack with their widowed mother, who seemed more willing to starve than to accept charity from her neighbors. There was nothing in the food line in the house with the exception of some mouldy hard tack.

At the suggestion of Mr. Sullivan a collection was taken up among the people of the city, $48 being raised in a short time, which will go a long way towards putting the family on its feet for a time, or until county aid can be secured for them.

WHY SO WEAK?

Kidney Trouble May Be Sapping Your Life Away. Duluth People Have Learned This Fact.

When a healthy man or woman begins to run down, without apparent cause, becomes weak, languid, depressed, suffers backache, headache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, look to the kidneys for the cause of it all. Keep the kidneys well and they will keep you well. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and keep them well. Here is Duluth testimony to prove it.

J. H. Tomlin, father and contractor, of 112 West Palmetto street, Duluth Heights, says: "What I said in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, six years ago, was not only true, but the cure I described at that time has been permanent, and I am pleased to inform other sufferers of this fact. My case was a severe one, and it clung to me persistently for two years. The backache finally got so bad that I was obliged to lay off from work for days at a time, and I suffered such pain that it hurt to bring the slightest strain on the muscles of the back and loins. The kidney secretions were irregular, and I was unable to rest well at night. All these irregularities yielded promptly to the treatment, and the result was a permanent cure."

GENERAL VIEW OF BOYS' DEPARTMENT OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

JOHN CHRISTIE'S TRIP TO SCOTLAND

Few Duluthians will fail to recognize in the accompanying picture the genial countenance and figure of John Christie who, with Mrs. Christie, returned a few days ago from a three months' tour of Scotland, England and the continent.

The togs are the only unfamiliar features in the picture, but they are not so unfamiliar to Mr. Christie, who wished to have a likeness of himself in the dress of the men of the land of his birth.

While on his recent visit Mr. Christie donned the dress of a Scotch gentleman, which differs somewhat from the Scotch military dress which people in this country have been accustomed to see in exhibitions of the sword dance, etc. In this instance Mr. Christie wore the Scotch tweed cap, coat and vest, the kilt of tartan cloth, the sporren hanging from the belt and the heavy Scotch stocking reaching to just below the knees.

Mr. Christie is by birth of Clan McIntosh, the insignia of which is shown by the colors and arrangement in the kilt. The photograph was taken at Forfar, Scotland, where Mr. Christie and his father formerly published the only weekly paper in town, and which place he left when he came to America to seek his fortune. This was his second trip to his old home since leaving it, the first one having been made in 1881.

While in Scotland, Mr. and Mrs. Christie visited a great many of the interesting historic spots and reunions were had with the numerous relatives scattered over the isle. Their itinerary included a trip to Castle Stirling, Abbey Craig, the Field of Bannockburn, Loch Katrine, Loch Lomond, Glasgow, the abbey at Dunfermline where the heart of Robert Bruce is buried, Edinburgh, Loch Leven where Queen Mary was a captive, Kirkcardy, the Kyles of Bute, the Carinan and Caledonian canals to Oban and Iverness, across the northern part of Scotland to Aberdeen and Balmoral, a visit to the towns on the East coast and then to England and the continent.

At Inverness, Mr. and Mrs. Christie called on Baille Thomson, on Castle Hill, the father of Colin Thomson of the American Exchange bank of this city.

Mr. Christie is preparing in published of which he hopes soon to have his form an interesting story of his journey from copious notes, that he made while on the jaunt and through the means friends re-visit in memory the many famous and fond-remembered spots they left in Scotland when they came to America.

TWO ENGINES IN COLLISION NEAR HIBBING

The accompanying picture is reproduced from a flashlight photograph belonging to J. M. McClintock and taken the evening of Oct. 13, of the two engines in collision near Hibbing, following the daring theft of a freight train by Chester Armstrong from the Great Northern Railway company's yards.

Armstrong, who is now in the county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury on the charge of obstructing a railroad track and endangering the lives of passengers, is alleged to have been in an intoxicated condition when he found the freight train made up for Nashwauk standing on a siding, while the whole train crew were at their supper. Clambering on the engine and pulling the lever Armstrong, who was familiar with locomotive operations from his experience as fireman at a mine location, started away from Hibbing with increasing speed on the track over which the Duluth passenger train was nearly due for Hibbing. On a curve,, about half a mile out of the railroad yards, the engine crew on the Duluth train were surprised to see coming toward them the Nashwauk freight, under full head of steam, and with no effort of the figure they could see in the cab to check the train. The air brakes were set on the passenger locomotive and the engineer and fireman jumped. A moment later the two engines came together with a crash, the pilots splintering up like kindling wood, boiler meeting boiler, with the headlights tight against each other. As the picture shows, the forward ends of the locomotives were literally jammed together.

The heavier engine, No. 994, of the freight train, withstood the shock best, while the lighter passenger engine, No. 151, was knocked from the track and was badly wrecked. In the picture the cab can be seen in the position it was driven against the steam chest.

Fortunately the trains were not going at a high rate of speed and nobody was killed. The sudden jar of the train threw two women from their seats with violence, and these sustained minor injuries.

Armstrong was seen and recognized by the crew of the passenger engine, but he made his escape in the darkness. He was apprehended a few days later while landing from a launch on Sturgeon lake, several miles from Hibbing. He professes to have no knowledge of his escapade.

NEW RESERVOIR AT WEST DULUTH

Water May be Turned Into It Within Two Weeks.

Has Been Little More Than a Year Under Construction.

Within two weeks, if the weather is fair, water can be turned into the new 10,000,000 gallon reservoir at West Duluth.

For the last month the contractor has had a race against time to complete the job before winter set in. If the concrete work had been left in an unfinished condition during the winter months, much of it would have been damaged, if not ruined, and it was therefore necessary to complete it before the first snow, at all costs.

The contractor, P. McDonnell, was handicapped by the scarcity of labor. It was necessary to pay men $2.50 a day to induce them to go to the suburbs to work, and even at that figure it was almost impossible to keep a full crew.

The men worked overtime and Sundays to finish the job, and now it is practically complete and will be ready for water in two weeks, unless some unexpected delays occur.

The reservoir was begun in the summer of 1905, and it has consequently been a little more than a year in course of construction. The plans were drawn in the city engineer's office, and all the work of inspection was in the charge of that department, Robert Brunner, being the inspector in charge.

Between 60,000 and 65,000 cubic yards of earth were excavated and the hole left is 344 feet in length by 280 feet in depth, and 25 feet deep.

No solid rock was encountered in the excavation, as careful borings were made before the work was begun. It was almost entirely in clay, hard pan, and quicksand, with a rather too liberal percentage of the latter to make it easy work for the contractor.

The embankment is overlaid with six inches of concrete and rolled with a corrugated roller. The "wash" is lined with Kettle River sandstone blocks of the kind that are used on the streets of the city. The total cost of the reservoir will be approximately $38,500, which was the contract price.

In addition to increasing the storage supply of the water department, the reservoir will act as a supply in case the main pipe line connecting the central part of the city with West Duluth should break. The reservoir is kept filled by gravity, as it is on a level with the reservoir in the East end.

Should the main pipe line to West Duluth break, the new reservoir can supply the western end of the city with water for several days, while the break is being repaired.

The cost of the reservoir was about the same as that of a new trunk line to West Duluth would have been.

In addition to acting as a safeguard for West Duluth, the new reservoir also makes more nearly certain the water supply for the whole city. Should the pumping machinery break down, or should the main trunk from Lakewood break, the West Duluth reservoir could supply the entire city with water for two days. The reservoir already constructed could supply the city, at its normal rate of consumption, for four days, so that there would be a supply on hand for six days, which should be ample time to repair any ordinary break in the line.

In the new reservoir there will be no danger of the water becoming tepid, as was the case in the Fifteenth avenue east tank.

Five feet below the surface is a valve which can be drawn off the warm surface water in the summer months, and keep the supply cool.

In addition to this fact, there is another feature that will insure fresh cool water all of the time. Arrangements are now being made to supply Proctor with its water from the West Duluth reservoir. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern road is planning to construct a long main leading from the West Duluth tank to the Proctor shops, with a pumping station at West Duluth. This will keep the water in constant circulation through the mains, and the supply in the new reservoir will never become stagnant.

HIGH SCHOOL'S FIRST BIG GAME OF SEASON

Mechanics Arts Team of St. Paul Believed to be Strong.

Philomathian Club Organizes—Freshmen Hold Meeting.

The last week has seen several changes in the football situation at the high school. Whether they have been for the better or worse remains to be seen. The game with the Mechanic Arts team this afternoon will be the determining factor.

This is the first hard game of the season. The others have all been played against teams which were obviously at a disadvantage. Either their weight was less, they were the pick of a smaller school, or they had not had the discipline and training which are the result of a good coach's work. However, the Mechanic Arts men are from a large city and are probably well trained. The teams will therefore be more evenly matched than in any of the other games. The change of coaches at the middle of the season would seem to be a serious setback to some, but the boys do not so regard it. Coach Leigh has been present a great deal of the time during the practising of the team under Findlay. His tactics will therefore be much the same and it will not be as if a coach had been secured who was unfamiliar with their style of play. The members of the team do not blame Findlay in the least for leaving, as he received a much larger offer for his services and has left them under the guidance of a first-class coach.

Last Monday a short meeting for boys only was called. Capt. McDevitt explained that the object of the meeting was to get out more men for the second team. He said that during the previous week not enough men had turned up to make up a second team, and declared that it was a disgrace to the school that so little interest was being shown. He also said that the team would sooner or later be defeated by some strong opponent unless given this support. The team had done all it could do to win, and now it is up to the others to help. There has been some talk of giving D's to the second team, and if this were decided upon it would no doubt create considerable interest among the boys as all desire the coveted letter. The experience which they will receive will help them in trying for the team in future years. There are many reasons for getting out even if they have not enough spirit to get out for the good of the school.

Capt. McDevitt said that if the boys will form a good second team, the first team will promise to make a hard fight for the state championship, but if not it might as well quit the season right now. Owing to the condition of the weather during the past week the ground has bee rather slipper for scrimmage work against a second team. However, the boys have been out working under the direction of Coach Leigh, and have accomplished as much as possible.

This is the first game for which the admission charged has been half a dollar, and as it promises to be an exciting one the boys hope to draw a large crowd and clear up a good sum of money.

For the purpose of selling tickets in a systematic manner the boys held a meeting Thursday afternoon. Different boys were assigned various parts of the business district to cover and in this way they will be able to canvass a great deal of territory in a short time. Many business men who did not want season tickets signified their willingness to buy single tickets to the bug games. The boys are relying on this promise and expect to sell quite a number down town.

Manager Hicken has not et received a reply from the Minneapolis Central team as to whether it can play the high school team, so the game is still doubtful.

FRESHMEN ORGANIZE.

It was anextremely noisy and excited mob of freshmen that flocked into the assembly hall Wednesday to hold their first class meeting as members of the high school. There were about 400 of them without any leader and as the natural thing for them to do was to talk, the result was rather suggestive of pandemonium broken loose. As their idea of how to conduct a meeting were extremely vague, Principal Smith came to the rescue and directed the assemblage.

Mr. Smith spoke briefly to the class, telling the members of the part they were to play in the school life, and reminding them that they must be in every possible way a credit and a help to the school.

"You have met here to organize," he said, "in order that you may become acquainted with each other, and by the unity which will result, increase the power of the class and intensify your affection for it. These meetings are the means of creating a class spirit which is something that every class should have."

Mr. Smith then explained that one social event is allotted to them as Freshmen. This is the Freshman spread which comes off just before the close of the school year.

After Mr. Smith had closed his remarks a temporary chairman was elected. Donald Warner received the largest number of votes, but as he was found to be absent, Charles Arbogast took the chair. Louis Fisher was appointed temporary secretary. The nominations were then opened for president, and Robert Donaldson, Charles Evans, Arnold Burg and Russell Mather were the nominees. In a warm contest, in which plenty of spirit was displayed, Russell Mather was chosen to lead the class in its initial year. Mr. Mather was called on for a speech but excused himself. Ruth Erickson was elected vice president. In accordance with Mr. Smith's request the officers took seats on the stage after being elected. Hazel Aske was chosen secretary, and took charge of the minutes for the remainder of the meeting. As the treasurer was the next officer to be elected, Mr. Smith advised the members to select someone who had already had some experience in this line, and one who had some executive ability. In an exciting contest Harold Feetham won out from his opponents.

The next election was that of football captain for the team, with which the Freshmen will endeavor to defeat the sophomores in the annual game. Bennie Nelson was unanimously elected to this position amid considerable applause. He will get the men out soon to practice, as there is not any too much time to get into shape before the end of the season.

The class then proceeded to the election of mascot, and as Arthur Helmer received the largest number of votes, he will fill that office. It is the custom to appoint both a yell and a color committee. The yell committee composes a yell which it submits to the class for approval, and the color committee gets samples of different colored ribbons, from which the class colors are selected by vote. The president was empowered to appoint both of these committees and they will probably make reports at the next meeting.

The Freshmen did not elect their Zenith board at the meeting. Mr. Smith advised them to wait until the next meeting, as they will be better acquainted then and will have a clearer idea of whom they desire for these important offices. The secretary of the class will keep all the necessary annals for the Zenith until then, and as that is all there is to do just now, there is no hurry in electing them. As it took considerable time to transact the business and many of the members were anxious to leave, it was decided to leave several matters over until the next meeting, which will be held in four weeks. The sergeants-at-arms will be elected then and the amount of the class dues decided upon. Considering the size of the class and the small expense necessary to take it through the year, it is believed it ought to come out with a large balance in the treasury next spring.

PHILOMATHIAN SOCIETY.

Organization of Young Women Plans Work of the Year.

The popular and exclusive feminine Philomathian society has again made its appearance as a high school organization. The society is just beginning its second year, and the fact that there were more than one hundred and thirty girls present at the first meeting is a forceful tribute to the attraction which it holds for them. For the enlightenment of any who are not familiar with the work of the society this clause from its constitution is given:

"The purpose of this organization is to enable its members to become familiar with parliamentary tactics, to develop a cultured musical and literary taste, to increase their store of general knowledge, to keep in touch with the current events of the day, to improve their general style of delivery, and to derive pleasure from the association with each other."

The society has well served the purpose for which it was organized and is starting in its second year with confidence that the society is going to be more popular and interesting than ever, and there is not the least doubt that it will be a great success.

Those who belonged to the society last year held a short business meeting on Monday night for the election of officers and to make the preliminary arrangements for the work of the year. The Freshmen were not present as the constitution provides that only the three upper classes shall have a voice in the election of officers. The following were elected: President, Gertrude Hoopes, senior class; vice president, Delia Smith, junior class; second vice president, Madeline Miller, sophomore class; and secretary, Marie Erd senior class. As the Freshmen are entitled to the office of treasurer this election was postponed until the first regular meeting.

The regular meeting was held Thursday night with an attendance of one hundred and thirty. The Freshmen immediately chose Ruth Miller as treasurer. Marjorie Morrow, last year's treasurer, reported $1.50 in the treasury. It was decided to appoint a committee to amend the article in the constitution which requires the members to vote by ballot. After the business had been treansacted the program was begun.

Pearl Hector spoke of the plan of the society for the year, its aim and the duties and responsibilities of the members.

At every meeting a talk will be given on some current musical or literary topic, and another on the life of some great woman of the past or present. Music and declamation will also be prominent in the work of the members. It is planned that the members of each class who belong to the society shall give a play. If sufficient talent exists among the pupils these plays will be written by them.

After Miss Hector's talk a piano solo was delightfully rendered by Jessie Gibson. Margaret Culkin gave a recitation entitled "The Soul of the Violin," which came in for a generous share of applause. This closed the program.

The executive committee, consisting of the officers of the association and two of the English teachers has made the program short, as they intend to lay especial stress on quality rather than quantity. After the meeting adjourned members were enrolled for the present year.

Football Reception.

The big reception to be given by the Seniors to the St. Paul football team will take place tonight at the high school building. The committee has made all the preparations and everything is in readiness for the big event. The hall will be decorated with the colors of the Senior class, the Duluth high school and those of the Mechanic Arts high school, in honor of the visiting team. Dainty souvenir dance cards have been procured by the committee, and as everything is going to be just right, the reception promises to be quite a swell affair.

A reception is given every year to one of the Twin City teams. They are very enjoyable and invariably attract a large number of the boys and girls, particularly those who like to dance. This year's event will be no exception to this rule and a large enough attendance is expected to pay all the expenses.

High School Notes.

The football practice in the mud this week has been rather precarious business. On one of the particularly moist afternoons several bets were made among the spectators as to whether they were witnessing a football game or a swimming contest.

• • •

The members of the football team will breathe easy for another month. Report cards were handed out last Monday and none of them flunked.

• • •

Now that the Freshmen have organized and a football captain been elected, they will no doubt devote their energies to forming a team that will give the Sophs a hard run for their money. They have a large class to pick from and should turn out a strong eleven.

EXTENSIVE LOGGING

Of Cedar and Tamarack Being Conducted by a Duluth Firm.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the companies logging on the most extensive scale in getting out cedar and tamarack, is Ross & Ross of Duluth, operating in the vicinity of Kelliher, Tenstrike and Mizpah. This concern now has five camps established, and is employing 250 men. Five more camps will be established.

J. R. McLeran of Duluth, inspector for the Minnesota Fire Underwriters' association, and C. J. Johnson, also of Duluth, are in the city and will resurvey Bemidji, with the intention of rerating the buildings for fire insurance.

The following Bemidji people made final proof on stone and timber claims at the Duluth land office during the past week, the claims being located north of Tower, in town 65-14: J. O. Harris, A. Warfield, Allan Benner, George Keihm and Mrs. W. A. Cassler. These claims are said to be very desirable, there being considerable valuable timber on them.

CHECKS ON TRADE FELT

Traffic Delays, High Money and Uneasy Labor Harmful.

Iron, Cotton Goods and Footwear Strong But Cereals Slow.

New York, Oct. 27.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of trade says: "Traffic delays, high money and some unrest in the ranks of labor have not checked commercial progress on the whole, although in special industries or localities, the restraining influence of these adverse factors are felt. Some irregularities of temperature also provide the week's trade reports with less uniformly glowing descriptions of retail distribution. Wage earners are agitating for more pay or shorter hours in several industries, especially in the railway service. Already manufacturers and dealers are making plans for the greatest business on record in jewelry and other holiday lines.

"A further advance of about 50 cents per ton in the price of pig iron is the best evidence of continued prosperity in that industry. There is little speculation, beyond what might be called legitimate provisions for future needs. This demand runs far into next year, it is true, but there is no reason to believe that any of this forward business is placed with the expectation of cancellation. Extension of facilities continue in every department, one plant for the manufacture of steel cars alone, being projected that will cover 320 acres. Orders for thousands of tons of structural steel for this one undertaking have been placed.

Improvement in the primary markets for cotton goods has gone so far that conservative operators begin to express a fear that a setback will be encountered through the curtailment of consumption. Yet, anxiety on this point, seems premature in view of the statistical position. Prices are now at about the level of the Sully boom, but demand is much better. There is little complaint regarding worsteds for spring delivery, but otherwise the woolen industry is unsettled awaiting a general movement by clothiers.

"Manufacturers of footwear receive liberal orders from jobbers in all sections for winter and early spring delivery, while salesmen are starting for the West for spring contracts, and carry samples for next fall. Prices are fully maintained, and conditions are considered most satisfactory. Demand for leather is limited to early needs, but prices do not weaken.

"Extreme narrow variations occurred in prices of leading cereals, movement being restricted by inadequate transportation facilities. Market conditions have not changed, but shipments abroad would have been larger if the seaboard deliveries had not been curtailed. A little more activity at Northwestern flour mills is encouraging, although there is a heavy decrease compared with the output a year ago, when all records were being eclipsed.

"Liabilities of commercial failures, thus far reported for October amounted to $7,485,434, of which $3,842,297 were in manufacturing, $2,279,715 in trading and $1,363,422 in other commercial lines."

Minnesota Students Adopt Customs of the Eastern Colleges.

Minneapolis, Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota, which now ranks with the largest institutions of learning in the country, the student registration running over 4,000, has at last started to adopt some of the customs and fashions of the older colleges.

The old, familiar raiment that has so long adorned the campus at Michigan, Wisconsin, Cornell and other schools, has at last begun to appear upon the Gopher campus. The corduroy trousers, with leather cuffs, have been ordered in wholesale lots, and these, with bright, maroon shirts, make a very suitable costume for campus wear.

This sign of college identity is a sure sign of the growing "college spirit," which has been claimed is wanting at Minnesota.

NEW RESERVOIR AT WEST DULUTH

Water May be Turned Into It Within Two Weeks.

Has Been Little More Than a Year Under Construction.

Within two weeks, if the weather is fair, water can be turned into the new 10,000,000 gallon reservoir at West Duluth.

For the last month the contractor has had a race against time to complete the job before winter set in. If the concrete work had been left in an unfinished condition during the winter months, much of it would have been damaged, if not ruined, and it was therefore necessary to complete it before the first snow, at all costs.

The contractor, P. McDonnell, was handicapped by the scarcity of labor. It was necessary to pay men $2.50 a day to induce them to go to the suburbs to work, and even at that figure it was almost impossible to keep a full crew.

The men worked overtime and Sundays to finish the job, and now it is practically complete and will be ready for water in two weeks, unless some unexpected delays occur.

The reservoir was begun in the summer of 1905, and it has consequently been a little more than a year in course of construction. The plans were drawn in the city engineer's office, and all the work of inspection was in the charge of that department, Robert Brunner, being the inspector in charge.

Between 60,000 and 65,000 cubic yards of earth were excavated and the hole left is 344 feet in length by 280 feet in depth, and 25 feet deep.

No solid rock was encountered in the excavation, as careful borings were made before the work was begun. It was almost entirely in clay, hard pan, and quicksand, with a rather too liberal percentage of the latter to make it easy work for the contractor.

The embankment is overlaid with six inches of concrete and rolled with a corrugated roller. The "wash" is lined with Kettle River sandstone blocks of the kind that are used on the streets of the city. The total cost of the reservoir will be approximately $38,500, which was the contract price.

In addition to increasing the storage supply of the water department, the reservoir will act as a supply in case the main pipe line connecting the central part of the city with West Duluth should break. The reservoir is kept filled by gravity, as it is on a level with the reservoir in the East end.

Should the main pipe line to West Duluth break, the new reservoir can supply the western end of the city with water for several days, while the break is being repaired.

The cost of the reservoir was about the same as that of a new trunk line to West Duluth would have been.

In addition to acting as a safeguard for West Duluth, the new reservoir also makes more nearly certain the water supply for the whole city. Should the pumping machinery break down, or should the main trunk from Lakewood break, the West Duluth reservoir could supply the entire city with water for two days. The reservoir already constructed could supply the city, at its normal rate of consumption, for four days, so that there would be a supply on hand for six days, which should be ample time to repair any ordinary break in the line.

In the new reservoir there will be no danger of the water becoming tepid, as was the case in the Fifteenth avenue east tank.

Five feet below the surface is a valve which can be drawn off the warm surface water in the summer months, and keep the supply cool.

In addition to this fact, there is another feature that will insure fresh cool water all of the time. Arrangements are now being made to supply Proctor with its water from the West Duluth reservoir. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern road is planning to construct a long main leading from the West Duluth tank to the Proctor shops, with a pumping station at West Duluth. This will keep the water in constant circulation through the mains, and the supply in the new reservoir will never become stagnant.

HIGH SCHOOL'S FIRST BIG GAME OF SEASON

Mechanics Arts Team of St. Paul Believed to be Strong.

Philomathian Club Organizes—Freshmen Hold Meeting.

The last week has seen several changes in the football situation at the high school. Whether they have been for the better or worse remains to be seen. The game with the Mechanic Arts team this afternoon will be the determining factor.

This is the first hard game of the season. The others have all been played against teams which were obviously at a disadvantage. Either their weight was less, they were the pick of a smaller school, or they had not had the discipline and training which are the result of a good coach's work. However, the Mechanic Arts men are from a large city and are probably well trained. The teams will therefore be more evenly matched than in any of the other games. The change of coaches at the middle of the season would seem to be a serious setback to some, but the boys do not so regard it. Coach Leigh has been present a great deal of the time during the practising of the team under Findlay. His tactics will therefore be much the same and it will not be as if a coach had been secured who was unfamiliar with their style of play. The members of the team do not blame Findlay in the least for leaving, as he received a much larger offer for his services and has left them under the guidance of a first-class coach.

Last Monday a short meeting for boys only was called. Capt. McDevitt explained that the object of the meeting was to get out more men for the second team. He said that during the previous week not enough men had turned up to make up a second team, and declared that it was a disgrace to the school that so little interest was being shown. He also said that the team would sooner or later be defeated by some strong opponent unless given this support. The team had done all it could do to win, and now it is up to the others to help. There has been some talk of giving D's to the second team, and if this were decided upon it would no doubt create considerable interest among the boys as all desire the coveted letter. The experience which they will receive will help them in trying for the team in future years. There are many reasons for getting out even if they have not enough spirit to get out for the good of the school.

Capt. McDevitt said that if the boys will form a good second team, the first team will promise to make a hard fight for the state championship, but if not it might as well quit the season right now. Owing to the condition of the weather during the past week the ground has bee rather slipper for scrimmage work against a second team. However, the boys have been out working under the direction of Coach Leigh, and have accomplished as much as possible.

This is the first game for which the admission charged has been half a dollar, and as it promises to be an exciting one the boys hope to draw a large crowd and clear up a good sum of money.

For the purpose of selling tickets in a systematic manner the boys held a meeting Thursday afternoon. Different boys were assigned various parts of the business district to cover and in this way they will be able to canvass a great deal of territory in a short time. Many business men who did not want season tickets signified their willingness to buy single tickets to the bug games. The boys are relying on this promise and expect to sell quite a number down town.

Manager Hicken has not et received a reply from the Minneapolis Central team as to whether it can play the high school team, so the game is still doubtful.

FRESHMEN ORGANIZE.

It was anextremely noisy and excited mob of freshmen that flocked into the assembly hall Wednesday to hold their first class meeting as members of the high school. There were about 400 of them without any leader and as the natural thing for them to do was to talk, the result was rather suggestive of pandemonium broken loose. As their idea of how to conduct a meeting were extremely vague, Principal Smith came to the rescue and directed the assemblage.

Mr. Smith spoke briefly to the class, telling the members of the part they were to play in the school life, and reminding them that they must be in every possible way a credit and a help to the school.

"You have met here to organize," he said, "in order that you may become acquainted with each other, and by the unity which will result, increase the power of the class and intensify your affection for it. These meetings are the means of creating a class spirit which is something that every class should have."

Mr. Smith then explained that one social event is allotted to them as Freshmen. This is the Freshman spread which comes off just before the close of the school year.

After Mr. Smith had closed his remarks a temporary chairman was elected. Donald Warner received the largest number of votes, but as he was found to be absent, Charles Arbrogast took the chair. Louis Fisher was appointed temporary secretary. The nominations were then opened for president, and Robert Donaldson, Charles Evans, Arnold Burg and Russell Mather were the nominees. In a warm contest, in which plenty of spirit was displayed, Russell Mather was chosen to lead the class in its initial year. Mr. Mather was called on for a speech but excused himself. Ruth Erickson was elected vice president. In accordance with Mr. Smith's request the officers took seats on the stage after being elected. Hazel Aske was chosen secretary, and took charge of the minutes for the remainder of the meeting. As the treasurer was the next officer to be elected, Mr. Smith advised the members to select someone who had already had some experience in this line, and one who had some executive ability. In an exciting contest Harold Feetham won out from his opponents.

The next election was that of football captain for the team, with which the Freshmen will endeavor to defeat the sophomores in the annual game. Bennie Nelson was unanimously elected to this position amid considerable applause. He will get the men out soon to practice, as there is not any too much time to get into shape before the end of the season.

The class then proceeded to the election of mascot, and as Arthur Helmer received the largest number of votes, he will fill that office. It is the custom to appoint both a yell and a color committee. The yell committee composes a yell which it submits to the class for approval, and the color committee gets samples of different colored ribbons, from which the class colors are selected by vote. The president was empowered to appoint both of these committees and they will probably make reports at the next meeting.

The Freshmen did not elect their Zenith board at the meeting. Mr. Smith advised them to wait until the next meeting, as they will be better acquainted then and will have a clearer idea of whom they desire for these important offices. The secretary of the class will keep all the necessary annals for the Zenith until then, and as that is all there is to do just now, there is no hurry in electing them. As it took considerable time to transact the business and many of the members were anxious to leave, it was decided to leave several matters over until the next meeting, which will be held in four weeks. The sergeants-at-arms will be elected then and the amount of the class dues decided upon. Considering the size of the class and the small expense necessary to take it through the year, it is believed it ought to come out with a large balance in the treasury next spring.

PHILOMATHIAN SOCIETY.

The popular and exclusive feminine Philomathian society has again made its appearance as a high school organization. The society is just beginning its second year, and the fact that there were more than one hundred and thirty girls present at the first meeting is a forceful tribute to the attraction which it holds for them. For the enlightenment of any who are not familiar with the work of the society this clause from its constitution is given:

"The purpose of this organization is to enable its members to become familiar with parliamentary tactics, to develop a cultured musical and literary taste, to increase their store of general knowledge, to keep in touch with the current events of the day, to improve their general style of delivery, and to derive pleasure from the association with each other."

The society has well served the purpose for which it was organized and is starting in its second year with confidence that the society is going to be more popular and interesting than ever, and there is not the least doubt that it will be a great success.

Those who belonged to the society last year held a short business meeting on Monday night for the election of officers and to make the preliminary arrangements for the work of the year. The Freshmen were not present as the constitution provides that only the three upper classes shall have a voice in the election of officers. The following were elected: President, Gertrude Hoopes, senior class; vice president, Delia Smith, junior class; second vice president, Madeline Miller, sophomore class; and secretary, Marie Bird, senior class. As the Freshmen are entitled to the office of treasurer this election was postponed until the first regular meeting.

The regular meeting was held Thursday night with an attendance of one hundred and thirty. The Freshmen immediately chose Ruth Miller as treasurer. Marjorie Morrow, last year's treasurer, reported $1.50 in the treasury. It was decided to appoint a committee to amend the article in the constitution which requires the members to vote by ballot. After the business had been treansacted the program was begun.

Pearl Hector spoke of the plan of the society for the year, its aim and the duties and responsibilities of the members.

At every meeting a talk will be given on some current musical or literary topic, and another on the life of some great woman of the past or present. Music and declamation will also be prominent in the work of the members. It is planned that the members of each class who belong to the society shall give a play. If sufficient talent exists among the pupils these plays will be written by them.

After Miss Hector's talk a piano solo was delightfully rendered by Jessie Gibson. Margaret Culkin gave a recitation entitled "The Soul of the Violin," which came in for a generous share of applause. This closed the program.

The executive committee, consisting of the officers of the association and two of the English teachers has made the program short, as they intend to lay especial stress on quality rather than quantity. After the meeting adjourned members were enrolled for the present year.

Football Reception.

The big reception to be given by the Seniors to the St. Paul football team will take place tonight at the high school building. The committee has made all the preparations and everything is in readiness for the big event. The hall will be decorated with the colors of the Senior class, the Duluth high school and those of the Mechanic Arts high school, in honor of the visiting team. Dainty souvenir dance cards have been procured by the committee, and as everything is going to be just right, the reception promises to be quite a swell affair.

A reception is given every year to one of the Twin City teams. They are very enjoyable and invariably attract a large number of the boys and girls, particularly those who like to dance. This year's event will be no exception to this rule and a large enough attendance is expected to pay all the expenses.

High School Notes.

The football practice in the mud this week has been rather precarious business. On one of the particularly moist afternoons several bets were made among the spectators as to whether they were witnessing a football game or a swimming contest.

* * *

The members of the football team will breathe easy for another month. Report cards were handed out last Monday and none of them flunked.

* * *

Now that the Freshmen have organized and a football captain been elected, they will no doubt devote their energies to forming a team that will give the Sophs a hard run for their money. They have a large class to pick from and should turn out a strong eleven.

Modish Styles In the Popular Wind Veil

Never, even in the land of the sultan, have veils been more popular with womankind than here at present. Every other woman one meets on the street is enshrouded in at least one bit of flowing chiffon or lace, and sometimes two. Brown is the color par excellence which is most modish, and every shade, from the warm red and golden brown, to the darkest Havana and wood browns, are used. In fact, so great is the demand for brown veiling that there is likely to occur the same dearth in the product that was experienced with long kid gloves of last season and the white silk ones of early summer.

Everything in brown veiling is smart, one style no more than another, and it is fortunate that it is so, for the woman who sallies forth with the firm intention of securing a certain pattern, soon discovers to her sorrow that it is like hunting for a needle in a haystack, and forthwith meekly takes what is offered her.

One of the most modish patterns in vogue, but one which is most difficult to find in stock, simply because of its popularity, is a plain dotted net, either with the ring dot or the solid dot scattered over the surface, the edge finished simply with a hem of the material, or else an accordion pleating of chiffn.

The Brussels net veils come in a variety of patterns, from the rose design, showing tiny roses scattered delicately over a plain net surface, to the more elaborate vines and flowers, with heavy ornate borders, which give the wearer the appearance of being tattoed.

Fancy meshes with ornate, scroll-like borders, are fancied by some, though the style selected is largely a matter of taste rather than a mandate of fashion.

As to the method of draping the new wind veils, they are attached in three ways. Perhaps the smartest, which follows the style most modish in Paris, is the long veil, reaching quite to the waist in the back, which is draped artistically about the hat, pinned up slightly in the back, and caught together at the nape of the neck with a fancy veil pin, the length of material flowing free from that point to the waistline, and often below. The style is extreme, and it takes a woman with considerable chic to wear it.

Simply draping the veil easily about the face, catching it comfortably to the brim of the hat at the back, and allowing it to faill gracefully about the neck and shoulders, is perhaps the style most popular. An adaptation of the same style to the French idea is obtained by pinning the folds of the veil at the nape of the neck with a fancy pin.

Preservation of the Teeth Depends Upon Their Care

Brush Them Up and Down, Never Across, Says Surgeon-Dentist—Saturate Soda Better Than Too Much Powder for Cleaning.

Teeth must not be neglected, as upon their condition depends the state of a person's health as well as a certain amount of physical attractiveness. It is as essential to brush one's teeth after eating, on rising, and before retiring, as it is to bathe daily, declares a prominent surgeon dentist, and those who are careless in this matter suffer not only from defective teeth, but often from ill health.

"Begin the day by scrubbing the teeth," he says, "never forget it is as necessary for cleanliness as the tub. Start by rinsing out the mouth with clear, cold water. Then saturate the brush in fresh running water, add paste and brush the teeth vigorously up and down. Don't forget that the inside of them needs cleansing just as much as the outer surfaces, and be sure to brush around the wisdom teeth that are so far back. Scrub across the tops, too, so no stain will cling to the small crevices. After this process brush off the teeth with clear cold water, and then rinse the mouth with a solution of bi-carbonate of soda.

"Never brush across the teeth, for this motion not only wears away the enamel, but is also likely to irritate the gums and cause them to recede. This crosswise motion in brushing, especially at the turn in the mouth that comes where the eye teeth are, is one reason so many of these teeth have ragged flesh above them. Always brush up and down.

"Before retiring treat the teeth in the same way to make sure no particles of food remain between the crevices, for in my opinion it is the decaying food left in the mouth over night that not only makes the enamel defective, but often causes physical ills, such as sore gums, irritation of the throat, etc. To avoid such painful experiences, brush the teeth thoroughly after dining, and when convenient between meals after eating such delicacies as fruit or sweets.

"For the after meal scrubbing I think paste is unnecessary, and advise the use of saturate soda instead of clear water. The actual brushing should be done in the same way as the outside. In preparing saturate soda, which should have a place on every washstand and be as much a toilet necessity as soap, I would make it in quantities, using about four tablespoonfuls of a good quality of baking soda to a pint of cold water. This should have a strong soda flavor, and if it has not, more of the powder should be added to give it strength. If the taste is unpleasant, add a few drops of a solution of peppermint or winter-green to make it an agreeable wash. As to the cleanser used in the morning and at night, I advocate paste, for liquids are only antiseptic, and powders are, as a rule, washed off the brush before enough can be dissolved and rubbed on the teeth to really clean them.

"Thorough cleansing, however, depends more upon the brush bristles than the wash or paste used, and for this reason a tooth brush cannot be too carefully selected. Never get a harsh one, nor a brush with a smooth surface, or a variety with soft bristles, but buy the kind that has irregular bristles of medium length and width, so that it can be used with comfort, and with the feeling that the crevices and spaces between the teeth are properly cleansed. Get a new one every five or six weeks, and be particular to wash the bristles in a 5 per cent solution of boric acid every four or five days, and in this way keep them in a hygenic condition that makes them safe to use.

"Toothpicks are, in my opinion, unnecessary in the care of teeth, for it is only occasionally that particles sticking in the crevices or between the teeth cannot be removed with a brush. When some sort of sharp thing is needed use a quill, or a rubber band or floss silk, but never put a wooden tooth pick into the mouth, for I consider them dangerous, as I know of many cases of ulceration caused by a piece of wood sticking into the gums. Not infrequently tooth-brush bristles cause similar trouble by breaking off and pricking the gums.

"With the use of floss be exceedingly careful that any fillings between the teeth are smooth, for if they are a bit ragged the silk is likely to catch on them and pull out the gold, or platinum, or else loosen it so that a new one will have to be put in immediately to prevent pain.

"Another thing to be remembered about the gums is not to scrub them too vigorously, especially if they are sensitive, for when tender they will bleed from the slightest irritation and this is not only unpleasant, but if continued from day to day often results in that is called "Riggs' disease," or a falling away of the gums. Once contracted this trouble is difficult to control, for when the tissues recede and leave the roots of the teeth exposed it is hard to get the gums in normal condition again.

"The best home treatment I know for his trouble is saturate soda or bi-carbonate of soda, used freely as a wash, and also in massaging the gums. The soda solution is soothing to the irritated flesh and is also strengthening. In massaging rub the gums with a rotary motion, from the roots downward so that any pus that might have formed between the gums will be forced out, for if left around the roots the foreign matter will decay and may eat into them and ruin the teeth.

"Receding gums, a trouble that is largely prevalent among grown persons, is caused also by accumulations of tartar that form on the teeth beneath the flesh and make the gums swell. This tartar, a result of the lime deposit in the body, gathers about the parts of the teeth that are beneath the flesh and so irritates the gums that in time they fall away, and if the disease is not checked the teeth will become loose and drop out.

"There is another kind of tartar, a soft deposit, that can be readily seen with the naked eye as it forms on the teeth above the gums and can often be picked off with a quill.

"There is another deposit, a black kind, that frequently gets into the crevices in the teeth and covers small irregularities. This one, however, is harmless, for it is caused by the acids taken into the mouth.

"While careful brushing is the first essential in treating teeth to preserve them in good condition, no one should neglect to go to a dentist every three or four months to have them thoroughly inspected, for by going frequently to a surgeon-dentist much suffering and incidentally large bills for work, such as fillings, or perhaps pulling of the teeth may be avoided, for if a small decayed tooth is cleaned and filled before it has made much inroad in a tooth ,the latter will not only be stronger and look better, but it will last longer. Unless a tooth is badly decayed and aches or ulcerates there is no way for a person to know his or her teeth are not in good condition, hence I advise frequent trips to a dentist, who can find and correct any defects. Particular attention should be paid to the first two bi-cuspids, for their walls are thin and, as a rule, they are crowded together at the turn in the gums, and frequently decay and have to be pulled because they are neglected and do not ache or cause any pain until they are in too bad a condition to save."

The Importance of a Correct Sitting Posture

BY MARGARET MIXTER.

Probably not one woman in ten, even in these days of universal physical culture, fully realizes the importance of a correct posture in sitting, the general tendency being to secure the most luxurious possible pose in the most comfortable chair in the room.

Except for invalids and elderly persons arm chairs are a mistake, and young women and growing girls who have a preference for this form of ease are unwittingly doing their figures a great deal of harm; an ordinary straight-backed chair is more suitable for resting purposes, its simplicity of outline affording a natural mold for correct pose.

A proper sitting position requires that the spine shall be kept straight without effort, and in order that the upper part, with the weight it supports, shall be adequately carried, the sitter should occupy a position in her chair which enables the lower part of the spine to be braced against the back of the seat.

The chair back being straight, the shoulders may rest lightly against it, although it is better if the body is maintained in this position without support at the shoulder blades. The pose throws no strain upon the ligaments of the spine, and at the same time allows a proper position of the shoulders, as well as of the lungs, stomach, and similar important organs which should never be cramped or displaced even slightly.

While correctly shaped corsets are a wonderful aid to the figure they are by no means the be-all-and-end-all of this important question, and the woman who values her carriage and appearance should never allow her body to lapse into slovenly, ungraceful attitudes. The careless one sinks into a chair with an air of complete relaxation, and occupies it as gracefully as would a sack of potatoes, every muscle loose, and her shoulders and head drooping forward to the detriment of throat and bust, to say nothing of more vital organs.

Or else she sits anyhow, one arm thrown over the back of a chair, with the result that the opposite shoulder is depressed in a most ugly manner, while her body is perched awkwardly upon the seat, with one knee supporting the other limb; a habit, by the way, sometimes productive of appendicitis and similar troubles.

Nor should the arms be folded—a habit very common among school teachers. That position not only strains the spinal column but flattens the bust, throws unnecessary strain and weight upon the stomach and diaphragm, and retards the processes of digestion and respiration.

In warm weather the body often feels that the effort of maintaining an upright posture is almost impossible. Placing the arms well behind the back occasionally while seated, thoroughly expanding the chest, has a wonderfully rejuvenating effect.

The use of one of the many "exercises" so largely advertised at the present time is much to be advocated for in this way muscles are gently and firmly but not unduly developed, and the throat, neck and chest benefit in a most surprising manner, to the great advantage of the general carriage. Even in repose the figure should be studied, because it is when the body is lax that ugly poses are formed which insidiously become permanent, unless the mind is unconsciously continually checking them.

Generally speaking, it is while a girl is growing that her figure is determined, and mothers should be on the lookout at this period to eradicate at the first signs any tendency to ugliness or carelessness of pose and carriage appearing in their daughters.

The Workingman's Noonday Lunch

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Strong men require strong meat and the luncheon, dainty and delicate, that is suited to the children's lunch basket, would be totally inadequate for stalwart toilers, who need plenty of fuel to keep the fires of physical energy a-burning.

The quantity of food a day for a healthy adult man of average height and weight, engaged in a laborious occupation, is estimated by physiologists as from fifty to sixty ounces of solid food and from fifty to eighty ounces of fluid. This makes a brave showing by the year of one or one and a half tons of food and drink.

To keep up the daily averages and concentrate the noon lunch so as to make it easy carrying and at the same time, satisfying, is something of a problem that well repays study. Many a man has really been driven to drink because his food supply has been inadequate and he had to "brace up" on something stronger.

Food is required for the body for two chief purposes—to generate heat, that is energy; and to produce and maintain the structures under the influence of life and exertion. A well balanced ration, according to dietians, should contain 60 per cent or more of the carbohydrates or fat for heat and energy to 20 per cent protein or material. Great mental exertion as well as physical, requires a large amount of tissue forming food and heat and energy material.

For the protein elements there should be meat, cheese, nuts, eggs, cured herrings or sturgeon, dried peas, lentils or beans in some form, while carbohydrates are found in the different kinds of bread, cake, dried fruits, cereals of all kinds, sugars, honey, maple syrup and the like. Foods that contain both needful elements are nuts, chocolate and cocoa, oatmeal, rye and barley Mincemeat contains a lot of pure material and will seldom disagree with any man actively engaged. Aiming, therefore, to provide substantial, satisfying luncheons, let me suggest several dishes to vary the menu from day to day.

Home-Made Head Cheese.

Split a small pig's head and wash in cold water. Place with two well cleansed feet in a kettle over the fire, cover with cold water and add a tablespoonful of salt. As soon as it begans to boil, add three onions and one carrot sliced, a bay leaf and a tablespoonful whole peppers. Cover and cook until the meat separates from the bones. Strain the broth and leave over night. In the morning remove the fat, and if there is more than three pints of the liquor boil until it is reduced to that quantity. Add the meat, stir and cook five minutes, then pour into moulds. Slice for luncheon. If the head cheese is to be kept for a long time, put it into a stone jar and cover with vinegar.

Little Mince Pies.

To make the mince meat take one bowl (pint) of well cooked lean beef chopped in the finest pieces and measured after chopping, three bowls of tart apples coarsely chopped, one-half bowl suet chopped, one bowl seeded raisins, the same amount currants, a quarter bowl citron shredden, a tablespoonful each powdered cinnamon, cloves and grated nutmeg, a teasspoonful salt and a half teaspoonful pepper. Add a bowl of sugar and sweet cider to make quite moist. Let the mincemeat boil up ten minutes, then pack in a stone jar. When ready to bake line small, rather deep pie tins with pie crust, fill with the mince meat, put three or four large raisins on top, cover with a crust and bake in a moderate oven. In cold weather it is a good plan to bake three or four of these little pies and keep ahead to use as needed. The tins can be purchased at any store for 5 cents, and the pies can be left on the tins for the lunch basket, or slid off on to a paper plate as preferred. On the day that you serve mince pie be sure and add a generous bit of cheese to go with it.

Little individual apple or prune pies may be made in the same way for the dinner pail.

Home Made Fried Cakes.

Stir to a cream two cups sugar and four tablespoonfuls softened butter or drippings. Add one cup each milk and water, two well beaten eggs, four teaspoonfuls baking powder sifted in four cups flour, a teaspoonful salt and cinnamon or nutmeg to taste. Add enough more flour to make a soft dough, cut in rings or twists and drop into a kettle of boiling fat. When the cakes rise and brown on one side turn on the other without piercing the cruller. As soon as browned on both sides lift out onto butcher's paper to drain. When nearly cool these may be rolled in powdered sugar if so desired.

THE HOUSTON EXPERIMENT.

One Year of "Commission Rule" in the Texas City.

When Galvestor was destroyed by its tidal wave, the problem of borrowing money to build the great sea wall and raise the grade of the city was simplified by putting local government into the hands of a commission, says the New York World.

The plan worked so well that the city of Houston, the largest city in Texas, followed the example. One year ago Mayor Rice and four commissioners took office. The citizens are said to be satisfied with a system more like Washington than a self-governing city.

Houston's reason for making the change was that its government was pretty bad—probably not more corrupt than that of many American cities, but careless, costly and inefficient. The best men failed to take part in it, and it was run by professional politicians.

When the new administration took charge the city was laboring under a floating indebtedness of more than $350,000. Obviously, the first thing to do was to study the situation. Mayor Rice appointed four committees—on finance, water, light and health; police and fire, and streets, bridges and parks. Each commissioner was chairman of one of the committees, among which the responsibility for the conduct of the government was to be divided.

Not long ago, one of the commissioners being asked how the administration had accomplished so much, replied significantly: "Well, we have gone about with a calking iron and a bucket of oakum, and everywhere we have found a leak we have chinked it up." That has been the policy of the commission—to prevent useless expenditure of funds an to collect all revenues justly due, in short, to apply to the city government the same business principles that are followed in the commercial world by managers of other large corporations.

One of the first strokes that attracted attention was the wiping out of he floating indebtedness of over $350,000. This put the city on a cash basis for the first time in so long that old residents are not able to recall the year that such a condition existed. At present bills are met monthly.

The policy of making improvements out of revenues has been inaugurated, and the city is preparing to lay about three miles of first class pavement and erect three new public schools.

An experiment in municipal ownership is to be made, a deal having been closed with the Houston Water company whereby the city is to come into possession of its plant, together with all mains, connections, privileges, etc. The consideration is to be $901,000, of which about half is a bonded indebtedness, the other half to be paid in cash. The taxpayers have authorized the bond issue.

A good financial turn made was the sale of the franchise over two streets of the city to the Yoakum interests for a consideration of $100,000.

Other matters of moment are:

Reduction of tax rate from $2 to $1.90.

Passage of uniform sidewalk ordinance.

Passage of an ordinance protecting the bayou from oil and dumpings.

Increasing the time of operations of the sewerage pumping station.

The repairing of the filter beds.

The inauguration of a first class street sweeping system.

The reorganization of the various departments, including the police, the fire, the engineering, the garbage and the scavenger.

Hair Dressing Modes for Children

Without a pretty bow tied some place on her hair, no little girl thinks her coiffure is complete, for this season the fashion of wearing ribbons is more pronounced than it was during the summer, when rosettes and loops formed a substitute for hats and bonnets. Fortunately, unlike styles affected by grown-ups, there are no particular places designated for bows or loops and there is no etiquette to be followed in the custom of tying ribbons, for the rosette is just as smart as the butterfly bow that has long been familiar, and either may be worn at the side of a small child's head, at the back or on top, and will be equally correct.

Large bows will be much used this fall and coming winter, the size depending entirely upon the shape of the little one's face and the style in which the hair is dressed. Even the color, width and finish of the ribbon is a matter of individual taste, for a bright red bow will be selected by some mothers while others will prefer checked or, perhaps, light blue, delicate pink, or pure white for their daughters, and any one of these will be equally good form. Even black bows will be worn, but not as much as the colors for small girls. Taffeta is considered more girlish than satin ribbon. The width of hair ribbon is varied, two and two and a quarter inches wide being best liked, while others that tie into quite as attractive bows are not more than an inch or three-quarters of an inch in width.

Wearing a large butterfly bow at the left side of the head will be a popular style among girls of from six to ten years of age. This bow is most effective when the hair is parted on the right side and the ends brought over and tied with the ribbon on the left side down near the ear, or higher up on the head if it is more becoming in the latter position.

Another style of hair dressing that looks well with a large butterfly bow at the left is done by parting the hair on both sides and at the back, separating the strands on top of the head into a sort of square. This is tied and kept together with a bow.

An old fashion of coiffure for a young girl is to part the hair down the middle of the head, and at either side just above the ears put on a rosette, with a broad piece of ribbon crossing the hair and connecting the ornaments at either side.

A large bow behind a pompadour is also pretty for girls who no longer wear their hair loose, or in short braids at the back. Bows tied directly in front, where they fall over the forehead, is a fashion that is becoming to real young girls, especially those who have curls.

Correct Modes in Maids' Aprons

Princess Style Newest for Waitresses--Are Smart and Practical--"V" Pattern Pretty for Serving and Dainty Round Design for Parlor Maids.

NEW WAITRESS' APRON IN PRINCESS STYLE.

Waitresses' aprons made princess style are the newest thing this fall in correct dress for house servants, and all mistresses who keep their establishmentss up-to-date will doubtless have their serving maids don the smart looking dress accessories for every-day wear. These stylish princess patterns have an individuality that even the coquettish parlor or ladies' maids aprons lack, for in addition to being serviceable they fit the figure almost like a frock and are much neater in appearance than those formerly used with bibs. They are quite as practical, too, for the princess effect, brought about by introducing a long panel that reaches from the bust line to the bottom of the skirt, covers just as much of the gown as the old-time bib aprons did.

Made of sheer lawn with embroidery or lace insertion outlining the princess panels these aprons are pretty and becoming to almost any type of maid. The tops of these panels are square, and finished either with hemstitching, embroidery or lace edging to match the trimming used on the body of the garment. At either end, to hold the panels in place across the chest, there are straps or bretelles of embroidery or the plain material with ruffle of lace that pass over the shoulders, cross in the back, and are pinned securely in place beneath the ribbon ties in the back.

There is another new and pretty style of apron for serving maids. It is called the "V" pattern, because the upper part that answers to the old-fashioned bib is made in the shape of a "V" of heavy embroidery, lace, or of sheer lawn trimmed with a pretty filmy insertion. This "V" starts with straps or bretelles at the shoulders that join at the waist. The tops are kept in place by the embroidery bretelles that are fastened into the belt line at the back.

With these smart aprons the regulation dark frock with stiff collars and cuffs will be worn, and for a headdress a plain white bow of sheer linen or lawn, with hemstitched end, will be correct for maids this season.

Ladies' or parlor maids' aprons are decidedly "chic" in new designs. They are made of dotted swiss, either in large or small designs, and being round or oval in shape, are most becoming to slender young women. Unlike those used by other house servants, these little aprons are worn more as a pretty addition to the severe black dresses than for any practical purpose, for they reach only to the knees, and not beyond the hip line at the sides. Some are made with bibs round or oval in shape, to match the aprons proper, while others have nothing but insertion above the waist line. As dainty as the aprons are the strings tipped with embroidery or lace, that when tied make a fluffy bow in the back, and incidentally hold the garment in place.

The bibs on these smart aprons have no straps or bretelles to hold them up, so that pretty pins must be used, and these, if in enamel or gold, make the garment decidedly decorative.

Besides being unusual in shape, they have ruffles of the material or of lace or embroidery around the edges, and half way between the waist line and the bottom are two little pockets, into which delicate lace-trimmed handkerchiefs may be coyly and carelessly placed. Hand-embroidered ladiesmaids' aprons will be worn in establishments where the mistresses can afford to pay for the hand work, which is most elaborate. Elaborately curled and curved floral designs and scroll patterns are worked on the sheer linen and lawn and on the strings, all of which make these garments most attractive.

The caps worn with these aprons should be bows, and hand embroidered to match. Made like those used by the waitresses or chambermaids, these little pieces of lingerie for the head are distinguished from those donned by other servants by the narrow ribbon rosettes. Pretty embroidered collars and cuffs in soft lawn or linen complete this costume.

The cook's apron made with a bib is of plain white cambric and entirely covers the skirt, fastening in the back with big wide streamers that may be tied in a pretty bow. The bib with hem-stitching around the edges is square in shape and comes up above the bust line to protect the waist of the gingham or calico dresses worn by these kitchen servants. Straps or bretelles over the shoulders keep it in place. A nine-inch hem at the bottom of the apron stitched by hand saves it from being plain in appearance.

The cook may wear a regulation chef's cap or a plain oval or round piece of lawn with ruffles around the edges to make it more becoming.

SALT CELLARS.

London Evening Standard: It has been discovered that the royal salt cellars which are at the Tower and have been used at coronation banquets from the time of Charles II, have all along been used in an inverted position.

The authorities were deceived, it is said, because each of the salt cellars had what seemed to be feet of the kind seen at the present day, and the officials turned them upside down, inserting a small silver bowl in each of the hollow ends. But what were taken to be feet were nothing more than ears attached to the upped rim. The king has given orders to have the mistake corrected.

Old Pewter Brightened at Home by Simple Methods

Since the craze for collecting old pewter has developed many women have spent hours in their endeavor to try to polish the pieces into something approaching to their former brightness, but, generally speaking, without marked success. Some, of course, prefer that the pieces retain the dull, leaden appearance indicative of old age, while others fancy the brighter pewter.

Very frequently old pewter has become badly oxidized or corroded, and the removal of the incrustration will take time. One of the best methods of cleansing such pieces is by soaking in a bath of soda crystals or borax, as hot as possible, then scrubbing with sand soap. Dry the article then with metal polish, a little petroleum and a woollen cloth, scour until the surface begins to show bright. Wash in soap and water and finish with a final polish of whiting.

A method in vogue among jewelers is to drop the pewter into a bath made of a solution of cyanide of potassium. It will be impossible to obtain this drug without a doctor's prescription, as it is a deadly poison, but, understanding the object for which it is to be used, any reputable person can obtain it in this way. The pewter should remain in the solution until the surface looks bright, then take it out, wash with hot water and soap and dry with a flannel cloth. It would be well to use rubber gloves while using the solution in order to protect the hands.

Another effective way of removing the discolorations is by using a mixture of kerosene and ordinary seashore sand, adding just enough of the oil to moisten the sand. With a coarse piece of canvas apply this to the metal and rub until the surface becomes bright. Any polish containing grease should be avoided if a brilliant finish is desired. Emery cloth or sand paper should not be used, as they will scratch the metal. In order to remove any dents which may have appeared, take a wooden mallet covered with leather, with two or three pieces of curved wood to get into the crevices. Pewter is soft, and a gentle hammering will be all that is necessary to remove the hollows.

New Evening Wrap Model

WRAP FROM "SOMMER."

One of the smartest of evening and reception wraps being shown this fall and a model which will undoubtedly prove very satisfactory is that shown in the illustration. The lines are simple and the style unpretentious.

Deep cream or smoke colored broadcloth forms the foundation of the garment which reaches to within six inches of the bottom of the gown. From a shallow yoke, front and back, depends the material gathered on quite full. Big bishop sleeves end just below the elbow in a smart velvet cuff.

Most striking is the decorating of the wray, which consists of rows of brown velvet ribbon from one and one-half to two inches broad, which trims the bottom yoke and cuffs. Three rows put on plain finish the bottom of the wrap, while the yoke is trimmed horizontally with bands of the same. There is something particularly stunning about this new fall coat model, which, while not pretentious, yet has an air all its own. Any one of the several materials in use for evening wraps may be utilized in constructing the one illustrated, and, lacking the complications of other similar garments being shown for winter, can easily be made by the home dressmaker.

How to Cook a Meal Without Fire

Experiences of a Practical Housekeeper in Using a Fireless Cooker, Constructed at Home at Small Expense—How One Can be Made and What Foods May be Prepared in It.

Cooking without a fire seems a paradox. Even a few years ago we would have laughed at the suggestion, but science and modern invention are every day accomplishing the apparently impossible, and fireless cooking, one of its latest triumphs, promises to be a great boon to the housekeeper, and to our soldiers as well, if the experiments the government is now making prove successful and practical.

The principle is simple and appeals directly to our common sense. When food has been brought to the boiling point the fire can only keep it at that temperature. No matter how much gas or fuel is used, the temperature does not rise above 212 degrees, so that any other means by which that temperature can be sustained, or nearly so, will accomplish the same result. The success of any such device depends upon all the heat being retained by means of an air tight kettle, and by the packing, which surrounds it being a good non-conductor of heat. If the housekeeper or "man of the house" possesses skill with the hammer and some ingenuity, a fireless cooker may be made at home which will prove as satisfactory as the patented article, and as elaborate as the pocketbook allows or taste desires. The one we describe is so simple and inexpensive as to be within the reach of every woman, and absolutely satisfactory if the directions are faithfully followed.

A box is the first requisite, eighteen inches square and eighteen inches deep. If larger it does not matter, but it must not be smaller. Two soap boxes from the grocer's were used for the model. The bottom was taken out of one and it was fastened with cleats on top of the other, making the required depth. The cover was fastened on the back with a piece of leather for hinges, though heavy cloth or felt will do as well, and a hook and loop were screwed into the front to fasten it securely. The kettle used was an eight-quart granite pail with a reasonably tight cover. This cost thirty-five cents at one of the department stores; but any kettle may be used, not smaller than six quarts, if the cover fits tightly. This last is a very important point, and great care must be taken regarding it.

Our kettle is completely sealed by means of a piece of one and a quarter inch pure rubber tubing, which can be bought at any drug store for fifteen cents a yard. The rubber was stretched a little around the inside rim of the cover of the pail, then cut the desired length and the two ends were fastened together by cutting one and slipping it inside the other for a quarter of an inch and tying securely. The rubber ring was then put on the cover exactly as rubbers are put on fruit cans. If any other kettle is used instead of the pail it should have perpendicular sides, for convenience in packing.

The packing used is excelsior, which the drug store contributed, about a barrelful being necessary. The box was lined with newspapers, bottom and sides, allowing enough on the ends and sides to fold over the top when the box was filled. A pad three inches thick, tightly packed with excelsior, made either of cotton cloth or old flannel, was fitted to the bottom of the box and a similar pad made for the top. For packing the sides and filling in tightly around the kettle loose excelsior may be used, but for convenience and to avoid litter it is better to put it in different sized pads or fill old flour bags. The kettle or pail is placed on the pad in the bottom of the box and securely packed on all sides; when lifted out the little nest retains its shape so that the kettle may be slipped in and out quickly each time it is used. Boxes with the excelsior pads, but no kettles, can be bought at one of the department stores from $4 up, according to size, but we have not tried them and so cannot recommend them.

Our cooker is now ready for use. Put the meat or vegetables to be cooked into the kettle, fill with water to within two inches of the top, bring the water to a boil, place the cover on the kettle—if it springs up fasten it down with a wire or string passed through the handles and over the top. After it is securely fastened allow it to boil one minute, which exhausts the air and seals the kettle, bringing the temperature to 212 deg. Be very careful not to let it boil longer, as the steam would blow the cover off and bad burns might result. Take the kettle from the fire, place it quickly in the nest in the box, crowd the packing down firmly on all sides, completely covering it. Place the top pad over, and then the newspapers, close the box cover down and fasten it. The box must be filled and packed as tightly as possible.

The time required for the cooking will vary according to the perfection attained in the construction of the cooker. We find a general rule to be twice as long as over the fire and one hour extra. A six-quart kettle will require longer than the larger size. In cooking anything which requires a long time, like ham, tongue, beets, etc., we place it in the cooker at night and find it thoroughly done in the morning. Meats are especially delicious treated in this way, and much more tender than when cooked over the fire.

A dinner of corn beef and cabbage may be placed in the cooker after breakfast, and the housekeeper spend the entire day away from home with no anxiety lest it burn, returning at dinner time to find it thoroughly cooked and steaming hot. Onions, beets, turnips, baked beans and nearly all vegetables are fine cooked in this way and without odor, steam or heat in the kitchen. The cereals, soups and stews require a little different treatment. They lose no water by evaporation, as when boiled, and must be prepared as if for steaming. Put three parts of water to one of cereal, salt as usual, in a small pail with a tight cover—they come in nickel, granite or agate—if one objects to utilizing old lard pails thoroughly cleaned. After bringing it to the boiling point, place it in the large kettle with boiling water about an inch lower than the top of the small pail. Cover and pack as before. We cook oatmeal for breakfast by starting it on the gas at 10 p. m. and placing it in the cooker. At 7 the next morning it is steaming hot and cooked deliciously. Every housekeeper will soon make her own time table, following the general rule given above. As there is no danger of burning, and the food is kept hot, it is best to allow plenty of time.

Our cooker has been such a success, and we estimate a saving of 50 per cent in gas bills, that we are elaborating the idea, and shall soon have three pails arranged in a box three feet long. We are also contemplating a wire rack, elevated above the water in the pail, to steam foods upon. Many other devices will occur to the housekeeper as she uses it from day to day, for the idea is almost limitless in its scope.

MALAYAN BULL FIGHT.

A Malayan bull fight, in contrast to a Spanish bull fight, is a comparatively tame affair, writes a Pahang correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette. There is little of a show or pageant about it; no huge enclosed ring with its tiers and tiers of seats filled with fashionable Spanish beauties in graceful mantillas waving multicolored fans; no poor blindfolded horses to be tortured, no picadors, no dart planting banderilleros, and no espadas to risk their lives in so-called sport.

In Malaya the bulls and buffaloes only follow their own natural instinct and fight with their own kind, without being goaded on to the combat by having darts plunged into them, and horses not being used there are none of the brutal and disgusting sights too often witnessed in a Spanish bull ring. It is, in fact, bull fighting au naturel, stripped of all artificial cruelties, and if less exciting, is infinitely more sporting, though to Spaniards, all elements of personal danger being omitted, it would doubtless seem a deadly dull affair.

Bidden by the Sultan to a bull fight, I arrived at the appointed place due to time, 2 o'clock, but the Sultan did not put in an appearance until 4 o'clock, the lateness of his arrival being really only custom, for whenever any show of this cort is on the time is invariably given about a couple of hours too early. Just outside the old chief's house, where we assembled, was the ring, a primitive arrangement, merely an open earth space not fenced in any way. Around the circle squatted a motley crowd of about three or four hundred natives, who had put on their best "bajas" and "sarongs" for the function.

The bulls were led in by the nose, each by a Malay, and when within a few yards of each other let go and then followed a pushing match, their horns for the most part being locked together, with a breakaway now and again and then another bump together. The two bulls in this case were badly matched—father and son, the latter a much more powerful animal with stouter horns. The fight lasted only about six minutes, when "pa" bull turned tail and fled, chased by his son.

A general stampede took place, after an opening had been forced, every one rushing after the bulls to secure them and bring them back for their wounds, which were very slight, to be examined.

Next day I went up river again to the place fixed on. This show gave much better sport than the other, as the buffaloes were immensely powerful brutes and very well matched, the fight lasting about ten minutes before one got a wound in the corner of his eye and in consequence abruptly turned tail and was chased off the ground by his opponent. In these fights one buffalo always defends his home and will only fight when another comes into his own particular haunt.

In nearly every case the one defending his home proved the victor, spurred on, I suppose, by the patriotic feeling. As the fight lasted only a short time, the Sultan sent for another couple of buffaloes, but when they arrived, after a twenty minutes wait, they absolutely refused to fight and were obliged to be led away again. When buffaloes are really well matched, as in the first fight, there is great excitement among the Malays, but in the ordinary way one buffalo turns tail after a few minutes charging and snorting and the whole thing is over.

"He that wants a good deal must not ask for a little," nor must he that wants a thing very badly be content to ask for it but once—unless, as does usually happen, one publication of a Herald want ad. "does the business." print"—he can let the types do that.

COMMUNAL LIFE IN THE SWISS ALPINE VALLEYS

It is Most Easily Observed at Zermatt, Which Lies at the Foot of the Matterhorn---Basic Notion is that the Necessities of Life Should be Free to All Who Will Take Them---To Insure this, Most of the Land is Held in Common---Free Fuel, Free Pasturage and Free Building Material for Alpine Burghers.

(Copyright, 1906, by Dexter Marshall.)

Zermatt, Oct. 18.—There are places in Switzerland where the ancient, communal organization of human society runs somewhat closer to the old lines, but nowhere else has it been brought more directly into touch with the twentieth century life of the outside world than in this Alpine valley; nowhere else can it be studied more readily than here.

Measured by the surveyor's chain, the distance between the village of Zermatt, at the valley's upper, southern end, overshadowed by the weird, obelisk-like mountain known as the Matterhorn, is only twenty-one and a half miles from the great trunk railway line, which connect Paris and the civilized West with Constantinople and the mysterious East by way of the new Simplon tunnel. This distance is covered by a narrow gauge road, which leaves the Rhone Valley and the trunk line at Visp, or Viege, and follows the river Visp all th eway hero.

In the summer season, when it is thronged with visitors from the ends of the earth, Zermatt is only sixteen hours from the French capital, and twenty-two from London. But its people, the real Zermatters, who dwell here the year round, are still almost as primitive in their ways of living, if not as unsophisticated in all things, as were their forefathers, who, crowded out of the Rhone Valley, climbed this steep and narrow cleft in the heart of the high Alps in search of homes and a livelihood, some 700 or 800 years ago.

They had fairly to force their living from the scanty patches of soil which was divided among all the householders, and so it is today, at least ostensibly. But there have been some changes. Perhaps, in the old days even, there were times and circumstances which made the practice a little different from the theory.

The total permanent population of the commune of Zermatt at present is between 700 and 800; 715 by the last census. Guides, federal and railroad officials, the keepers of one or two cafes, frequented only by the natives, and a few others excepted, they all make their living mainly by raising the scanty crops—hay, potatoes and a few vegetables—that will grow at this altitude, 5,315 feet, and keeping cows and goats.

As a matter of course, the guides profit directly from the tide of sightseers which has surged this way since the sixties, when the Matterkorn was first climbed. Indirectly, through the workings of the communal system, everybody should receive some benefit from the money spent here by the visiting thousands every summer.

Zermatt proper receives a comparatively small share, however, since the profits of the hotels and the boarding houses are taken away at the end of every season by the proprietors who live here only three or four months every year. So also is the money earned in wages by the waiters, the chambermaids, the porters, the clerks and all of the other hotel employes. So also are the profits from the sales of photographs and curios, alpenstocks and ice axes. Leaving out the guides, of whom there are about eighty, and a very small number of drivers and common laborers, the 1,500 to 2,000 people who cater to the needs, the comforts and the pleasure of the visitors leave Zermatt at the end of each season and take good care to stay away till the beginning of the next one. Their oiling to the valley's steep and rocky walls, and the narrow, crooked strip which lies at their feet; so, also, do the Zermatters of today. They held most of the land in common, the community deciding how much each of its members was entitled to use every year, and so do their successors.

The theory was that every man was entitled to whatever he needed which nature had to give that he was able and willing to take. Pasturage for his cows and goats, timber and stone with which to build his chalets—house and barn—wood to cook his food with—these were to be as free as air and light. He had to work to get them, but no one could prevent him from taking them. The same plan is theoretically in force today. When there was a surplus, it money is not spent for the general good of Zermatt.

Some of the guides, even, especially those not born in the valley, are unwilling to suffer the dullness of the Zermatt winters, and no wonder.

From the first heavy snowfall, which generally comes by the beginning of November—though sometimes by the middle of October—till late in the spring, the only way of getting in or out of the valley is by mule path, through snow that falls to the depth of six and eight feet on the level, and, even in the valley, is blown into twenty and thirty foot drifts by the fierce Alpine gales. For when the snow comes the thirty-nine guage railroad connecting Zermatt with the outer world, so steep that the engine has to climb by means of cogwheels and toothed rails much of the way, is closed down, not to be operated again until the beginning of the following tourist season.

After the last train has left here every fall, the simon pure Zermatt folks are once more alone. For forty long weeks after that the commune is left practically to itself, and the old communal life resumes full sway, unvexed by the presence of strangers.

Although the permanent inhabitants of Zermatt number more than 700, the commune has only 120 members, who are known as burghers. Burghers only share in the common property. They divide among themselves whatever profits may arise from its management.

Every male citizen of Switzerland who has come of age is legally entitled to vote, but to be a burgher in any commune, you must be a householder and a native of the place or a naturalized citizen. In some communes you would have no trouble in becoming a burgher, having fulfilled these conditions, even if born outside Switzerland, but it is not so in Zermatt. There are certain legal technicalities which may be insisted upon, and the man not by hereditary right a burgher who wishes to become a member of this commune has a hard road to travel.

For Zermatt is a profitable commune, so profitable, in fact, that it is more like what we in the States would call a snug little close corporation, than anything else. Its six score burghers enjoy six score snug little communal incomes, and, being thrifty souls, do not propose to increase their own members and so decrease their incomes if they can help it. This was discovered a year or two ago by a man who had established himself in business here and naturally wished to place himself upon the same footing as his fellows.

He succeeded in becoming a burgher, but he had to pay 2,000 francs for the privilege. A later applicant was refused altogether. He is said to have offered 6,000 francs and to have been told that he could not get in were he to offer 10,000 francs.

Much of the best land in Zermatt has been sold, and is now owned irrevocably by private individuals and corporations, but the property of the commune is still very valuable. It includes not only the pasture land, the stone (used to some extent for building purposes) and the timber, but also three of the largest and finest hotels. It is from these hotels and the ground rents paid by some of the various dealers in Zermatt specialties who occupy communal property that the commune derives its profits.

Members of the commune try not to tell how large the profits are and nobody not a burgher is entitled to know, but it is admitted that the total is 40,000 or 50,000 francs a year and that each burgher receives several hundred francs as his share. It isn't surprising that the burghers do not like to let new men in.

Communal Irrigation Systems.

The commune looks after irrigation, also, seeing to it that every man has the water which his fields demand. It is law, or if not a custom so old as to have all the force of law, that, if necessary, you may dig a ditch across the field of your neighbor to bring water to your own, and without paying him for it either. This has been in force so long that there is probably not a field needing water in Zermatt, or in any of the other communes in the valley which is not plentifully supplied with little irrigation ditches, constantly filled with running water, or, at all events, into which running water may be turned at once in case of a dry time.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with the water supply. If the commune lays out a new road it must carry every existing ditch across it—either under or overhead—and when the railroad was built up this valley the company had to preserve the irrigation system intact everywhere. In some cases this made it necessary to set up iron flumes across the right-of-way, and the trains to and from Zermatt pass under a dozen or more of these.

It might be thought unnecessary to irrigate the land in the Alpine valleys, but the soil is so thin that even a brief rainless period dries up the growing crops. Last summer there were several weeks during which little rain fell, and the ditches, filled with grayish, muddy water from the melting snows upon the heights above, were the salvation of the farmers in this valley.

As a matter of self-protection, also, each Alpine commune must watch the streams closely. The Visp overflows its banks in the spring when the season's break-up comes with such fury that, were it not curbed, it is conceivable that it might carry away with it practically all the arable soil of the valleys. Consequently, the various communes between the Matterhorn and the other great peaks at the valley's head, and the point where the Visp joins the Rhone, have spent an enormous amount of thought in devising ways to control the stream. These have mostly taken the form of retaining walls and transverse walls, built into and partly across its bed.

Considering the comparative poverty of the people, the amount of work and money they have devoted to this purpose seems amazing. The walls are built with great solidity, and serve their purpose admirably. Many of the mountain torrents which feed the Visp are not only walled half way up the mountain sides, but their beds are "paved" as carefully as any city street, that the tremendous downrush of water in the spring, or after one of the great storms to which the Alpine regions are subject, may not run amuck and carry tons of earth and rock from the slopes to the valley below, to the ruin of many cultivated acres. The bigger irrigation ditches are also walled and paved with care.

In view of the growing scarcity of timber, it is surprising that the people in the Alpine communes do not build their houses and barns of stone instead of wood, particularly as the stone may be had for the gathering. The majority of the chalets, however, are still of wood, and a fair proportion of them are new, the brilliant reddish yellow surface of their freshly dressed three-inch planks forming a striking contrast to the deep green of the fields.

It is curious that the few stone buildings which are put up are built almost wholly by Italians, the Swiss seeming to despise stone mason work. Practically all the heavy work in most Swiss communes, outside of farm work, is done by Italian laborers, who invade the Alpine republic every spring and remain till driven out, along with the visitors, by the season's close.

Few of the houses in the communes of Zermatt, or those lower down the valley either, were ever painted. On the lower levels the wood turns to sepia browns as it weathers, on the high ones to blackish grays. Both sets of stones harmonize admirably with the grays of the flat stones used to cover the roofs.

The famous family whose members own and operate three or four of the biggest hotels here, though not winter residents, are well represented in the commune. This family owns some of the land also, but it is hardly likely that its members or any one else will ever be able to buy a foot of Zermatt's communal ground in the future.

The commune of Zermatt is ruled by a council consisting of seven elected members—president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and three others. One of these looks after the roads, bridges and other public works; one supervises the schools and the third sees to it that the church is properly provided for. Zermatt, and, in fact, the entire canton of Valais, to which the valley belongs, is strongly Roman Catholic, and the commune as a whole supports the church. Meetings of the council are held about once a month, though not with positive regularity, and may be called at any time in case of an emergency like the destruction of a stretch of road by an Alpine storm, which, of course, would call for speedy commercial action.

The present president of the commune of Zermatt is named Lauber. He is the grandson of the combination doctor and inn keeper—the first of Zermatt's modern inn keepers by the way—whose house was almost the only one in the village where strangers might eat and sleep in the early sixties, when Edward Whymper and others were vainly trying to climb the Matterhorn.

Alloting the Communal Property.

A most important event each year in all the Alpine valleys is the allotment of timber and wood. Despite the shrinkage of the forests and the increased use of coal for fuel in most old countries and many new ones, Zermatt, like all the other Alpine communes, still warms itself in winter and cooks its food the year round by burning up trees, the pungent pleasant odor of wood fire smoke being always present here.

The allotment falls in May, and every head of a family in the community must then be prepared to state how many trees he will require for the year, and whether he will need some of them for building purposes or all for fuel.

His statements are received and examined carefully, not with a view to undue restrictions but simply for the proper conservation of the supply. If he calls for about the same as in former years, his requests are granted promptly. If he calls for more, there is a special inquiry. If the increased demand is due to the fact that his house or barn must be replaced by a new building he gets what he asks for, but not if he wishese to use an increased allotment in carrying on any business enterprise outside of farming. In such a case the commune could refuse even to sell the desired timber to him, and he would have to buy eleswhere. If his demands are reasonable, however, the timber must be furnished providing the commune has it to furnish.

Down to the present time, despite the restricted area of the Alpine forest—hemmed in, as it is, on one side by the rocky, snowy heights, and on the other side by the fields and pasture lands—the supply of wood in the Alpine communes has been sufficient for fuel, though not altogether for building purposes. The Federal government of Switzerland takes a hand in the timber allotment. In order to prevent the extinction of the forest and to increase their area, if possible, an admirably forestry department has been created, and no trees can be cut without the department's approval. If there are not trees enough to go round, somebody has to buy, but that rarely happens. The demands of the burghers and others having been approved by the commune, they are submitted to an expert sent by the department. He selects the trees that may be cut and marks each one.

After that comes the actual allotment, penalties being enforced both when trees not marked are cut and when timber is used for any other purpose than as stated. It must be cut withing a specified time or the allotment is annulled. Heads of families, not burghers must pay for their wood; burghers, as well as others, must pay a franc, for each tree taken, to the Federal government, for the maintenance of the forestry department. Waste wood may be taken by any one without allotment, but mighty little waste wood is ever seen in Zermatt.

The pasturage allotment is conducted along similar lines, and, of course, is a matter of great importance, since all the mountain folk keep either cows or goats, mostly goats. Each cow and goat wears a bell, so that if one strays away in the high pasturage lands, it may be located by the sound, and the music of the bells in the morning when the flocks and herds are being driven from the valley to the feeding grounds and in the evening when they are returning to the valley is somewhat of an index to the valley's wealth.

Zermatt's Vale in Winter.

The stranger of almost any grade would find the Zermatt valley a pretty dull place to live in after the snows have come, but the native enjoys the winter season better than any other. There are no outsiders here then to be amused by his ways, to criticize his comparative poverty and his superlative dirt or to excite the envy and ambition of the most capable young men and women to the emigration point.

In the winter time the guides are in their glory. They have by far the best income of all the permanent residents, being able to earn at least 2,500 francs ($500) in each season of three or four months. Most guides can earn, say, 800 francs more at their favorite trade of carpentering during the two periods of about six weeks each, before and after the mountain climbing season, in which carpenter's work is possible.

As the guide's pay, when engaged by tourists, generally includes his keep, he has the greater part of his $600 or $700 gross income to spend in the cold weather if he so chooses. He doesn't do this as a usual thing; still he spends more money while the snow is on the ground than most men do here and is correspondingly popular.

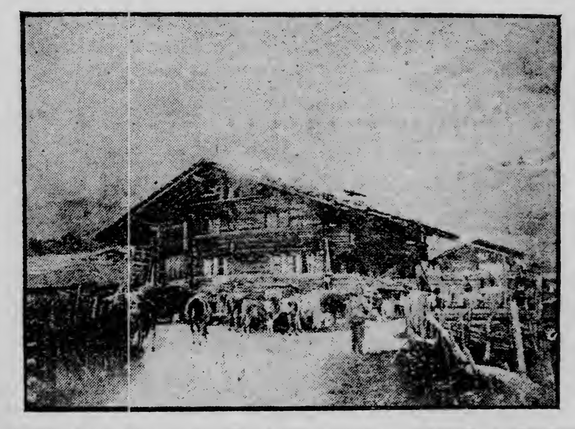

The chief amusements in the winter are card playing and billiards. The cards used are immense pieces of pasteboard and their designs and the games played with them are quite unlike anything to be found in the United States, unless by accident. Billiards are free to the habitues of the two cafes which keep open the year round in the village.

For the young folks there are dances, the waltz being their favorite dance. There are also coasting, skating and snow-shoeing. The Christmas season is a period of great festivities. These festivities last twelve days, and include many ancient, semi-pagan observances. At carnival time there are more festivities; much masquerading goes on and there is a dance almost every night in the week. The church is a great social center all the year round in all the communes of the Zermatt valley; in the winter it reigns supreme, service being held daily, of course, and all the village attending.

The people of this valley sing a good deal, but there is little instrumental music; a clarinet and one fiddle furnish what is required for the Zermatt dances. The old-fashioned dulcimer, prototype of the piano, is found in many of the mountain chalets, and some of the clumsy handed Alpine women who spade the soil—ploughs are almost unknown in most of the valleys—are pretty nimble at pounding the dulcimer's wires.

Courtship goes on the year round among the Alpine lads and lasses, as in the rest of the world, but most of the marriages take place in October, after the tourists have gone and the scanty crops are gathered. Zermatters say all the marriages in the valley are made for love, and that it is no disgrace here, as in some parts of Europe, for a girl to grow up an old maid.

Once in seven years the children of the valley are confirmed. The Bishop of Sion attends to this ceremony, making a special tour to the river Visp for that purpose and receiving 200 francs, or $40 from each of the villages as compensation. This happens in May, before the season opens, and the visitors never see the ceremonies.

Sion, by the way, is down the Rhone, not many miles from the mouth of the Visp. It was a bishop of Sion who is fabled to have fooled the devil a thousand years or more ago into transporting a bell given to his church by the pope across the Alps. It was the Bishop of Sion who for many years in medieval times ruled the vale of Zermatt temporarily, as they now rule it spiritually.

Besides Zermatt there are six communes in this valley—Teasch, Randa, Herbriggen, St. Nicolas, Kalpetran and Staiden. This last is next to Visp, at the Rhone end of the valley, and is less than half as high as Zermatt, its exact level above the sea being 2,608 feet.

Nature is kinder to the lower than to the upper communes, grapes being raised as far up the valley as two miles beyond Stalden and maize (Indian corn) almost as far. It is famous as the "highest corn in Europe." The lower communes are not so rich as Zermatt, however, since their tourist visitors are much fewer. It is due to the poverty of these communes that no wagon road, but only a mule path, exists between Visp and St. Nicolas.

At Stalden a fork of the valley known as the Staas-Fee branches off. It contains several communes, which are much more primitive even than those of the Zermatt, and which are accessibly only by way of a mule-back journey, or the aid of that famous team, Shank's mares. Supplies as well as people are taken up the Staas-Fee on the backs of mules, and in consequence the ancient mule train and attendant muleteers, long since displaced by the locomotive in the Zermatt Valley proper—often called the Valley of St. Nicholas—are regular and picturesque features of the 'Fee.'

The people of the "Fee" communes not only still adhere more closely to the old communal form of government than the Zermatt folk, but they have preserved several old customs long since forgotten in the Zermatt Valley communes. For instance, when a son is born a cheese and cask of wine are made for him. If he lives to man's estate the wine is drunk and the cheese is eten on certain occasions, his majority birthday being one, his wedding day another, his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary another, and so on. In any event, there is solemn eating and drinking of his cheese and wine at his funeral.

Little by little the communal organization are undergoing many changes in most of the Alpine valleys, but it will be many years before either the pasturage or the timber will be held otherwise than as common property in any of them.

Zermatt's profits from the building of hotels instead of selling hotel sites have checked the gradual increase of privately held property, which was at one time becoming quite general in this valley. The profits realized of late years by the communers holding mines are proving strong incentives to their burghers not to abandon the old plan of common ownership. Some of these mine owning communes make enough out of their property to pay all local expenses and the federal taxes of the burghers besides.

It should not be understood that the communal system is limited to the Alpine regions of Switzerland. On the contrary, it extends into both France and Italy. Local affairs in the French vale of Chomonix, near Mont Blanc, are carried on much as is the Zermatt Valley. In some of the Italian Alpine valleys the members of the communes are cutting their timber extensively this year and building really expensive, though not very pretty, stone houses for themselves with the proceeds.

But everywhere, as here in Zermatt, the communes are being run on business principles strictly more and more each year, and no more new members are being admitted than is found positively necessary under the laws of the land.

EDUCATION FOR CITIZENSHIP

Important Vital Question to Be Discussed at Session of the Social Education Congress in Boston Next Month.

In the announcements for the Social Education congress to be held in Boston at the close of Thanksgiving week, it is noticeable that the place of honor is assigned to Education for Citizenship, since to that topic is devoted the first general meeting of the proposed congress.

President Eliot, Governor Guild, Secretary Martin and others are to speak on this subject.

The state educates the youth for their individual good and for the benefit of society; it has the right to expect proper support in return.

Are the children getting the kind of education that will enable them in their mature years to give the right support to the state? The state has the power to demand, and must demand, that the education necessary to accomplish this end be given to the pupils of the schools, and the question comes up: In how far is this being carried out? Any thinking person must admit that it is very far from being done, but that public indifference, class or personal selfishness, and prejudice, and the lack of properly qualified teachers, are the main reasons for the failure.

In the matters pertaining to citizenship, it is the voters that count, and it is the duty of the state to train up its voters to keen thinking and right thinking. There is so much to be done, and it must be done so gradually and systematically, that the school is the only place where it can be accomplished. The school should be conducted impartially, and, from a certain point of view, impersonally. The teacher has nothing personal to gain beyond a stipulated salary, and works for the good of the community. We talk about the educative value of the press, but the press gives the people what they want and in the way they want it—each paper strives to become a financial success, and in most cases is devoted to partizanship.

If our schools were run on the same basis as the newspaper, a shout of remonstrance would go up. While the opinions of voters are in great measure made up from the daily news, yet in order to obtain opinions of real value, the voter must sift the news for the truth, and only a long educative process can train him to do this sifting properly. The social and political ignorance and apathy of voters can only be overcome by preliminary school study and experience in which they are aroused to a sense of public duty.

In the progress of mankind there is a constant change in conditions, and whenever existing institutions do not meet the demands of new conditions, they need reforming, and that is just what our schools need. The log schoolhouse, and the little red schoolaouse, met the needs of their day. Our modern systems of teaching are not meeting the political and social needs of the day, and they need reforming in just so far as they fall short.

We must start out with the premise that the inherent instincts of the normal man are rigat, and that they need only cultivation and proper training to bring out what is best in men and what is necessary for the promotion of the public welfare.

In our modern civilization man does not exist for himself alone—his interests are inseparably bound up with those of others. We must be taught what are the rights of others and how to respect them. The child must be taught his responsibility, and the man will recognize his larger duties. Legal, political and social rights and duties should be taught in the schools. Responsibility, adaptability and thoughtfulness of others must be also taught.

It is not expected that the science of government and political economy will be taught in the lower grades of our schools, although that is where they are most needed, for the vote of the grammar school and primary school "graduate" is as powerful as that of the college graduate, and such voters are far more numerous, but there are many features of social economy that can be taught in the lower schools, and the precepts of good government can be shown, and striking examples may be brought up to foster these precepts in children's minds.

The child is too seldom taught that the way in which he does his little tasks is really making his character. Mere smartness, and greedy activity, is too often confounded with ability—and unfortunately it too often leads to worldly success. The relations and duty of the child (and man) to society, the town, the state, the country and to mankind should be taught as living subjects and not as mere lessons to be learned; and the place to begin it is right in the schoolroom, in the relations with fellow pupils and teachers and the community in which they live. If these matters are properly taught, even those who leave school in the years of childhood will carry with them into life a spirit of thoughtfulness for others that will be a guide in making the decisions that must be made by all citizens and voters. A feeling of the duty to society and the state can be and must be impressed upon the minds of the school children. This feeling can be instilled by taking up the matter in connection with the daily lives and applying it to the conditions close around them. Public-spiritedness in government. One leader of thought has wisely remarked that it is of mere importance to the average voter to secure a good teacher for his children than to secure a good president of the United States. We must now allow ourselves to be absorbed in general and distant conditions, to the exclusion of local duties.

We must took to the disinterested schools to bring together and systematize the knowledge of political and social conditions, and while each person must decidecide for himself how he will apply this knowledge, he should be taught how to weigh and act upon evidence brought to his notice by the student of affairs.

The school should teach adaptability to circumstances, not only in the vocation of life, but also in life's duties, both social and civic. We know how the commercial worker and the hand worker have had to meet the new conditions of the present generation or else fall out of the ranks into some lower stratum; and there is just as much need of adapability in political and social matters. When the voter is taught that the ballot is a trust placed in his hands by the community, he is not so likely to become an automaton in voting. To be sure, there is a certain amount of martyrdom in the attempts to rise above one's surroundings, where ambition has been kindled, and the strength of mind necessary to follow out independent judgments has to be cultivated, but that cultivation is part of the duty of the school.

The only way to reach public opinion is through such group work as that controlled by the press, the church and the school, and it plainly devolves upon the school to educate public opinion.

No one understands better than the politicians that in the long run legislation follows public opinion, and so the politicians try to mold public opinion. In just so far as the individuals learn to realize their own duty to the state, are they less willing to follow blindly the leadership of ambitious political leaders, and the more, too, do they distrust those who hang round for political preferment and political jobs—always popping up as candidates as regularly as the time of election comes around.

Since it is impossible in our country to deprive the untrained man of the right to vote, the only remedy for the resulting evils is to educate him so that he will not abuse the power thus given to him and will have a just conception of the ethics of the vote, and will feel that it is not his to seel or give away, but his to use with the best judgment that his natural endowments and education give him.

Dr. Scott thus expresses the recognized duty of educating leaders: "Not only must the schools educate for rank-and-file citizenship, but they must educate for leadership. The citizen must be trained to make society and not merely to float in it. We still retain too much of the original intention of intellectual education—to educate special classes and form an aristocracy of scholars. The modern problem is entirely new; it is the education of everybody. In order to preserve the democratic union of classes, an opportunity ought to be given in the school (not merely on the playground) for the training of leadership in the modern civilized sense." That the success with which youth are prepared for citizenship will depend mostly on the wise choice of teachers, we must all admit, and the question comes up most forcibly, Are the teachers being selected for our schools properly qualified to organize juvenile society? James Russell Lowell said: "The true measure of a nation's success is the amount that it has contributed to the knowledge, moral energy, the intellectual happiness, the spiritual hope and consolation of mankind." We have but to paraphrase this to express the true measure of the individual's success. Prof. Jenks has well expressed this need when he sayps: "The methods of fixing such ideals regarding man and state are not formal. No teacher who is not himself aglow with enthusiasm for refinement, beauty, sincerity, truth, righteousness, can kindle in those under his charge this flame of the higher patriotism."

The ideals of citizenship are different in different countries. The goal of the Frenchman is office holding, to such an extent that the very schools of France have the examinations for the classified service in mind.

The Germans would have their schools grind down their pupils to an obedient, subservient mass, without original ideas regarding government; but they do, nevertheless, each their pupils to work resolutely, steadily and systematically, to disrespect for knowledge. So far as out-and-out instruction is concerned, Germany has given us the best schools.

The Anglo-Saxon aims at a personal career, which demands self-reliance, independence of thought and action, but the whole built on the firm foundation of political stability. The freedom of the individual must be maintained as far as may be compatible with the necessary demands of the general government. Such is the feeling that has governed America up to the present time. Shall we preserve the Anglo-Saxon ideal?

"The Master Spirit," by Sir William Magnay—"The Queen's Hostage," by Harriet T. Comstock—"A Lady of Rome," by F. Marion Crawford—"The Slave of Silence," by Fred M. White.

"The Master Spirit" is a strong story by Sir William Magnay, an English author of considerable popularity on the other side of the Atlantic, though less well known here. It is a novel with an ingeniously wrought and somewhat unconventional plot, and some excellent character-drawing. The hero, Geoffrey Herriard, is a lawyer who first appears as the mouthpiece of the "master spirit," Paul Gastineau, a lawyer and statesman of renown, who is supposed to have been killed in a railway accident in Spain, but who is really still living, an apparently hopeless cripple, in obscurity. From his bed he directs the movements of Herriard, who takes his place as a statesman and lawyer, and who gains great fame as the puppet of Gastineau. There is a murder mystery underlying the story, and the heroine is suspected of being guilty of the murder. Replying to charges against her by a libel suit, she retains Herriard, who very properly falls in love with her. It is over the affair of the heart that Gastineau and Herriard fall out, and the former comes out in his true character as a villain of the deepest dye, with coolness, courage and abnormal mentality. The complications that follow are full of interest, and in spite of the fact that the author makes his society figures do too much gossiping, which palls at times, it is an absorbing tale. It is published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston, at $1.50.

"The Queen's Hostage," by Harriet T. Comstock, is a sparkling, lively story of the days of Queen Elizabeth, and the plots and counterplots that surrounded the virgin queen figure largely in the stirring events that make up this tale. The father of the hero, who has come under suspicion as to his loyalty, is forced by the queen to give his son into her hands as a hostage for his good behavior. That son, however, is a weakling physically, and apparently mentally as well. So the crafty father, at the instigation of plotters, provides a substitute, and leaves the neglected heir back in the ancestral castle. There, in solitude and shameful neglect, he blossoms out unexpectedly, runs away from a plot to kill him, and turns up at London town as an actor in plays which Will Shakespears is writing about this time. Another sponsor for him is rare Ben Johnson. The father again becomes a plotter against the queen, and the changeling son, too, and it is given to the real son, who grows to love his queen, to defeat their ends and to bring them punishment. It is a spirited tale, and its interest will carry the reader along with a rush to the final outcome.

It is published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

F. Marion Crawford's new book, "A Lady of Rome," is like most of his numerous other novels, an Italian story, but world-wide in its interest because of the elemental passions that form the groundwork for the tale. A woman married to one man and in love with another, a son with eyes like the loved one's and not like the husband's, the injured, but forgiving husband, and the manly, though sinning outsider, are the main ingredients of the story. These and some very interesting minor characters make up the cast. For the rest, it is enough, to lovers of Crawford's excellent stories, to say that the tale is told in his best manner, and that it is full of his peculiar charm of style and form. The book is published by the MacMillan company, New York, at $1.50.

"The Slave of Silence," by Fred M. White, is an old-fashioned thriller. There is a mysterious lady in gray, a mysterious murder that furnishes a complication of mysteries to be unravelled, a mysterious ruby mine coveted by crafty Orientals, as well as by subtle Occidentals, and all the ingredients of a story that will appeal to those whose tastes are so vitiated by novel reading that they need strong doses. Scotland Yard, that potent institution of vast and mysterious powers, comes into the play, and soon the characters assume disguises in a most fascinating manner. If you are after thrills, you will get your money's worth here. The book is published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston, though it is evidently by an English author, since it is a British tale.

The craze for novelizing dramatic pieces has struck the juvenile kingdom in Mrs. Payne Whitney's, "The Punch and Judy Book," issued by Duffield & Co., with pictures in color by Charlotte Harding. Many of the incidents are Mrs. Whitney's own invention, but in the main story follows the lines of the nursery drama of one's childhood. A revival of Punch and Judy shows among the children of our smart set is predicted.

When you are told that "The Dragon Painter" is by Mary McNeil Fenollosa, it may or man not mean anything to you; the chances are it does not. But when you are told that Mrs. Fenollosa is the clever author who wrote "Truth Dexter" under the name of Sidney McCall, it will mean much more. "The Dragon Painter" is a wild, rich, charming tale of Japan. In "The Breath of the Gods" this writer showed a marvelous grasp on Japanese life, and she shows it even more vividly in her latest book. The story of Tatsu, the wild mountain dragon painter, and his tempestuous love affair with the daughter of an old Japanese painter who had looked in vain until Tatsu appeared for a successor to himself as the representative of the old Japanese art, untainted by the intrusions of Occidentalism, has a fascination that carries the reader breathlessly through to the finish. The story abounds in crisp and sparkling description, not the prosy kind that is the bane of young readers, but the keen and delicious kind that is a part of the story. The book, which is admirably illustrated by Gertrude McDaniel, is published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston, at $1.50.

Miss Mary Mears, whose novel, "The Breath of the Runners," is shortly to appear with the imprint of Frederick A. Stokes company, is a young writer of very unusual promise. Miss Mears' book represents a distinctly new departure in American literature. She discloses to readers of fiction a phase of American life little known outside its own limits. The art world of America has never before been made the environment of a thoughtful and significant novel. Miss Mears is herself an American artist, and has secured great facility as well as reputation as a writer by frequent contributions to some of our leading magazines. One need read a few pages only of this strong book to realize that Miss Mears' apprenticeship both as artist and writer has peculiarly fitted her to depict graphically her "world."

The "Book of Spice," by Ginger, is one of those odd and original little books for which the publishing house of John W. Luce & Co., Boston, Mass., has been noted. Its humor should make the most blase reader laugh.

Under the title of "Poems for Young Americans," the Harpers will publish at once a volume containing those verses by Will Carleton, which are peculiarly adapted to younger readers. The selections have been made with the utmost care, only such poems being included as the boys and girls themselves will understand. The patriotic motive rings true, and there are many tributes to the great figures of American history which are suitable for recitation at school anniversaries and festivals. Other selections picture the joys of out-door life, suggest lessons in pluck and heroism, and tell delightfully humorous tales in verse.

Sir Henry Wrixon, the author of "The Pattern Nation," is a man of the type to which England owes the success of her colonial system. He is vice chancellor of the University of Melbourne, and has been for a generation one of the most prominent men in Australian public affairs, as well as an effective writer on political and social questions. In his latest book, which has just been published by the Macmillan company, he discusses the problem: "What will the poor do with the rich, when lawful government by the majority of the people has become an established fact?" The various aspects of socialism are clearly stated and criticized, and an estimates is given of the probable results of a full acceptance of its doctrines.

George Knollys dedicates his new book, "Ledgers and Literature," issued by the John Lane company from the Bodley Head, New York, to Gilbert Chesterton, the well-known essayist. Yet Mr. Knollys by no means always agrees with his friend. We find him saying, for instance, in "The Romance of Bookkeeping:" "In the balance-sheet, we are in the twilight of finance, nor do we hold with Mr. Chesterton that the true mystery is bred only in the sunlight. The real essence of a balance is too intricate for this outspoken professor of an ostentatious philosophy. Only after long search in the dark can the truant figure be brought into light." Other titles in the volume are "A Panegyric of Dining," "Lunching in the City," "The Brother of the Twilight," etc.

An attractive picture is given of the salon of Mme. Ivan Strannik, the Russian novelist, who lives in Paris, and whose most recent novel, "The Shadow of the House," has just been published in this country. The salon opens upon some fine old trees, the last vestiges of a park, which are disappearing little by little from this quarter. Here one may chance to meet subtle academicians, or Georg Brandes, the Danish critic, when making a short visit to Paris. A magnificent yellow cat, with eyes of gold, moves with supple grace about the samovar; the blue haze of cigarette swims like vapor of incense in the slightly sombre space of the room; in the adjacent apartment one hears the joyous cries of children, and when the noise redoubles, announcing an imminent irruption, the face of the mother is radiant with a tender pride.

Following close upon the Atlanta race riot, perhaps at its literary aftermath, a uique monthly magazine will begin publication in Atlanta in November under the title of "The Race Question and Southern Symposium." This magazine, its publishers announce, will be monographic in character, handling the negro problem from the standpoint of sicology, ethnology and political economy. It will in no wise be an organ of incendiary agitation, but will discuss the race issue dispassionately from the viewpoint of the Southern white man, and be a reflex of Caucasians entiment. Each issue will contain special articles by leading public men and thinkers, who have made the negro a study, and a large part of the magazine will be devoted to a free-for-all symposium of popular ideas on the race question and subjects thereto related, as the South's labor problem, foreign immigration, cotton production, etc. The best newspaper comment on these subjects will be reproduced, and it will be full of condensed and meaty matter of a distinctively Southern character.

The October 19th North American Review will interest a large variety of readers. It opens with the fourth instalment of "Chapters from my Autobiography," by Mark Twain. Wharton Barker denounces certain evils connected with "The Capitalization of Railroads." Ernest E. Williams, a British authority on economics shows, "How London Loses by Municipal Ownership." In an article entitled, "Is Colonization a Crime?" Dr. Hannis Taylor defends the present colonization policy of the government. On the occasion of the centennial of the prayer meeting in which American missionary activities originated, the Rev. Dr. J. L. Barton sets forth impressively the fruits of " A Century of Foreign Missions." Otto Nordenskjold describes the work done and the hardships suffered by the members of "The Swedish Antartic Expedition," which he recently led into the icy fastnesses in the region of the south pole. Mary K. Ford answers in the negative the question, "Is the Celtic Revival Really Irish?"

"JUDGING FURS"

A New Book on an Old Subject. Read with Interest and Easy to Get.

The country doctor probably makes a better combination of common horse sense mixed with scientinc knowledge than any ordinary man. At any rate his example may well be followed touching the use of furs for health. The successful country doctor wears furs—generally he owns a fur overcoat (or a fur-lined coat) and he wears it, too.

In the northern climate a fur garment is a health necessity. People get along without furs as they get along without many things, but a man's wardrobe is not complete without a fur coat, and, with the other side of the house no argument is necessary—every woman needs furs—she needs them for health; she ought to have them for comfort and she wants them for their beauty and style. Nothing adds so much to the effectiveness of dress as furs.

A new book, nicely illustrated and easily read in a half-hour—written from the view point of the purchaser and wearer of furs rather than that of the dealer or manufacturer, is just from the press, published by Lanpher, Skinner & Co., the St. Paul fur manufacturers, whose product is on sale in the leading retail store of every town in the Northwest and sold from Maine to Oregon.

This book is called "Judging Furs."

If any of our readers have any interest in furs, either for themselves or as presents to friends—men, women or children—this book is worth asking for—which is all it costs. A mention of this paper will be appreciated. Write to Lanpher, Skinner & Co., St. Paul, and they will send you the booklet and the name of the nearest retail dealer who sells "Lanpher Furs."

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

SPORTS OF THE WEEK.

ON COLLEGE GRIDIRONS

Three Important Games Are Scheduled in the West.

Minnesota Playing Strong Ames College Team—Stagg Worried.

WEST.
Indiana at Chicago.
Illinois at Michigan.
Ames at Minnesota.
EAST.
Yale at Amherst.
Princeton and Cornell at New York.
Army and Navy at West Point.
Pennsylvania and Indians at Philadelphia.

The foregoing is a list of the big games scheduled for today in the college football world.

The interest of the Duluth followers of the game naturally centers in the Minnesota-Ames contest. Last year this game would have been looked upon as one of the minor battles of the year, but this year the Aggies have shown surprising strength. The victory over Nebraska a week ago places them on an equality with the bigger colleges of the West, and there is no doubt but that they will give Mr. Williams' squad a hard rub.

It is the first appearance of the Gophers on the gridiron this year and the followers of the team are anxiously waiting to see what kind of a showing they will make under the new rule.

Following is the lineup of the two teams for the game this afternoon on Northrup field.

Minnesota	Position	Ames
——.....	Right End	McElhenney
Case.....	Right Tackle	Brugger
Smith.....	Right Guard	Drennen
Bandelin	Center	Plager
Vita.....	Left Guard	Nelson
Marshall	Left End	Barber
Larkin.....	Quarterback	Jenson, Capt
Schuknech, Right Half, Biller, Lambert
Current.....	Fullback	Rephert, Willet

The officials will be: Referee, Ralph Hammill, Chicago; umpire, Henry Gale, Chicago; head linesman, "Pudge" Heffelfinger, Minneapolis.

Fearing defeat at the hands of Indiana and his former pupil, Jimmy Sheldon, Coach Stagg is working the Maroons at every stunt which may help them in the game with the speedy Hoosiers. After Wednesday's hard practice session, the Maroon leader was anything but confident of winning from Indiana.

"Indiana is sure to make ground against us and probably lots of it. Sheldon says he is going to beat Chicago and perhaps he will. The game is sure to be a corker and a hard fought one all the way. Of course, I am not conceding the game to Indiana. I am hoping that we shall win, but I cannot but feel that Indiana's veteran team may prove strong enough to defeat us."

* * *

Illinois is expected to give Michigan a fair struggle, but Yost's machine is in working order once more, and the Wolverines are the heavy favorites.

* * *

In the East there is at least one game that will interest Duluth followers of the sport. Pennsylvania and the Indians will meet at Philadelphia and inasmuch as Minnesota will play the Indians and Michigan will play Pennsylvania, it will give the dopesters a line on the comparative strength of Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Michigan. If the Indians would trim Pennsy, Minnesota defeat the Indians, and Pennsy defeat Michigan, it would just about touch the right spot with Minnesota rooters.

The annual Princeton-Cornell game is also of interest, although it can have no bearing on the struggle in the West.

SPORTING COMMENT

There isn't a genuine sportsman in Duluth or the entire state who does not deplore the increasing tendency on the part of pot hunters to go into the woods a week or ten days, or two weeks, before the opening of the big game season.

The story they always tell is that they are going to "get their camps ready," but such a flimsy pretext is getting frayed out at the edges. Twenty-four hours is ample time for any woodsman to get a permanent camp in readiness, and the real reason, of course, is to get a little shooting before the deer become wary.

The deer have a small enough chance as it is, and they are rapidly being driven farther and farther back into the wilderness, and becoming scarcer and scarcer year by year.

A good sportsman is the man who recognizes the necessity and value of the game laws, and obeys them, no matter how easy it may be to dodge their provisions.

The trouble about the infringement of the game laws is that it grows by leaps and bounds. Those who would not break them, if left to themselves, find it almost a necessity, in order to get a shot at a deer, to go into the woods early. By the time the season opens they become so wild that it is impossible to get within hailing distance of them.

Under the heading, "Maroon Brains Tired," a Chicago paper tells of the trouble Coach Stagg's men are having in mastering the intricacies of the new football rules.

This is terrible. It strikes at the very basis of college traditions and customs. The idea that football players should be called upon to use their brains is almost inhuman.

As it might have been written in the Egyptian Gazette of the year 2006 B. C.:

"On the eve of the great battle between the Roman Coliseums and the Carthaginian Pharoahs, Coach Rameses expressed himself as well pleased with the outlook.

"Finishing touches were put on the work of the Pharoah squad last evening with a light signal practice. No heavy work was indulged in for fear of crippling some of the men for today's battle.

"The Romans arrived in the city last evening in their galley, and are resting today after the rather arduous trip. They will go into the game today with determination to win, and win by a big score.

"'I am confident that we can hold them,' said Coach Rameses last evening. Man for man they outweigh us, but I believe our line can hold. Augustus is the man we have most to fear. If our linemen can withstand his attacks, we can count on our great backfield to do the business.'

"The betting around the hotels last evening was at even money. There is plenty of Roman money in sight, but the Carthaginians are holding off for odds."

The newspaper fight between Gans and Nelson has the Nevada affair faded to a gentle whisper.

Nelson started it with a plaint that he had been robbed of the decision by the referee.

Gans came back with the statement, backed up by the referee, that it was a plain case of foul on Nelson's part.

Nelson wanted another battle.

Gans said he could have it if he came to terms.

Nelson declared he was still champion and wanted to dictate terms.

Gans came back with a body blow offering to meet Nelson and give 50 per cent of the gate receipts to charity.

Nelson went him one better and offered to fight and give all the gate receipts to charity.

It's now up to Gans to offer to meet Nelson with one hand tied, and give all the receipts and a $5,000 side bet to a home for prize fighters who have lost their voice.

"Sir Tummas" threatens to challenge again for the America cup in 1908. Pretty soon the New York Yacht club will present the cup to Sir Tummas to save the expense.

KEELER A REAL IRISHMAN.

"Wee Willie's" True Name is Willie O'Kelleher.

If you should look at the New York American league club's batting order next spring, and see it led off by a man named O'Kelleher, would you be surprised?

Furthermore, would you be surprised if you saw O'Kelleher take the place of Willie Keeler?

Now, you may as well be prepared for surprise, for that very thing is liable to happen.

Baseball is over, and the time limit is very close on getting in stories. This is a new one, however, and it's got to be told right now.

Keeler is not the real name of the wonderful little batter and right fielder of the New York Highlanders. His name is O'Kelleher, and for these many years he has been fooling the Irish, who did not know him, as to whether he was a real son of Erin or a pretzel-eater from the Rhine. You know Keeler could be Dutch. Still, anybody who sits down and talks five minutes to Keeler and does not say he is a real "Mick" is crazy. Keeler is proud of his Irish blood, and says he is descended from one of Erin's old kings.

Keeler's parents or, rather, O'Kelleher's parents, came to this country from Glansworth, Ireland, when the father was 54 years old and not a great while before Willie was born.

They settled in Brooklyn, and there the "Wizard of the Diamond" first saw the light of day.

When Willie began selling score cards and doing other boy jobs for a livelihood, it was too much trouble for his employers to say "O'Kelleher," so Willie very obligingly assumed the name of "Keeler." That was easy for everybody to say and looked well on paper.

Think of the thousands of tongue twists that Willie has saved the world by abolishing O'Kelleher and making it easy by the rather pleasant sound of "Keeler."

IMPROVING THE CURLING RINK

Additions and Alterations to Building Now Being Made.

The house committee of the Duluth Curling club is evidently out after a record.

The members of the committee are busy planning and carrying out improvements that will add to the convenience and comfort of the members. A new floor is being placed in the dressing room of the skaters, and the room will be repainted and refurnished.

A new toilet room will also probably be built, and several other minor improvements, that have long been needed, will be made.

Everything will be in readiness for the opening of the season long before the weather is cold enough for ice.

Plans for the big bonspiel are progressing nicely, and the committee has all of the preliminary arrangements made.

WILL RACE FOR CUP IN 1908

Sir Thomas Lipton Will Challenge Again for Historic Mug.

New York, Oct. 27.—The Evening Post says: There will be no race for the America's cup next year. There will, however, be a race for that historic mug in the summer or early in the fall of 1908 unless the New York Yacht club refuses to meet the challenger a fraction of half way, which is extremely unlikely. Both the foregoing statements may be accepted as coming from the best sort of authority. At the present time no understanding or agreement, or anything of the sort between Sir Thomas Lipton and the New York club in regard to a challenge for the cup has been reached. In fact the sportsmanlike baronet has had no conference or correspondence with any officer of the club acting in his capacity as a member.

FISTIC DOPE FROM FRISCO

Members of Big Fight Trust Not Working in Harmony.

Talk of Injunction Against Kaufmann-Berger Contest at Frisco.

San Francisco, Oct. 27.—Eastern sporting writers noticed that Jack O'Brien gave Los Angeles the preference over San Francisco as a field of operations, and they assigned a wrong cause for the dapper Philadelphian's choice of location. They think that Jack, who is as wise as an owl in all things concerning the game he gets his living by, after looking the ground over decided that what remains of this town cannot make it worth while for an associate world's champion to tarry here.

This is all a mistake. San Francisco has plenty of money to spend on pugilistic entertainment. It paid over $7,000 for the privilege of seeing Dick Hyland and Eddie Hanlon in action, and the chances are the same pair of lads could not have drawn $,000 in the days before the fire.

The outlaw amateurs whang one another in the presence of congested houses once a week, and the amount of shop a Queensberry paragrapher is required to talk when he accosts acquaintances on the street cars and elsewhere shows that interest in the sport is general.

It wasn't a prospect of a poor harvest that caused O'Brien to snatch up his dolls and clear to Los Angeles—it was because of a split in the cabinet of San Francisco's one and only fight trust.

If a recently arrived traveler from the southland speaks the truth O'Brien delivered himself as follows one evening:

"It seems to me that Coffroth and Graney are engaged in a fight to a finish for the control of the boxing situation up there. Each of them stands well politically and each has a big personal reputation and a large following. It did not take me long to determine that I was between two fires and I didn't know which one to warm up to. I came here to look for work. Coffroth and Graney remind me of the old circus gag. Working together they are like a pair of scissors. With a screw loose they become a couple of daggers. I guess there are big houses to be had in San Francisco, but while the vendetta lasts a fellow would never know where he was going to land. That's why I'm in Los Angeles."

When O'Brien hears there is talk of getting out an injunction to prevent the Kaufmann-Berger contest from taking place because Croffroth leased one pavilion after Graney, as president of the first trust, has leased another, he will probably shake hands with himself and say: "Jack, old fellow, you saw what was coming and you did not linger."

Meanwhile, sporting men are beginning to ask where this Croffroth-Graney business is going to end. There is no particular reason why the gentlemen named shouldn't enjoy a personal feud, but it is a pity that their differences should interfere with the passing of a sport with which they both have been so long identified.

As matters stand, fight fans do not care to discuss projected events seriously, not knowing whether such events will ever come to a head. Sporting writers are hampered in their work for similar reasons, and the effect generally of this rift in the fight trust lute i disquieting and confusing.

Jack O'Brien must have felt a full-sized tremor of pride jiggling his spine when he succeeded in putting out both Fred Cooley and Jim Tremble on contract time at Los Angeles last Tuesday night. This thing of attempting the demolition of two rivals on one evening is risky at the best of times, and any one having doubts on the subject can questnon big Jim Jeffries about it.

In O'Brien's case there seems to be more than the usual cause for self-congratulation.

That he scored with both barrels, as it were, his detractors will have to take refuge behind the argument that the Philadelphian appears to be acquiring greater punching power.

The road is clear now for a Jack O'Brien-Tommy Burns clash, and I have no doubt it will be a suiteful affair if the men are sent to the scratch.

By the way, the fight in question will afford the reporters who describe the rounds in detail, a chance to diversify their work. Any one who has done much of that kind of thing knows how monotonous constant repetition of a name becomes, but when you have to deal with a bruce of fighters, each possessing two names, the poseibilities are encouraging. For instance:

Round 14 and Last—Jack O'Brien punched Tommy Burns' head and Noah Brusee countered on Joe Hagan's jaw. O'Brien swung his right and Burns fell. Hagan walked to his corner. Brusee regained his feet, but Burns was floored again. Brusee rolled on his back and Burns was counted out. Smiles wreathed Hagan's face as he heard the announcement, "O'Brien wins."

* * *

There is some talk of putting our old friend Billy Rodenbach of New York, and Thomas into the ring at Colma, but if "Rodey" backs and fills the way most amateurs do before taking the plunge into professionalism, Thomas will have grown big enough to fight Jeffries by the time the New Yorker has fully made up his mind to sign.

Apropos of the death of Jud Gibbs, the old-time fight promoter, a story told recently serves to show that there are tricks in the matchmaking trade the same as in other callings.

Gibbs used to arrange the glove contests for the old California Athletic club, and no matchmaker, either before or since, knew more about bringing the right kind of men together.

Gibbs once conceived the idea of signing Nonpariel Jack Dempsey and Young Mitchell, who now adorns the highball trade under his proper name, to-wit, Johnnie Herget. Gibbs was warned that he would have trouble in matching Dempsey and Mitchell, as they were sworn friends. It was explained to him that Dempsey was virtually Mitchell's tutor, having been behind the youngster in his early fights and having once had to engage in an off-the-reel bare-knuckle scrap with Jack Keenan because Keenan resented Dempsey's having seconded Mitchell against him.

Gibbs was informed, in fact, that there was an understanding between Mitchell and Dempsey that they would never challenge or seek to fight each other, but he wasn't discouraged in the least.

One night word was passed around that Dempsey and Mitchell were to sign articles at the California Athletic club, and there was much wonderment thereat. A crowd of privileged personages gathered at the appointed place, and, sure enough, Dempsey and Young Mitchell were on hand and "talking fight."

"You sign first, Jack," said Young Mitchell.

"Not at all," said the Nonpareil. "You said you wanted to fight me, so you sign first."

"What!" roared Mitchell. "Why, they told me you were just aching to box me, and—"

Then they looked around for Gibbs, but he was not in his accustomed place.

Dempsey and his former protege thrashed the matter out and found that they had been misinformed.

NICK ALTROCK, SHOEMAKER

Sox Pitcher Quit Awl and Last to Go Into Baseball.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—"You're all right, Nick. Keep it up and slam 'em in harder than ever."

Thus spoke Christian Altrock, 70 years old, Cincinnati, carriage maker, to Nicholas Altrock, 30 years old, grief maker for the Cubs, when the two met in front of the players' bench at the Sox battlefield. The father grasped the son by the hand and proved to the Southside's idol that his grip could still make the bones ache.

Mr. Altrock, Sr., came from Cincinnati to Chicago to use his lungs to help out Mr. Altrock, Jr., in his work of "damaging" the eyesight of Mr. Murphy's men. Incidentally he proved the tradition that every hero is human, for he freely told of the good old days when Nick held in awe a certain strap hanging in the woodshed.

"Nick's been playing ball since he was 9 years old," said Mr. Altrock. "At that time he was the terror of every vacant lot in Cincinnati, and I would be ashamed to figure up the windows he smashed by wild hits. The police used to be after him nearly all the time, because he let his enthusiasm get away with him.

"Many's the time I licked him, and licked him well for his baseball pranks. He's too big for that now, but it isn't hard to remember when I could pull him across my knee and then——"

"I thought he was a hopeless case the way he stuck to baseball," the father resumed, "I was discouraged and thought he would never amount to a row of pins. I apprenticed him out to be a shoemaker, but he didn't last any time. He was fired, if you want plain English.

"But I'm proud the way he turned out. He makes more money in a month now than he would all his life had he kept pegging away in a stuffy little shoemaker's shop."

GANS WILL MEET "KID" HERMAN

Negro Champion Signs Articles With Ghetto Wonder.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Articles of agreement for a finish fight between Joe Gans and "Kid" Herman, of Chicago, were signed here yesterday. The terms are 133 pounds, two hours before the fight, the winner to receive 65 per cent and the loser 35 per cent of the purse, the fight to take place where the largest purse is offered.

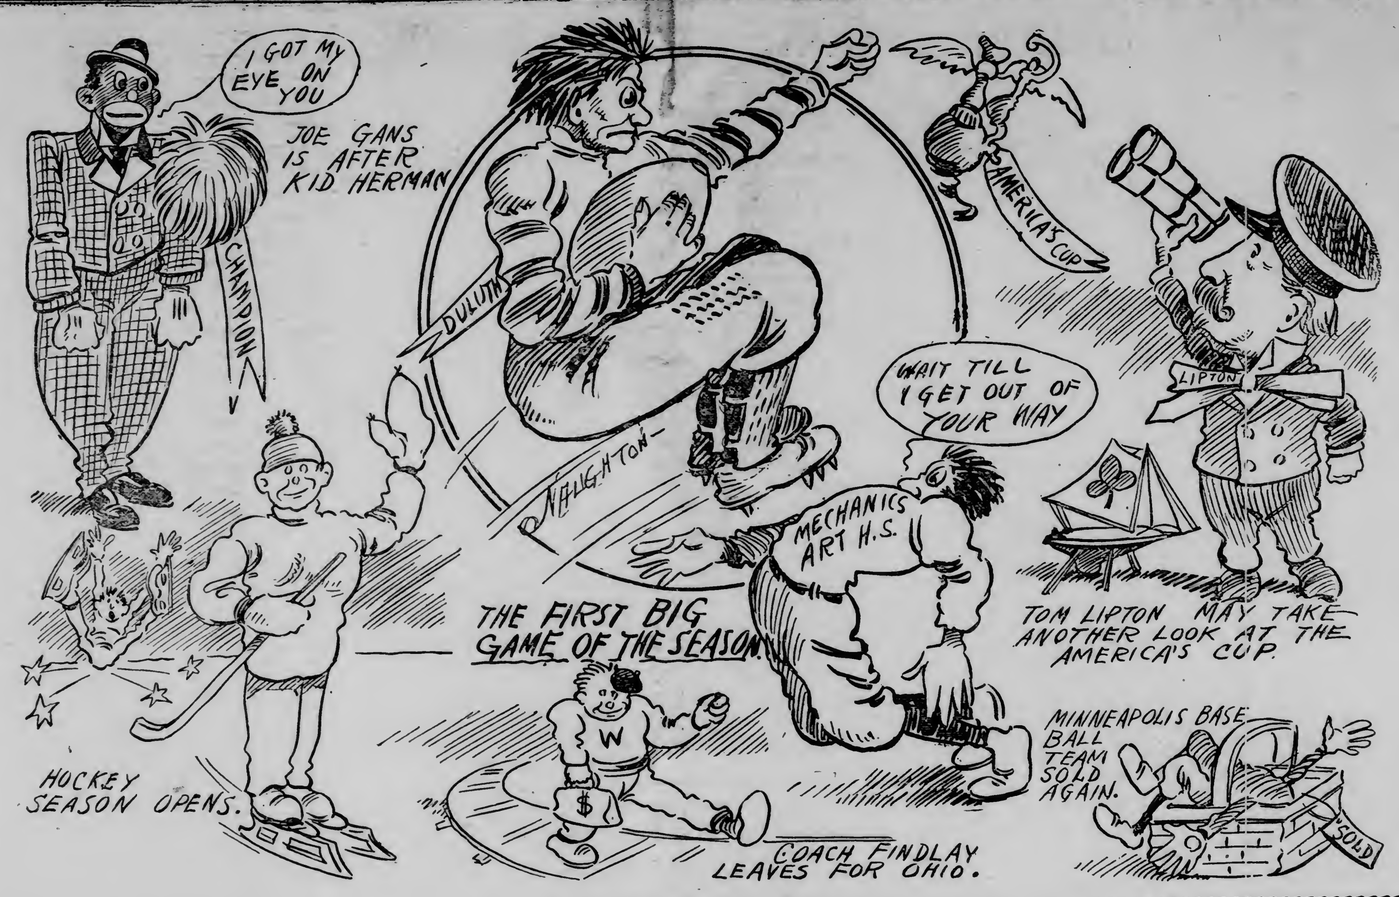

Nolan, the manager for "Battling" Nelson, met Gans a short time before the signing of the agreement between Gans and Herman and opened negotiations for a fight between Gans and Nelson. Gans insisted on 133 pounds at 3 o'clock, and Nolan declared that the same weights must govern as at the last fight in Goldfield. Gans turned his back on Nolan and commenced to talk with Herman's manager, who was standing close by.

Both Gans and Herman say they favor Siler for referee.

POST-SEASON GAMES.

Argument in Favor of Longer Series Held Not Sound.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says: President Murphy of the Chicago Nationals is out with an argument in favor of a longer series of post-season games for the championship of the world than that which was played this year at Chicago. There are plenty of arguments to support Mr. Murphy's contention. In fact, Chairman Herrmann of the national commission has frequently stated that, in his opinion, a series of seven games was hardly long enough to test thoroughly the merits of two contending clubs. The longer the series the greater chance has steady and consistent ball playing to make itself felt, and the less will the element of luck enter into the result. No one would think of having the world's championship settled by a single game, or by two out of three games. The same argument applies to a five-game series and to a seven-game series, in a much less degree, however. The greater the number of games the more chance the better club has to win. This is universally acknowledged. But there must of necessity be a limit to any post-season series. Two teams cannot go on playing indefinitely. This being the case, it simply comes down to a question of deciding what is the best limit for the world's series, taking every angle into consideration. Seven games seem to be about the correct figure. In a longer series interest is apt to drag toward the close, especially if one team gets a big lead by winning three or four games early in the contest. Such a series should be, as the recent struggle at Chicago certainly was, a grand climax to the championship races in the two major leagues. It should not be too long-drawn-out, and interest should be given no chance to wane. Absolutely nothing would have been gained, for instance, if the world's series of 1905 and 1906 had consisted of nine games instead of seven. No one will seriously contend that the result of either contest would have been different. The Athletics last fall, in case of a nine-game series, would have had to win four straight games at the finish to land the large end of the purse. This year the Cubs, in a similar case, would have been compelled to win three straight after their defeat of last Sunday. Three years ago, when the Boston Americans defeated Pittsburg for the world's honors, the series was scheduled for nine games, but the result would have been the same if seven only had been played, for the Pirates won but three. There does not seem to be much, if any, advantage in playing nine games rather than seven, and a longer series would be too tedious for both players and public. A series of seven games is long enough to prevent snap judgment, and short enough to keep public interest at the highest pitch until the close. It is not so long that the players become weary after their hard struggle to win their league championship. Even though the element of luck may play some part in the decision, it seems to be, all things considered, about the most satisfactory arrangement. Two weeks ago today President Murphy thought that it was the ideal length.

INTEREST IN AMES GAME

All Minnesota Players But One Are Native Born.

Minneapolis, Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Interest in the Ames game, which takes place this afternoon on Northrup field, is unprecedented.

For the first time in years a student mass meeting was held previous to the opening game, showing that Ames is not only dangerous, but the Iowa followers expect their team to be the victors.

The sale of tickets is very large, and the old spirit of football is running high, despite the cry of revolutionized football, and a record attendance is expected.

Dr. Williams had the following to say while addressing the students:

"Our team, perhaps, lacks the polish usually acquired at this time of the year, but we have a strong team, every man being a hard worker. We look for a victory from Ames, with the expectation of better football as the season progresses."

Prof. James Paige, Minnesota athletic representative in the "Big" conference, brought out the following facts of interest to all gridiron followers:

"Our team this year is composed, with but one exception, of native sons of Minnesota, making it really a Minnesota team, and for that fact alone, if nothing else, we are with them to a man. Also, every member of the squad has appeared before the faculty, and are all doing passing work, with no back conditions, which leaves our team intact, with no fear of any man not being eligible."

This is certainly good news to Gopher fame, as faculty interference was expected, but this need no longer be feared.

DULUTH AND MECHANIC ARTS

Two Teams Are Evenly Matched in Regard to Weight.

The long looked for game between the Central high school and St. Paul Mechanic Arts is being played this afternoon at Athletic park. It promises to be one of the best games of the year.

The teams are pretty well matched in weight.

The St. Paul contingent arrived in the city last evening, the party including the members of the team and about twenty-five rooters. More rooters were expected this morning, and the visitors will doubtless contribute their share of the cheering this afternoon.

The Duluth lineup will be the same as a week ago, while the St. Paul team will be as follows: Larson, r. e.; McGinnis, r. t.; Grindy, r. g.; Patterson, center; Mirault, l. g.; Stutteman, l. t.; Quinlan, l. e.; Kelliher, captain and quarterback; Erdahl, r. h; Kenney, f. b.; Morgan, l. h; I Hardendorf, sub end and quarter; R Hardendorf and Fullerton, sub halves; and Echburg, sub line.

FULLBACK HIKED FOR TALL TIMBER

Thought He Had Killed Player and Dug for the Uncut.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 27.—An exploded football broke up the game Monday between the Sons of Belial, composed of Yale seniors, and the Mount Carmel team.

The Sons of Belial took up an old 'varsity football, and it lasted fifteen minutes without any scoring by either side, when Bowen, the Belial fullback, shot out for a clear field. The giant farmer fullback of the Mount Carmel team crouched to meet him, and as they collided a loud explosian was heard.

The crowd saw the Yale man fall, and they yelled, "He pulled a gun on him." The fullback gasped as he saw the crowd making for him, turned and legged it over the field, clearing fences, till he made his escape from the infuriated throng in a swamp. Here he paused as he saw the crowd stop and call vengefully for the murderer to emerge. The crowd then turned their attention to the supposed victim, and they found the Yale man arising with the wreck of a football in his hand.

Bowen told the crowd that when he was tackled by the farmer fullback the ball burst and blew up, causing the report. The trembling fullback was enticed back from the swamp and shook hands with Bowen, whom he feared he had somehow killed, but the game could not proceed, for there was no unexploded football in Mount Carmel.

You will get the knack of finding chances and opportunities through reading the Herald want ads., and then you will not worry about it even if your friends insist that you are simply "lucky."

IT EATS UP MONEY FAST

Costs Something to Campaign Horse Through Grand Circuit.

Element of Sport Holds the Owners in the Game.

It costs a lot of money to campaign a horse through the grand circuit, and if it were not for the element of sport concerned in harness racing there would not be many men following this branch of racing. When the transportation is paid on a horse from the western end of the circuit to Boston, and then back again to Cincinnati and on to Lexington, quite an amount of money has been eaten up.

Then entrance fees to the various purses must be paid, 5 per cent at least, and in most events 10 per cent, if the horse wins any part of the purse. Add to this the cost of a trainer's service, harness, sulkies, boots and horseshoers' work, and one will begin to realize the expense of taking a horse down through the big series of race meetings.

The Lexington meeting does not come properly under the grand circuit heading, but as nearly every horse that is of any importance in the circuit takes part in the Lexington meeting, it is customary to include the results of the Lexington meeting when footing up the winnings of the various horses during the season. This season, among the horses that started one or more times in the grand circuit (Lexington included) there were seventy-one trotters and seventy-four pacers which never won a cent of money.

As some of these were owned by men who owned some of the good winners, the expense of campaigning them must be figured out of the winnings of the others when considering the earning capacity of the stables which they belong to. Unless a horse wins $2,000 he can hardly be called a profitable proposition, as a campaigner, and the horses which did that last season number fifty-one—thirty-five trotters and sixteen pacers, as follows:

The claim so frequently made that the pacer can earn as much money as the trotter is not borne out by the figures of this yera's winners. Whereas not a single pacer won $10,000, three trotters won over that amount, one of them coming within a few dollars of reaching the $20,000 mark.

Among the trotters it will be noticed that among the big winners were eight 3-year-olds and two 2-year-olds. These youngsters were enabled to show a big earning capacity by being eligible to futurity stakes, and in only one instance did one of these youngsters start in over five races, the largest winner among them having started just once. Twenty-two trotters and twenty pacers won amounts ranging from $1,000 up to within a few dollars of $2,000, those coming under this head being as follows:

Trotters—Totara, 2:09½, by Bingen; Belle Isle, 2:11¼, by Actell; Norman B., 2:05¼, by Phallas; Lucille Marlowe, 2:07¼, by Prodigal; Lake Queen, 2:08¼, by Luke Wilkes; Talpa, 2:09¼, by Macaroon; Tuna, 2:08½, by James Madison; Van Zandt, 2:09, by Chime Bell; Emboy, 2:09¼, by Elire; W. N. Blakemore, 2:11, by Bow Bells; Betty Brook, 2:14¼, by Silent Brook.

Pacers—Princess Helen, 2:05¾, by The Beau Ideal; Wilson Addington, 2:06¼, by Coastman; Owaissa, 2:06¼, by Bingen; Phalla, 2:06¼, by Alliewood; Bonanza, by Alfonso Vincent; Texas Broker, 2:06, by Texas Rooker; Daphne Direct, 2:11½, by Direct; Custer, 2:05¼, by Sidney Dillon; Endora, 2:05¼, by Wilton; The Broncho, 2:00¾, by Stormcliffe; Moore, 2:12¼, by Maiden; Billy Cole, 2:07¼, by Romancer; The Friend, 2:05¼, by Heir-at-Law; Alfalfa, 2:06¼, by Argot Wilkes; Lady May, 2:04¼, by Commodore Kittson; Bystander, 2:08¾, by Zolock; Kelly, 2:10, by Baronmore; Nervolo, 2:04¼, by Colbert; Aintree, 2:10¼, by Chimes; Ruby Lacey, 2:10½, by Gambyron.

Among these lesser money winners are several that raced in the Great Western circuit and on the half-mile tracks quite a bit, so that their season's winnings are quite a bit larger than shown by their Grand Circuit winnings, but the winnings for the year of about all the prominent horses is correctly shown in the tables as given here.

SOCCER TEAMS WILL CLASH

Game Postponed From Last Sunday Will be Played.

The soccer football game between the Duluth Thistles and the Superior Pickets, which was postponed from last Sunday on account of the wet weather, will be played tomorrow afternoon.

The game will be called at Athletic part at 3 o'clock, and the lineup of the two teams will be practically the same as that announced for last Sunday.

The game will be the first of a series of three games between these two teams. A return game will be played in Superior at an early date, and if the deciding contest is necessary it will be arranged later.

PREPARE TWO MORE HILLS

The Ski Club Will Have Other "Jumps" This Season.

Two more hills will be available for members of the Duluth Ski club this winter.

The club is planning to put at least one and probably two more hills into shape for jumping, and will select sites closer to the central part of the city than the Woodland hill. There are some good hills back of the city from Chester park westward, and it is possible that a jump will be prepared there.

The prospects are for a very active winter this year. The club is planning a big tournament early in January, and from present prospects the membership will be doubled at least.

Last year was practically the first year that the sport had a footing in Duluth, but the interest in it was very keen before the end of the winter.

THE SAILING PUNT

This cut shows how the long low "sailing" punt is made. Stand with feet together, about 8 or 9 yards back of center. Take a little step forward with the right foot as you catch the ball with outstretched hands. Then bring up the left foot sharply, not straight ahead, but a little to the right, as your body will be leaning to the left, as you kick. You can get more weight into it in this way. The swing of the right leg should be wide and long, and carried well through. At the start of the swing the leg is bent at the knee, but it is snapped perfectly straight like the snap of a whip when the foot hits the ball. The instep is outstretched perfectly, stiffly, so as not to have any give when it hits the ball. The instep meets the ball just enough off the end (an inch or two) in order to give the ball the sailing motion indicated by the cut. Do not drop the ball on the foot, but hold it below the waist and toss it gently forward as you step. Toss it well away from you and low to the ground. The ball sails flat and smoothly on the air, and in this way meets with a minimum of resistance.

THE WHIRLING PUNT

The whirling punt noses its way straight into the air like a rifle bullet. Its whirling movement is due to a cut given by the instep brought directly up under the ball. The ball falls across the instep. The foot meets the ball higher from the ground than in the sailing punt, and more in front of the body. It is a difficult kick to master, and when a duffer attempts it he only succeeds in giving the ball a wobbling motion that fights the air. The other rules for stepping etc., are the same as in the sailing punt.

OLD TIME BASEBALL.

The Game as it Was Played in the '50's and '60's.

The young baseball editor snathced an hour to take a meal at home, and found the old gentleman still snoring over his sporting columns, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"I suppose you think that was a mighty fine try-out between your Giant Killers and New York," he said, in disgust, throwing down his paper and the gage of battle before the young man had time to remove his hat. "But what does it all amount to, anyway? Your clubs are all squads of hired men, and the pennant flies over the squad that's backed by the most money."

"Oh, I hope it's not so bad as that, dad. Don't go too far, for I might want to take you to the next series with the Giants."

"At least," persisted the old gentleman, in a more moderate tone and manner, "there's not half the fun in the game as when I was a boy and played rounders and town ball in Philadelphia. Jemima! How we used to sock it at the boy trying to make the bases; hit him in the head—anywher to put him out!"

"I would hate to get a ball in the head, or even the small of the back, the way they shoot them in to first and second nowadays," remarked the cub laughing.

"I can remember only too well, when I was about 11, along in the forties, how pa came home from New York, after one of those famous trips abroad, and told how they were getting together uniformed men to play ball on their so-called Elysian fields. I felt a sinking of the heart even then, as if the game was being throttled as a popular sport."

With this came a resounding thump against the brick wall, followed by a loud shout outside. The old gentleman ran to the window, rather red in the face.

"I tell you what, bub," he continued, "if those young Indians aren't a little more careful I'll have Reilly after them."

"As I was saying," he resumed, ignoring the cause of the interruption, "I felt as if we boys were being crowded out by the regular men's clubs, but my heart went clear below zero after I had been playing 10 years longer, and was quite a young man—I think it was in 1857 when the baseball associations organized and framed up regular rules. Then pretty soon there were little books afloat, with the national rules in them. Everything got onto a cut and dried basis. No more chance for personal opinions. When any good,, old fashioned squabble comes up, out comes a rule book from somebody's hip pocket. Brooklyn came to the front with a pretty good club about this time and had a series of games with New York on the race course at Flushing, L. I. The family was about moving to Chicago, but dad and I saw one good game between the old New Yorks and Brooklyns before we came away."

"How did it compare—honest, now?"

"Honest, now, bub, there was no comparison. With that six-and-one-half-ounce ball, rubber center, covered with yarn and leather; bat as long as you want it; pitcher moving around as free as you please, just so that he kept 45 feet from the home base; no spitting on balls, twists or outlandish curves, but straight pitching; all he had to do, according to the rules, was to get his ball 'as near as possible to home base.' No comparison between then and now."

"I should think," put in bub, "that such rules would not freeze a game very stiff, or even have bothered you very much."

"It was bad enough to have the rules," persisted the veteran, "but those were lively games compared to what they are now. With a stick long enough to reach a ball within ten feet of you, and such a lively ball that the good hitters could knock it a hundred feet beyond the fielders—those were games to watch! And they had scores to keep your blood warm in those days; but the biggest scores that I remember were run up in Illinois. The difference makes me tired," said the old gentleman, wearily. "If you can have a twenty-inning game, with a score of 2 to 1, like that one between Chicago and Philadelphia last year, you think it's great. In the fifties and sixties, when the Knickerbocker Mutuals of New York, the Baltics of Brooklyn and the Illinois Rockfords were playing, it wasn't a real game until after you'd piled up from fifty to 100 runs."

"True as gospel, and the records will prove it, although when I came to Chicago with the family, the daily papers weren't giving much attention to the game. I was looking over the old Press, Democrat, Journal and Tribune the other day and not a report of a baseball game could I find for '57, though I know the Unions were organized the year before. My crowd, the Excelsiors, came in about the same time; also the Atlantics, and there was a husky club of country lads from Downer's Grove. The great ball grounds in those days were at the corner of what is now Harrison and Halsted, Washington and Sheldon, and in front of the old Bull's Head tavern, at Ogden avenue and Madison. But as I said., for a number of years the papers seemed to give the game the cold shoulder. Cricket and boating had the lead. The Chicago Regatta and Cricket club, fathered by Her Majesty's British consul, had the monopoly of the sporting columns with an occasional old-fashioned prize fight in a saloon—fine, $5 a side.

"Well, when did the Chicago papers commence to limber up?"

"The first record I could find was in the old Daily Democrat of Sept. 14, 1858," replied the veteran baseballist, with an air of satisfaction, if not of pride. "It preserved in the public prints the great game between the Unions and the Excelsionrs—30 to 17—rather small score, but a fine game. I remember we had a couple of young physicians for scorers, though we didn't need their professional services, though several squalls came up that the rules didn't seem to quell—nor the umpire, either. Later the Atlantics got to be the Chicago champions, but for several years were made miserable, as well as all the other local clubs, by that interior gang of clerks and country boys, the Rockfords—Al Spalding, pitcher.

"Still we were all amateurs in those days, and the clubs of Chicago, Rockford, Freeport, Evanston, Madison, Wis., and some other cities, in the last year of the war, when a good many of the boys were coming home after playing with hotter balls than they ever handled in the diamond—I think it was in 1865 that they formed the Northwestern Association of Amateurs. Of course, I was then out of the game and in business, but I still was mighty glad to go to a game. I went and hurrahed with the other old boys, when the old Dexter grounds were opened in June, 1867; but I am sorry to say that the Rockfords gave the Excelsiors a trouncing. I commenced to get a little resigned to professional baseball when, after these amateur champions of the Northwest had beaten the Nationals of Washington—the Eastern champions—and thought the earth was theirs, they were tamed in four games by the Cincinnati Reds, the first salaried team in the country, and for a time invincible.

"The Rockfords of 1869 were worse than ever. The papers were now full of baseball, and they all agreed that when Chicago was up against Rockford she was simply pudding. That year the Rockfords won 20 out of the 24 games they played—the Cincinnati Reds won the 4; they made a total of 1,812 runs against 287 for their opponents, and, to give you an idea of some of the games, they won from Harvards by 110 to 10, and the Libertys of Springfield brought about that meeting in the Briggs House in 1869, when Potter Palmer, Phil Sheridan, C. B. Farwell, George M. Pullman, David A. Gage and other heavy men put up their money and bought some star Eastern players to make up a Chicago club. They were sent South to practice. The Rockford papers made fun of these foreigners, but when our White Stockings beat them 28 to 14—15 runs in the first inning—"

"But they were nothing but common hired men, were they, dad?"

"Well, perhaps not, but Chicago had a club at last that it din't have to apologize to the East for. Rockofrd was beaten, too. Although I didn't like to see it, I couldn't help it, when, in 1871, was formed the National Association of Professional Baseball Players, and in 1875 their owners organized the league. The first season after the association was formed the Athletics of Philadelphia, were first, Boston second and Chicago third. The Rockfords were the last of the bunch, but the White Stockings did not feel like crowing so much, because young Spalding, whom everybody said Chicago could never beat, had joined the Boston professionals. When Boston won the pennant in 1872, 1873, 1874 and 1875, with that Spalding still shooting them over the plate, it was a bitter pill for Chicago, but she took her medicine humbly until 1876, when she corralled him herself and won the championship."

"Where does Capt. Anson come in?"

"He comes into the White Sox crowd just at this stage of the game. He had been playing two years with the Philadelphia Athletics—and a long, raw-boned, heady, good-natured player he was, too. When the Athletics and the Bostons, as the crack teams of the country, made their tour to England in 1874, Anson and Spalding struck up the friendship which has never failed to this day, and two years later joined the White Stockings together. Anson played first base. No baseball crank in the United States need be told what he played for a generation or so afterward. When he and Spalding were in their prime Chicago had no difficulty in recognizing baseball as the national game—took the pennant in '76, '80, '81, '82, '85 and '86. Boston had a long string of victories, too—'77, '78, '83, '91, '92, '93, '97 and '98. New York came next, with '88, '89, 1904 and '05; Brooklyn, '90, '99 and 1900; Baltimore, '94, '95 and '96; Pittsburg, 1901, '02 and '03; Providence, '79 and '84, and Detroit, '87. Since 1890, and the American league came in, the players are too many and change too often, with fresh offers of salary, for me bub, when the Giants come around again, if you happen to have an hour to spare, old dad wouldn't object to seeing a game or two."

"So you don't take any more interest in the boys who are playing today," reflected bub.

"Not so much in the boys as in the game. When I get to thinking about the old crowd I go round to the city hall and have a chat with, Cap Anse.' Saw him the other day. The old baseball red hasn't worn off yet; but I notice that being cooped up in the office gives him a cough. Poor fellow! I don't believe he breathes right yet, unless he's being baked by the diamond sun. But he was glad to see me and talk about the bat leaders of twenty and thirty years ago. I had a list in my hand. 'Let's see it,' he says, putting down the telephone receiver, which I noticed he handled like the handle of a baseball bat. 'Yes, there's Barnes of Chicago. He led in '76. I believe he's on the open board here. White of Boston headed the batters in '77. He's in Buffalo in the optical line with his brother. Dalrymple, the Cream City leader of '78, was in this room only a few days ago.

"He was a brakeman before he broke into the baseball business, and he has returned to the railroad business. Anson of '79. Here, you've got him down twice. Yes, that's right—'79, '81 and '88. Gore of Chicago led us in '80. The last I heard of Gore he was in New York city—at the bar, or a first-class waiter at a restaurant. Big Dan Brouthers led the heavy hitters four years, which is the record, so far—in '82 and '83, when he was with Buffalo, in '89 when he played with Boston and in '92 when he was with Brooklyn.

"Dan is still in the game—so is O'Rourke, who was with Buffalo when his name headed the batting average of '84. They are both in the New England legue. I believe O'Rourke has the franchise for the Waterbury, Conn., club. Connors, the star batter of '85, is also playing in New England. Mike Kelly, the great all-around player of Chicago, who led in '86, is dead. Luby, who came from the Texas league and wielded the heavy stick in '90 and '91—he's gone, too. Stenzel, who played with Pittsburg in '93, and was the drum major of the batters for that year, is now running a saloon on the Cincinnati baseball grounds. Hugh Duffy, formerly of Chicago, you know now as the manager of the Philadelphias. He was a Bean-Eater in '94, when he headed the list. At this point I broke off," concluded the old gentleman. "The others on the list were altogether too recent."

"And still, dad, it is the Giant Killers who are holding up Chicago's end of the game so far this year."

"True, bub, and remember, though I don't take much interest in the boys of today, I do enjoy a good game, and don't forget when the Giants, or the Phillies, or the Pirates, or the—"

But the young baseball editor had finished his home visit and was on a run for the office.

LIFE OF RACE HORSE.

Trainers of Thoroughbreds Really Learn to Love Their Charges.

He was only a horse; but when he died his near friends wept and then the newspapers had columns about him, and wherever English is read and men love a victor there was mourning, at least for the day, over his passing, says the New York Post.

Possibly not another animal in all the world was so well known as Sysonby. Yet the sentiment that surrounded him was not altogther due to his fame. Many a horse before him had left tears behind, after spending a brief life of popularity, even of adulation from the few most closely associated with the stables. Many a thoroughbred, neither so valiant nor so continually a conqueror, had come to his end without ever having known aught but kind words and lavish care. That a great number have been less fortunate is a sad commentary on the brutality of those horsemen who do not love their horses, considering them only as gambling mediums, rather than an argument that sentiment is a rarity in the racing fraternity. The paddock echoes with stories of affection bestowed upon the champions of past days, even after their usefulness on the track was ended.

"It is true that the winner is the one about whom we are most sentimental," said a trainer the other day. "But for the most part the race horse gets good treatment; certainly until he stops racing, and often afterwards. As far as the trainers and stablemen are concerned, a horse that has done his work would rarely be cast aside. We who see them every day look upon them as deserving of all they can get to the end of their days. Some of the owners, however, have no feelings beyond their betting calculations, and when a thoroughbred breaks down, they are ready to let him pull a truck or even plow, if he's able to do the work."

A stallion like Sysonby, or anywhere near like him, is watched hardly less carefully than a child, though the attention he receives can perhaps be compared more fittingly with that accorded to a prize fighter in training. From the time he is brought from the nursery he has a home in some stable convenient to the race course, and during the season he is quartered inside the inclosure of one of the tracks. Sysonby was in training at Sheepshead Bay. Hundreds of lesser lights of the turf are now at Gravesend, Belmont Park, Aqueduct, Jamaica and Brighton Beach.

The champion's stall, generally floored with clay or concrete, sometimes with wood, is about 15 feet long by 12 feet wide; high-pitched, with windows large enough to let in plenty of light, and, above all things, thoroughly drained. The first requirement is that it be kept always clean. The bed on which the occupant sleeps is the best of straw, which is changed frequently. In some stalls, elevated like upper berths of a sleeping car, are bunks for stable boys. This, though, is an unusual arrangement. As the trainer explained;

"Usually nobody has to bother about watching a horse at night. It is only when the animal is extremely nervous, or when he has taken an incurable fancy to some boy, that he has a human stalimate. We want him to sleep long and soundly. It's good for him. Generally speaking, he sleeps better if nothing alive is near him between sunset and dawn."

In answer to a question about the animals taking a fancy to some other dumb creature, the trainer said he had known of many horses that seemed unable to get along without company.

"There is Hermis," he recalled. "Hermis likes a cat, or he did once. That cat lives in the stall, and the great chestnut is happy only when he knows the little thing is near by. I've known thoroughbreds to have similar leanings toward dogs. One, I remember, had for a pal a pet monkey brought there by a stable boy. The monkey spent most of its time on the horse's back, and the horse ate better, slept better and generally behaved himself in a more gentlemanly manner whenever the monkey was on top.

Frequently, too, a racer shows a fondness for another horse. A blue-blooded stake winner is likely to admire a miserable plug. There have been nervous horses that would not go to the post peaceably unless their uncouth partners could accompany them at least a part of the way. Of course they do not stay in the same stalls with their favorites, but it is arranged that between the rooms there is an opening wide enough to let the two look through at each other or rub their noses together."

White oats, sifted well, are what the pampered creatures eat. They never get corn, if the trainer knows his business. Twelve quarts of the oats are a good allowance for a day, and the way the trainer gauges the horse's condition is by the animal's appetite.

"Has he eaten well?" is the question asked of the groom.

The trainer makes the inquiry early every morning about each horse in his care. Through the day he visits them frequently. In the case of so valuable an animal as Sysonby or Burgomaster or Irish Lad or Artful, he repeats the visit eight or ten or a dozen times before night. With less worthy charges, of course, the attention of the trainer is less constant, as is that of the grooms, who have three or four horses apiece to watch, although the champion racers have their special boys with nothing else to do but provide for their comfort.

If the horse eats well the trainer knows he is all right; if he does not, a veterinary is called in to make an examination. There is no custom, though such has been stated as a fact in fanciful stories, of regular visits of inspection by the "horse doctor." He only calls when summoned. The "horse dentist" is the only medical man who pays regular visits.

"The dentist," explains the trainer, "looks them over pretty often. He files teeth, or pulls out one, or even plugs them, when he finds it necessary. A race horse must have good teeth."

Outside of his stall, where he spends most of his time, the racer gets his periodic practice gallops, and, when the weather is good, he is allowed to go out for a nibble at the fresh grass. The extent to which he is permitted to take outdoor recreations or nourishment depends upon his trainer—different trainers, of course, have different ideas—and upon his own disposition and his own constitution. The Picket, winner of the Brooklyn handicap two years ago, has been pointed out as an animal of so strong a constitution that he is permitted to roam the pasture almost as freely as a common work horse, neither his owner nor his trainer fearing the effects of weather or freedom upon his health.

Many are the yarns of superstitions and sentimental attachments of the stables. One of the best of them has as its hero the black boy who took care of Imp, the famous mare, one-time winner of the Suburban. The negro was fairly daft over the great mare. He worshiped her. Never was he contented to be out of her sight. He wanted to stroke her all day, and the only reason he did not sleep on the straw beside her was that the trainer threatened to "lick" him if he did.

Somehow the boy, who was called "cracked" by his associates, became imbued with the idea that Imp went to sleep when she was racing, and that her fastest gait was reached when she dreamed. For hours he would explain the theory, giving his reasons, to anybody who would listen to him.

"I'se seen her do it," he would say.

And whenever the mare was in a big race the boy could be seen and heard by all the throngs in the grand stand. It was his custom to leap upon the rail next to the track. Having perched himself there, he would begin to shout. At first he would yell:

"Take it easy, old girl; don't let 'em 'sturb your rest."

Later, after the "field" was well in motion and until the horses had dashed under the finish wire, he would keep on crying to the jockey in a voice so deep that it could be heard above the din of the crowd:

"Let her sleep, there! Jes' let her sleep!"

When Imp stopped racing the negro vanished from the Eastern race tracks. Maybe he followed her to the farm, though it has been suggested at "the Bay" that he "just went off and died."

Though the jockeys do not often display especial affection for any particular horse, beyond, of course, their natural preference for and pride in a winner, there have been instances of sentiment on the part of the riders. Fred Taral, for instance, used to say that he "loved Domino better than he did anybody with only two legs."

"He's better than any man I ever saw," he would say. "More grit, more courage, more sense! Why, one proof of his sense is that he hates me."

It was a fact. Domino, usually gentle, showed a ferocious disposition every time Taral approached him. At sight of the jockey he would begin to kick and paw the ground and bite at everything within reach.

"It's because I've won on him so many times," the rider used to explain. "You see, much as I love him, I've got to use the whip and spurs in a close finish, and he don't like 'em. I've heard tell that a horse likes to come in first, that he enjoys his victory as much as anybody; but I'm here to tell you that I don't believe Domino would be willing to take one lick to win the biggest race on earth."

Then, too, the owners of the horses oftentimes feel a tenderness toward their winners. The story has it that James R. Keene, the champion owner, gave way to tears when Sysonby breathed his last, and exclaimed:

"There lies what is left of all that was bravest and best in a horse."

Had Sysonby lived to old age, even though he had proved a disappointment at the stud, Mr. Keene probably would have nourished him fondly, never forgetful of the turf glories of the past. Hundreds of old race horses find a reward in their old age for their courageous struggles of other times. Not a day passes but one might see them, if he knew them by sight, drawing light carts through Central Park. All over the country there are family pets of whose elsewhere forgotten triumphs the children boast at home.

An instance is to be found in the story of Arab, the fleetest and safest steeplechase jumper of his day. His owner was a gambler, but his fondness for Arab seemed to extend further than the desire to make money out of the efforts. When the jumper grew old he was taken to the owner's country home and became a pet, with privileges even of the front yard. A few years ago he was still there, so gentle that the children played around him on the grass.

And there was Parole, a champion of more than twenty years ago. Growing old, he was taken by his owner, Pierre Lorillard, to the New Jersey stock farm known as Rancocas. Nor like other horses' lot, however, was that of Parole. He was kept near the house, where Mr. Lorillard and any visitor could always look at him, and it was his master's gretest pleasure to recount the achievements of the dignified old pet's youth.

One hears these stories of only the celebrated ones, but there are hundreds, may be thousands, of other horses whose later years are made comfortable. The objects of such consideration, naturally, are the good-tempered ones. In this connection it may be mentioned that most of the famous horses have been gentle. The irritable and vicious champion is a rarity. In commenting upon the popular, though erroneous impression that all great horses were more or less dangeraus, a trainer recently observed that there was no reason for such to be the fact.

"Because," he said, "it is natural a horse should be good-tempered if he is used to fine treatment all the time, if every passer-by has a kind word or a caress for him. All the best horses get that sort of a deal. Few of them are vicious. I can recall a few, of course. Ornament was one. He always wanted to kill some one; but he was an exception."

But, after all, there is an army of unfortunate race horses whose end is as miserable as their beginning was gorgeous. One wonders, sometimes, what becomes of them all—thousands of beautiful animals, whose names, after appearing on race track programs for a year or two, disappear and are not heard of again.

Some of them are working hard work in front of drivers who never heard the fancy names, who call them "Jerry" or "Jim," or what not, and perhaps beat them as they struggle ahead of heavy loads. Others are dragging hansoms down Broadway. Many, unfit to work, have been killed as soon as their "keep" became worth more than their services.

Not many years ago a once well-known horse, War Eagle, was pulling a hack around Coney Island. In this case the driver was proud of his horse's record, and when he hired the rig for 50 cents to go from one end of Coney's Bowery to the other, you were regaled at the finish with the oft-told tale of the animal's past. War Eagle himself never appeared interested, unless in the courses of the recital you gave him a lump of sugar. As for speed, he had forgotten all he ever had, and the tired gallop he occasionally attempted seemed to exhaust him utterly.

Every now and then one hears of an amateur race in the suburbs wherein the winner shows traces of the swiftness that easily vanquish his fellow drudges. Recently there was such a race in New Jersey. The cab horses and truck horses entered for the contest were not suspected of including an ex-hero of Monmouth Park and Guttenberg, but after the event it came to light that the winner possessed a record. His owner, having kept silent while he made bets on his "plug," admitted that he had been nursing a "good thing,' having purchased the horse from a man who got him from the race track at a sale of partially disabled thoroughbreds.

There have been racers that retired to common labor and later returned to the track as first-class horses. George Keene, a jumper of fair reput, was taken off the track some years ago because his legs seemed to be "wrong." His owner used him for a driving horse. After a year or two some one suggested that the legs were again as good as ever, and George Keene's name was seen again on the programs. He won several steeplechases in New England, and afterward ran creditably at Brighton Beach as late as last summer. Now, it is reported, he is in retirement again, but none will dispute the possibility of his being posted a winner at 40 to 1 within the next two seasons.

That there are not enough soft berths for all, or even a large proportion of the old thoroughbreds is, of course, easy to understand when one is told that the number in training in the East in a single season reaches into the thousands. Just the first-class animals, the stake horses, are numerous enough to make one suprised that they alone are carel for after their racing days are over. Look over the programs for only three or four years back and you will see the names of hundreds that were ranked in the highest class. Hardly one of them—take, for example, such as Waterboy, McChesney, Irish Lad, Ort Wells, Hermis, Highball, Beldame, Sysonby, Artful and Burgomaster—has maintained his or her winning ability or health beyond the second season. A year of victories seems to kill or retire all of them. Is it any wonder that the treatment accorded to so fragile and fleeting a creature should often lack the consideration which would attach to a more stable ad lasting pet? By the time one grows used to him he dies—or gets beaten, which is worse.

PLUNGERS WHO ARE SHABBY

Story of Big Bettor Who Did Not Look the Part.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 27.—A number of turfmen were recently holding one of the symposiums of reminiscence which delight racing folk when the conversation drifted to what was designated as rag-tag plungers. Stories were told of meeting up with ordinary looking, poorly dressed men who on acquaintance turned out to be among the biggest bettor on the racetrack. Finally a member of the party said:

"The most peculiar incident of the kind that I can recall was when I was out East three years ago, I had been cashing in a book, but the book went off. I was scrambling around trying to pick a winner when I ran into an old friend who said he was going to draw in for three days in the field, and that it would be worth $50 per day if I wanted to go over, hold the block berth and take the money for him.

"The proposition looked pretty good to me just then. So I went along. My friend cleaned up about $3,000 on the three days and then skiddooed for a trip to Europe. During all this time I had noticed a cheaply dressed old guy hanging around the book. Nearly every race he would bet me five or ten. After the last race of the last day we were on I was getting ready to go across to the grandstand when the old fellow stopped me.

"'Say,' he remarked, 'how much money does it take to make a book?'

"The old man's clothes were worth about $3 and I had him sized up as either an old fourflush, an old crank, or an old fool. I had won a good bet and wanted to cash my ticket, but, desiring anyway to give the old chap a civil answer, I said:

"'Oh, about $25,000.'

"He said he wanted to talk with me. I told him that I had to meet my wife, but that I would see him some other time. I was living at Sheepshead Bay. Several days passed by. Then one morning when I had nothing to do I decided that I would go down to the Manhattan Hotel to see Mr. McPherson—he had told me his name and where he lived. I did not have any idea that I would find him at The Manhattan, but when I asked the clerk he took my breath away by saying:

"'Yes, Mr. McPherson has a suite of rooms here.'

"'What sort of a chap is he?" I asked.

"'Well, he's got a lot of money, but he is eccentric.'

"I sent up my card and was invited up to his rooms. He got right down to business and said:

"'I have an idea of putting on a book. I watched you out there in the field, and, besides, I have made inquiries about you. I had intended to book at Saratoga, but am called West on business that will detain me a month or more. I will get back about the time of the fall meetings here, and then I will put up the money you may need to book with.'

"The following day Alan-a-Dale was in a race. After scouting around the paddock awhile I found that Alan had been 'off,' that not much had been done with him on that account, and that a horse called Blue Blaze was the next best and would about cop. Running into McPherson he asked me what I liked. I told him Blue Blaze, against which the books were laying 10 to 1. I had a couple of hundred dollars that I intended to bet myself. He said he had a strong tip on Alan-a-dale. I told him that Alan was lame, that Blue Blaze would win sure, and to go the limit on it. He said he had only $500 with him, but he would go into the ring and bet that. Blue Blaze won by a nose, scratched in somehow. I did not see anything more of the old man that day, in fact I did not think much about him as I had won a comfortable bet myself. But the following morning he telephoned me to come down to breakfast with him. I replied that I had an engagement, but designated a place where I would meet him at the racetrack.

"He showed up all right and I got another jolt when he asked, 'How would you like the money, check or currency?' I did not have any use for a check and told him the currency would do, expecting that he would proffer me about $500. He pulled a wad out of his jeans as big as your leg, counted out $2,500 and handed it to me. He left on his trip that day and shortly afterwards I had to go West on urgent business that kept me in the West the balance of the season. I never saw McPherson again, but if I wanted to qualify in the guild of professional touts you can bet I would get on his train and hunt him up quick. As a con would put it, he was the "most deceitfulest' looking man I ever met."

NEW COPPER KING HAS 'RISEN

Clarence H. Lamb Has Made a Million at Funeral Range--Looks Like Napoleon and Talks Like a Bashful Boy.

Goldfield, Nev., Oct. 27.—That romance still glimmers in the air for the man who braves the untoothbrushed wilds in strenuous quest of precious metals has received still one more testimonial from the melancholy crags where the Funeral range shoots toward the heavens from the pasty waste of Death Valley. Among these crags, bleak and sullen, and picturesque only in the pigments of the sunset and sunrise, or in the note of awe struck by their massive heaping together, there has just arisen a new king in copper, who may, if he likes, race his own automobiles, yachts and horses for silver or golden guerdon, and who but one short year ago was eating slumgullion any clad in dungarees among the shacks of Rhyolite.

The name of this new copper king is Clarence H. Lamb, and he can feast on pheasants and flamingoes' hearts for three years before he will have turned 30. He looks like Napoleon and talks like a bashful boy. His extravagance, after turning his hard-won bonanzas into double eagles was a new pipe; his second, a new carriage for his new baby; his third, the handsomest rope of pearls for his wife that he could order from Tiffany's. He still wears corduroys, formerly the last symbol of opulence, bucks his trousers into brogans and lingers wistfully where the landscape is sagebrush and sand, sand and sagebrush, with a rim of flinty mountains on the horizon.

Lamb, who is anything but a lamb in spirit, was born in a small town about sixty miles south of Chicago. When he was 4 years old he took his parents out to Lincoln, Nebraska, where he kept them employed in his behalf till he was 16. Up to that time, having been unable to decide whether he wanted to be a professional bicycle rider or a bugler in the navy, he had suffered himself to progress in learning as far as the high school. Then, however, being eager to shuffle the cards of his own destiny on any terms he abandoned his dreams of medalled or uniformed glory to learn the jeweller's trade.

When he was 21, being a bit weary of scrutinizing the inwards of watches, he made a flying leap to Cripple Creek, and there, after discovering that his knowledge of mining was a joke, he became a jeweller again. Six months of Cripple Creek, however, stirred his adventurous soul into a further migration, and he circled to Los Angeles by way of Seattle.

He was gradually learning to make up his mind and keep it made up. Having excursioned one day to Pasadena, he promised himself that he would return there, sooner or later, and build himself a splendid home. That promise will be fulfilled this winter. Having seen a girl in Santa Rosa that struck him as being the nicest girl in the world, he decided that she should marry him. She did. Having accumulated a capital of $2,500, through luck, energy and a codicil, he announced that he was going into Nevada to get rich. Now he has a million.

When Lamb came into this state the railroad that now runs to Goldfield from Reno ended at Tonopah, and he had to do the last lap in a stage. Among his fellow passengers on the stage was a chap named Rosenkranz, who knew all about the restaurant business and who was likewise dead broke. Lamb liked the restaurant business and when they reached Goldfield, then but the crude embryo of the present booming town, he suggested that his dollars and the Rosenkranz experience might be profitably combined into a place to eat. The pair accordingly started what was known as the Oxford restaurant, where their gross receipts kept barely ahead of expenses for several months. They paid their waiters $10 a day, their cook $25 and as the nearest tee was at Reno, their importations of fish, meat and vegetables had to be grabbed from the stage and slapped on the table, whether there was a customer for them or not.

Tiring of the restaurant struggle, and glad to get out of it with most of his original capital, Lamb hiked still farther into the wilderness, this time to Rhyolite. Here he dallied in small claims, got an occasional rake-off from a lucky grubstake, and pottered along, somehow, till March 24, last year. Then he heard how Fred Berney and Phil Creaser, grubstaked by Dennis Clark of Spokane, had made a big copper strike in the Funeral range, just over the California border. He thereupon suggested to his partner, William J. Cleary, on March 28, that they should themselves hasten down to the Funeral range and get a little copper of their own. Thus came the next emigration.

The road leading to the ultimate crests of the Funeral range, in those days, was over a circuitous and desolate trail cut by the twenty-mule teams that hauled the borax out of Death Valley. They traveled over it, as far as Furnace Creek ranch, in three days, in a wagon drawn by two horses and laden with barrels of water. The ranch gained with no greater privation than terrific heat and imminent suffocation in the swirling dust, they replenished their water supply and again set forth. For two days they toiled steadily upward, toward the mountain tops. Then one of the horses fell sick and they were forced to wait three days before he recovered. Then two of their barrels sprang a leak in the night and let every last drop of water still remaining trickle upon the thirsty trail. The next morning found them desperate. They had lost their way, both horses were evidently on their last legs, their throats were sore and full of grit, their tongues were beginning to swell, and the game seemed to be about up. Stubbornly plodding along, they suddenly discerned a tiny trail which shot abruptly to the right. It was decided that Cleary should explore this trail afoot. If he found water, he was to fire his revolver five times. If he didn't find water—well, they simply shook hands.

While Cleary was gone both horses lay down, and Lamb let them lie. He waited ten minutes, or a hundred years, he never could tell which, and then heard the revolver shots which Cleary turned loose like so many gunpowder cheers. The horses were prodded to their feet and made to drag themselves unwillingly in the direction from which Cleary's signal had come. There was the water, sure enough, and though it was green with copperas it brought the discouraged outfit back to life. That was how the town now building not far away from that spot came to be called Greenwater, and that was how, also, that Lamb and Cleary discovered the trail that led to the big copper strike where Patrick Clark of Spokane is now extracting wealth at so much wealth per minute, and where Charles M. Schwab and Frederick Heinze and "Borax" Smith are doing likewise in the immediate neighborhood.

Schwab and Heinze and Smith, however, did not figure till afterward. Lamb and Cleary promptly erected the monuments that marked eight claims snug up against the Clark ground, and just as rich, or richer. They called these claims, four of them, the Anxiety, and the other four, the Copper Shoes. And so it happened that, when the L. M. Sullivan Trust company of Goldfield bought the Anxiety and Copper Shoes a week or two later, Lamb suddenly found himself a plutocrat, with Cleary for a running mate. But since Schwab and Heinze and Smith have gone into the Greenwater country, and have ruefully desired the Anxiety and Copper Shoes for themselves, Lamb says he made only one mistake in getting rich, which was in getting rich so fast. For, if he had put off the Sullivan offer for a little while, he could have been just twice as rich as he is.

THE BRIGHT SIDE OF COPPER

Why Twenty-Two-Cent Metal Has Not Alarmed Electrical Engineers---Telephone Takes Largest Share of Copper Output.

Boston, Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The many holders of copper stock in this community, where almost countless fortunes have been made by lucky investment in mines yielding the much valued red metal, are just now in a state of rejoicing over recent reports from the fields of production. Even when the rest of the stock market is heavy "coppers" are buoyant. So, too, are shareholders in hundreds of New England communities, who long ago put faith and funds into ventures which have since proved profitable. So, too, are the managers of electrical properties who, during the last year or two, had begun to fear there might come a time when the scarcity of copper would seriously impede the development of street railroading, telephony and other industries.

Immense savings of New Englanders have of late years gone into enterprises involving the use of electrical power, and all these are dependent for their very existence upon copper. Fortunately at a time when the world needs copper as never before there is said by the mining engineers to be a practical certainty that the next few years will witness a remarkable increase in production. Late reports from the mining region of Northern Michigan emphasize the continued productivity of the region where copper mining has gone on continuously since Boston capital was first enlisted in the properties about 1840.

James J. Hill's prediction of a country whose supply of the useful metals has been exhausted may come to pass, but the copper statistics up to this time are all against him. Back in 1883 a yield of 59,702,404 pounds from the Lake Superior peninsula was considered phenomenal. By 1893 the output had grown to 112,905,078 pounds. In 1899 the production of refined copper was 129,198,460 pounds avoirdupois. In 1905 the output was 229,270,035 pounds, making a gain for the decade of a trifle more than a million pounds, or an increase of 77 per cent. Ten years ago there were only seven mines in operation in the territory; there are now nearly twenty producing mines and an equal number of properties in process of development from which copper may be expected in the near future.

The present boom in Lake Superior production is very largely the outgrowth of a financial boom back in 1889 and 1899. For it is a curious fact, and one that is not always understood, that to create a yielding copper mine requires from four to seven years' time and the expenditure of from one and a half millions to two million dollars. The forecasters say that in 1911 to 1913 the results of a number of other mines which are now being opened up in response to the current demand for the metal will become apparent to the market, just as those of an earlier boom are now being realized.

Such tidings of cheer are especially welcome to the managers and engineers of electrical enterprises. The general public, too, is directly affected, for all sorts of utilities which the average man once regarded as luxuries but which are now demanded as necessities are dependent upon reasonably plentiful supply of the malleable and ductile red metal. The price of telephonic service, for example, is largely conditioned by the price of copper, and all the other electrical conveniences rely upon the metal for lighting streets and buildings, operating power plants and railroads and doing the thousand and one other things which electricity accomplished for modern civilization.

The Bell system, which now has in operation nearly, if not quite, 3,000,000 telephones, is unquestionably the largest single user of copper in the world, just as its manufacturing auxiliary, the Western Electric company is the biggest single manufacturer of electrical apparatus. A very great share of the billion pounds of the metal which this year's activity will probably show as the world's output will be turned over to the uses of the local, long-distance and toll lines which have connected every hamlet of the United States with every other. Nor is this immense demand hard to appreciate when one considers the many parts of the telephone plant in which copper is employed. The heavy copped wire on the pole lines, the lighter equipment in local services, and even the tiny strands in the cables and the miles and miles of fine-spun wire in special pieces of apparatus at the switchboard—these all consume in the aggregate vast quantities of the semi-precious metal. In one of the larger type of switchboards which are installed in the great cities there will be found more than 4,000 miles of copper wire—enough to reach from New York to San Francisco and then stretch 1,000 miles up the Pacific coast. There are also seemingly endless strands of finest wire, hardly coarser than the silk with which a housewife sews. In the relays of the switchboards of the ten largest cities of the United States more than 200,000 miles of delicate wire are stretched.

Furthermore, the use of copper in alloyed forms in telephonic apparatus is one that keeps the brass manufacturers of Connecticut constantly hustling. Looking at the exterior and interior of a telephone receiver and transmitter one sees pieces of brass evrywhre, nickl plated sometims, and somtimes of its natural color. The same alloy is used in the protective apparatus, in the fuse mountings and arrester springs, in the plugs, as the ends of the operators' connecting cords are called, in the springs inside the jacks or switch sockets, in the weights that pull the cords into place when they are not in use, in the "drops" that the operator has to watch on the so-called "magneto" board and in almost countless little screws and rivets. So that when one realizes that the output of new telephones for the Bell companies now averages more than 5,000 a day, one sees why the copper situation would be one to create alarm among the telephone engineers were it not for hopeful indications that the output of the metal is likely to increase progressively for some time to come. Boston, besides being the leading copper center of the country, is the home of the telephon, and nowhere is th outlook for new supplies of copper studied more attentively than in the engineering departments of the American Telegraph & Telegraph company.

Recapitulation of recent estimates from the lake region gives to interested students of the situation an assured minimum output of 330,000,000 pounds for 1912 from the mines now producing without allowance for the production of any of the new mines that are certain to become producers by that time. In 1898 the copper production of the lake mines was 147,965,738 pounds, and the gain for the seven year period ending 1905 was 54 per cent. An increase of 54 per cent for the seven years following would give an increase of practically 125,000,000 pounds, making the 1912 production 355,000,000 pounds. In all likelihood, so the experts say, the 1912 production of Lake Superior copper mines will reach, if it does not exceed, 375,000 pounds.

Meantime, in Montana, Arizona, Mexico and Alaska, other important fields are already either partially developed or about to be developed, and there is even the likelihood that in the vast and almost unexplored tracts of Northern Canada heretofore undiscovered deposits of cupriferous ore may help still further to keep supply within sight of demand. So that, although telephone use in this country is increasing at the rate of more than 25 per cent per annum, human ingenuity is believed to be capable of still supplying the metal which thus far is indispensable.

SURVEYING NEW RAILROAD

Tonopah, Nev., Oct. 27.—A surveyor's crew is engaged in surveying a road from Tonopah to Ely by way of Golden Arrow, Horseshoe Camp and Clifford. By the railroad, Golden Arrow will be forty-two miles from Tonopah, Horseshoe Camp fifty-two and Clifford sixty. It is reported that the Tonopah-Goldfield railroad is back of the scheme. This company is controlled by the men at the head of the Tonopah Mining company and the Tonopah Mining company has considerable mining property around Rattlesnake canyon in the Hot Creek range. A railroad taking the above mentioned route would pass close by the mouth of Rattlesnake canyon and would facilitate shipping neormously. It would also serve another good purpose by giving an outlet by way of Ely for the silicious ores of the Tonopah district. The road would pass by the north end of the Kawich range through the Tybo country, where there are numerous lead and silver-lead mines that would supply flux for the smelters, which, it is rumored, are to be built at Ely. Another surveying gang, which has been working southwest of Ely, is now in the Hot Creek country. They are thought to be making a reconnaissance for the Clark road. The rival outfits are going at top speed, and the race for the passes is likely to be a desperate one. Both sides are keenly anxious to preempt the best routes over the hills. It is not thought that both roads will build, but that the one which fails to secure the most favorable grades will pull out of the race. Golden Arrow will certainly be the most important town of the whole Kawich district. The railroad will run through its very streets and occupying as it does, a central position, it will be the natural distributing point for supplies among all the towns around, such as Eden, Bellehelen, Reveille and Horseshoe. All these camps are growing fast and are very busy. The Golden Arrow Townsite company has been incorporated and as soon as the plat of the townsite has been filed; the lots will be put on the market. More people are pouring in every day and a big boom is expected. The townsite has a very pleasant location and plenty of water. The hills are well wooded with big straight pines admirably adapted for mining timbers.

A great deal of work is being done and all companies and individuals are busily egaged in opening up their property. The Clifford Gold Mining company has been incorporated and is exploring its Golden Arrow property by means of crosscuts and trenches. The Golden Arrow Mining company has three shafts down more than 100 feet and has ordered machinery from the East in order to go deeper. The survey of the Patrick and Forman property is complete and they are developing the property with a view to incorporation. The King Mining company has a shaft down on its President group at Golden Arrow. McLaughlin and associates are sinking on their Golden Horn ledge. Judge Drumm has gone down 100 feet on the Blackbird and is crosscutting north and south. On the Blackburn property on Dead Horse Butte ore that pans free gold in large quantities has been found while doing the assessment work. The Page brothers have a shaft on their ledge on the Rabbits' Foot Claim. Property is being bought right and left and the Kawich Consolidated Mining company has added to its holdings by securing a group of ten claims at Golden Arrow and another of five claims at Horseshoe. At the latter place, five miles west of Bellehelen, ore that ranges from $25 to $200 a ton has been found on the Lawrence ground, and there is an immense body of it. Down in the flat, where the Lawrence estate is situated, the ore is all strictly in place and there is nothing to confuse the miner. The Lawrence vein runs east and west and meets the Horseshoe vein which runs southeast and northwest, either on the Horseshoe or on the Lawrence ground. As well as the big ledge on the Lawrence, there is another ledge running parallel to it. This also looks very promising.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Standard Smelter in Continuous Operation and Handling Large Tonnage---Matteen Tin Mine Sold to Easterners for $10,000.

Rapid City, S. D., Oct. 27.—The Standard smelter is running continuously and handling a large tonnage. The small damage sustained by a recent fire has all been repaired and the plant is now operating under very satisfactory conditions. A large amount of ore from the Bald Mountain district of the Northern Hills is being treated.

Keystone, S. D., Oct. 27.—The new air compressor has been delivered at the Egyptian, and work is now progressing with rapidity. Three shifts of miners are now employed. The shaft is being sunk on the ore body, and as the pay stuff is broken it is milled in a 5-stamp mill which the company has leased. The policy of the management is very conservative, and the outcome looks promising.

Hill City, S. D., Oct. 27.—The Matteen tin mine, near this city, has just been sold by Carl Johnson to an Eastern syndicate for $10,000, which was paid in cash. The property has a shaft which has been sunk to the depth of fifty feet and is in a good vein of tin ore. The Gertie tin mine, which has been shut down for a time, pending a change in the mill, will resume operations shortly. A new vein of ore has been encountered which runs as high as 8 per cent tin. In the runs which have been made the concentrates averaged 67 per cent tin. It has been necessary to make some changes in the concentrating tables, which caused the shutdown at the mill.

BUTTE MINES IN GOOD SHAPE

& Bacorn company, north of Meaderville, the shaft on the Belinda having attained a depth of 475 feet and that in the Calumet 450 feet, with 265 feet to the credit of the Colleen Bawn. A station set is going in at the 300 of the latter and a station will be cut on the south side of the shaft to accommodate the pump as soon as the sump is finished, which will be in a few days. The ground on the north side is soft and the company does not wish to take a chance on cutting the pump station there. The vein adjoins the north side.

The bottom of the Belinda is in hard granite, and the bottom of the Calumet is apparently near a vein, for the material coming from it is altered granite. When the Belinda reaches a depth of 600 feet and the Calumet 500 feet a crosscut will be driven from one to the other. It will connect with the bottom of both, for the collar of the Belinda is 100 feet higher than that of the Calumet. This arrangement is subject to change, however, but is the present program, unless a change is made.

One of the important pieces of mining news that floated to the surface during the week was the announcement to the effect that a new new company, known as the Butte & New York, has been organized to take over the stock of the Butte-Milwaukee company, which is operating a group of claims north of the Poser and Elm Orlu. Details as to the organization are still lacking, but will be on tap in a day or two. The organization of the new company means extensive development of the property.

Another important move in mining circles is the tying up of the stock of the Ella Mining company by the Reins Copper company. The Ella claim is a fraction lying a little north of the east end of the Reins ground, its south side line adjoining that of the north side line of the Reins. Among those who held stock in the Ella company are D. J. Charles, W. C. Lewis, John R. Bordeaux, James H. Monteath and C. J. Schatzlein. There are a few others.

What is known as the British-Butte Mining company has been incorporated by Maurice Eisenberg, J. W. Murphy, J. F. Davies, W. E. Davies, C. H. Russell, J. Strickman and J. G. Brown. It has a capitalization of $5,000,000. The location of its ground is not generally known, but is said to be west of Burlington, and Burlington is three miles west of Butte. It is said that James W. Murphy located the ground recently, and it is also said that Maurice Eisenberg will interest capital in the company in the East.

At the property of the Calumet & Butte Development company, which consists of the Albert and Richelieu claims east of the Amazon group, crosscutting north of the 300-foot station is in progress. The face of the cut is in 100 feet, and the company thinks it will have to go about fifty feet farther to strike the vein for which it is driving.

• • •

The Bullwhacker company is not saying much now, but those who hold stock in it are trying to keep track of the work in progress on the property. Their eyes are turned in the direction of the crosscut, which is heading for the vein 200 feet below the point at which the ore was struck about two weeks ago. The crosscut is said to have passed through some stringers of ore.

it, and scurried to the scene of disaster as fast as an automobile could get him there from Goldfield. So he found Langley at last. And for two mortal hours, while Wild Bill tinkered with the works of his recalcitrant machine, Wingfield besought Langley to reconsider his bargain with Campbell—unsuccessfully.

Langley reached the offices of the Sullivan Trust company at 8 o'clock in the evening. Two minutes later he had sold the Hallstone to that corporation for $125,000. And when the last pen-scratch had been made, and the deed had been done beyond recall, Langley said, huskily:

"I suppose I'm doing right to sell that mine, but I've got a hunch that I'm practically giving it away. After ten years of looking for something that would pan out, though a man loses his nerve a little. This bunch of money looks—well, it looks like a bird in the hand, that's all. I suppose you fellows will make it look like a bad cent in the mint."

And while Wingfield was on his way back to Goldfield, the thousand tongues of rumor had tattled to the world the tale of the latest Sullivan luck. Wherefore, and thus, it fell out that orders were received next day in the Sullivan shop for 600,000 more shares of Eagle's Nest than ever existed.

range and is the greatest producer in the world. This was the first property in the Mesaba district to be acquired by the Carnegie interests, in 1896, when Mr. Carnegie decided to become interested in the Oliver Iron company, now the mining end of the Steel corporation. To that time it had been a moderate shipper for the Rockefeller company, and the latter turned it over to the Oliver company for the cost of development to that date, some $600,000, and a 25-cent per ton royalty. It was discovered in 1890 by Capt. J. A. Nicholla, working for the Merritt brothers, of Duluth, and was the first really important find ever made upon the Mesaba. The mine has shipped an average of 1,376,000 tons in each of the past four years. The pit was widened last winter to permit of greater freedom in the movement of trains.

There is promise of another mine for the Biwabik district. G. A. St. Clair, who has been drilling the property south of the Canton and just west of the village, is said to have struck ore in two holes put down. A third hole is now going down. If this deposit proves to be of considerable quantity the mining of it will be of great benefit to the town as the ore is deep down and it will be necessary to work the mine by the underground system. There is a possibility that the ore extends under the townsite. It is of interest to note in this connection that because of the mining operations in the vicinity the time when it will become necessary to shift the location of the town of Sparta is coming on apace. No. 2 shaft of the Genoa mine is opened on the forty adjoining the townsite, while the ore body and some of the workings extend under the town itself. Last spring, a new shaft, the No. 4, was sunk a little to the north of No. 2, and the mine is to be worked out completely through this opening, so that the mining operations resulting caving will be carried into the heart of Sparta. The new shaft has three compartments and is down about 400 feet. The influx of water is considerable, but is easily handled by the two Cameron pumps in commission. No. 1 and No. 3 shafts at the Genoa have been abandoned.

The various mines of the Rhodes Mining company, which is the Lake Superior branch of the Cherry Valley Iron company, are being placed in first-class condition and will make a good showing next year. The Brunt will ship over 100,000 tons the present season, which, considering the fact that the work of opening up the mine was not begun until March of this year, is a very good record. The Hobart is much more difficult to open, as it is very wet, and two comparatively shallow vertical shafts with little lateral development have been making up the 3,000 gallons of water a minute. The shafts went down through quicksand, and neither one is in the best of condition, although the shaft designed as the permanent opening can be remedied satisfactorily. The water here, it is claimed, is largely surface water and it all comes in on top of the second or better crosscut. It was started from the bottom of the shaft and several raises were built up through the hardpan, so that much of the water comes down that way into the bottom of the shaft. A little ore has already been taken out, and there will probably be something of a stockpile accumulated this winter, but no ore will be shipped this season. Lieut. Governor A. Maitland and Prof. Michlian, who resigned recently as general manager of the Rhodes properties, has been succeeded by C. H. Lewis of Cleveland, who is one of the directors of the company. In addition to the Brunt and Hobart, the company has the Nassau as a new mine, as well as various properties it bought from the Sellwood and other interests. A spur from the Great Northern was built to the Nassau this season. The company has a large tonnage for reserve, and several of its mines, especially the La Rue and Croxton, have very fine ores.

cember. What the amount will be has not yet been decided. The condition of the treasury would warrant a large dividend The Columbus Consolidated is practically the only mine yet developed at Alta. When questioned a few days ago by your correspondent, the manager of this company stated that if any railroad was ever built to Alta it would probably be built by this company. There is, therefore, no prospect of any railroad for a long time.

Another property developing between Alta and Park City is the Scottish Chief. During the past few weeks this property has opened two good bodies of ore. There is one chute which carries values of 59.8 per cent lead, 24.6 ounces silver and $1.60 in gold. One shipment of about 20 tons is now on the way to the market from this ore body. There is another vein which has been opened and which will average nearly three feet, carrying 7.5 per cent lead, 6 ounces silver, 6 per cent lead and $1.80 gold. This showing has caused a great demand for the stock, which has been sold in large blocks.

The output from Ajax seems to be increasing, as will be noticed from the shipments. This property bids fair to become one of the next of the copper mines of Tintic to make a good record, and the stock is held pretty close. It is not active at present, but there are many inquiries now for the stock. A little demand would show a good advance here.

The Lulu company is moving heavy machinery to the property, and the new steam hoist will be put up soon and ready for work. The shaft will be put down 200 feet and drafts will be run in both directions, one to catch the ore body now exposed at the end line of the Horn Silver and the other to catch the ore body south of the shaft, which has already been developed so extensively. Report was received Monday that some copper ore had been encountered in the Frisco Contact. The indications here are exceedingly encouraging and the manager thinks he will have good news for the stockholders before very long.

pany will be able to utilize timber of all grades at its mines, so that there will be nothing going to waste. The pine will be sawed into lumber at the Steel corporation's mill at the Champion mine.

The American mine, west of Ishpeming, where the M. A. Hanna company recently resumed operations, has been connected with the long distance service of the Michigan State Telephone company, the mining corporation erecting a mile of poles for that purpose, and it is possible now to talk direct between the property and the head offices at Cleveland. The Dexter, in the same field, continues idle. There were indications a few months ago that the property, which has been inactive a number years, might pass into the control of a mining corporation that was endeavoring to secure it, but it now looks as though the proposed tranfer is off, at least for this year. The Dexter is not a bad property, but it has had many ups and downs, especially the latter. The ore is maganiferous, of high grade, and some exceptionally fine cargoes were shipped in former years, but at the time deposits seemed to run to pockets and the mine, first opened in 1893, has never proved a bonanza to its owners. However, it has never had strong financial backing, barring a few months in 1900, when it was held by the Steel corporation, nor has it even been given a thorough test. A tract lying near the Dexter, owned by Philo P. Chase of that location and Francis M. Moore of Marquette, is to be explored during the coming season.

Good progress is being made with the work of extending the three drifts being driven into the ore body at the Cleveland Cliffs company's new Maas mine, at Negaunee, and with the completion of the shafthouse, the property will formally enter the list of producers. The mine has been in progress of development for the past three years, solely on the strength of diamond drill discoveries, and it was only recently that the first ore was opened into. This was on the 7th level, drifting being under way there and on the 9th and 11th levels. An extensive program of building improvements has been in hand since early in the spring, and is now rapidly being brought to a close. The changing house, one of the best and most modern to be found anywhere, will be in readiness for occupancy not later than Nov. 1. The equipment of steel bath tubs, racks and lockers and shower baths is now being installed. Both the combination office and warehouse building and the combination shops structure are practically completed. Work on the new coal dock is progressing satisfactorily and the structure will be completed within a short time. The steel shafthous is well on the way toward completion and will, it is expected, be ready for use within three weeks. At the new engine house, the extrior work is finished. All the boilers are in place and the economizer has been installed. The hoisting plant and other machinery will hardly be ready for operation by the time the shafthouse is completed, but the winter will not be very far advanced before the entire plant is in commission.

Of the 3,483 men employed in th mines of Dickinson county, Menominee range, during the year ending Sept. 30, last, fifteen were victims of fatal accidents, according to the annual report of Mine Inspector Trestrall. Three men, each killed at the Chapin and Pewabic, and two at the West Vulcan. Seven of the victims were Italians, three Austrians, two Scandinavians, two Englishmen, and one a Belgian. Five were killed by falling down shafts, three from falls of ground, two by being run over by cars, one by a rolling boulder, one by being thrown over a rock dump, one caught between cars, and one struck behind the ear by a crowbar. There were produced during the twelve months, a total of 2,688,864 tons of ore, apportioned among the properties as follows: Chapin, 930,690 tons; Millie, 33,647; Traders, 177,139; Pewabic, 398,837; 182; concentrating works, 4,103; Aragon, 409,263; Norway, 73,593, Curry and West Vulcan, 212,970; East Vulcan, 83,736; Vivian, 103,602; Loretto, 98,647; Munro, 45,000; Breen, 19,344; Saginaw, 15,956; Calumet, 12,321; explorations, 6,404. In addition to the above, the Cundy mine was in operation, but was not on the producing list. The largest employers of labor were in the Chapin, with 934 men; Aragon, 538; Curry, 445; Pewabic, 415; Vulcan, 187; Lorettor, 174; Traders, 93; Vivian, 90; Walpole, 85. One hundred and nine men found employment on exploration, and 121 at the Sturgeon Falls dam of the Penn Mining company.

What is said to be one of the most important finds of ore in the Crystal Falls district in recent years is reported to have been made in section 23, 44-33, equi-distant from Crystal Falls and Amasa, where for some time a diamond drill has been in commission for the Shenango Iron company. It is learned that two holes have been put down in the tract concerned, and that in both of them the drill has passed through ore, in one case cutting through 120 feet of the mineral, and that a third hole has ben started at a point 100 feet further along the formation. This latter extends in a northwesterly direction from Crystal Falls to the Hemlock river, at Amasa, where is located the Hemlock mine of Pickands, Mather & Co., traversing in its course the Michigan mine of the Steel corporation and the Gibson property, which was recently taken over by a strong independent interest. There is a moderately heavy surface over the ledge, varying from ten to seventy-five feet, or more, some of it quicksand, and this fact has kept explorers out of the district; but recent important finds in the Stambaugh valley, in the western portion of the county, where as much as 200 feet of overburden have been conquered, have brought with them a new era in exploration and development, and the nature and depth of the soil will in future offer no particular obstacle. West of the village of Amasa, Pickands, Mather & Co. have started drilling operations on the farm of John Kettolla, where ore was struck recently in the course of sinking a well.

At the Canadian Soo the Lake Superior corporation has awarded a contract for the construction of a 500-foot addition to the ore dock at its steel plant. The structure now is 900 feet in length, but is inadequate to properly care for the traffic. The necessity for an additional blast furnace which, according to reports from the East, the directors are considering, is quite apparent. The furnaces now in operation are unable to supply enough pig iron for the works, and it is an article most difficult to procure in the outside market. Most of the pig iron the company has been using, in addition to that made at the Canadian Soo, has been procured from Midland, Ont.

At the Sign of the Star

Something over three centuries ago in Munich, Germany, there stood a little dingy tavern, with a bush or broom over the door, the sign of the only place in Germany where the Royal Brew of Munich could be had. Men of high and low degree, of all ages and all nations, have stood in line waiting their turn to taste that famous brew.

The Royal Brew of the 20th Century is marked by the sign of the star—the official trademark of which is the direct descendant of that Royal Brew of Munich. In brilliancy of color, delicacy of flavor, and in its clear, sparkling appearance it fascinates both eye and palate.

Every home that seeks the best will boast a case of Fitger's Beer.

Beaudette

Beaudette, Minn., Oct. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—James Kibby was arrested for the larceny of $34 last Saturday on complaint of Loule Catlin, the cook at Montroy's boarding house on East Beaudette townsite. He was tried before Justice Stein last Thursday, George E. Ericson appearing on the part of the state and James Taylor of Warroad for defendant. The court bound the defendant over to await the action of the grand jury. He was committed to the county jail and kept in the village lockup of Beaudette awaiting the arrival of the sheriff from Bemidji. Owing to the laxity of the village authorities, the defendant was allowed to go around town unattended at times. Upon the arrival of the sheriff, he was given tools by some unknown person and the prisoner managed to pry open some of the bars and escape Sunday afternoon, presumably to the Canadian side. At this writing, Kibby has not been located. No blame is attached to the sheriff in this case, as the prisoner was still in the hands of the village marshal, who is the custodian of the village jail.

The receiving room was prettily decorated in ferns, branches of spruce and sprays of cedar. Miss Lottie Mathieu presided over the frappe bowl, which was served in an alcove of spruce and cedar entwined with autumn colored creepers and cut flowers. The lights of many candles served to brighten the scene extensively. About eighty couples enjoyed the program of dances furnished by the Holyer orchestra. At midnight a dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Albert Berg, Mrs. William Young and Mrs. George E. Ericson. They were assisted by Misses Lottie Mathieu, May Randell and members of the club. Those in attendance from out of town were: Miss Agnes Peterson of St. Paul, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hyland, H. C. Carper and Miss Luella Brown of Winnipeg, Mrs. J. C. Miss Young is a graduate of the St. Cloud normal and an able teacher. The second school is located in "New Town" in the Rogers building. Miss Mary Randell is the teacher. More scholars are in attendance than the board anticipated, so Miss Randell had to dispatch some of her scolars to get grocery boxes and orange boxes to be used as seats and desks. The municipal authorities will evidently soon have to solve a more difficult water problem than the one recently adjusted, as the condition of Teal lake is causing much apprehnsion. It is expected that the spring from the drill hole west of the city will meet the city's demands as far as drinking water is concerned, but judging from the appearance of the lake it will not be many years before a new source of supply will be necessary. The water has fallen at least three feet within the past six or eight months, and it is now thought that the lake is being drained by the mines surrounding it. It has been suggested that the water coming from the Maas mine be directed into the lake. The only expense to the city would be in piping. It is thought that this will be done in an effort to raise the water level.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS CORNER

AT EVENTIDE.

How cozy 'tis sweet,
When the cold winds blow,
To sit round the fire
And see the coals glow,
To hear the kettle
Singing low.

To have your friends,
With mittens in hand,
Singing and carolling—
A most merry band—
When the cool winds blow
Over the land.

To feel so cheery
At close of day,
When night comes down
And chases away
The last pale, lingering
Sunset ray.

And to know no danger
Can touch you there,
As you sit so comfy
In your fav'rite chair,
With friend and teacups

Hallowe'en Harry

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Harry Evens was always playing jokes on his comrades and friends, and as Halloween was one of his favorite joke-making holidays he had come to be called "Hallowe'en Harry" by his young friends.

It was a few days before Hallowe'en that the subject came up one recess between the boys and girls as to what they should do on the eve of All Saints' Day, and Laura Bennett proposed that they all come to her house on that evening and have a taffypull, as well as some Hallowe'en games. "And I want to tell you all right here," laughed the little Miss, "that Harry Evens will not get to play any of his pranks on a single one of my guests. You may feel easy in your mind on that score, for I'll keep an eye on him all the time."

"Good!" cried Paul Anderson, shaking a finger at Harry. And all the girls and boys joined in the laugh that followed. "And what do you say to a few jokes on Mister Harrison J. Evens, eh?" continued Paul. "He has had his fun at the expense of every boy or girl here, and it's a long lane that has no turning."

"You're the one to try it," dryly returned Harry. "I'm not joke proof that I know of. The only thing, you fellows—and girls, too, are a bit clumsy in your work of prank manufacturing. All a fellow has to do is to keep one eye open and he knows your mode of procedure before you have brought your work to a finish. So, let me give you a bit of advice: In planning a joke never—never let the person who is the intended victim know anything about it. Ten to one your scheme will be more successful." And Harry smiled a quiet little smile as Mabelle Clay slapped him vigorously over his shoulders with her open palm. "There, you awfully s-m-a-r-t jokester!" cried that playful little girl, "take that and t-h-a-t!"

"Why, a fly must have lit on my shoulder," said Harry, looking about him as if in search of that winged insect. "I felt something touch me lightly—like a fly or the tip of a feather."

"Just wait till after school, Sir," said Mabelle, pretending great indignation, "and you'll feel my book strap."

But the school bell called them in, and the light, wholesome fun gave way to study.

That evening Laura and Maybelle put their heads together to plan on some way of "getting even" with "Hallowe'en Harry," as they were now calling Harry Evens. "We've got to get some joke on him, and a good one too," laughed Mabelle. "Last Hallowe'en he played a dozen tricks on us to our one on him. So he must be made the butt of the fun this year."

"Oh, I've thought of something," cried Laura. "Don't speak till I've told you, for original schemes are not in my line, you know, and if this one should chance to be side-tracked I'm afraid I'd not think of another," and she held up a warning finger to Maybelle as she gave out this piece of information. Maybelle, closing her lips and pressing her finger close over her mouth as a signal of silence, nodded her head to Laura to proceed.

"Well, it's this," said Laura. "I'll get Frances, our Irish cook, to lend us a hand in the matter, for it requires the assistance of a third person—and one who is not altogether what might be called handsome. We'll have the mirror in the cellar trick, you know, where we are to walk down the stairs backward in the dark and see the faces of our future wives and husbands looking over our shoulders into the mirror. Frances shall be stationed in the cellar at the right time, and on a given signal from me shall turn on the electric light, which, luckily, papa has had put at the foot of the cellar-stair, and herself step behind Harry and let him catch her full-moon face over his shoulder."

"Splen-did!" cried Maybelle. "That will bring the laugh on Mister Harry, good and plenty. Now, what do you say to pouring glue or mucilage on the plate of taffy you give him to pull?"

"Excellent!" exclaimed Laura. "Oh, we'll not do a thing to that master of joke-making, will we?" And both girls laughed merrily over their plans.

Hallowe'en dawned bright and clear, and all day the children were so restless in school that the teacher wondered why All Saints' Day should not be proclaimed a holiday, for it was very difficult to get the children's minds on their books. From the little six-year-olds to the graduating class the day had its strange influence. And teachers as well as pupils were glad when the hour came for dismissal.

Maybelle went home with Laura, having asked her mother's permission that morning to do so, and had her best frock sent over in the evening, for all the boys and girls were to come "dressed" for the party. At 8 o'clock all the guests save Harry Evens had assembled, and all anxiously awaited that young man's arrival.

At last he came, smiling and apparently wholly unsuspicious. He at once became the life of the crowd, relating anecdotes and propounding conundrums till the whole room was in an uproar of laughter.

"Well, well, what a noisy little party!" exclaimed Laura's father, coming in and smiling indulgently. "That's right; have all the fun and amusement you can get, for tomorrow is school again, you must remember."

"Oh, Mr. Bennett, how can you be so heartless as to throw a damper on our good time by alluding to the tasks of the morrow?" moaned Maybelle, pretending to be much overcome by the reminder of what tomorrow would bring forth. Whereupon everybody laughed gaily.

Just at this moment Mrs. Bennett came to the parlor door to announce that the "taffy was ready for workers," and the boys and girls filed into the dining-room, being shown to their respective places by Laura, who slyly winked at Maybelle as she pointed Harry to a place near the foot of the table, beside Maybelle. The latter drew her face serious, trying to keep her eyes from the plate of taffy in front of Harry, for over the warm, soft mixture she had seen Laura pour a thin layer of liquid glue a few moments before the guests had been summoned to the table.

"I say, let's give three cheers for Laura, our hostess, before pulling," suggested Harry, raising his right arm over his head. "All eyes on our hostess—see how she blushes!—and give three rousing cheers! One—two—three! Hurrah! hurrah! hurrah! for our hostess, Miss Laura Rogers!"

Each guest present entered innocently into Harry's plan, and all eyes were turned on the blushing Laura as right hands were lifted high and waved in the air, as they joined in the cheer led by Harry. Then, when the laughter died away, all attention was turned to the taffy, every eye on Harry, whose hands sought the sticky substance on his plate. But before touching his taffy he paused, looked around and said: "Maybe I'd better wait till I see some one else take hold of this stuff."

"Certainly," said Paul, dipping his fingers into the olive oil preparatory to lifting his taffy. Then he took it up, and, finding it of the right consistency, began to work and pull it. The other guests, save Maybelle, followed suit; but all looked out of the corners of their eyes, watching Harry, who oiled his fingers and took the handful of taffy into his hands. Then, very easily, he pulled it out, doubling it over his hands and pulling again. To the astonishment of all nothing happened, for the taffy cleared from Harry's hands as nicely as from the hands of the others. Maybelle, wondering what could have been the matter with the liquid glue used, laid hands on her own plate of taffy, when, lo! she uttered a little exclamation. The taffy stuck like glue to her fingers, and she got her hands in such a mess that Laura had to get a wet napkin and come to her relief. Only one person laughed, and that was Harry. He laughed till the tears rolled down his cheeks. Then, calming himself, he said:

"How stupid of me to do such a thing, but I thought the taffy on my plate looked more juicy than it did on Maybelle's, so, while you were all cheering and waving to our hostess, I slipped my plate to Maybelle and took hers to myself. That's how the joke failed to hit the mark. Too bad." Then Harry fell to laughing some more, although he declared he wouldn't do so if he could help it.

Of course the company took the switched joke, as Harry called it, in good part, and tried very hard to laugh over it; but all the time they were thinking of the joke yet to come. Sure, there could be no failure in that, for Laura had decided it would lead to suspicion should she give Frances a signal when she was to turn on the light, so she told her she should watch closely and count, and when the fifth person backed down the stairs she was to come forward and perform her part.

After the taffy had been pulled to their taste, and much of it eaten—the remainder being wrapped in oiled white paper and put in little boxes to be carried home by the guests—Laura proposed that they try the old-time Hallowe'en trick of walking down the cellar steps backward, carrying a mirror in their hands that they might see the faces of their future wives and husbands. All agreed to this, and a mirror was brought from upstairs. Then all assembled in the dark kitchen, Laura opening the door leading into the cellar. Paul went down first, coming back to say that he saw the face of a fair young princess over his shoulder. Following him went Laura, returning with some wonderful tale. Then went Maybelle, and after her went Frank Day, a big, awkward fellow, very conceited and vain. As he stepped on the bottom stair there was a flash, a quick report, and to the astonishment of all a bunch of fire-crackers went off in the cellar at Frank's very feet, at the same time Frances was heard to yell: "Lordy-mercy! yer niver told me that you was goin' to fire off a cannon in me very face. I'm done with yer tricks, I am!" And she turned on the electric light full blast, showing Frank pale and trembling, holding to the banister with one hand, while in his left he held the mirror. "I was gittin' ready to do my part ov the trick, fer the next one would be five—the number I was to come behind. But no more young folkses' tricks fer me, thank you." And in a state of high indignation Frances departed from the midst of the young revelers.

"She said No. 5," mused Harry, and he looked at the little slip of paper he held, which was given to him as he left the parlor, he having been told that each person would be called upon by his number, for the hostess held a card on which their names were put down alphabetically. "Ah, ha," he said, "I'm No. 5. I'd have come next, hadn't I thrown that little bunch of crackers just in the nick of time."

Then all had to grant him master of the situation. Each boy and girl shook his hand, vowing that he seemed joke or trick-proof, and had to laughingly confess that he had very cleverly turned the tables upon them.

"Yes, you are, indeed, 'Hallowe'en Harry,'" laughed Laura. "And there's no use trying to get even with you on this day."

"Because it's my birthday," explained Harry. "And all the saints look out to keep me from being victimized."

And the party agreed that what he said must be true, so they gathered in the parlor to finish the evening in fortune-telling and other Hallowe'en games.

FIND THE PRINCE.

A beautiful prince is stands
Awaiting her fiance;
She lists at the window for him,
For he is to come today.

If you would know how he looks,
(He is neither young nor fair)
Look close about the princess' feet,
His picture you will find there.

RAGS! RAGS! RAGS!

"Rags, rags!" Hark to the cry,
As the old ragman passes by,
Stooping and limping
Under his pack
That half covers him,
Over his back
"Rags, rags; half cent a pound!"
Thus sings the ragman
As he goes 'round

"Rags, rags!" Ah, it is true
The old ragman once was like you—
Jumping and skipping,
A boy blythe and gay,
Singing and laughing
Through the whole day,
Without a thought of rags by th' pound,
As he went romping
So gaily around.

"Rags, rags; I'm here to buy;"
Oh, how our hearts throb
To hear that sad cry:

Unique Feature For a Boy's Party.

When a boy gives a party it is always looked forward to with more than usual interest, inasmuch as it rarely follows the cut-and-dried rules prescribed for the regulation juvenile party. "It means something, you know, when a boy gives a party" said a little Miss. "There is always something ridiculous and very clever done to make the guests laugh."

And it is quite true that boys try to prepare some little surprise for their guests, a surprise out of the ordinary. One young fellow recently entertained his girl and boy friends at an evening home party, at which he introduced a novel feature in the form of a giant. After all the guests had been seated in the parlor the host's father stepped in to announce that he had calling upon him the French giant, M. Daudet, whom he would like to introduce to the guests. Of course, all present expressed great eagerness to see the giant, and the host's father turned to someone in the hall and said: "Please come and be presented to my son and his friends."

Immediately a strange-shaped giant, with a comparatively small head, stepped into the parlor, bowing slowly round in response to the introduction. Then, calmly crossing the room, he paused at the sofa, where sat two young girls. To the amazement of all the giant parted in two, the upper part dropping to the floor, and, turning around, shook hands with the lower half of the giant. And then it was that the amused guests discovered that two of their own friends—boys of 14 and 12, respectively—had formed the tall individual who had been a giant a few moments ago.

By placing the smaller boy astride the shoulders of the taller one, and by the use of a little grease paint, a false mustache and high hat and long black cape on the top boy the disguise had been most complete.

An illustration accompanies which gives you an idea of the manner in which the giant can be made to appear.

A Witches' Party On Hallowe'en. By Maud Walker.

An old witch sat in her cavehouse away up in the Rocky Mountains, not so very far from Pikes Peak. She was crooning a weird song, a song which had in it nothing of music or sentiment, for she was too crafty an old witch to feel the joy of either. Near her burned a small fire on the stone floor, and over this fire swung the regulation old witch's caldron. As she sat doubled up on the floor in front of the fire she kept turning her eyes towards the opening of the cave, as if watching for someone to approach.

After some minutes the sound of footsteps were heard approaching the entrance to the cave, and a jumble of low, hurried voices was heard as if in a heated argument. The old witch bent her head and stopped her song that she might overhear what was being said by her approaching visitors.

"Naw, I tell you, there is no danger," said one voice in most emphatic tones. "I've knowed for a long time that there was a witch living up here; and on every Hallowe'en she holds a sort of carnival, so I've heard. She's like the old witch in 'The Last Days of Pompeii,' what lived in a cave up Mount Vesuvius. So, come on, boys, and don't show the white feather. If I'm not afraid, you fellers ought to be willing to stand at my back."

"Well, I reckon it's all imagination, anyhow," replied a second voice, a voice which made the old witch put her hand over her mouth to hide a very wide smile. And she whispered to herself: "Tom, as sure as I'm alive. He's the worst coward in the mountains." Then she smiled a Satanic smile again, resuming her low crooning; but so low that she could hear the excited voices of her visitors.

"Listen," said one. "Don't you hear that dirge? As sure as we stand here there's someone in that cave—and someone that isn't a human, for no human ever made such a sound as that."

"Of course, I've been telling you all along that there is an old witch in this cave," declared the voice of the first speaker. "And you all laughed at me and called me silly and superstitious. Then I dared you to come with me and see for yourselves, and you jumped at the chance to get a good one on me. Then, when we got within hearing distance, you were all much surprised to hear a wailing and moaning coming from the cave, a wailing and moaning which has now simmered down to quite a respectable witch song. But, if you fellers are such girls I'll go in by myself, and if all is as safe as I am bound it is I'll come out and take in the l-a-d-i-e-s and b-a-b-i-e-s."

This last bit of sarcasm had its effect on the first speaker's companions, for one of them boldly stepped towards the cave entrance and said: "I'm not a girl, nor a l-a-d-y nor a b-a-b-y, and I'm ready to go into the cave with you if the others will come, too."

"All right," said the voice which the old witch had detected belonged to a certain "Tom." "I'm ready; but—but—wouldn't we better peep in first and see how many there are in there? I've heard that some witches are very—very dangerous."

"All right, let's peep in first to satisfy Tommy that he may go in," spoke the first voice. And suiting the action to the word the crowd of half a dozen boys crept stealthily to the very entrance of the cave and peeped within. The witch never once raised her eyes, but bent double over the fire, crooning more loudly than before.

When the boys beheld this strange sight they started back in fright, one of them withdrawing in a hurry and backing away from the cave.

"Ah, come back here, Tom," called out the boy who had done most of the talking. "Aren't you ashamed to turn coward right at the last moment. For shame!"

Tom came back, but stood all a-tremble and pale. "Say, Alf," he hoarsely whispered to the leader of the band, "let's go on back to town and have our fun as we always do on Hallowe'en, cutting up capers all about town, you know. There's danger in foolin' 'round this unearthly place."

"No, we're going in," declared Alf. "If you are too afraid, why go on down the mountain by yourself. But let me give you warning; this is witch's night abroad and you're likely to run right into a band of them. Really, you're safer here than going home alone."

So Tom, in quiet and ashamed terror, decided he must choose the lesser evil and remain in company of the boys. "Now, watch me," whispered Alf loudly to his comrades. "I'm going to walk right in and tap the old witch on the crown of her hooded pate. See what she does." And so saying, Alf stepped bravely into the cave, which was only dimly lighted by the smouldering fire of green pine logs. To the astonishment of the boys, who stood open-mouthed watching his movements—Tom determining to run if danger from the old witch threatened them after Alf's foolhardiness—he walked straight to the stooping figure, the face of which was turned from the entrance of the cave, and, leaning over, gave her a quick, firm tap, tap on the head. Tom's heart was in his mouth and the other boys felt a quickening of blood in their veins, for Tom was not the only one who had the thought of making quick time down the mountain side if trouble came of Alf's unceremonious introduction to the witch, or whatever else the crouching figure might be.

Slowly the bent form of the witch turned round, lifting its head, the fire light playing on as hideous a face as the boys had ever seen on the stage or pictured in fairy books. Her face was seamed with great black wrinkles running crosswise over cheeks and brow, coarse black hair straggled from under the old hood and shaded the eyes, round which were dark circles. A red shawl wrapped closely her figure, which seemed otherwise clad in black. Letting her eyes rest full on Alf, the witch slowly raised her long arm, and, waving it around her head, said in a false-sounding voice of high pitch: "Who are you that dares to come thus to the cave of the Witch of Vender? Speak."

"I'm Alf Jones, from the town below the mountain, O, witch!" replied Alf. Then, as if seized with some diabolical impulse, he reached over and again tapped the old woman across the top of her head. "And why should not I and my friends be hero on Hallowe'en?" he asked.

The witch, to the astonishment of the frightened and anxious watchers at the entrance, laughed a cackling laugh and patted Alf on the shoulder, saying: "Hey, so you are right, my son, my son. Come hither, youngsters," she added, turning and beckoning to the others. "Come into my house and find welcome. And pray bid me, for I'm your humble servant on this my one free night of all the year."

The boys, now rid of fear, jostled each other to get into the cave, Tom being one of the first to shake the hand of the old woman.

"Ah, ha, this boy was afraid to enter till now," said the witch, pointing at Tom. "And I can tell some other things about him—about you all," she went on, waving her arm among them all. "This chap's name is Thomas Short. His father is a doctor, knowing precious little about the profession of medicine." (The boys laughed at Tom's expense, Ned Harker laughing the loudest and nudging Tom with his elbow.) "And there's another one I can read like a book," went on the witch, pointing at the gay Ned, whose face straightway became serious. "He cheats at marbles and never has his grammar lessons." And she bent over the boiling caldron, stirring it with a stick. Ned's face grew crimson, and he tried very hard to smile, but it was a failure. The others did not laugh this time, for they did not know when their time would come to be attacked by this most wonderful witch. "Aye, and I know that chap," said the witch, poking Tim Ryan in the ribs with the caldron stick. "He's lazy, and won't mind the baby at home when his mother wants to go to her club meeting. He also ate a whole mince pie one night last winter, having to take a physic and stay in bed a week from the effects."

Stirring vigorously, she raised her shrill voice and sang.

The boys looked at one another with wonder. Why, this old witch was the real article. She could tell you things that you hoped no one but yourself knew. Tom, Ned and Tim began to wish to go, while Arthur Lamont and Will Bates hoped she would spare them. Alf, on the other hand, seemed to enjoy everything, and said to the witch:

"Can you sing us one of your charm songs? We'd be delighted to hear it."

The witch nodded her head, stooped, and, taking a long, dark object from the floor beside the fire, which had been hidden from sight by the limbs, dropped it quickly into the pot, and, stirring vigorously, she raised her shrill voice and sang:

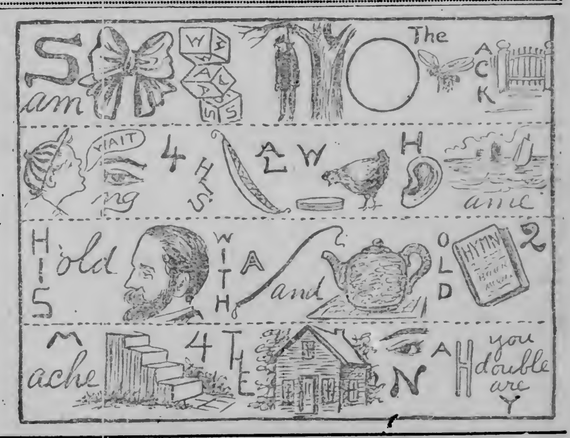

"Into the pot a snake tail goes;
Sing heigh-oh, sing hu.
And when it is cooked
I'll dip it up
For you, oh, for you.
And you must all drink
Of that snake-tail broth,
Or you'll weep, oh;
You'll weep,
For I will turn you
All into snakes,
On your bellies to creep, oh,
On your bellies to creep."

As she finished this horrible strain Tom's eyes were starting from his head, and knowing that it was one of two things he must do—break and run with all his might or drink that snake broth—he made up his mind almost instantly. Turning quickly, while all eyes were on the witch, he darted from the cave and went, like a deer, down the mountain path. Ned, seeing Tom's safe escape, followed at double speed, while, with faces full of fear that they would be charmed into snakes, Tom, Arthur and Will also took French leave of the cave and sprinted away in the wake of their fellows. Nobody stopped to inquire about Alf; in fact, nobody thought anything about him. All were intent on getting away in their present forms.

Left alone with the witch, Alf rolled upon the floor and laughed till his sides ached. And, strange as it may seem, the witch laughed as loudly as did Alf. Then both sat up and straightened their faces. "Gee! this thing is hot," said the witch. And she tore off the hood and shawl. Next off came the black hair, and a wipe across the face with a sleeve removed some of the wrinkles and much of the dark paint. "Lordy, how easy those kids are," went on the witch, who now looked very much like a big boy. "A feller could scare them with a crooked stick." And he bent over and pulled one from the pot of boiling water. "See the snake?"

Then, satisfied with their joke, Alf and the former witch, who was none other than Harry Ritchie, the leader of the town boys of his own size and age, went down the mountain, carrying the proofs of the witch's identity. "I guess they won't feel like crawling into a hole and pulling it in after them when they see me and hear that song again, will they?" laughed Harry. "Well, they'll not forget this Hallowe'en for sometime, I'll bet my hat!"

"They'll be anxious to forget it," responded Alf. "But we'll take pains that it is kept fresh in their minds." And both chuckled as they hurried along, anxious to overtake the boys as soon as possible, for more fun was to be had before the evening was spent.
